Woodford Sullivan is a candidate for justice of the peace in this district. If elected he will be fearless in the administration of justice.

WANTED—1,000 men with 40 cents each to buy a pound of Ligett & Meyers best Star Tobacco, at B. F. Zimmer's, Constance, Boone county, Ky.

There was certainly some hail about here Monday evening, hence the decline in the temperature that greeted the early risers yesterday morning.

In this issue will be found W. J. Cowen's announcement as a candidate for justice of the peace in this district. Will would be a terror to the violators of law.

Jerry S. Dene, whose accidental killing in Gallatin county, was mentioned in these columns last week, was a brother-in-law of B. K. and G. W. Sleet, of this county.

A new platform, and one of the prettiest places in the county for a picnic, is Silver Grove, the place where the Odd-Fellows will picnic, on Saturday, June 12th, 1886.

Prof. Whitehead adjourned his school last Thursday over to Monday, and left for the Kentucky river, the boys about town say, for a fishing excursion, but we don't exactly believe it.

Joe Reed has commenced rubbing up the inside of the Presbyterian church, and when he has completed his work the inside of the building will present a very handsome appearance.

Mr. and Mrs. Simeon Terrill's infant was sufficiently recovered from its severe illness to be taken home Sunday from Dr. Grant's where it and its mother have been for several weeks.

At the show of colts, Crigler's Almont's get, in Florence two or three Saturdays since, B. Clark, of Limaburg neighborhood, exhibited the colt which captured the blue ribbon.

The new revenue law which goes into effect September 1, will cause all who are engaged in the sale of liquor to pay an additional fifty dollars toward defraying the State's expenses.

Dr. Bange has made several visits to the creek this spring, but his efforts to land any of the finny monsters has thus far been ineffectual. He believes in "If at first you don't succeed," &c.

The basket meeting season has commenced with the Bullittsburg Baptist and the Bullittsville Christian churches. Do they have good eating? The best of everything, you bet. Yum,yum!

WANTED—Some good man to canvass Boone county for Nursery Stock, raised near Delhi, Ohio,

H. B. HORNADAY,
Box 125 Delhi, Ohio,

The county attorney was called to Florence yesterday to prosecute the offense of log-rolling. No, if you know what that offense is, you know what he went to prosecute; if you don't, do not ask us.

Probably there never was more acres of corn completely destroyed in this county by cut worms than have been this season. To have to furrow-out and plant a second time was very common with planters.

Jonas and W. L. B. Rouse, two of the leading and most prosperous farmers of the Limaburg neighborhood were in town Monday on business pertaining to an estate of which the first named is administrator.

The remains of William Kennedy, who died at Hamilton last week, were interred in the family burying ground on the Churchill Clore homestead last Thursday. He was a grand-son of Mrs. Julia Clore, of this place.

Joshua Rice, of McVille, was in town yesterday morning. From him we learn that Dr. Gill Rice is gradually growing worse and can survive but a few weeks at most; also that Josiah H. Walton is considerably complaining.

Remember that Geo. Hurchart & Co. of Lawrenceburg, Indiana, can always give satisfaction both as to price and style of work, so when you want to buy a tombstone or a monument go to their yard or call on John Beall, of Hebron, Ky., their agent.

Our advice to the citizens of town is to take warning by our experience and allow none of their wearing apparel to be hung too close to the fence on wash days, as some fiend may purloin them as they did a scarlet bifurcated garment of ours the other day.

James A. Riddell has gone to the Lawrenceburg tract with the following string of fine animals: Richwood, stallion; Clara, sorrel filly, 4 years-old and Viola, bay filly, 3 years-old. Jim will capture the usual number of blue ribbons again this season.

On the 5th day of June the voters in the various school districts in the county will, or so many of them as see proper, assemble at the school houses and hold elections for trustees to fill the places of those whose terms of office expire with the school year.

B. L. Gaines says that if a slight sprinkle of rye be sown in the field when the corn is put in, it will spring up first and the cut worm will eat it and not touch the corn. He says that the trouble with him is, however, he forgot to take his own advice.—Carrolton Democrat.

Any of the horse men of this county who think they have an extra three year-old stepper should read W. A. Crigler's chalenge in this issue. Mr. Crigler, knowing that he owns a sire of trotters, is willing to make a race with any other owner of a stallion who is of the same opinion.

MAD DOGS—Robt. Rouse, of the Limaburg neighborhood, killed a mad dog in the road in front of the Lutheran parsonage near his house Monday. It had bitten Mr. Rouse's two dogs and two or three others that are known. The rabbid animal came from towards Hebron and was a stranger to those who saw it.

At Owington, Ky., a new kind of spider bit a lady when she was making up her bed in the morning, and she was dead before 10 o'clock. There were two of the spiders, and one of them was sent to Cincinnati. Its head was as large as a marble, its eyes red, its body as large as a silver dollar, its legs as large as a goose quill and about two inches long.—Amite City (La.) Independent.

How that spider has grown since it was killed.

This evening at 8 o'clock Mr. Harry Blythe and Miss Minnie Smith will be united in marriage at the residence of Mr. John H. Smith, father of the bride. We welcome Harry to the ranks of the benedicts, and trust that his and his estimable bride's path up the hill of life will be hedged in by all that contributes to happiness, and when they, at last, reach the summit and commence the descent, may their pilgrimage continue in prosperity, surrounded by a halo of usefulness.

On the second Saturday in June, Viola Lodge, No. 278 I. O. O. F., of Burlington, will give a rousing picnic at Silver Grove, on the road leading from the Burlington and Florence pike at Lewis Conner's residence, to the Burlington and Union dirt road at Jerry Delph's, instead of in Walton's Woods as heretofore announced. A procession will be formed at the hall in Burlington, and, headed by a brass-brand, will march to the grounds where the crowd will be addressed by two or three eloquent orators of the order, after which the commodious and splendid platform will be surrendered to those who enjoy the recreation of keeping time to the strains of sweet music by tripping the light fantastic. Everything will be done to make the occasion a pleasure to those who attend. All are invited to grace the beautiful grove with their presence on that day. Bring your baskets with you and stay all day.

The strawberry festival last Friday night, for the benefit of the Bullittsville Christian church was well attended, and the evening's receipts quite liberal. The church was well arranged for the occasion, and while the guests around the numerous tables enjoyed the berries, ice cream and cake, they were constantly regaled by the perfumes emitted by the beautiful pyramids of flowers which had been tastefully arranged on the several tables by the ladies. During the evening a poll was opened and vots cast for the handsomest lady, Miss Lucy Gaines winning an elegant cake over several competitors. H. P. Stephens opened the feast and put everybody in an extra good humor by a unique address, immediately after which the numerous tables were surrounded, and remainded the center of attraction until a late hour, when the crowd commenced disintegrating, although there remained an abundance of refreshments. To the lady members of the church there is due much credit for the success which crowned the effort to raise money with which to repaint the interior of their church.

The base ball season was opened at this place last Saturday by a contest between the Burlington and Bellevue clubs. On Saturday week the former club beat the latter one score in a seven inning game, and before the Bellevue boys left home last Saturday they had sworn by every grain of sand in that neighborhood that they would have Saturday's game, and sure enough they did. The game was close and interesting up to the sixth inning when the home team went to pieces and allowed the visitors to pile up five runs on them. In the next inning they put their opponents out in 1, 2, 3 order, but the 8th inning was a repetition of the fifth, only a little more so. In the 7th inning the visitors bunched their errors, and let the score run up an even half dozen. Both teams did some very creditable playing, and it remains for the future to determine which of the two is the stronger. Bellevue has the best club she has ever presented. They go to Carrollton to play next Saturday.

The following is the score of last Saturday's game:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Burlington...	0	0	2	1	0	1	6	1	1	–12
Bellevue......	0	0	0	2	2	5	0	6	..	–15

LIMABURG.

W. Y. Crigler, drygoods merchant, and his daughter, Miss Bessie, of Harrodsburg, spent Sunday with his sister, aunt Mary Ann Rouse, where he met quite a number of relatives and friends He says that he has cleared $5-000 in the last three years, an evidence of a good country for business. He reports prospects for crops in his county, good; that the soil around Harrodsburg is very rich and productive.

Misses Dora and Octavia Rouse attended the May festival in Cincinnati las week. They were delighted with the music.

W. S. Cole, of Indiana, is visiting friends in this neighborhood.

GUNPOWDER.

The young folks of this neighborhood are talking of organizing a fishing party. Hope they will prosper catching fish.

There will be preaching at Pleasant Valley the second Sunday in June, by Elder Stephens at 3 o'clock.

Last Sunday the lightning struck and killed a valuable work horse for John Vaughan.

Jeff Rouse and Bob Barlow are running a race as to whom can have the finest rig.

A Sunday-school will be organized at Pleasant Valley next Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Betty Ann Beemon is very poorly at this writing.

Miss Florence Austin is visiting relatives in Indiana.

A Challenge.

I hereby challenge the owner of any stallion in Boone county, to trot a three year-old colt, the get of his horse against Maud C., a three-year-old filly and the first get of Crigler's Almont, on the Latonia course during the fair this fall. Entrance fee, $50, the winner to take the money.

W. A. CRIGLER, Limaburg, Ky.

To the Editors of the Recorder:

Referrng to card of W. C. Threlkild in issue, May 22, of Commonwealth, I beg leave to say that he has exactly stated the case regarding a trot between one of my stallions as accepted by Mr Powell, and "that in calling a bet, or making a bluff," it is necessary to show the money. In addition to Mr. Threlkild's challenge, I am prepared, that at any time the said Laile & Co. put up the amount or any amount for which they desire to trot their stallion at Latonia Fair, the same will be covered, and I pledge myself that my horse shall be on hand.

W. A. CRIGLER.

May 24, 1886.

Monday morning at the residence of Capt. T. M. Barrett, of Carroll county, Will T. Whitehead shot Miss Laura Harwood, of Vevay, Indiana, and a governess in the family, through the head and then put a bullet into his own brain. She died in twenty minutes He will die. They had just taken a buggy ride and returning, went up to her room, where the tragedy occurred. It was a love affair but much mystery hangs about the case. Both are members of the best families. It is thought by some that they agreed to the tragedy on account of opposition to their marrying.

A dispatch containing the above facts was received at Rising Sun Monday, and it being known that Prof. Whitehead of this place, took a boat there last Thursday evening for Carrollton, it was at once decided that the Whitehead named in the dispatch, was the professor. The report reached this place about night Monday and created no little excitement and sorrow, and from the fact that the professor told Mr. and Mrs. Palmer, with whom he boards, that he would be back on Sunday evening and had not returned Monday night, everybody in town with possibly one or two exceptions, believed the report, and when he came riding into town yesterday morning with Joshua Rice, of McVill, the citizens were most agreeably surprised. His delay in returning was the result of missing the boat.

The pruner made his mark, yesterday, in the branches of the large maple tree on the west side of the Courthouse. The tree's foliage was so dense that it rendered the county attorney's sanctuary too dark to be agreeable.

Georgie Piper and Clarence Kirkpatrick are nursing crippled hands, gentle reminders of last Saturday's game of base ball.

The Latonia races commence to-morrow, and continue until Saturday week. There will be some very fine racing during the meeting.

LOST—Cattle—1 red, 1 black and 1 light roan, all yearling heifers.

O. P. TANNER.

Miss Bell, daughter of Lewis Aylor, of Florence, died of a congestive chill, Monday.

The ring of the croquet ball is frequently heard in the town, now.

Considerable stock has been killed by lightning this season.

The farmers want settled weather for a few days now.

F. H. Russell, of Constance, was in town yesterday.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE

ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country; but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and spasms are most frequently the result of these hidden sappers and miners. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing wholesome diet, tossing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy, therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge.

Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in one sense, and to examine every bottle he buys of it. The simple name of FAHNESTOCK is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

NEW FRANKLIN, HOWARD CO., MO.
Messrs. Schwartz & Haslett, Pittsburg, Pa.,
Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your Vermifuge can not safely be dispensed with in any family. Yours, &c.,
J. W. HUBBARD, M. D.

CAMBRIDGE, MD.
Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed.

FRYE'S COMBINATION

FARM, GARDEN & ORNAMENTAL FENCE

It combines the advantages of every fence, and is free from any objections. Our combination fence is composed of five two-strand cables of the best annealed bessemer steel wire firmly interwoven with pickets at a uniform distance of 2 to 5 inches apart, and the diagonal supporting wire which is interwoven as represented, enables us to hold each and every picket up off the ground with perfect ease, keeping them even on top and the entire fence always in the open air, making the lower ends of the pickets just durable as the upper ends. Sagging is utterly impossible, as we have a direct vertibal tensil strength of 1700 lbs. to each pannel which alone is three times as strong as an ordinary pine board fence. Our five cables, which gives a combined strength of more than fifteen times that of a pine board 1x6, all interwoven in such a manner with the pickets that one wire cannot be broken without breaking 11. Thus giving us a fence 18 times stronger than a barb wire. The pickets are oak of first quality, and soaked in hot Alkalies, making them last many years. The pickets are supported every 10½ inches by the cables so that breakage is impossible, giving us a fence that will turn all kinds of stock, from the smallest pig to the meanest mule, without endangering the life of any. It is a portable fence, can be removed by drawing the staples and the fence rolled up and removed without the slightest injury. It is dog proof, keeps sheep in and hogs out. It will protect your orchards from the ravages of rabbits, and your gardens from chickens. It is endorsed by over 200,000 of our farmers, as filling every claim we make for it. No farmer can afford to do without this fence that has means to buy it. Any party wishing fence or any information in regard to this fence will address.

T. H. SUTTON, Grant, Boone county, Ky.

N. B.—This fence can be sold and delivered at any landing on the river in Boone county, at the following reduced prices: Pickets 5 in. a part 55c 4½ in. apart 60c; 4 in. apart 65c, 3½ in. a part 70c; 3 in. a part 75c; 2½ in apart 80c; 2 in. a part 85c. We have strechers expressly for our fence which we will furnish to any parties ordering fifty rods or more, and will furnish one hand to assist in putting it up, after the posts have been set.

THE LITTLE HUNCHBACK.

I'm nine years old! an' you can't guess how much I weigh, I bet!
Last birthday I weighed thirty three! An' I weigh thirty yet!
I'm awful little for my size—I'm purt' nigh littler an'
Some babies is!—an' neighbors all call me "The Little Man!"
An' Doc one time he laughed an' said: "I 'spect, first thing you know, You'll have a little spike-tail coat an' travel with a show!"
An' nen I laughed—till I looked round an' Aunty was a-cryin'—
Sometimes she acts like that, 'cause I got "Curv'ture of the Spine!"

I set—while Aunty's washin'—on my little long-leg stool,
An' watch the little boys and girls a-skippin' by to school;
An' I peck on the winder an' holler out an' say:
"Who wants to fight the little man 'at dares you all to-day?"
An' nen the boys climbs on the fence, an' little girls peeks through,
An' they all says: "'Cause you're so big, you think we're 'feared o' you!"
An' nen they yell, an' shake their fist at me, like I shake mine—
They're thist in fun, you know, 'cause I got "Curv'ture of the Spine!"

At evening, when the ironin's done, an' Aunty's fixed the fire,
An' filled an' lit the lamp, an' trimmed the wick an' turned it higher,
An' fetched the wood all in fer night, an' locked the kitchen door,
An' stuffed the ole crack where the wind blows in up through the floor—
She sets the kittle on the coals, an' biles an' makes the tea,
An' fries the liver an' the mush, an' cooks a egg for me;
An' sometimes—when I cough so hard—her elderberry wine
Don't go so bad for little boys with "Curv'ture of the Spine!"

But Aunty's all so childish-like on my account, you see,
I'm 'most afeared she'll be took down—an' 'at's what bothers me!—
'Cause ef my good ole Aunty ever would git sick an' die,
I don't know what she'd do in Heaven—till I come, by an' by—
For she's so ust to all my ways, an' everything, you know,
An' no one there like me, to nurse, an' worry over so!—
'Cause all the little childrens there's so straight an' strong an' fine,
They's nary angel 'bout the place with "Curv'ture of the Spine!"

KANGAROO HUNTING.

A Famous Chase By the Melbourne Club, of Australia.

How the King of the Marsupials is Taken By Civilized and Uncivilized Sportsmen—The "Old Man" and the "Blue-Flier."

[Original.]

A few miles from the old town of McIvor (which now bears the name of Heathcote), in Victoria, Australia, and which lies off the road to the Beechworth "diggins," are the mountains which are well known, not only to diggers in search of gold, but also to sportsmen of Australia, as the resort of large flocks of kangaroos at all seasons of the year. The view obtained from the mountains in this vicinity of Victoria is grand and sublime in the extreme, and almost baffles the power of description. Standing upon the top of one of these mountains, many of which are at least nine hundred feet above the plains, you obtain a view of a wide expanse of country. One sees toward the east a wide-spreading plain, sprinkled with occasional clusters of bright green bushes, and terminated by the hills are seen serated ranges of mountains extending in unbroken chain until lost in the blue of the sky. On the west you behold another series of mountains extending inland to a great distance. The atmosphere is so clear at times that from one of these mountains you can see about one hundred miles around.

It would be difficult to imagine a more delightful temperature and a more genial climate generally than Victoria at this summer season of the year. The purity of the atmosphere and the exhilarating effect which it produces upon the human system, is most remarkable. At no time of day or year, is it "cold." Upon the coolest days at any season of the year the glorious tropical sun holds its mastery over the elements and shines forth to beautify and vivify Australia's mountains and plains. In the hottest season of the year, the heat is not, in the strict sense of the word, oppressive. Despite the heat that at even this season prevails, one can enjoy a good gallop of twenty miles over the plains in the cooling breezes, which nearly always are blowing seemingly to palliate the fervor of the sun and to counteract any depressing tendency it may possess; especially is such a ride enjoyable with a fine kangaroo hunt in view.

The way in which Australia sportsmen hunt the kangaroo may best be described by giving the incidents of a grand hunt given in the month of December, 1868, by the Melbourne Hunting Club, in honor of the Duke of Edinburgh upon his visit to the island in that year. The writer and his old friend and family physician, Dr. J. K. I. O'Doherty—then residing in Australia and now a member of the British House of Commons—were pleased to receive an invitation from members of the club to accompany the party, and, having made all due preparations, met its full membership, the Duke and a few other invited gentlemen at the Heathcote Hotel on the morning appointed for the hunt. The party numbered some fifty sportsmen and about twenty hounds.

All things being in readiness, we set out about two hours before daylight and rode slowly along toward the plains, some six miles distant, a party of six stockmen having been detailed to scour the neighboring mountains in advance and to drive the kangaroos into the extensive plateau, where the Duke and party were to be in waiting. The morning dawn was exquisitely delightful. The soft, sweet breeze and the light blue sky were such as only can be seen in tropical clime. As we emerged upon the plain we saw several fine kangaroos quietly feeding at a distance, but they speedily discovered our approach and scampered away into the shelter of the neighboring wood. Although we kept our dogs well in hand, it was very difficult to prevent them from starting off after the flying game. The young dogs, some of which had only been out upon two or three previous expeditions, had to be continually checked and kept in the rear to prevent them from starting off on a little hunt on their account; the older and better trained dogs, as a general rule, kept close beside the horses, awaiting the signal for them to start. After we had come to a halt on the plain, under cover of some tall bush, it was only a few minutes before we heard the distant echoes of the stockriders' whips in the mountains, apprising us of the near approach of the game. Soon we heard the "cooee," which was the stockriders' signal for us to be on the alert for the coming flocks of kangaroo. We all waited in breathless silence, for we well knew that at any moment the game might appear in the plain like a flash of lightning, and in our very midst. We were all eager for the chase and with thrilling interest, such as the hunter alone can appreciate who has experienced the feelings arising in his breast when his eye catches the first view of the monarch of the Australian forest.

In an instant kangaroos of all sizes, old and young, came bounding down the mountains in almost [illegible] numbers. Now the hunt began in real earnest. The kangaroos broke in every direction upon the plain, generally, however, separating themselves into small flocks of from fifteen to twenty. It was indeed a marvelously exciting scene to witness so many of these strange, long-legged creatures flying over the ground with prodigious leaps, their long, thick tails apparently acting as rudders in the air to aid them in their flight. It is needless to say that we wasted no time in following the game; instantly putting spurs to our steeds, away we went galloping over the plain in hot pursuit, the dogs adding to the excitement of the occasion by barking and yelping furiously and entering fully into the sport of the hunt. The horses, too, were fully alive to the sport, and went galloping across the plain regardless of danger from fallen trees, over-stretching limbs and treacherous burrows with which the ground was in some places literally honeycombed. A large and powerful "old man" kangaroo was overtaken early in the hunt, and made a bold and desperate fight. First he charged upon one of the horsemen and tried to seize him with his sharp forepaws, which he might well have done, as he stood fully six feet high, but for the simultaneous attack made upon him by the dogs. Being overthrown by the hounds, the "old man" caught one of them in his forepaws as he lay on his back, and, raising one of his hind legs, with one blow from his long and formidable toe ripped the poor brute open so that his entrails protruded. By this time one of the hunters had dismounted and, approaching the "old man," dispatched him with a ball from his revolver. We then cut off the kangaroo's tail and fastened it to the saddle of one of the horses as a trophy of the hunt, after the universal custom among hunters of the animal. Having thus secured the evidences of our first victory, we renewed the chase. After a short gallop of about two miles we came up with another group of hunters who had killed some six more kangaroos of various sizes, and were then engaged in a fierce encounter with two "old men," who, with their backs against a tree, were making it lively for the dogs and keeping both them and hunters at bay. Instantly one of the hunters dismounted and, cautiously advancing toward the tree, dexterously cut the large tendon of the hind leg of one of the kangaroos, which so disabled it that it soon became an easy prey to the hounds. The other "old man" was also finally disposed of in the same manner after a hot and severe contest with both dogs and hunters. The Duke was with this group of hunters and took much interest in all its exploits, besides personally participating in many of them. The ground over which the Duke and party had just passed over to this point was very rough, full of holes and large stones or bowlders, which were the more treacherous because of the long grass which covered them from view. It was when riding over this tract of country that the Duke received his first "christening," a term applied by old kangaroo hunters when both steed and rider falls to the ground. His horse having stepped upon a small stone, which became fixed in the hoof, stumbled and threw the Duke, who happily was not so much injured as he was chagrined by the accident.

By this time some of our party had ridden a considerable distance ahead, and our company as a whole had become widely scattered over the plains. After a sharp canter through gullies and over ridges for about two miles, ascending a little ridge, our party came in sight of a dozen or more kangaroos feeding about half a mile off. We had good ground before us, and we put spurs to our horses for a lightning gallop. The game was soon on the alert and the fleetness exhibited by the kangaroos we were then pursuing readily convinced us that these were "blue flyers" (females). It was with considerable difficulty that we overtook any one of the flock, and then not until after a five-mile chase at our best speed; one of the does dropped her young from her pouch while flying before us, but was at last overtaken and killed with two others of the flock. The writer had the honor of bringing down one of these does, the first and only large one he had succeeded in capturing during the hunt. One of the hounds was running close alongside her, endeavoring to seize her as she every now and then would bend low her head and make a dash at him without pausing in her career. This was a very grand sight, both dog and kangaroo being side by side for about two miles, the dog at last succeeding in throwing her, and we just came in at the death. Pursuing the others, but fearful of hurting the dogs, I refrained from firing for some time. At length, getting a chance, I aimed a ball behind her shoulder, but it struck her ribs and penetrated no deeper than the skin. I delivered another ball with better success, and she began to abate her speed. The rest of the party now came up, but the wounded doe had dashed into a swamp, the reeds and wild shrubs in which were high enough to conceal both horse and rider. Nevertheless, we pushed through and found the doe at a stand on the bank of a muddy pool keeping off the dogs who were bounding from one side to the other barking at her cautiously and keeping out of the reach of her paws. The moment her eye caught sight of the figure of the foremost horseman, she darted with maddened fury toward him and struck his horse with such force as to bring both horse and hunter to the ground. The infuriated animal stumbled over her prostrate foes, and as she was gaining her feet for a fresh attack was saluted with a volley from our revolvers and killed.

Having secured the tails of the kangaroos just killed to our saddles as additional trophies, we set out upon our return to Heathcote. Coming to a fine spring of water, we dismounted and refreshed ourselves and horses, as we were considerably fatigued, having ridden over thirty miles. Our company now consisted of nine hunters and five dogs, the rest of the club having been separated into small squads and dispersed far and wide. After a half hour's rest we leaped into our saddles again and turned our faces homeward, riding leisurely along near the base of the mountains, keeping a look out for any stray kangaroos that might be within chasing distance. We had not proceeded far before we espied through the field-glass a number of them grazing about three miles distant. By keeping close to the mountains we perceived that we would be able to get within less than a mile of the game without disturbing them, whereas if we should make straight for them we had reason to expect a long and lively chase. We chose the former plan of action, and, after passing around a mountain projection, we came within easy distance upon the game and immediately gave chase. The ground was smooth and covered with a short, thick greensward, which offered a splendid opportunity for testing the relative speed of dog, horse and kangaroo. After a sharp race of three miles we overhauled the game and succeeded in killing two very fine specimens. These were the last we captured. The day had well advanced, and as we began to feel the promptings of our appetites, and as our horses were pretty well worn out, we again took up the homeward line of march and reached Heathcote Hotel a little after the noon hour. We had scarcely got our horses unsaddled and entered the hotel when different squads of the club began to arrive, all highly gratified with the success of the hunt; many claiming that it had been one of the most successful expeditions of the kind upon the Australian plains. The entire party had forty-eight trophies which of course represented forty-eight kangaroos taken in the hunt.

The Duke of Edinburgh, who was a young man about twenty-two years of age, and a thoroughly "good fellow," expressed his gratification with the day's exploits in the highest terms. It had long been his desire to participate in a kangaroo hunt, and this had been the fulfillment of his highest expectations. He had with his own hand killed four kangaroos, and no doubt has many times since referred to the experiences of the day with feelings of pleasure if not of pride. On my part it was an occasion long to be remembered, as it afforded a great degree of pleasure on the one hand, and on the other taught me some of the dangers to be encountered in kangaroo hunting.

The gray and red kangaroo are the largest animals indigenous to the Australian continent, and when the natives hunt them they get together in large force and make preparations for the hunt much as though they were preparing for war on a large scale. They provide themselves with boomerangs, muskets and spears, and range themselves in a wide semi-circle at one end of a valley, if possible—if not upon a plain; each native in the first instance being at a considerable distance from the other upon either side of him, but they gradually come closer together as they advance toward the center of the semi-circle. The juveniles then set out for the mountains upon either side of the opposite end of the valley, and by dint of yelling, screeching and making such a hideous noise that only the wily savage can do, they drive the kangaroo into the valley. They then close in behind the game, and drive it toward the native hunters stationed at the other extremity of the valley, who also advance pace by pace, aided by the barking of their dogs. When the animals are thus forced into a sufficiently small space in the center of the circle of natives, the attack begins, and what with spear, boomerang and musket, the holocaust oftentimes is well nigh complete. Sometimes the battue is made more effective by setting fire to the grass and brushwood around the circle, and indeed this is quite frequently done.

The aborigines also hunt the kangaroo single-handed, but owing to its natural wariness, this method of hunting is considered very difficult, and is only adopted by the most skillful of native hunters, and usually by only such of those as may be so fortunate as to possess muskets. The equipment of the native who hunts singly is at once simple and grotesque. He ties a bunch of long prairie grass upon his head, with musket in hand, and sallies forth in pursuit of the game. Seen at a distance thus equipped, the swarthy savage appears even to the discriminating eye of man, very like the tufted head and blackened trunk of the grass tree, which it is the design of the savage hunter to simulate. Not much wonder then that with this guise he succeeds so frequently in deceiving the "old man," the king of the marsupials. Having discovered, by tracking or by chance, about the spot in which a kangaroo is concealed, the savage stealthily advances toward his prey. Should he startle the animal by the rustling of a leaf or the crackling of a twig under his feet, the kangaroo makes a bound or two, stands erect, and looks about cautiously to discover, if he can, the cause of alarm. Meanwhile the savage stands as still as a statue, keeping so until the animal becomes reconciled, and satisfied that he is but a veritable grass tree and resumes browsing. The savage again stealthily moves forward until within easy range, when he gives a low whistle, at which the kangaroo pricks up his ears, suddenly raises upon his haunches and closely scans the objects around. In this position the game presents a fine shot, and the native hunter seldom, if ever, fails to bring it down.

The kangaroo is comparatively so little known, except to those who have been in Australia, that a quite detailed description of the more prominent of the numerous varieties of the species and of their characteristics and habits—as seen in their native wilds—will undoubtedly be of more than ordinary interest. Generally speaking, the animal is timid and graceful, and from its natural disposition, as well as from the beauty and grace of the form and carriage of its head, one would be almost persuaded to think it belonged to the "deer" family. Its hearing and sight are both very acute; the forelegs are very short, and are used merely to rest upon when the animal lowers its head to feed. It is furnished with long and powerful hind legs or toes armed with formidable claws, and upon these, in conjunction with its powerful tail, it rests whenever alarmed and sitting upright. The hind legs and the tail are also the means of locomotion, the fore legs hanging as useless appendages from the fore quarters when the animal is running, serving perhaps in some slight degree as balancing weights. Its speed is great on level ground and in ascending a hill equaling that of an ordinary hound, but the animal is easily overtaken by dog or horse when descending a declivity, though but a slight one. Its running movement consists entirely in a series of leaps or bounds, the full-grown kangaroo jumping about twelve feet at one bound. The flesh of the kangaroo is lean and insipid, not palatable to Europeans, but eaten with gusto by the natives and bushmen. The carcass oftentimes is found to weigh two hundred pounds. The tail makes delicious soup, and as a rule is the only part of the animal which is eaten by Europeans. The sinews of the tail are used by the aborigines as thread; some of the bones as needles, and the teeth either as ornaments for the hair, or as barbs to "mutachs," the fishing spear of the natives. The aborigines also utilize the feet of the kangaroo in many ways. The hide of the animal is valuable, and often used by Europeans in making fine boots and shoes, leggins, pouches, mats and other articles requiring strong and pliable leather. The kangaroo family consists of many varieties. The great grey kangaroo and the red kangaroo are the largest of all, some individual specimens of which stand six feet in height. The adult male members of the gray kangaroo variety are styled by sportsmen and natives "old men;" and these old men, when attacked by dogs and hunters, fight fiercely and desperately to the last. Of the red variety, the male and female are dubbed respectively, "red soldier" and "blue-flier," the former being of a large size and a good fighter, whilst the latter is swiftest-footed of all the kangaroo tribe, its nimbleness often putting to severe test the speed of the best kangaroo dog. The wallaroo is a large specimen and very handsome. The female has a pretty coat of dark red upon the back, with light gray interblended with red upon the belly, and a light-gray colored caudal appendage. They inhabit the rocks and rough sections of the forests. The adult wallaroo, when set upon by the hunters' dogs, seldom runs far, but turns short upon his pursuers and gives battle. His method of fighting is somewhat remarkable. Owing to the rocky nature of their habitation the great claws on the hind feet are worn away very blunt, and hence they never attempt to rip open the dogs after the manner of some of the other kangaroos, but actually bite their attackers, an anomalous procedure for a marsupial. On first coming to bay, the animal will either get into a waterhole or back up against some tree or rock and with great calmness receive the dogs, and as they come on will strike down one or two with his hind legs and hold them on the ground, which if the ground happens to be at the bottom of a waterhole usually drowns them. The other dogs will then be received by the two little forepaws and be hugged and bitten savagely. The next in size is the wallaby, a species of kangaroo that inhabits either rocky places or scrub bush. The adult is a little larger than a good-sized common house cat. It is perhaps the prettiest of the family as to color. The back is a handsome dark chocolate, which gradually fades into a light yellow upon the belly. The tail is a black and covered with long hair. The face with its light yellow cheeks and black forehead is prettily contrasted in colors. The rock wallaby and the bush wallaby are easily captured in the hunt, as they have a habit of standing motionless and surveying the hunter, apparently with an eye of curiosity, before making off. This is also to some extent a trait of most other varieties of the kangaroo. Closely allied to the bush wallaby is the variety known in the native vernacular as "Paddy Melow," a corruption of "Paddy Malla," a peculiar stick, two feet in length, with a knob at one end, called nulla nulla, with which the aborigines kill this kind of kangaroo. "Paddy Melow" inhabits the denser brush or jungles, and is more easily obtained, by reason of his slower movements, than any of the other varieties of the species. The native regard him as a most savory article of food indeed; so highly is he prized in this respect that they do not allow his skin and entrails to go to waste, but cook him whole. While thus cooking the animal the natives sit around the fire, the males nearest, with their gins (wives), lubras (single women) and piccaninnies (infants) behind them, and pull pieces of flesh from the roasting carcass and gulp it down in true barbarian fashion. The next in decreasing order in the marsupial family is the kangaroo rat, but why called the rat does not so clearly appear, inasmuch as when running it more nearly resembles the hare, and but for the tail might easily be mistaken for that animal. It makes for itself a species of lair of dried grass, sticks, etc., within which it crouches during the daytime.

If startled by any one treading near its hiding place it bounds away in a quick, dodging course, which oftentimes baffles good kangaroo dogs, and retreats into some hollow log, whither the dog can not follow. Besides the rat, there is the little bush mouse, a pretty miniature marsupial, so small as to almost escape notice, but nevertheless a kangaroo.

A peculiarity of the female kangaroo in general, which is worthy of remark from its apparent variation from the natural instincts of the species—which in general are of a high order—is that when hard pushed in the chase she drops her young out of the marsupial pouch so as to enable her the more easily to escape from the hunter and his dogs. When startled by the hunter, the kangaroo invariably takes to the water, if there be any in the vicinity, and coming to bay in it, stands erect and fights fiercely for its life. Should any inexperienced dog approach too near the enraged animal, he is more than likely to pay the penalty of his rashness by his death, for the kangaroo hesitates not to seize the dog with his forepaws and to thrust him under water and hold him there until drowned. If so pressed as to be unable to reach water, the animal will make a stand with its back against a tree, catching any rash dog in the same manner and inflicting most fearful wounds upon the poor brute with the center claw of his powerful hind foot, frequently ripping it open at a single blow. You rarely see a good kangaroo dog that has not at some time or other in his life been lacerated in a shocking manner by the toe of the kangaroo, the scars remaining as sad reminiscences of unwary puppy-hood, the experience ripening into good old dog wisdom. Frequently dogs in their conflict with the kangaroo have their hides skinned from shoulder to tail.

The kangaroo dog proper is a cross between a grayhound and a Scotch deerhound. Its strength and fleetness are great, both which qualities are indispensible in hounds hunting the kangaroo. The coat is shaggy, as a rule, and of a variety of colors. Altogether, it is a handsome and noble-looking animal. There are, however, many dogs which are not strictly kangaroo dogs that are employed in the chase, but it is usually found that dogs of the perfect cross which I have mentioned are most servicable. The well-trained kangaroo dog is highly prized, not only for his acquired hunting habits, but for the natural intelligence so often originally displayed. As instancing this intelligence, it may be stated that should the dog happen to kill the kangaroo before the hunter arrives upon the scene, he comes quickly back to his master, lies down by his side, as if afraid the other dogs might suspect he had killed the game and run off in search of it, should he give evidences of his success in a noticeable manner. He lies quietly by his master until his master gives the signal to start, when he deliberately proceeds to lead the way to his prize, snarling at the other dogs whenever they run before him and seem likely to arrive at the spot. So sagacious are some dogs that they try to deceive their associates by going just far enough in the wrong direction to start the whole pack off at full speed in that direction, when the dog, who has killed the game, will suddenly halt, signal the hunter by a wag of the tail, and dash off to the game with lightning speed, and there he will stand guard over the carcass until the hunter arrives, to whom he expresses his gratification by a faint wagging of the tail. The usual method of attack adopted by the kangaroo dog is to seize the game by the hind foot or leg and to throw it on its face. Some dogs, however, after getting alongside the kangaroo will keep pace with it until the other dogs come up, and then seize the animal by the throat, holding on to be swung about in the struggle that ensues. Such dogs are more likely to be ripped open by the powerful claw of the kangaroo than dogs attacking in the manner first described.—Alfred Willford, of the Chicago Democratic Standard.

A BETTING MAN.

The Head-I-Win and Tail-You-Lose Sort of a Game Played by a Tramp.

A man whose clothes were old, but whose expression was frank, went into a restaurant and, addressing the proprietor, said:

"I have no money, mister, and I am very hungry. Now, sir, I want to bet you one dollar that if you give me a meal I will pay you within one week from to-day.

"I don't know you," said the proprietor, "but I'll go you one just for luck."

The man ate heartily and withdrew. One week later he entered the restaurant, and said:

"Well, I'm here."

"So I see. Have you come to pay me?"

"No, I have come to tell you that I have lost the bet."

"Well, then, you owe me a dollar instead of fifty cents."

"Yes."

"But where is my money?"

"Well, in regard to that, I want to bet you two dollars."

"Name the bet."

"Bet you two dollars that I never pay you. You've lost, so now hand me over two dollars."

There does not exist any proof of the fact that the money was paid.—Arkansaw Traveler.

HOME AND FARM.

—Whitening inside is a good thing to do. It makes the rooms of a house neater and more wholesome.

—Mouldiness is occasioned by the growth of minute vegetation. Ink, paste, leather and seeds most frequently suffer by it. A clove will prevent it; any essential oil will answer equally well.—Cleveland Leader.

—The best grass for an orchard is undoubtedly orchard grass with red clover, or red clover alone. Plenty of seed should be used. Cut when weeds make their appearance, afterward pasture with hogs or sheep.—Western Rural.

—A farmer in Central New York, where many beans are raised, says the best crops are produced when they are planted in hills two feet apart each way, and the soil worked with a narrow cultivator. He advises planting from five to seven beans in a hill.

—To make good rusks take one pint of milk, one cup of yeast; mix it thin, when light add twelve ounces of brown sugar, two ounces of butter, four eggs, flour sufficient to make stiff as bread; when risen again, mold and spread it on tins.—The Caterer.

—Whitewash is to some extent a disinfectant, and should be used in cellar and kitchen closets not less than once a year, twice being better. A good whitewash is made of one peck of slacked lime, a pound and a half of white vitriol, a pound of salt and half a pound of melted glue, the salt and glue keeping the wash from rubbing off. For cellars the slacked lime is sufficient.—Albany Journal.

—For a milk pudding put one quart of milk on where it will cook slowly. Wash half a teacupful of rice and stir it into the milk, and occasionally stir this until twenty minutes before using; then put a tablespoonful of sugar and a small piece of butter, and bake twenty minutes. This, sometimes called poor man's pudding, is wholesome and palatable. It is better to be three hours in cooking.—Boston Globe.

—Horseradish should be planted as early in the season as possible, or just as soon as the ground can be properly prepared, and if large roots are desired the soil can not be made too rich and deep. In planting always use sets. These are the rootlets or branches of the main root, which are too small for table use. They are cut into pieces about four or five inches in length, and in such a manner that there will be no danger in setting the roots upside down. Sets planted upside down will never make good roots.—Prairie Farmer.

—Sweet Wafers: Six eggs, one pint flour; two ounces melted butter, one and one-half cups powdered sugar, one cup milk and one teaspoonful nutmeg. Beat whites and yelks separately and very stiff, rub the sugar and butter together, and work in first the yelks, then the milk and then flour and whites. Bake in well-buttered wafer or waffle-irons very quickly, browning as little as possible. Roll them while hot upon a smooth, round stick, not larger than your little finger, slipping it out carefully when the cake takes the right shape. These little cakes are an acceptable addition to any tea or supper table, and look well among fancy cakes in a basket.—Boston Budget.

QUEEN-RAISING.

A Simple and Approved Method of Raising Queens Artificially.

In the matter of rearing queens, there are two methods, which we will style artificial and natural. Artificial queens, raised from artificial cells. Natural queens, raised from natural cells, as when swarming.

In raising queens artificially there are several ways, of which the following is probably as good as any other, and can be carried on any time during the season, from May to October.

Select a colony from which you wish to breed, being careful to examine and see that they have plenty of young brood and eggs. Remove the queen, and, in order to save her, take out a frame of hatching brood and adhering bees at the same time. Place these with the deposed queen in a new hive and in a new location. You can build this up to any strength by inserting frames of brood from other colonies. The colony left queenless will at once start a number of queen cells, visible in three or four days. It is hardly necessary, in this enlightened day of ours, to state that the young queens thus forming are reared from eggs that would otherwise have hatched worker bees had not the queen been removed. At the end of eight days the queen cells formed will be capped over, eight days more, or sixteen days in all, and these cells will hatch out perfect queens. Between the time in which the queen cells are capped over and hatching time is the time to make good use of them. When they are about twelve days old, cut out the cells, inserting each in a frame of bees and brood taken from some other colony.

Be careful in selecting frames of brood not to get the queen, as she would soon destroy the cell containing your young queen. After having inserted your queen cells in frames of young hatching brood and bees, place these frames (one in each hive) separately, forming small colonies, generally called nuclei. With each colony so formed place an empty frame of comb and a division board to contract the space to suit the size of the colony formed. You can, if you wish, take frames of brood or honey from other colonies, instead of the empty frames, building up to a full colony, but, if you have made good selections of brood frames this will not be necessary, as they will soon multiply and increase to full size. If you have been successful in your transferring you will have quite a number of two or three frame nuclei, just right for additional queen raising. In two or three days the young queens will be out and in ten days they will be laying and ready for sale, as "untested" queens.—The Poulterer.

PAY OF JOURNALISTS.

Ten Thousand Dollars the Maximum Received by Newspaper Writers.

Generally speaking, it is safe to discredit all big stories, which are evidently told for effect and from some sort of vanity. The man who volunteers to tell you of his great earnings is usually not to be believed. Men who earn largely are apt to keep the fact to themselves. Journalists get fair salaries; as a rule, as much as other workers in the same grade do; but $27,000, or $17,000, or $15,000, is a palpable untruth. Managing editors occasionally receive $10,000 a year, and proprietary editors are often paid highly for actual or imaginary services. But no mere writer for a newspaper can command any such figures as have been reported. Five thousand dollars is generally the maximum that any man can earn by his pen, even in this, the great center and commercial capital, where such labor is more liberally recompensed than anywhere else. They who perform pure literary work are likely to get less than they who perform newspaper work, because books and magazines do not sell like newspapers, and because the field is far more contracted. Now and then newspapers pay what are known as fancy prices for particular kinds of work, or for some special news, but those prices are not kept up. The swaggering fellows who prate of the munificent wages of their pens are lineal descendants of Baron Munchausen and their noble lineage is universally recognized.—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

A CHINESE CITY.

Street Scenes in the Commercial Metropolis of the Celestial Empire.

The streets of Canton are unique in their way, and as picturesque as the Cairo bazars. The winding alleys, barely six feet wide, are paved with blocks of granite, and have been built without regard to regularity or uniformity, striking off into and running away from each other at the most unexpected junctures. Canton is a city of shops, and overhead are suspended thousands of long, narrow signboards, on which are inscribed, in gold, crimson, green, black, white or brown Chinese characters, the names of owners and their trades. These shops give the street a very showy aspect, and make a long vista of gaudy coloring, underneath which swarm the two and a half millions of inhabitants, surging through the narrow avenues in a way that makes one wonder that half of them are not trampled under foot.

"As we were borne aloft in state in the midst of this dense throng," says a lady who recently visited the city, "our approach heralded by the loud cries of our coolie-bearers bidding the natives make way, and responded to by the peculiar shrill shrieks of the people unceremoniously being hustled out of the way, I had ample opportunity of observing my novel surroundings, as varied and shifting as the combinations of a kaleidoscope, and far more entertaining. After leaving the suburbs (so called, but really a part of Canton), we entered the new city by an arched gateway, and passed between high blank walls, each side lined with stalls of fruit and sweetmeat sellers, till we came to the loftier and more important shops of the rich merchants, which are perfect bazars. Usually one story is completely open to the roof during the day time, showing a gorgeous background of richly carved and gilt wood work, behind which extends for a considerable distance the warehouse and dwelling. Here are to be seen all the specialties of Canton, each trade or business in its own street or locality. We saw magnificently wrought crape shawls, rich embroideries on satin, silk brocades, all hand-work (nothing in China is machine-made), carved black furniture, the finest ivory carving in the world, feather and silk fans, Jade stones and a wealth of artistic work in a dozen other directions that would have bewildered a house-furnishing English or American æsthete. The cheap shops, with their heterogeneous and amazing wares, were most amusing. They contained lanterns, clocks, mirrors, bamboo blinds and baskets, marble slabs, shoes, caps, spectacles, artificial flowers, beads, tobacco, coffins and joss-sticks, all displayed promiscuously in preparation for the Chinese New Year, the 18th of February. At the end of each street is usually a small joss-altar, and always a heavy wooden gateway."—Youth's Companion.

AN OIL POND.

A Refuge for Storm-Tossed Vessels in the Gulf of Mexico.

A singular spot exists in the Gulf of Mexico, some ten miles to the southward and westward of Sabine Pass, and almost directly in the track of vessels engaged in the lumber trade between Galveston and Calcasieu, La. It is nothing more than a large space, a mile or so in diameter, upon the surface of the sea, which looks like all the rest of the gulf during calm weather, but when the winds freshen to a gale and the waters about it become agitated, takes on a reddish color, and becomes thick and muddy. The place has been called the "oil pond," from the reason that, while there may be a tremendous sea running all around the place, within the circle of surf, the water is comparatively quiet, and vessels, which otherwise would be blown ashore or swamped, can there ride out the heaviest storms, and have done so in hundreds of instances. The water is about twelve feet deep, and a pole can be pushed twenty-five or thirty feet through the soft and peculiar mud forming the bottom. This mud is different from any thing on the coast—of a soapy character and of remarkable cleansing properties, being often used to clean the decks of coasting vessels. The oil which renders the surface of the "pond" so smooth is supposed to come from the mud at the bottom, and many think there are deposits of petroleum not far from the surface. It is said that the "oil pond," when reached during a gale, is just as safe as a vessel being under the lee of a wharf in any harbor.—Western Plowman.

America's New Racing Sloop.

The new Ellsworth sloop Atlantic, built to sail for the America's cup, was launched at Bay Ridge recently. Her dimensions are as follows: Length over all, 95 feet 1 inch; on water line, 83 feet 8 inches, extreme beam, 23 feet 2 inches; depth of hold, 12 feet 3 inches; draught, 4 feet 5 inches at stem and 8 feet 7 inches aft. Her least freeboard is 3 feet 3 inches. Her mainmast, which is of Oregon pine, is 81 feet long and 20 inches in diameter, and her topmast 48 feet long and 11 inches in diameter. Her bowsprit is 54 feet long and 17 inches in diameter; main boom, 76 feet long and 15 inches in diameter; gaff 48 feet long and 11 inches in diameter; spinnaker boom, 75 feet long and 12 inches in diameter. Her mainsail measures 50 feet on the luff and spreads an area of 4,000 square feet; the area of spinnaker is 4,400, and that of the main jib 1,150 square feet.—N. Y. Post.

—Horne Tooke being asked by George the Third whether he played at cards, replied: "No, your majesty; the fact is I can not tell a king from a knave."

Biliousness

Is more prevalent in the spring than at other seasons, being brought on by sudden changes in the weather, causing bitter taste, offensive breath, coated tongue, sick headache, drowsiness, dizziness, and loss of appetite. Hood's Sarsaparilla combines the best known remedies for biliousness, and readily cures the most severe attacks. It gently stimulates the digestive organs, relieves headache, and restores the appetite.

"For the past three months I have been troubled a great deal with biliousness, which, on getting up in the morning, caused headache and bad taste in my mouth. After using three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla I am entirely free from all biliousness and headache." J. M. PHILLIPS, Wait's New Hotel, Bloomington, Ill.

CONTAGIOUS!

I am a native of England, and while I was in that country I contracted a terrible blood poison, and for two years was under treatment as an out-door patient at Nottingham Hospital, England, but was not cured. I suffered the most agonizing pains in my bones, and was covered with sores all over my body and limbs. Finally I completely lost all hope in that country, and sailed for America, and was treated at Roosevelt in this city, as well as by a prominent physician in New York having no connection with the hospitals.

I saw the advertisement of Swift's Specific, and I determined to give it a trial. I took six bottles and I can say with great joy that they have cured me entirely. I am as sound and well as I ever was in my life. L. FRED HALFORD.

HERR MOST GUILTY.

An Anarchist Who Will Have a Grievance Now,

And Learn Something of the Law He Denounces.

NEW YORK, May 28.—Herr Most was brought to court this morning handcuffed to a thief. His associates, Schenck and Braunschweig, were with him. The courtroom was crowded. Most looked very savage and scowled viciously at every person his eyes fell upon. It was said that he was greatly annoyed at the spread of the statement which the official journal of the Socialistic party has been giving publicity to, that for years he (Most) was in the pay of the German Government, and that his presence in this country was for the purpose of destroying the labor movement here. Adolph Schenck, one of the prisoners, took the stand. He stated that he understood that the object of the meeting was to advise the use of arms against force, that if a blow should be struck against them they should strike back. The purpose of the meeting was also to protest against such action as had been taken in St. Louis, when hired deputy sheriffs shot down men and women. The meeting was that of the International Men's Rifle Club. The witness said he was an Anarchist. He knew the meaning of the word. Just now he believed in the Government of the United States. It suited him, but it did not suit every person else. Witness did not place Most and George Washington on an equal place in governmental affairs. The prisoner Braunschweig took the stand and said that he was at work when arrested. When he entered the meeting Most was speaking, and when he had finished the witness spoke in German for ten minutes. In his remarks he declared that the presence of police at a workmen's meeting in free America was a shame. He never mentioned anything of bombs or guns. He did not know whether he was an Anarchist or not. He agreed with a great many of Most's sentiments as published in Freiheit. "We say openly we despise morality so-called," read the Prosecuting Attorney from the Freiheit. "Do you agree with that sentiment?" "No, we want to keep morality," said Braunschweig. The witness did not believe in robbery, arson and murder, and said that he was not in sympathy with those who would use force. But when a man was hungry and his family starving, he must do something. The defense declared that this ended their case. Surprise was expressed that Most did not take the stand. Most then addressed the jury in his own behalf. The jury then found the whole three guilty of the charge in the indictment — misdemeanor — and recommended Schenck to the mercy of the court. The prisoners will be sentenced on Wednesday next.

WITH A NOISE LIKE THUNDER

The Whole Interior of a Mill Falls In—A Loss of a Hundred Thousand Dollars.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., May 28.—Last evening a terrific noise was heard in the Valley City Mills. On investigation it proved to be the giving away of the overloaded floors. The whole interior of the huge structure fell into the basement, and a large portion of the contents was soon swept away by the mill race out into the Grand river, leaving the lofty mill like an empty egg shell. There were stored in immense bins in the second, third and fourth stories of the mills between 15,000 and 20,000 bushels of wheat and about thirty tons of bran, all weighing 500 tons. In the western portion of the building was the milling machinery of the most improved and costly styles, a portion of it having been put in but a year ago, at an expense of $18,000. All this plunged down into the basement in the general destruction. The timbers and machinery in falling broke through the west side of the building, facing the river, making a gap in the wooden walls fifteen feet wide and twenty to thirty feet high. A smaller gap was also made in the wall on the east side. The damage is estimated at from $80,000 to $100,000. The mills were insured to the amount of $50,000, but the insurance is worthless, as it only covers damage by fire. A new mill will be erected at once. The disaster occurred by the timbers yielding in the first story and forcing the uprights, the whole came down.

NO SECTARIANISM.

The Reading of the Bible Forbidden in Wisconsin Schools.

BELOIT, WIS., May 28.—On the petition of various persons an alternative writ of mandamus was issued yesterday by order of the circuit court of Janesville, directed to the district board of school district No. 3, in the city of Engerton, requiring the board to discontinue the reading of the Bible and other religious and devotional exercises practiced in this school, or that they show cause to the contrary before the court on the 5th day of June next. The application was based upon Section 3, of Article 10, of the State Constitution, which is as follows: "The Legislature shall provide by law for the establishment of district schools which shall be as nearly uniform as practicable, and such schools shall be free and without charge for tuition to all children between the ages of four and twenty years, and no sectarian institution shall be allowed therein."

Destructive Whirlwind in Michigan.

LAPEER, MICH., May 28.—At about midnight last night, a whirlwind of terrific severity, accompanied by thunder, lightning, rain and hail visited this vicinity, unroofing barns, twisting off signs and awnings, breaking glass and blowing down huge trees. The inhabitants were much alarmed, many taking their children with them and repairing to the cellars for safety. Much damage was done to property, but there was no loss of life yet reported.

Nova Scotia in the Role of Secessionist.

HALIFAX, N. S., May 28.—In an address just issued by Premier Fielding, the following occurs: "In the opinion of the Government the time has come when the people of Nova Scotia should once more make an effort to obtain release from the union into which they were forced."

The President's Marriage.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—President Cleveland will be wedded to Miss Frankie Folsome in the White House Wednesday, June 2. The ceremony will be unostentatious. This information is given out by formal announcement, and all gossip previously indulged in goes for naught.

Business Embarrassments.

NEW YORK, May 28.—The business failures occurring throughout the country during the last seven days, number for the United States 154, and for Canada 27, as compared with 167 last week and 176 the week previous. The casualties in the Eastern, Southern and Middle States are light, and below the average in number, the Western and Pacific States furnishing more than one-half of the total number of failures of the week.

Cholera on the Jump.

VENICE, May 28.—Cholera is increasing. Thirty-five new cases have been reported within twenty-four hours.

Shot by an Octogenarian.

LAMAR, MO., May 28.—Robert B. Hay, about thirty-two years old, was shot and fatally wounded by C. H. Barber, about twelve o'clock last night. Barber is seventy-eight years old, deaf, childish and lives alone with his seven-year-old daughter, his wife having left him some weeks since. Hay, who is quite deaf also, visited the old man's house to talk over some business matters, and knocked at the door. Barber mistaking him for a burglar, fired on him with a shot gun.

A Dago Swung Off.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 28.—Petro Nurdello was hanged here to-day for the murder of Carmine Rotunna. The crime was committed the 8th of July last.

CANADIAN SASS.

They Will Have No Half-Way Settlement—American Vessels Must Keep Away or go to the Bottom.

MONTREAL, QUE., May 30.—That there is a strong undercurrent feeling of jealousy and animosity in the breasts of the English Canadians here against their American cousins one who has lived here any length of time can not fail to discover. The Canadian press may declare in the most vehement manner that Canadians, without exception, have naught but the kindest feelings for their Yankee neighbors, but this is not the fact. There is a deep-seated prejudice at present, and it is rapidly growing against the United States citizens and the exports of that land. The North-west of the Dominion has held up its boundless acres of prairie land, crossed by the great Canadian Pacific railroad, as the par excellence of all that is fertile, while the Western States are decried as being a land fit only for the Indian and cyclones to visit. Of course, this is all in the interest of immigration, and if a word, whether true or false, can be uttered which will tend to keep an immigrant with money on this side of line 45 it will surely be said. This feeling is more due to the knowledge that of the land of Canada but very little is fit for settlement or capable of successful cultivation, for the reason that while the Dominion itself is larger than the whole territory covered by the United States, being so far North, hardly a greater number of acres can be planted and crop grown on account of the severity and length of the winters here and the early frosts than that embraced in the one State of Texas. The fishery question, now the subject of dispute, has served to bring this feeling to the surface, and it is wonderful how often the subject of war being possible is discussed at the homes and in the clubs of this and other cities of the Dominion. In the course of an interview held yesterday with a prominent member of Parliament, and who, by the way, is a strong Government supporter, he said: "There will be no half way about the speedy settlement of this question. We will force it upon the States to declare whether they will keep their fishing vessels out of our waters or whether we shall send them to the bottom." Being asked what course would be followed by the Canadian cruisers if they met with armed resistance he said: "The Minister of Marine has declared that Canada will take consequences, and in case of resistance then the officers commanding the different cruisers have orders to shoot such vessel out of the water. England is at Canada's back," he added significantly. The Minister of Marine was seen yesterday, and from him the following information obtained: There are engaged in the fisheries of Canada 59,493 men. According to provinces they are as follows: Nova Scotia, 29,905; Quebec, 11,822; New Brunswick, 10,185; Ontario, 2,716; Prince Edward's Island, 3,535; British Columbia, 1,830. The sixty thousand men are employed in 1,177 vessels of 48,728 tons' measurement and $2,021,883 value, and in 28,472 boats of $652,257 value. The official figures of the value of the fisheries last year are as follows: Nova Scotia, $8,283,922; New Brunswick, $4,005,431; Quebec, $1,719,459; P. E. Island, $1,293,429; British Columbia, $1,078,038; Ontario, $1,342,691. Total, $17,722,973. The most valuable fish to Canada is the cod, of which $4,536,732 worth was caught last year. The other chief fish were: Lobsters, $2,613,731; herring, $2,475,118; mackerel, $1,504,429; salmon, $1,152,348; and haddock, white fish, trout and sardines, from $500,000 to $250,000 worth. The exports of Canadian fish are, however, of special interest, as the figures show where the greatest trade lies. The fish exports last year were as follows: To the United States, $3,560,781; to Great Britain, $1,543,371; to British West Indies, $1,552,868; to Spanish West Indies, $718,956; to French West Indies, $130,235; to South America, $295,647. The total Canadian exports amount to $7,960,001. The total cost of the fishery service is $153,215 per year, a small sum for the protection of an industry producing nearly $18,000,000 a year, and exporting nearly $8,000,000.

Confederate Graves to be Decorated.

SANDUSKY, O., May 30.—The graves of the Confederate dead on Johnson's Island, Lake Erie, will be decorated to-morrow by McMeens Post G. A. R., of this city. During the war over fifteen thousand prisoners were confined on this island, and more than two hundred dead were buried there, but few of the graves being now marked. Congress, Southern Legislatures and Southern Masonic Lodges will be asked to appropriate money with which to improve the cemetery and keep it in decent order.

Blue and Gray Join in Strewing Flowers.

CHARLESTON, W. VA., May 30.—About five hundred Confederate and Union soldiers met together yesterday in this city, and after addresses by ex-Congressmen Vance, of Ohio, for the Union soldiers, and Captain John S. Swann, for the Confederates, a procession was formed and marched to the cemetery, with several wagons loaded with flowers, where they proceeded to decorate the graves of Blue and Gray.

Dangerous Fun.

NEWPORT, R. I., May 30.—Last Wednesday night an attempt was made to break into the store of H. G. Blanchard here. Since then John Branch, the clerk, who sleeps in the store has kept a close watch. Last night the boys here thought to scare him by rapping on the door with a piece of iron. Thinking them burglars, the clerk fired three shots with a revolver, hitting one boy, John Alexander, in the head and inflicting a very dangerous wound.

Liberal Church Subscriptions.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—The pastor of the Church of the Covenant announced to his congregation to-day that a debt of $160,000 still remained on the church, $40,000 had been raised and $60,000 was covered with a mortgage. A subscription was at once started to raise the balance, and in thirty minutes $38,000 was subscribed. Justice Strong, of the U. S. Supreme Court, contributed $10,000.

They Took the County Money.

ST. LOUIS, MO., May 30.—The store of Wm. P. Farberty, at Perryville, county seat of Perry County, Mo., was burglarized some time Friday night, the safe blown open and between $5,000 and $8,000 stolen. Two packages containing $3,700 were overlooked, and some small sums belonging to depositors were left behind. Mr. Farberty is the county treasurer, and most of the money taken belonged to the county.

Protestant Episcopal Convention.

CHICAGO, May 30.—The triennial Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States will be held in Central Music Hall, Chicago, beginning October 23 and continuing five weeks.

The Winter Wheat Crop.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—The winter wheat crop has in many large sections been badly damaged by insect enemies, but it is predicted from numerous reports received that while the crop will not come nearly up to earlier prophesies of an immense yield, there will still be a fair average yield.

A Millionaire's Gift.

PITTSBURGH, PA., May 30.—Andrew Carnegie, the millionaire steel manufacturer, has given $250,000 to Allegheny City for establishing a free library and music hall. This is in addition to his gift of $500,000 to Pittsburgh.

Shot His Stepson.

LOUISVILLE, KY., May 30.—Lucius C. Owsley, a Louisville drummer, shot and killed his stepson, DeWitt Taylor, near Bradfordsville, Ky., Saturday night. Family difficulties are said to be the cause. Taylor is said to have been pursuing Owsley, when the latter turned and shot him.

More Runaway Accidents in Central Park.

NEW YORK, May 30.—Mr and Mrs. J. E. Pearson were fatally injured by a runaway accident in Central Park, New York. The horse attached to the carriage of Daniel Bonner ran away in the same park, throwing Mr. Bonner out and seriously injuring him.

WHAT NEXT?

The Spanish Fishing Smack Chlotilde Seized

Off Florida by a U. S. Cutter for Violating Fishing Laws—A Warlike Consul Stands Germany Off With the Stars and Stripes.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., May 31.—A Times-Union special from Cedar Keys says: The revenue cutter Dix, Captain Fengar, arrived in port at 6 p. m. yesterday with the Spanish fishing smack Chlotilde, of Havana, which she captured off Anclote Key, of this State, for violating the fishery laws by fishing within three leagues of the American shore and irregularities in her papers. The Chlotilde has 6,000 salt fish aboard. The crew consists of ten men and officers, none of whom speak English. She now lies in this harbor with a prize crew from the Dix on board. The captain has been reported to the authorities in Washington.

MELBOURNE, May 31.—Advices from Samoa, of date May 23, state that a German man-of-war proceeded to the territory of King Tomasese, whom Germany upholds against King Malietoa. The British and American Consuls at Apia drew up a formal protest against Germany's subversion of King Malietoa's authority, and, in response to that ruler's appeal for protection, the American Consul hoisted the Samoan under the American flag, and immediately telegraphed to President Cleveland, notifying him of his action in establishing a protectorate over the disputed territory.

THE PRESIDENT'S MARRIAGE.

Where the Historical Ceremony is to be Performed—Miss Cleveland's Opinion of Her Sister-in-Law, that is to Be.

WASHINGTON, May 31.—The approaching marriage of the President continues the ruling topic of talk. It is understood that Miss Cleveland will have the ordering of the house for the bride's arrival, and that she has given up the elegant boudoir in the southwestern portion of the building, and which has been assigned to all the ladies regnant at the White House. This room possesses many beauties. The walls have a grayish tint blended with pompadour coloring, and the carpet harmonizes with them. The furniture is of a light pattern, and modeled in imitation of bamboo. President Cleveland has used the same apartments as the other Presidents, in the northwest corner of the building, where the picture of his lady-love was to be seen on his dressing-table. Dr. Sunderland, the President's pastor, and the man who will perform the marriage ceremony, is a Republican, and was rather bitter on Mr. Cleveland during the campaign. But when the President got to Washington, and he and his sisters found there the man who had been their mother's pastor in the little town where they lived in New York, the memory of that dear mother and the love for any one who had been associated with her was too strong to influence by political feelings, and they were soon found in the congregation of the Four-and-a-half-street Church. The Blue Parlor, in which the wedding will occur, was the scene of the marriage of John Quincy Adams' son in 1826, while his father was President, and of President Hayes' niece, Miss Platt, to General Hastings. Only about twenty persons will witness the ceremony. The few invitations sent out were in the form of personal notes from the President, reading as follows:

"EXECUTIVE MANSION, May 29, 1886.

"MY DEAR MR. ———: I am to be married on Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock at the White House to Miss Folsom. It will be a very quiet affair, and I will be extremely gratified at your attendance on the occasion. Yours sincerely,

"GROVER CLEVELAND."

Miss Cleveland was reported as saying to-day: "My brother might have searched the world over without finding a sweeter, purer girl, or one more worthy or fitter for the position she is about to assume."

Some Interesting Figures.

WASHINGTON, May 31.—A statement issued by the Treasury Department shows that the revenues for last year of the Government were at the rate of $5.68 per head of population and the expenditures at the rate of $4.57 per capita. This is quite a change in the last quarter of a century, for in '60 the per capita income was only $1.78 and expenditures, $2.01. The revenue has been as low as 96 cents for each inhabitant, as was the case in 1841, and under stimulus of war taxes has risen to $15.73 per head, as it did in 1866. The difference between the maximum and the minimum annual expenditure for other purposes than the payment of the principal of the public debt have been even greater. In 1845 we spent $1.15 for each person then in the country, and in 1865 $37.34. For the last twelve years the net revenue, eleven-twelfths of which comes from the product of taxation, has ranged from a maximum of $70.64 in 1882 to a minimum of $5.42 in 1878. During the same period expenditures have varied from $7.07 in 1874 to $4.39 in 1884.

The Canadian Fisheries Squabble.

HALIFAX, N. S., May 31.—The schooner Amos B, from Canso, report the Dominion fishery police boat L. Howlett cruising in that neighborhood. The American schooners James A. Garfield, Frederick Gerring and Green Leaf have been officially reported as having purchased bait within the Canadian limits, as well as other vessels whose names have not been learned. It is understood that cruisers will attempt to seize those vessels should they be met with. The Garfield is stated to have procured bait and ice in Bras D'Or Lake, and the other two obtained theirs at Canso and Fox Island. Many American fishing schooners are believed to be hovering about the Nova Scotia coast, but their fears increase with the departure of each new fishery cruiser from port.

ST. JOHN, N. B., May 31.—The Dominion fishing cruiser Lansdowne received orders last night to proceed to sea this morning. Her destination is unknown.

Bad Place to Take a Nap.

CANTON, IA., May 31.—The Midland passenger train, running from Anamosa, this morning ran over three young Germans who had been to a dance at Goose Lake last night, had become drunk and laid down on the track to sleep. They were farm hands, shortly arrived from the old country. One died soon after, another will die, and the third was only slightly bruised.

WORKING HARD.

The Knights of Labor Convention at Cleveland Gets Down to Business—Increase in the Membership of the Executive Board—Proposed Treaty of Peace with the Trades-Unionists—Probability of an Alliance with the National Grange.

CLEVELAND, O., May 29.—The general assembly of the Knights of Labor settled down to hard work yesterday morning and held two sessions, business being transacted on the eight-hour plan, from eight to twelve o'clock in the morning and two to six o'clock in the afternoon. After the opening preliminaries the Committee on Laws presented its report, the first proposition of which was substantially that the Executive Board of the Knights of Labor be increased from five to eleven members, or that six assistants be appointed to assist the present board. After an hour's discussion the proposition was adopted without change. It was then decided to establish permanent headquarters for the Executive Board in Philadelphia, and, if deemed necessary, the board may sit throughout the year, instead of assembling at the call of the general master workman.

A resolution was carried that gave the general master workman the authority to recall the commissions of every organizer in the order. The subject of appointing competent organizers and the means to be taken for their selection was being discussed when the noon recess occurred.

The convention reassembled at two o'clock. The Executive Board presented its report in the matter in controversy between the trades unions and the Knights of Labor, and the rest of the afternoon was spent in hearing statements and arguments on the report.

The report of the Executive Board on the trades-unions controversy embodies the address of the trades unions and the terms on which they wish to settle existing troubles. The address is as follows:

The officers of the National and International trades unions desire to make the statement that they have no antagonism toward the Knights of Labor, and believe that, as an order, it has a legitimate mission in the labor movement of America. Through the development of industry and the aggregation of capital the tendency is to monopolize the business of the country. Hence the various trades have been affected by an introduction of machinery, the subdivision of labor, the use of woman's and child's labor, and the lack of an apprentice system, so that the skilled trades were rapidly sinking to the level of pauper labor. To protect the skilled labor of America from being reduced to beggary, and to sustain the standard of American workmanship and skill, the trades unions of America have been established. They are a social society, and their past history proves not only have they been a benefit in raising the wages of workmen and in reducing the burdens of toil, but they have fulfilled the fraternal duty of assisting their members when unemployed and in sickness, when disabled by accident and old age, and provided for the widows and orphans of their deceased brothers. Consequently the trades unions have become a fixed and permanent institution in America, not antagonistic to the welfare of the country, but calculated to elevate all branches of labor to a higher degree of citizenship and a larger share of social comfort.

For this principle the thoughtful and far-seeing men of various crafts have founded unions of their respective trades, and to maintain their trades unions the members have sacrificed countless time and money, and where, at first, many predicted their complete failure, time has proved not only their usefulness, but has demonstrated that they are destined to fulfill a higher mission, and their progress is in exact proportion to the intellectual development of their members. When they are founded on such grounds there need be no fears of their destruction, nor need there be any antagonism between them and the Knights of Labor. Of late our greatest fears have not been that the Knights of Labor would destroy trades-unions, but that the capitalists of the country would use every opportunity to pit one form of organization against the other, and in the conflict destroy both.

Within the last year the National and International trades unions have grown with giant strides. The trades unions are economically managed, and the most rigid accountability is exacted from their officers in all financial and business transactions. As officers pledged by the most sacred obligations to promote the interests of their respective unions the chief officers felt it was their duty to attend the Philadelphia conference, and the results of that conference are such that for the future there are no doubts that the trades unions of America will not only grow but become more fixed institutions.

The treaty itself, of course, is the most important part of the work, and is the bone of contention, for if its terms are agreed to by the Knights of Labor it will work radical changes in the management and organization of local assemblies. It provides that no assembly of the Knights of Labor can be formed of any trade without the consent of the nearest trades union of that craft. When such assemblies have already been formed they shall be required to disband and join mixed assemblies; no person shall be admitted to the order of the Knights of Labor who has been convicted of scabbing, ratting or embezzling in the trades unions without exoneration from said unions; no person shall be admitted to membership in the Knights of Labor who is working for less than the union scale of wages of his craft; whenever a strike or lockout of any trades unionist is in progress no assembly of the Knights of Labor shall interfere until settled to the satisfaction of the trades union affected. The treaty closes by stipulating that the Knights of Labor shall issue no trade marks that may in any way compete or conflict with trade marks issued by the trades unions. The address and the treaty were referred to the Committee on the State of the Order.

It is believed the Knights will undoubtedly indorse the bill now before Congress providing for a tax of ten cents a pound on oleomargarine, and it is thought this action will draw the grangers into the field, thus greatly strengthening the order.

The Knights of Labor are courting an alliance with the agriculturists, and indications point to the establishment of close relations between that order and the National Grange as an outcome of the present session of the general assembly. The National Grange has been in existence for twenty years. Since the date of its organization its growth has been wonderful. In the first ten years 2,000,000 members were admitted and the total membership to date is estimated at 6,000,000. In its declaration of principles it strongly advises co-operation and arbitration, discountenances the credit and mortgage system and all unhealthy rivalries. Its chief aim is to bring producers and consumers into direct and friendly intercourse, and in every way it agrees with the main principles of the Knights of Labor. The Knights have recognized the immense power wielded by the grange, and the committee appointed Thursday was instructed to use every effort to bring the farmers under their charter.

Queer Cause of Death.

CHICAGO, May 29.—Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Thorne, of England, came to this country about two weeks ago. They reached this city last Friday. While in Washington Mrs. Thorne noticed a pin of the black, mourning kind, in her pillow at the hotel. Endeavoring to extricate it, she pricked her thumb. Shortly after reaching Chicago it began to pain her. She died of blood-poisoning at the Grand Pacific yesterday morning.

State Officers Resisted.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., May 29.—The State Veterinarian tried recently to kill some horses suffering with the glanders in Tazewell County, but the owner, a German farmer, resisted. The Board of Live Stock Commissioners visited the place and found about forty farmers gathered to receive them, and apparently prepared to offer violent resistance to any effort to kill the horses. They were pacified with difficulty, and they finally permitted the board to take the horses from the stable for inspection. The matter was finally compromised by the adoption of an order by the board placing the stock under quarantine for a few weeks.

XLIXTH CONGRESS.

First Session.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—SENATE.—A bill was reported favorably authorizing the construction of the Lake Borgne outlet for improving the navigation of the Mississippi. A bill was introduced to create an Assistant Commissioner of Indian Affairs. A resolution was adopted authorizing the printing of a report of the Signal Service officials on Alaska. A bill for Lieutenant Greeley's benefit was reported favorably, authorizing the appointment of an additional Assistant Adjutant General, with the rank of Major. A bill was passed to credit ex-Collectors Chester A. Arthur and Wm. H. Robertson, of New York, with certain sums lost during their administration of the office. A resolution was adopted inquiring into the propriety of using the Pensacola Navy yard for the construction of steel ships. The A. & P. Railroad land forfeiture bill was passed, and June 1 fixed for the consideration of the bill repealing the pre-emption and timber culture laws. A bill was passed to increase the pension of soldiers who lost an arm at the elbow or knee at the joint, from twenty-four to thirty dollars a month. The provisions of the bill were extended to some special classes. Private pension bills were then taken up. The bankruptcy bill was debated through the rest of the day.

HOUSE.—Conferees on the shipping bill were appointed. The Senate bill, authorizing a bridge across Arthur Kill, was reported favorably without amendment. The Committee on Territories reported a bill to enable the people of Dakota to form a constitutional and State government. An adverse report was made of the Senate bill for the admission of Dakota and for the organization of the Territory of Lincoln. The Ways and Means Committee made an adverse report on the Mexican treaty. The conference report on the urgent deficiency bill was agreed to. The oleomargarine bill was then taken up and debated throughout the afternoon and at an evening session.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—SENATE.—Private pension bills were considered until two o'clock, when the bankruptcy bill was taken up. It was soon laid aside and the bill taxing land grant lands considered. After an amendment had been added making the United States a preferred purchaser in case of land sales, the bill amending the Chinese Immigration act of 1884 was discussed. Mr. Sherman explained that the bill simply explained the meaning of the existing law on points where a difference of opinion existed. Mr. Hoar protested against further anti-Chinese legislation. Mr. Ingalls opposed the bill which was finally postponed to a future day. At 5:50 p. m., the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE—The Dunn free ship bill gave way for the oleomargarine bill, and discussion on that measure was resumed. Speeches were made against the bill by Browne (Ind.), Kelley (Pa.) and Morrison (Ill). Mr. Grosvenor's remarks were directed toward the Morrison tariff bill. After an amendment had been adopted requiring boarding-house keepers and others using oleomargarine to label it as such, the House at 5 p. m. adjourned.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—SENATE.—A resolution was offered for the investigation of Indian traders. The bill forfeiting certain lands in Oregon, belonging to the Northern Pacific railroad, was then taken up, and discussed during the morning hour. Several private pension bills were passed, and at 2 p. m. eulogies on the late Senator Miller, of California, were delivered by Messrs. Stanford, Hearst, and others, and after a resolution expressing the sorrow of the Senate had been adopted, an adjournment was carried at 3:45 p. m., as a mark of respect to the deceased.

HOUSE.—The conference report on the shipping bill was adopted, with the retaliatory clause included. Discussion on the oleomargarine bill was resumed. Short speeches were made by Daniels of Virginia, and Tillman of South Carolina, against, and by Butterworth, and Hitt of Illinois, in favor, although Mr. Butterworth believed the tax proposed was too high. After a number of amendments, intended to make the bill ridiculous, had been ruled out of order, the House adjourned at 5 p. m. An attempt to get a night session, for further discussion, was defeated by filibustering.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—SENATE.—A bill was passed validating the general laws of Washington Territory for the incorporation of insurance companies. The resolutions offered yesterday providing for an investigation of the appointment of Indian traders was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs. Consideration of the Northern Pacific land grant forfeiture bill was resumed. A motion to lay on the table Van Wyck's amendment for a sweeping forfeiture of the lands granted to that road was defeated by 23 yeas to 28 nays. After a protracted debate the Senate went into executive session at 3:45 p. m., and at 4:42 adjourned.

HOUSE.—It was agreed to adjourn over Monday next. June 18 was set apart for consideration of the Senate resolutions relative to the death of the late Senator Miller, of California. Private business having been disposed with, the oleomargarine bill was taken up and discussed until 5 p. m., when the House took a recess until 8 p. m. The night session being for the consideration of pension bills, before the recess several vetoes of private pension bills were read.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—SENATE.—Not in session.

HOUSE.—The Speaker laid before the House a communication from the Secretary of State submitting an estimate of $106,100 for inaugurating the statue of Liberty Enlightening the World. Referred. Mr. Merriman (N. Y.), from the Committee on Post-offices and Post-roads reported a bill amending the statutes relative to the transmission of obscene matter through the mails. House calendar. The House then went into committee of the whole, Mr. Springer (Ills.) in the chair, on the oleomargarine bill, the pending amendment being that offered by Mr. Townsend (Ill.) reducing the tax on oleomargarine from ten to two cents per pound. Several amendments were offered and rejected. The bill was discussed at some length, the committee rose and the House adjourned until Tuesday.

THE COMMONWEALTH.

Louisville Leaf Tobacco Market.

THE general action of the market has been indicative of healthier conditions, and for dark and heavy tobaccos decidedly so. There has been a good steady competition for medium export grades of dark and heavy tobaccos from regie and German buyers, with an irregular contingent from the home trade upon inducements in price or quality offered, and these grades are stiff at the advance quoted last week. Burley tobaccos have met a good, steady demand, but the offerings have been large, and at times there were indications that they were verging toward an excess. Prices were occasionally a little irregular for medium and low grades, but all kinds and qualities are about steady at the close at the level of last week's prices. We quote 1884 tobaccos as follows for full weight packages:

Mrs. Hughes was thereupon placed under arrest.

THE reaction seems to have set in against the Law and Order Club, of Louisville, and the session of the city court grand jury a few days ago was prolific in surprises. A list of thirty saloons where card-playing for drinks and dice throwing for cigars and drinks were allowed was handed in for the purpose of securing indictments. The cases were prepared by the Law and Order Club, but when it came to a vote the grand jury tied, and the indictments were refused. The action of the grand jury was based upon the fact that the Legislature in authorizing pool selling and gambling on the jockey club track, and prohibiting it in town had created an unjust and improper law, which discriminated against card-playing merely for social amusement. At the saloons in question it was not charged that poker rooms were maintained, or that the games were played for money or profit. This is a big black eye for the law and order league, the grand jury having refused a few days before to indict the pool-sellers in the city. The movement of citizens to break up the congregation of prostitutes on Lafayette street also received an obstacle from this grand jury. The jury went up to the street and made inquiries in person. They declined to indict the women for keeping bawdy and disorderly houses, holding that no practical method had been discovered for abating prostitution.

USELESS EXPENDITURES.

President Cleveland Believes That Congress Can Not Know More of Worthy Pension Claims Than the Bureau Itself.

The remarks of President Cleveland on this subject in his message vetoing a bill to double the pension already granted to a soldier named Hill, strike at an evil that is too frequent. It arises presumably from the weak good nature or a desire to escape importunities on the part of the individual members of Congress who introduce the bills, which are reported by the committee of their solicitation, or through inattention on the part of the other members. Before the Senate or House it is not likely that they are subjected to the slightest scrutiny, and go through, as is very natural, on the strength of the committee's report. The extent to which this action is taken may be inferred from the fact that the President has now awaiting his signature two hundred and forty bills granting and increasing pensions and replacing on the roll names of men that have been stricken off. All of these cases had previously been acted upon adversely by the Pension Bureau. Mr. Cleveland concisely states the objection to this class of legislation where he says in his message that "the policy of frequently reversing by special enactment the decisions of the bureau invested by law with the examination of pension claims, fully equipped for such examination, and which ought not to be suspected of any lack of liberality to our veteran soldiers, is exceedingly questionable. It may well be doubted if a committee of Congress has a better opportunity than such agency to judge of the merits of this claim." That is it exactly. How is a committee of Congress, heavily burdened with business, to give the careful examination to a matter of this sort that may be expected from a department of the Administration fully equipped for the work, and in the habit of sifting the evidence and judging of its value. If it lack any facilities, for want of which claims are likely to suffer, the President further suggests that they had better be supplied by Congress instead of attempting to supplement its work by this special legislation. The President hints that the Pension Bureau has not, in the past, shown any obstructive tendencies in the transaction of this business, which certainly is true. The liberality of the administration of our pension laws has been the subject of favorable and unfavorable comment ever since the war, and there does not seem to be the slightest need of the interference of Congress upon this score. There has been altogether too much of this special, personal legislation for the relief of all sorts of people, including these under discussion, from the beginning until now, and the public has had too little to say about it. To Congressmen who are handling millions in appropriations these few thousands of dollars seem trifling. And so the thing goes on, and the money runs out of the treasury like water from a sieve; the great body of the population, who have no claims to put in, paying the fiddler, as it were, without getting any dancing to speak of. We are glad that President Cleveland has had the manliness to put his finger upon this leak, for while, as he says, it is impossible for him to examine into all these claims, (just as impossible, he might well have said, as for Congress to have given them proper attention), yet he has forcibly drawn the attention of Congress and the country to a most pernicious practice of legislation.—Boston Statesman.

FOREVER DISQUALIFIED.

Why George Frisbie Hoar Can Never Be Elected President of the United States.

Hon. George Frisbie Hoar is occasionally patted on the back by too partial friends who have faith to believe that a Republican nomination for President is waiting for him. The presidency of the American Antiquarian Society is a much more congenial place for this choleric old pre-Adamite, but since he has a boom, although a wee and rudimentary one, let it be recorded and encouraged. Brother Blaine has had considerable fun with him at one time and another, but in 1884 Uncle George, allured, perhaps, by the prospect of being made Secretary of State, worked for his former persecutor with characteristic petulance of speech and piety of demeanor. We suppose that the paleozoic man of Worcester has never understood how a candidate whom he went moral bail for could possibly be beaten.

But beaten Brother Blaine was, and beaten would Uncle George Hoar be if by some tremendous convulsion of a National convention he should ever get the chance. The woman suffragists might rally around his venerable relics, and the civil war be fought over under his command, but all would be in vain. And yet he is a man of talent and of experience in public life, antique of aspect and vehement of speech, has that sublimity of self-admiration which goes far to impose upon the world, and his private character is high. It is impossible to say that a man from Massachusetts may not be nominated for President, improbable as the contingency now seems; and Mr. Hoar may be the man. But there is one irrefragable objection.

Like his cousin, Mr. Evarts, and like Mr. Edmunds, he is virtually disabled and disqualified by his participation in the detestable conspiracy and fraud by which Hayes was dumped into the White House. Fraud vitiates all it touches, and Frisbie Hoar, a member of the infamous eight of the commission to promote fraud, will not escape punishment if he ever goes before the American people. He appears venerable, pious and sanctimonious, but no semblance or reality of subsequent good conduct can induce forgiveness of his great offence. He is perpetually disqualified for the Presidency.—N. Y. Sun.

—Mr. Cleveland told the representatives of the New York State Press Association that he worked from fourteen to sixteen hours a day. It was expected after the warning conveyed by Mr. Manning's attack that the President would pay more heed to the dangers attending such prolonged application to duty. But he doesn't seem to have fulfilled that expectation. If Mr. Cleveland is not in the party sense a good Democrat he is at least a genuine American.—Brooklyn Eagle.

—A Boston man saw a good-looking woman drop her glove from a car window just as the train was leaving the station. He rushed forward, grabbed the glove, as he supposed, and racing alongside of the car, handed the fair one a banana skin, which he had picked up by mistake.

A MOST WRETCHED BOOK.

A Libel upon America and a Disgrace to a Citizen Who Has Been Highly Honored.

Every true American, every patriotic citizen, and every friend of General Logan will be pained and chagrined at the wretched mixture of falsehood, bigotry and ignorance which that gentleman has issued over his own name in a book entitled "The Great Conspiracy." It is inconceivable how a sane man, one who passed through the war of the rebellion, saw the doctrine of secession torn out root and branch, and witnessed the gradual return of friendly relations between the sections so long at war over ideas and so desperately engaged in armed strife for four years, can write as he does, not only of the origin of the difficulty but of its conclusion.

If General Logan is correct the war for the Union was a failure, the Republican party has been the most stupendous fraud of history, and all the lives and treasure sacrificed for the perpetuation of this Government have been worse than wasted. His absurd "conspiracy" is still in existence, as he claims, and yet when traced down it is found to be at this time nothing more formidable than a "conspiracy" by a political party—composed, as the last election returns showed, of more than one half of the American people—to keep itself in power. We are all familiar with that kind of conspiracies, and, under the same definition, Mr. Logan himself, was an arch-conspirator not long ago when he endeavored to "seize" the Vice-Presidency.

Outside of and above all the conflicting claims of partyism the production of a book like this is supremely shameful. It is a libel on America by one who has enjoyed honors innumerable from her people. It is a falsehood, the product of insane partyism which can not but belittle the Republic in the eyes of the world. It reveals a frenzied bigotry and an ignorance so dense on the part of the author as to make his elevation to the United States Senate a reproach to every citizen of Illinois. It is a degrading, brutal and causeless attack on the statesmanship of his own party, on the memories of the dead, and on the best aspirations of a united people for a peaceful, contented and prosperous future. In every way and from every point of view the silly argument which this envenomed party chieftain has sought to establish, belittles the American people, scandalizes the State which he represents and disgraces himself. It will fall into contempt as it deserves to fall, and the author, who has shown more of the weakness of his nature than even his enemies ever suspected him of, will be lucky if he does not fall with it.—Chicago Herald.

THE CHIEF IDEA.

This Is, To Saddle Special Legislation on to General Bills—Disgraceful "Statesmanship."

"Are we a Nation of smart scamps?" is a question some writer has recently asked, and if the observer were to judge from the proceedings of our representative bodies, from the United State Senate down, there could be no doubt about the answer. How to succeed, honestly possibly, but how any way, appears to be the main idea in national, State and municipal politics. It is the idea that ran through the whole life of the statesman from Maine, and only failed of a national indorsement by 1,047 votes in a total of 1,171,312 cast in the State of New York. We find the same idea dominant in the United States Senate in the manner in which questionable special legislation is tacked on to necessary general bills.

Two flagrant instances of this species of smartness on the part of the Senate are fresh in the memories of our readers. Some weeks ago it tacked an amendment on to the Postal Appropriation bill providing for the payment of $800,000 to steamers carrying the South and Central American, Chinese and Australian mails. This service is already performed satisfactorily, and the $800,000 is an infamous sop for political effect. The Senate knew that any bill specially appropriating this sum would be vetoed by the honest man who was elected on the theory that the funds of the Government are a sacred trust. The chief advocacy of this scheme to circumvent Presidential integrity naturally came from Maine by the mouths of Senators Frye and Hale.

The former of this precious pair of main-idea statesmen succeeded in tacking a bill authorizing retaliation for recent exclusion of American vessels from certain privileges in Canadian ports, on the House bill abolishing certain consular fees. The bill of the Maine Senator has no earthly relation to the subject of consular fees. It is legislation sought in the interest of a lot of tricky Maine fishermen, who insist on taking Canadian fish out of the mouths of their fellow-countrymen and then insist that the Nation shall protect them in poaching upon the fishing privileges of their neighbors. It is essentially the pestiferous Maine idea and the rest of the country is getting heartily sick and ashamed of it. The West especially is weary of it. It is time for moral ideas to awaken in national and municipal life to cast out the main idea.—Chicago News.

Strangling a Subsidy.

Judging from the vote on the Subsidy amendment in the House Committee on Post-offices recently one party of lobbyists at least appears to be losing its hold on Congress. All the Democratic members and all but two of the Republicans agreed to recommend non-concurrence, and it is evident that even with the assistance of several absentees who are said to favor the bill it has not sufficient support to secure a favorable report to the House. According to the statement of Mr. Blount, of Georgia, the chairman, the committee will permit the bill to fail rather than give its assent to the proposed $800,000 subsidy. The feeling manifested in the committee is most encouraging. Evidently Congress has come to the conclusion that it has winked at this piece of special legislation about long enough, and that it is time to make a decisive fight. If our infant ocean shipping industry requires such a vast amount of coddling and so generous an allowance of pap to keep it on its legs it is evident that it has no business to exist. It would be better for the country if it were permitted to die a natural death, instead of being trotted out every year in a more desperately moribund condition (according to the representation of the subsidy grabbers) to afflict the public with its woes and grievances.—N. Y. Graphic.

EACH applicant for the Covington postoffice claims that Mr. Carlisle had promised him the appointment, and the disappointed applicants have pooled their issues, and are now making Rome howl. If reports be true the Speaker promised the postoffice to every one who approached him on that subject.

GOV. KNOTT did not exactly relish Judge Durham's reflections on the manner in which the affairs of State have been administered, and in last Friday's Courier-Journal he fired two columns of trenchant wit at the Judge, which was enough to make him wish he had a "rut" in which to conceal himself.

JUDGE DURHAM comes back at Gov. Knott in a lengthy letter, and makes some pretty severe thrusts at the Governor's administration, but when he flanks the Governor and refers to the manner in which he received the nomination for the office of Governor, he attacks his most vulnerable position. The Judge says he would not accept a nomination coming as Knott's did. Had not the Judge now better proceed to satisfy the people that he was not one of the number who indorsed the Knott-Jones-Hayes-Tilden business.

THE New York Star says the Kentucky Congressmen seem to be very angry at the rumors of war on the Speaker, and one of them has told a correspondent of the Cincinnati Sun that if the Sixth district dosen't want Mr. Carlisle, some other district will send him to the House of Representatives; that any of the present delegation will withdraw in his favor.

THE United States Senate has passed a new pension bill giving pensions to all soldiers of the late war who served three months and who are now disabled, whether the disability resulted from such service or not. It was estimated by the friends of the bill that it would not take from the Treasury more than twenty-five millions per annum, but others say it will require four times that amount.

A VERY great change has occurred in Louisville in regard to gambling. Its prevalence has been very largely reduced, though perhaps not entirely stopped. It never was hoped to suppress the evil entirely, but to make it less conspicuous and less dangerous. Faro and keno games have disappeared, and poker rooms are accessible only to the initiated. The gambling which is done now, unless in social circles, must be done so quietly as to evade the detectives, in which case it is not probable that many of the public are lured into the rooms. But what is of most importance is the breaking down of the influence of the gambling fraternity. They no longer laugh at the power of the law; they do not open palaces near fashionable thoroughfares and keep brilliant lights burning at night; they do not boast so much of influence in politics and the administration of city affairs; when another State convention is held it is probable that men living on the ill-gotten gains of the gaming-table will have less influence than during the past. All of these facts contribute to a result upon which the city is to be congratulated, and which form a satisfactory reward for the work of the Law and Order Club. The assertion that gambling still flourishes comes from those who still try to create a sentiment against the law on this subject.—Commercial.

The following amendments to the Common School Laws, prescribing the qualifications of a candidate for the office of County Superintendent of Common Schools, and the character of the examination required to determine such qualifications, is published at the request of the Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Amendment to article 6 section, 4 common school Laws.

Sec. 4. No person shall be eligible to the office of County Superintendent, unless he shall have first obtained a certificate of qualification from the State Board of Examiners, which may be granted on an examination held before them, or upon a written examination held by the County Judge, the County Attorney, the County Clerk and a competent person selected by them. The result of said written examination to be forwarded to the State Board of Examiners, who may, if they deem it sufficient, grant a certificate, and if they refuse it, shall notify the aforesaid county board and no certificate can be granted the said applicant for the election then pending. The State Board of Education shall designate to the county board the character of examination required.

Sec. 1. There shall be a County Superintendent of common schools in each county of the State, who shall be possessed of moral character and ability to manage the common school interest efficiently. He shall possess a good English education, and shall be competent to examine the teachers who shall apply to teach common schools in the county, and to certify the same correctly. No person shall be eligible to the office of County Superintendent who is not, at the time, twenty-one years old, a citizen of the United States, and who has not resided two years next preceding the election in this State, and one year in the county for which he is a candidate.

Sec. 2. The County Superintendent shall be elected by the qualified voters of each county, at the regular August election in 1886, and every four years thereafter; and for that purpose a poll shall be opened at the election held, and the result certified at the same time and place and by the same officers and in the same way the election for Sheriff of the county is held. And the officers who examine the polls shall make out and deliver a certificate of the election to the person so elected, and another copy to the County Judge of of the county court, who shall cause the same to be recorded, a copy of which shall be made out by the clerk and transmitted to the Superintendent of Public Instruction within ten days after the election.

Sec. 3 The County Superintendents elected and qualified under this act shall hold their offices for four years, or until their successors are elected and qualified.

Thos. Bailey, of Caldwell county, rode a mule into a pond of water. The mule got tangled in a wire running through the pond, and Bailey, jumping off to save himself became entangled in the same way and was drowned.

A Law and Order Club has been organized at Owensboro, its object being the enforcement of the Sunday laws. At a meeting held last week, at which thirty-five persons were present, $1,275 was raised for the legal prosecution of persons violating the law.

The scenes on the Mail boats on their up trips this week resembled those of ante-belium days. The passenger trips were particularly heavy, most all of the people being of a sporting character, going to attend the races at Latonia.—Warsaw Independent.

Judging from the expression of the State press Hon. Thos. L. Jones has lost none of his popularity with the people who so valiantly stood by him in his contest for Governor three years ago. He is still in the ring for Governor if they have any say so about it.—Warsaw Independent.

This frog story comes from Nicholas county. While out frog shooting Dr. W. D. Howe, of Moorefield, killed a frog in the stomache of which when cut open, was found a large-sized plain gold ring, which had been given him by his sister, Mrs. F. D. Clary, and which he lost five years ago while seining in that same pond. The reason he knows it to be the same ring is that it bears the word "Elua," the name of his sister.

On Friday night last Tucker Holbrook made his escape from the Johnson House where he had been confined to his bed from a wound received in the shooting affray which occurred in the Clerk's office here April 29th. He was under guard and about the time his guard was at supper he managed to escape from his room in the upper story of the hotel and getting in a buggy that was in waiting for him and was rapidly driven away. Circuit Court is now in session, which is probably the cause of his flight.—Williamstown Courier.

Reports from Bell county say that Judge Finley failed to appear there to hold his court at the beginning of last week, and a Special Judge was elected. Next day Judge Finley arrived, but instead of holding the court himself, or suffering the Special Judge to hold it, he adjourned the court last Wednesday till next term. The reason assigned for this action was the number of armed men in town threatening trouble; but it is said that the people of the county deny that there was any trouble impending, and that they express indignation at the action of the Judge.

AT seven o'clock this evening that old bachelor occupant of the White House takes unto himself a wife. Every man, woman and child in the county knows the name of the bride, and joins in wishing her and Grover a long and useful life.

LAST Saturday the people of Crittenden county voted on the proposition to subscribe $50,000 for the Kelsey railroad. An earnest canvass was made for the proposition and some very hard work against it, and the result was about 500 majority against the tax.

THE eight hour movement is a failure. At Chicago, the centre of agitation, the conclusion has been reached by those who have given the short hour system a trial, that it cannot be continued. Some of the employes have resumed work on the former system, and others will have to do so or quit work entirely.

THE COMBINATION FENCE

A fence that is wanted, and in time will be used by every one that wants a fence, either around the House, Garden or Farm, as it is cheap, durable and serviceable, to keep in check horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, chickens, etc, and restrain wolves, dogs, and rabbits, etc.

Having all the advantages of a picket fence in restraining animals from jumping, and not are liable to decay, and at much less cost; and does not injure valuable stock, thus placing it far in advance of any other fence now in use, hence it must be the fence of the future; all who have it want more.

It is portable and can be removed from field to field by drawing staples from posts, taking out the splice fish and rebundling it. We offer this fence for sale in bundles of five and six rod at Burlington.

Frankie Johnson, colored, an inmate of the county infirmary, says if she live to see the 16th day of next July, she will be 100 years old. She further says that when she came to this county from Culpepper, Virginia, the Indians were thicker here than the whites and negroes are now. The latter part of Frankie's statement is so extravagant that it militates against her credibility as to the first part.

Dr. Mc H. Raymond and wife, of Kansas City, Mo, have been visiting in this county for several days, and last Thursday as they were going from Burlington to Miss Julia Dinsmore's, the horse they were driving became frightened and commenced kicking. The doctor received one kick from the horse, hurting his leg considerable.

While working in his saw-mill at Hebron Monday morning, David Beall stumbled and fell when near the saw which was revolving at lightning speed. In attempting to prevent falling he threw out his left hand which struck the saw, and was cut entirely through the palm except a small string of flesh. Dr. J. C. Terrill was called in, and dressed the wound. Only the thumb will be left. It is a very serious accident.

One day last week James Henderson and Will Sebree, both of whom live down on Gunpowder, engaged in a quarrel which ended in a regular old fashioned set-to in which Sebree gave Henderson a severe punishment about the head and face. He looked like he had struck a first-class cyclone. Henderson swore out a warrant for the arrest of Sebree, and the trial will be at the regular June term of Esquire Baker's court.

On account of the annual picnic of the Petersburg Lodge of Son's of Temperance at Parlor Grove on the second Saturday in June, the picnic to be given by Burlington Lodge of Odd-Fellows will be postponed until the third Saturday in June. Joe Reed is busily engaged writing a play entitled "The Village Goose Merchant" or "A Race for a Grey Hound." The play will be in three acts, and will be highly amusing throughout. The first scene represents a goose market and brings out the various tribulations of the vendor. In another scene the vendor who is an ardent lover of greyhounds, is represented, as in hot pursuit of an escaped grayhound in a large city. The grand finale pictures the goose vendor as pursued by two detectives, who have a clue to some missing garments, which are finally recovered and restored to the owner. The piece will conclude with a laughable farce entitled, "A Painter's Troubles in Borrowing a Ladder." This play will be ready for the stage soon, or soon therafter if not before.

A Mr. Morrison, of Cincinnati, who has been boarding at Allen Souther's, in the neighborhood of Constance, committed suicide on Tuesday of last week, by blowing his brains out with a shotgun. Morrison's brother sent him to Mr. Souther's to board hoping that a country life would relieve him of some mental trouble with which he was afflicted. It seems that Mr. Souther and family feared that Morrison might do himself violence, to avoid which they had hidden the shotgun, which he found and used with the result above stated. The deed was committed in the parlor, but no one heard the report of the gun. Mrs. Souther smelling powder called her son from the barn, when he commenced the investigation, and, upon opening the parlor door, a horrible sight met his eyes, Morrison a corpse lying in the middle of the floor with the top of his head blown off, while the floor and walls were bespattered with brains and blood.

OBITUARY.

Again death has invaded our vicinity, this time calling home Miss Belle Aylor, who departed this life May 24, 1886. Her death has cast a gloom over the entire community, as she was a great favorite with all who knew her. Just blooming into life—only 29 summers had flown, when God, in His infinite wisdom saw fit to call her to that bright and happy home where it is ever day. Sad it is, indeed, to see one so young and beautiful called away; but we must submit to Him Who doeth all things well. She was a consistent member of the Christian church at Florence. O, how she will be missed by that fond father, and mother and those loving brothers and sisters who, with a host of friends she leaves to mourn her loss. Belle, it was hard to give you up, but we know you are happy, basking in the smiles and sunlight of heaven. Father, mother, weep not for thy daughter. Brothers and sisters, mourn not for your kind and loving sister who has gone before; for she is happy, sitting at the right hand of God, with a golden harp, where she will sing praises to Him forever.

A very touching and pathetic discourse was delivered by Rev. Keene, of Covington, at the Christian church. It was a sad sight to see the funeral cortege as it wended its way from Florence to the Hopeful cemetery, where the remains were placed in the vault. The bereaved family have the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community.

On account of the cool and irregular weather during the corn planting season, many fields had to be planted over. The crop looks stunted, but with a favorable season will yet make a full yield.

The present prospects for a heavy grain harvest are good. We know of several fields of wheat in our neighborhood that promise a yield of 25 bushels per acre. Other grains and grasses are promising equally well.

The Bellevue Target Club persist in keeping up their practice of shooting in the streets of our town and the public highway; private property or any of the sweet songsters have no protection against these brave target shooters; would not be surprised if the big "15" would be called on, at their next meeting to form the acquaintance of the club.

The willow growers of this vicinity finished peeling their last year's growth of willows last week. The crop is the largest grown here in the past 10 years, and will reach 50,000 pounds, the most of it being sold at 3½ cents per pound. The present crop looks well except at points where the high water ran over them. The bugs are doing considerable harm in some fields.

A Challenge.

I hereby challenge the owner of any stallion in Boone county, to trot a three year-old colt, the get of his horse against Maud C., a three-year-old filly and the first get of Crigler's Almont, on the Latonia course during the fair this fall. Entrance fee, $50, the winner to take the money.

W. A. CRIGLER, Limaburg, Ky.

To the Editors of the Recorder:

Referring to card of W. C. Threlkild in issue, May 22, of Commonwealth, I beg leave to say that he has exactly stated the case regarding a trot between one of my stallions as accepted by Mr. Powell, and "that in calling a bet, or making a bluff," it is necessary to show the money. In addition to Mr. Threlkild's challenge, I am prepared, that at any time the said Laile & Co. put up the amount or any amount for which they desire to trot their stallion at Latonia Fair, the same will be covered, and I pledge myself that my horse shall be on hand.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE

ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country; but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and spasms are most frequently the result of these hidden sappers and miners. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing wholesome diet, tossing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy, therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for as surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed form the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge.

Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in one sense, and to examine every bottle he buys of it. The simple name of FAHNESTOCK is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

NEW FRANKLIN, HOWARD CO., MO.
Messrs. Schwartz & Haslett, Pittsburg, Pa.,
Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your Vermifuge can not safely be dispensed with in any family. Yours, &c.,
J. W. HUBBARD, M. D.

CAMBRIDGE, MD.
Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed.

FRYE'S COMBINATION
FARM, GARDEN & ORNAMENTAL FENCE

It combines the advantages of every fence, and is free from any objections. Our combination fence is composed of five two-strand cables of the best anealed bessemer steel wire firmly interwoven with pickets at a uniform distance of 2 to 5 inches apart, and the diagonal supporting wire which is interwoven as represented, enables us to hold each and every picket up off the ground with perfect ease, keeping them even on top and the entire fence always in the open air, making the lower ends of the pickets just durable as the upper ends. Sagging is utterly impossible, as we have a direct vertibal tensil strength of 1700 lbs. to each pannel which alone is three times as strong as an ordinary pine board fence. Our five cables, which gives a combined strength of more than fifteen times that of a pine board 1x6, all interwoven in such a manner with the pickets that one wire cannot be broken without breaking 11. Thus giving us a fence 18 times stronger than a barb wire. The pickets are oak of first quality, and soaked in hot Alkalies, making them last many years. The pickets are supported every 10½ inches by the cables so that breakage is impossible, giving us a fence that will turn all kinds of stock, from the smallest pig to the meanest mule, without endangering the life of any. It is a portable fence, can be removed by drawing the staples and the fence rolled up and removed without the slightest injury. It is dog proof, keeps sheep in and dogs out. It will protect your orchards from the ravages of rabbits, and your gardens from chickens. It is endorsed by over 200,000 of our farmers, as filling every claim we make for it. No farmer can afford to do without this fence that has means to buy it. Any party wishing fence or any information in regard to this fence will address.

T. H. SUTTON, Grant, Boone county, Ky.

N. B.—This fence can be sold and delivered at any landing on the river in Boone county, at the following reduced prices: Pickets 5 in. a part 55c 4½ in. apart 60c; 4 in. apart 65c, 3½ in. a part 70c; 3 in. a part 75c; 2½ in apart 80c; 2 in. a part 85c. We have streehers expressly for our fence which we will furnish to any parties ordering fifty rods or more, and will furnish one hand to assist in putting it up, after the posts have been set.

THE LAST YEAR.

Tender lights on sky and sea;
Milk-white blossoms on the tree;
Lull of storms and tempest bleak;
Faint bloom on a wan young cheek.
"Spring, the blessed Spring, is nigh!"
Said my darling, hopefully.

Violets' breath and primrose rays,
Sunshine threading leafy ways,
Gentle steps that weak and slow,
Through the woodland pathways go.
"It were sad in spring to die,"
Said my darling, wistfully.

Glorious Summer, crowned with flowers,
Dreamy days of golden hours,
Sunset-crimsoned hills afar,
Dewy eve and silver star.
"Strength may come with by and by,"
Said my darling, patiently.

Glowing fruits and ripening grain,
Languid days and nights of pain,
Fields so golden, earth so glad,
And a young life doomed! "'Tis sad
Through the bright days here to lie,"
Said my darling, wearily.

Sighing winds and falling leaves;
Yearning love, that vainly grieves;
Patient eyes, with farewell gaze,
Greeting the wan autumn days.
"Happy world, fair world, good-bye,"
Said my darling, tenderly.

Wailing storms and weeping skies;
Soft wings spread for Paradise;
Solemn whispering accents thrilled
With the awe of Hope fulfilled.
"Life! O blissful life on high!"
Breathed my darling, rapturously.

Wreathing snow-drifts, far and wide,
Mantling o'er the lone hill side.
Purer than that stainless vail—
Like a folded lily pale,
While the moaning blast goes by,
Sleeps my darling peacefully.

A CLEVER FORGER.

The Reward of the Young Man Who Exposed Him.

It was a bleak October morning, and Mr. Walter Crump, cashier to the firm of Messrs. Livesey & Mason, quickened his pace as he made his way along Throgmorton street to the scene of his daily toil. It was not that he feared to be late that Mr. Crump was walking fast. During all the forty years that he had sat upon a high stool from ten to five Mr. Crump had never been known to be late for his work. A more methodical, careful man never hung over a ledger or balanced a cash-book. At length he reached the well-known staircase, opened the office door, and stood for a moment in surprise. Young Carter, the assistant book-keeper, was there before him, already at his work. Mr. Crump smiled grimly.

"So you've made a beginning, young man," he said. "Well, we'll see."

Carter's face flushed a little as he bade the older man good morning. The fact was that Crump, who had married rather late in life, had a bright-eyed daughter named Annie, with whom Robert Carter had fallen very much in love. It was only on the preceding evening that things had come to a crisis, and, somewhat to the young man's surprise, Mr. Crump had rejected the proposed engagement. He did not like young Carter. He did not approve of the young fellow's fashionably-cut collars, nor of his scarf-pin, nor of his cane. Such things Mr. Crump considered were the signs of a frivolous disposition and unsteady habits. Nor did Mr. Crump approve of the snatches of comic songs which Carter was continually humming. He suspected that the young man frequented music halls, and spent more money on cheap cigars, novels and outings than was proper for one in his position. Besides, Mr. Robert Carter was usually the last of all the clerks to make his appearance in the morning, and this was, in Mr. Crump's eyes, a very bad sign. It was plain to the old man that Carter was now making an attempt to earn his good opinion.

"Time will show—time will show," said Mr. Crump, in rather an aggravating way, as he changed his coat, opened his desk, unlocked his safe, and set about his work.

Soon the other clerks began to arrive, and then came Mr. Mason, the acting partner, a tall, pale man, with long black whiskers. Mr. Livesey, the senior partner, only came to the office twice a week, to examine the bank book and see how things were going on. Mr. Mason opened the letters, and soon appeared at Mr. Crump's desk with a small sheaf of them in his hand. These were letters in response to which small sums of money had to be sent, and it belonged to Mr. Crump to attend to them, for he had authority to sign checks for the firm for sums up to five pounds.

Mr. Crump first made a list of the payments he had to make and then went to his safe for his check-book. As he opened it to write the first check he was surprised to find that the counterfoil belonging to the last check which had been taken from the book was not filled up. He could hardly believe his eyes. Never in all his life had he written a check without first filling up the counterfoil with particulars of the amount, the date, and the person to whom the check was sent. But his surprise changed to dismay when he took out his cash-book and found that he had only drawn nine checks the day before, the counterfoils of which were all properly filled up, whereas a tenth check had been torn out of the book.

For a moment he sat as if stunned. Could any one have stolen the blank check? He always kept the key of his safe on his own bunch; but it was just possible that some one might have got hold of the key, taken an impression of it in wax, and had a false key made. He had heard of such things. He leaned his head on his hands and tried to think. When had he closed the safe last night? About four in the afternoon before any one had left the office for the day; for he remembered that he had been sent to the docks about four o'clock with some documents for a ship that was about to sail and that when he got back at half-past six every body had left, and the place was in darkness. If the blank check had been stolen, the theft must have been committed last night—or this morning? Could the safe have been opened before his arrival? He remembered Carter's unusually early appearance and threw a suspicious glance at the young man.

Then a simple solution of the matter occurred to him. It was very possible that, in tearing out the last check he had drawn the day before, he had torn out two by mistake, folded them up, and sent them off together. This would, of course, account for the appearance of the check-book. He determined to write at once to Marshall & Company, merchants in Liverpool, to whom he had sent his last check, and ask whether a blank check had not been sent to them by mistake.

Then the question arose—should he mention the circumstance to Mr. Mason? On consideration Mr. Crump thought that it was not necessary to do so. Mr. Mason was rather a hard man to deal with, and a confession would ruin the character for carefulness which the cashier had so long enjoyed. And he fully expected that in two days at most he would get a letter from Liverpool inclosing the slip of paper which had cost him so much anxiety. The next day was a Tuesday; and according to his invariable custom on that day of the week, Mr. Livesey made his appearance in the office. Business had not long commenced when every body in the establishment was aware that something unusual had happened. Mr. Mason was closeted with his partner for a few minutes, and then went hurriedly out of the office, returning shortly afterward with Mr. Jeffreys, the manager of the London and Lancashire Bank, at which the firm kept their account. Then Mr. Jeffreys left, and came back accompanied by one of his cashiers. Then a bell was rung and Mr. Crump was sent for. With a beating heart and a cold sweat on his brow the cashier obeyed the summons.

"Bring your check-book, Mr. Crump," said the senior partner.

This was done, and a tall man, whom Mr. Crump had not noticed up to that time, stepped up to the table and glanced at the check-book along with Mr. Livesey.

"I thought so," exclaimed the old gentleman. "Here's the place from which the check was taken. Here is the counterfoil. The numbers correspond. What made you do it, Crump? You are the last man in the world from whom I would have expected such conduct."

"Do what, sir?" faintly uttered Mr. Crump.

"Do what!" echoed his employer with a contemptuous smile. "Who did you get to do this little bit of work for you?"

As he spoke Mr. Livesey tossed a check across the table. Mr. Crump took it up and read: "The London and Lancashire Bank. Pay Jos. Beckman, Esq., or order, three thousand one hundred and seventy-two pounds fifteen shillings.—Livesey and Mason."

He looked up bewildered. The tall man in the frock-coat watched him narrowly.

"Who is this Beckman?" asked Mr. Livesey.

"I don't know sir."

"You don't know? You see that the check has come from your book?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you give it to any one?"

"No, sir."

"Did you miss it?"

"Yes, sir. I missed it yesterday: and I wrote to Messrs. Marshall, to whom I had sent the one before that, thinking that I had torn out two by mistake."

"That rather points to his innocence," whispered Mr. Livesey to the tall man at his elbow.

"It may be only a clever plant, sir," returned the other.

"You did not put that letter among the others to be copied in the letter-book," put in Mr. Mason.

Crump hung his head.

"In the check—," he began, after a pause.

"Of course it is forged," answered Mr. Livesey.

"And was it paid?"

"Yes; it was paid yesterday."

Mr. Crump shuddered, took a long breath, and waited.

"Now, Crump, you had better make a clean breast of it," said Mr. Livesey after a few moments' silence. "Tell us who this man Beckman is; tell us where the money has gone—it can't be all spent already—and it will be none the worse for you."

Mr. Crump felt a choking sensation in his throat; but he plucked up courage enough to say: "I have told you already, sir, that I know nothing about it. It was only yesterday morning that I noticed that a check had been taken from the book."

"Why did you not mention it?" asked Mr. Mason.

"I thought I had torn it out myself along with the one I sent to Mr. Marshall."

"But it may have been torn out by any one in the office during the day before?"

"Yes, sir," replied Crump. "I don't see how any one could have got at the books, for I am very careful, but it is possible."

"The thief has probably got a professional forger to copy the signature from an old letter," said Mr. Mason, taking up the slip of paper. "It is beautifully imitated. I would not have detected it myself."

"It is plain that the thief must have been some one in the office, though probably he had an accomplice outside," said Mr. Jeffreys. "A stranger would not have known that the firm had so large a balance at the moment. Is there any one of your fellow-clerks whom you think may have had a hand in it?" he added, turning to the cashier.

"No, sir."

"Is there any one who keeps loose company, or any one who is in the habit of spending too much money?"

Mr. Crump thought of Carter, and hesitated for a moment

"Speak, sir, if you are wise," said Mr. Livesey, sternly.

"I have sometimes thought that Mr. Carter spent a good deal on dress, and so on; but not more than many young men," replied Mr. Crump. But as he spoke he suddenly remembered Robert Carter's unusually early appearance on the preceding morning, and a suspicion arose in his mind. Without intending it he allowed his thoughts to appear in his face, so that his protest—"I know nothing whatever against Mr. Carter"—had but little effect.

Crump was sent back to his desk and Carter was sent for. He came back to the clerk's room in a state of great indignation, having strenuously denied any knowledge whatever of the forgery. The result of a consultation between the bank manager and the partners was that, as Crump could not account for the loss of the check, he had probably stolen it; and that, although there was not evidence enough to prosecute him, he must be dismissed at once. As to Carter, they determined to allow him to remain where he was, and keep a close watch on his proceedings.

Poor Walter Crump went home that day like one in a dream. He was dismissed as the accomplice of a forger! And he could not say that, in the circumstances, he had been treated unjustly. The check had been entrusted to him, and he had lost it. It was, apparently, at least, his fault that the crime had been committed. He almost wondered that he had not been sent to prison. When he reached his own house he sat down in front of the fire without speaking, and even his favorite daughter, Annie, could not make him say what troubled him. How could he tell his children that he, their father, had been dismissed from his situation on suspicion of having robbed his employers of £3,000? About eight o'clock in the evening a knock came to the old man's door. It was Robert Carter. Crump started to his feet in indignation. Was this fellow, whom he suspected to be the real criminal, to come and gloat over him in his misery?

But before he could speak Carter had come into the room and held out his hand:

"I came to tell you, Mr. Crump," said he, "how sorry we all are in the office about this. None of us believe you had any thing to with it, of course. It will all come out, likely, in a day or two."

The old man stared at him for a minute or two without speaking and without taking Carter's hand.

"Begone, sir!" he cried at last. "How dare you come here to insult me with your sympathy? You! I fancy you are the one who knows most about it."

Annie turned from one to the other with bewildered, terrified looks. Fortunately she was the only other one of the family in the room.

"What is it, father?" she cried, clasping her hands. "What is it you say Robert knows more about than any one else? Oh, tell me what has happened?"

"Go to your room, girl," said her father, sternly. "There is trouble enough without your meddling in it. Stop," he continued, as the girl slowly left the room. "You see that young man. I forbid you to see him, to write to him, to receive any letters from him. He—you will know soon enough."

"What, sir!" cried Carter, his eyes blazing with indignation. "Do you say that I—that I took the check? Why, it was an impossibility, even if I had wished to do such a thing."

"Leave my house, sir!" was the old man's reply, as he reseated himself in his chair. He had by this time persuaded himself that in some unguarded moment he had left his key in the safe, that Carter had taken an impression of it and had a false key made, and that he had got some clever forger to imitate the firm's signature. But he knew that no one would believe him, that appearances were all against him, and that it would be impossible for him now even to earn his bread. He looked upon Carter as the man who had ruined him, and in his misery and unreasonableness he fancied that one of the young man's objects was to throw suspicion upon him, to reduce him to poverty and make it impossible for him to refuse to accept him as Annie's husband. But in this the old man determined he would never yield.

Carter protested once more against the injustice of the cashier's suspicions, and left the room. At the street door he met Annie, who was waiting for him.

"Oh, Robert," she exclaimed in a low voice, "tell me what has happened."

"Somebody at the office has forged a check for three thousand pounds and more," he replied. "It had been taken from your father's book, and—and he fancies I took it—I, who had nothing to do with his safe whatever."

"And do they imagine it was——"

Robert was silent.

"And you came here to say you didn't believe it? Oh, how good of you!"

"But he thinks I am the thief. You don't, Annie?"

"No, Robert; I am very sure of that. Only, I can't see you so long as my father——"

Robert's only answer to this was a sigh, and with a hurried good-bye the lovers parted.

Weeks and months went by, and the mystery of the forged check remained unsolved. Mr. Livesey insisted that the firm should bear the loss of the £3,000, which Mr. Mason thought the bank ought to repay, as they were legally responsible for the money.

"No," said the old gentleman, "they may be legally responsible, but I don't see that they ought to suffer. The check itself was in our hands, and we allowed a thief to get hold of it. The bank did all they could. The forged signature is so like yours that no one could tell the difference; and the bank cashier tells me that the man who cashed it showed him letters addressed to himself as 'Joseph Beckman' (the name on the check), and showed him his card, saying that he was a solicitor. Of course he wasn't. The thing has been most cleverly planned, and I am quite at a loss to think who put that poor fellow Crump up to it, but it seems to me we can't let the bank suffer. We could not afford to let it be known we had done so. No other bank would keep our account."

Of course poor Walter Crump could not find another situation, though he would have been glad to take the lowest place in an office. The wolf came to his door in earnest. Annie, who had a situation in a board school, was the chief support of the family; and the poor girl was pale and thin from long hours and scanty meals. It was about five months after the day when the cashier had been dismissed in disgrace that one day Mr. Mason left his office at half-past one, his usual hour for going out to lunch. Half-past one was also the time when it was Robert Carter's turn to go out for half an hour; and Mr. Mason had hardly had time to reach the street when the young man left his desk, went into Mr. Mason's room, entered a small closet in which a wash-hand basin was fitted up, and proceeded to wash his hands. This was a high misdemeanor, especially as accommodation was provided for clerks in another part of the building, but Mr. Robert Carter preferred Mr. Mason's closet, and always used it when he had a chance of doing so. On this occasion, however, he had barely begun his ablutions when he heard the outer door of the office slam, and then he heard some one, whom he judged to be his employer, come into the room.

Fortunately the door of the closet was nearly closed, so that the young man was invisible to any one in the center of the room.

"He has only come back for his umbrella," said Robert to himself; "there is no need for my moving. If I keep quiet he will be gone in a minute. No! Some one else has come in with him. What shall I do?"

Mr. Mason had already closed the double doors which led from his room to the outer office, and Carter was screwing up his courage to the point of confessing his presence, when the first words spoken by the stranger fell upon his ear and made him stand as still as a stone.

"You can take your choice, as I said in my letter. Hand me over another hundred, or I'll split. What's one seventy-two out of three thousand? I had all the risk and you—"

"Silence—will you?" hissed out Mr. Mason, in an angry whisper. "I can't give you a hundred pounds, for I haven't got it. But I will give you fifty now and fifty next month. After that you can 'split' if you like, for you shall get no more out of me. Any thing would be better than living a slave to a man like you."

"Hand over the fifty, then," said the other, after a pause; and then there was a slight rustle of bank-notes.

"You had better leave the country," said Mr. Mason in a low tone. "The bank cashier who cashed the check might meet you in the street."

"I'll take care of that," replied the stranger; and after a few more words had passed the two men left the office.

All this time Carter had been standing half paralyzed, first by fear of discovery and then by astonishment. But he understood this much, that this man was the stranger who had cashed the forged check under the name of Beckman; that Mr. Mason knew it, and so far from denouncing him to the police was giving him money to hold his tongue. Yes; and more than this, the stranger was threatening to "split" upon Mr. Mason! What it could all mean Carter could not comprehend; but he saw one thing plainly enough. The important point was to find out who this man was, and where he lived. In a moment Carter ran out of the room, seized his hat and rushed down stairs.

He was just in time. Mr. Mason was leaving the foot of the stairs, going up the street, while a well-dressed man, who had evidently just parted from him, was walking rapidly in the opposite direction. Carter followed the stranger to the Mansion House, and saw him take a Bayswater omnibus. This suited Carter exactly. He went round to the front of the vehicle and got up beside the driver. Then he clambered along the roof and seated himself above the door.

At the Holborn restaurant the man whom he was following got out and stopped to refresh himself, while Carter waited patiently outside. At last he reappeared, and Carter quietly followed him down Holborn, up Gray's Inn road and into a dingy street in the neighborhood of King's Cross. Here the pretended solicitor stopped at a door, which he opened with a latch-key.

"Ah!" said Carter to himself, "I have you now!"

He waited a few moments, and then knocked at the door.

It was answered by a dirty, slip-shod girl.

"Does Mr. Williamson live here?" inquired the young man.

"No, he doesn't."

"Wasn't that Mr. Williamson who came in just now—Mr. Williamson, of Peterborough?"

"No, it wasn't. That was our first-floor, Mr. Cromer. You've made a mistake."

"So I have. Beg pardon, I'm sure"—and Carter turned away.

From King's Cross he went straight to Scotland Yard and narrated his experiences. That night Mr. Livesey received a visit which caused him some surprise—and so did Mr. Cromer. No sooner was the latter gentleman in the hands of the police than he confessed the whole matter.

Mr. Mason had known Cromer, who was a scoundrel with a respectable appearance and a plausible manner, for some time, and had selected him to be his tool. He had sent poor Crump to the docks on the afternoon before the morning when the check was missed; he had come back to the office after the clerks were gone, and had then opened Crump's safe with his own key and abstracted the bank check. This check he had himself filled up and signed with the firm's signature in the usual way, so there was little wonder that the cashier at the bank paid it without any suspicion. He had, no doubt, calculated that the bank would have to bear the loss; but, as it was, he had cheated Mr. Livesey out of two thousand pounds, for, as he himself had but a third share in the business, only one thousand out of the three had to come out of his own pocket.

Mr. Mason saved his partner the trouble of trying whether he could make him criminally responsible for what he had done; for when the police went to look for him he had disappeared. Probably he had seen Robert Carter following his accomplice, and, scenting danger, had saved himself while there was time. It turned out afterward that he had been speculating largely on the Stock Exchange and was sorely in need of money to pay his losses. It was some consolation to Mr. Livesey to think that his dishonest partner had not profited much by his theft.

As for Walter Crump, he was offered his old place, with an apology and a handsome present to boot; and he still keeps the books which he had so long under his care. He has not quite overcome his prejudice against Robert Carter; and he always regarded it as a hard thing that he should have to owe his reputation and his deliverance from poverty to that particular young gentleman. However, as things were, he could do no less than inform Carter that he had done him an injustice, and that he would be happy to see him in the evening whenever it suited him to call. The color came back to Annie's cheek and the light to her eyes when she heard the good news, and it was not many weeks before she became the promised wife of the young man who discovered the secret of "The Mysterious Forgery."—Whitehall Review.

EDUCATION OF HORSSE.

Denton Offutt's Great Rule, "Be Kind to Them in All Things."

Denton Offutt, who printed in 1854 a book on horse education, which he furnished to his pupils under a bond of secrecy and at a cost of three hundred dollars' each, emphasized the fact that there was a wide difference between breaking an animal and teaching it to obey. Breaking a horse, he insisted, commonly meant spoiling the horse. The system which he taught was based upon judgment, study of temperament and firmness divorced from cruelty. He classed under three heads the one-toed animals which stood in greatest need of education—"the wild, the stubborn and the fighting horse." And his first caution was: "Be kind to them in all things."

The rules laid down by Offutt for teaching horses to heed the word of command are essentially the same as those practiced by his followers. The most careful of the instructors have enlarged upon his method of treatment, but they have not attempted to get away from the roots of the plan. In the quaint dialogue "between man and horse," as written by Denton Offutt, and which contained the essence of all that the painstaking instructor Rarey ever taught, these golden words drop from equine lips: "You must let me see that you will not hurt me, nor will have any thing about you that will, nor any thing that smells badly. I am a stranger to you; all that will offend any of the five senses I will be compelled to guard against, and those senses must have the proof that you will not hurt me before I will allow your hands to be on me."

Every man who in the last thirty odd years has successfully illustrated the art of subduing horses has stuck to the rule which requires an appeal to the understanding of the animal. The devices which Offut used for throwing and getting full control of unruly horses were cruder than those in present use, but the principle has undergone no change. And the advice which Offutt gave his class in 1854 is valuable to those who seek instruction now: "You must have some judgment of your own, for I can not point out the case to suit you all. If I teach you the rules and principles you must work out the sum."—N. Y. Herald.

MINING HERMITS.

A Phase of Silver-Mining of Which the World Knows But Little.

Last November two men took a lease of a mine belonging to C. W. Sickler, located on the west side of Little Cottonwood canyon, on Red mountain, near Alta. They took up a good supply of provisions and went to work with the intention of staying in that elevated place till spring. A few days ago some citizens of Alta missed a familiar tree which stood near the mouth of the mine tunnel, and beside the cabin, and supposing the tree, cabin and men had been swept away by a slide, organized a party and went up to prospect for them. The trip was a difficult one requiring most of the day, and when within one hundred and fifty feet of the cabin their progress was stopped by an immense barrier of snow which they could not pass. They saw smoke coming out far above them, and calling to the men were able to converse with them. They could not come to greet their visitors because they dare not trust themselves upon the snow bank hanging on to the side of the mountain, and which was ready to rush to the bottom of the canyon thousands of feet below. They said they were well, had plenty of grub and fuel, lots of ore, and did not intend to come out till June. This is one phase of silver-mining which the world knows nothing of. Two hardy men imprisoned nine thousand feet above sea level, delving in a mine six long, winter months, with no other companions, no news to read or talk about, virtually out of the world so far as its doings are concerned, is an experience few men would like to go through. And, this, too, within sight of this busy, bustling city.—Salt Lake Tribune.

John Dennis, while cutting a narrow board with a saw in the factory of the Turner-Day Woolworth Manufacturing Company, Louisville, the saw struck a knot. The narrow piece flew out of his hand and was buried in his side, producing a serious but not fatal wound. Being afraid that the injured man would bleed to death if the stick was pulled out, the men left it buried in his side, and, procuring a pair of stretchers, carried Dennis to his home many squares away. The accident was a very curious one, and it is almost miraculous how he escaped being killed.

Lincoln's Last Signature.

Ex-Senator Kellogg, of Louisiana, claims to have the last commission that was signed by President Lincoln, which was an appointment as collector of the port of New Orleans. On the 13th of April, 1865, Mr. Kellogg was appointed, and it being desirable that he should get to his post as soon as possible, Secretary McCulloch decided that his bond could be made here. Governor Yates, Wilson Shafer, who was afterwards made Governor of Utah, and King Cutler, of New Orleans, became his sureties. The bond was filed the afternoon of April 14th, and Mr. Kellogg's commission was at once made out by the Secretary of the Treasury and taken to the President for his signature. Mr. Lincoln signed it a few minutes before he left the White House to go to the theater where he was assassinated. Governor Kellogg has received many offers from autograph-hunters and others for the document, but prefers to keep it himself, and at his death will leave it to some historical society.—Washington Letter.

WISE HOUSEKEEPERS.

The Happy Medium Between Over-Neat and Slattern Housekeeping.

Perhaps we find as many kinds of housekeepers as there are ladies who have houses to keep. But this art is so many-sided that it may not be uninteresting to take an occasional glance at it through other eyes than our own. Comparatively few of the ladies of our land have wealth sufficient to secure competent assistants. Consequently, upon the lady of the house devolves the greater part of this work. I have visited many different homes, no two of which could ever be called alike. Still, perhaps, they all belong to the same general family.

There is the "over-neat" housekeeper, who stands, as it were, with apron on and whisk-broom in hand, her keen eye ever on the alert to catch the faintest suspicion of dust, after which she will start as if it were the ghost of her tormentor. I remember one of this class whose horror at the presence of any stray flies in her closely screened dining-room led her to drive her husband and family into a small, inconvenient room for their meals, where the waitress found it impossible to serve them comfortably, all for fear that her spacious dining-room might be soiled by fly-specks, or by constant use. I have seen another such housekeeper whose family were compelled to change their shoes on the porch in the sunny and the cloudy weather alike, all the year round, lest a particle of dirt should be brought in to soil her handsome carpets. Such housekeepers are always in a steaming worry, and for fear that something may go wrong, contrary to order, or that something untidy may be detected.

In other cases we find the direct opposite of this class—the slattern, which to some may be a less desirable type than the over-neat. In such houses the servants are very often "Leaving ma'am," the mistress quietly leaving the work of the absent to those who are left, usually to their intense disgust, she herself taking no responsibility if it can possibly be turned off on another. In such houses meals are never on time, unless some cook has been secured who will attend to her own duties, without the care of her mistress.

But there is a happy medium between these two extremes—and many there be who find it so. The true and wise woman lays her plans for the daily duties of home with as much care as that with which the business man guards the details of his counting-room or of his office. In her marketing and arranging family supplies she is familiar with her work and is able to stop the many little leaks which would be overlooked by the careless or by the indifferent. Every detail of her work is ably planned and systematized. She trains her servants, and, in most cases, they are more than satisfied with the guiding power of a mistress whom they instinctively know is fully competent to direct.—M. W. Candee, in Philadelphia Press.

HANDLING BEES.

Any Person with Quiet Nerves Can Do It with Impunity.

That some people can handle bees better than others can not be denied, but such are exceptions and not the rule. The rule is that one can handle the "pesky critters" as well as another if he will keep his nerves quiet and learn the knack of it. Bees can not be driven with a whip or frightened with loud words and furious gestures as any one can easily find out by trying, but there is a way of driving them to subjection when they can be handled and the hive manipulated with perfect ease and safety.

Bees when swarming are good-natured and gentle, because just before starting on their journey, which may last days, they fill themselves with honey, and are consequently in an amiable mood like the average man after a hearty meal. If, therefore, at any other time bees can be made to gorge themselves with honey they will become good-natured and harmless, and instead of the terrors they were to the uninitiated a few minutes before, they can be driven to any part of the hive, or out of it, or shaken from the combs and poured from one box to another like so many beans. The means of accomplishing this result is smoke. Blow a puff of smoke in at the entrance of the hive and you will see the bees rush for the honey cells, and, diving in head foremost, soon their distended bodies show them to be full of honey. The hive can then be opened and any necessary work done with no fear of stings, provided the operator keeps cool and works carefully.

Should the bees at any time show a disposition to leave the tops of the combs and fly, give them another puff of smoke, and they will at once become quiet. In like manner they can be driven as far as necessary. Bellows smokers, consisting of a tin receptacle for the fuel, attached to and having a connection with a bellows, are sold by all dealers in apiarian supplies at prices varying from fifty cents to two dollars, and are indispensable in an apiary. Rags and punk are both used for and make good fuel.—Cor. Congregationalist.

A LIBERAL OFFER.

Five Thousand Dollars to any Charitable Institution, If it Can Not be Done as It is Stated.

Rochester, N. Y., Union and Advertiser.

Friends of Ex-President Arthur are very much disquieted.

Of course he is not going to die! He is in the hands of a very particular physician.

His doctor does not call it Bright's Disease! No, it is stomach disorder that he is suffering from now, and every few hours he takes a cold, and from time to time many other symptoms are developed. These symptoms the public should know are really secondary to Bright's Disease.

His physicians say that everything that medical skill can do for him is being done.

That is not so!

This case is a prominent one because the General is an ex-President; and yet there are thousands of farmers quietly dying in their farm houses, of secondary symptoms of Bright's Disease, called by every other conceivable name; thousands of workmen, likewise dying, leaving helpless families; hundreds of thousands in all walks of life who have sickened, and are likewise dying, helpless victims of powerless physicians.

Eight years ago a very well known gentleman was about to enter upon large commercial transactions. His medical adviser quietly dropped into his office one day and told his confidential clerk that he would be dead in three months, and that he ought to settle up his business affairs at once!

That man is alive and well to-day, yet he was given up as incurable with the same disease that is killing General Arthur!

Our reporter met this gentleman yesterday and in conversation about the General's case, he said:

"I will give $5,000 to any charitable institution in the State of New York, to be designated by the editor of the New York World, the editor of the Buffalo News and W. E. Kisselburgh of the Troy Times, if Warner's safe cure (taken according to my directions) which cured me eight years ago, can not cure General Chester A. Arthur of Bright's disease from which he is suffering."

"Now I want you to understand," he said, "that we do not profess to make new kidneys, but we do know from personal experience and from the experience of many thousands of similar cases, that we can stop the consumption of the kidneys. Many a man has gone through life with one kidney without inconvenience. Thousands of people have lived a majority of their life with one lung. They did not have a new lung made. We do not make new kidneys, but if the kidney is not consumed too much we can stop disease and prolong life if taken in time"

This offer comes from H. H. Warner, proprietor of Warner's safe cure, of this city.

Mr. Warner also said: "My dear sir, there are Governors, Senators, Presidential candidates, members of Congress, prominent men and women all over the country whom I personally know have been cured of disease, such as General Arthur suffers from, by our Warner's safe cure, but owing to the circles in which they move they do not care to give public testimonial to the fact."

Mr. Warner is interested in General Arthur's case because he is personally acquainted with him and he says that it is a shame that any man should be allowed to die under the operation of old-fashioned powerful cathartics, which have no curative effects, rather than that a modern, conceded specific for kidney disease whose worth is acknowledged world-wide, should save him.

"If you doubt the efficacy of Warner's safe cure," say the proprietors, "ask your friends and neighbors about it. This is asking but little. They can tell you all you want to know."

"We have kept a standing offer before the public for four years," said Mr. Warner, "that we will give $5,000 to any person who can successfully dispute the genuineness, so far as we know, of the testimonials we publish, and none have done it."

Were General Arthur a poor man, unable to be left "in the hands of his physician," he would use that great remedy, as many thousands of others have done, and get well. How absurd then for people to say that every thing that can be done is being done for the ex-President, when the one successful remedy in the world that has cured, or that can cure a case like his, has not been used by them.

"The Short Line Limited."

To meet the growing demand for improved facilities for handling the business between Chicago and St. Paul and Minneapolis, the Chicago & Northwestern Railway has added a new fast train to those heretofore run. It is called "The Short Line Limited" because of the fact that the Northwestern is the Short Line between the above cities. The new train is magnificent in all of its appointments—every thing being entirely new and refitted for this service. It makes the run each way in a little over twelve hours, starting early in the evening and arriving at its destination the next morning in time for an early breakfast. The importance of this innovation will doubtless be readily recognized and appreciated by those whose interests require rapid transit to and from the Northwest.

That Tired Feeling

Is so general at this season that every one knows what is meant by the expression. A change of season, climate, or of life, has such a depressing effect upon the body that one feels all tired out, almost completely prostrated, the appetite is lost, and there is no ambition to do anything. The whole tendency of the system is downward. In this condition Hood's Sarsaparilla is just the medicine needed. It purifies the blood, sharpens the appetite, overcomes the tired feeling, and invigorates every function of the body. Try it.

"I never took any medicine that did me so much good in so short a time as Hood's Sarsaparilla. I was very much run down, had no strength, no energy, and felt very tired all the time. I commenced taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and before I had used one bottle felt like a different person. That extreme tired feeling has gone, my appetite returned, and it toned me up generally. My brother and sister have also received great benefit from it." Clara W. Phelps, Shirley, Mass.

EPITHELIOMA! OR SKIN CANCER

For seven years I suffered with a cancer on my face. Eight months ago a friend recommended the use of Swift's Specific, and I determined to make an effort to procure it. In this I was successful, and began its use. The influence of the medicine at first was to somewhat aggravate the sore; but soon the inflammation was allayed, and I began to improve after the first few bottles. My general health has greatly improved. I am stronger, and am able to do any kind of work. The cancer on my face began to decrease and the ulcer to heal, until there is not a vestige of it left—only a little scar marks the place.

WEDDING BELLS!!

The President Has Taken to Himself a Wife.

Miss Frankie Folsom Becomes Mrs. Grover Cleveland, and "First Lady of the Land."

A Quiet, Sensible Ceremony Before a Few Invited Guests.

Description of the Toilets, Presents, Decorations and Music—After the Wedding Supper the Happy Couple Start for Deer Park, Md., to Enjoy a Week of Happiness.

Hear the mellow wedding bells. Golden Bells.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—Other weddings there have been at the White House—eight in all—but never before to-day has the highest dignitary in the land bowed his head within its historic walls to receive the blessing of the church on his union in the holy bonds of matrimony.

From the very dawn of the wedding day the city seemed alive to the approaching events. Little knots of idlers talked it over on sidewalks in front of the hotels. Sedate maidens gossiped as they passed along the streets, and bevies of laughing girls chatted and speculated about the coming momentous ceremony. If there be truth in the ancient adage a happy bride

WILL REIGN IN THE WHITE HOUSE,

For though the day opened with a gray and cheerless sky and shadows resting on the earth, yet as it grew older the elements seemed to relent, and little by little the sun forced his rays through the unwilling clouds until his broad beams fell in generous abundance on the soft green sward of the trim park encompassing the White House, bringing out in high relief the simple yet stately white columns of the time-honored home of Presidents, crystallizing in prismatic hues the sparkling sprays of the fountains and cresting with gold the foliage of the grand old trees.

Many were the curious glances that sought to pierce the draped windows, and numberless were the comments and speculations of the loiterers who gathered early in the afternoon within the grounds. Little or nothing in the appearance of the mansion or its surroundings indicated to the casual passerby that the much-talked-of event was at hand.

The still and murky haze of the early afternoon had now wholly given place to clear skies and warm, southerly breezes, while yellow slanting sunbeams filtered through the foliage of the park and made flickering pictures upon the velvety turf beneath. The great fountain did its best to attract attention, spouting its cooling spray to the verge of its granite basin and flowering shrubs and ferns of tropical green filled the marginal gaps in the picture. Seats in the park across the avenue were occupied by lawn-clad maidens, while

HALF THE YOUNG LOVERS IN TOWN,

Moved by common sympathy which stirs the romantic susceptibilities of the sixty millions, took the winding walk in the line of their evening promenade, and speculated upon the emotions which are supposed to fill the hearts of bride and groom.

On the walks near the White House the assemblage was thoroughly democratic; and ragged urchins and slipshod colored girls jostled natty looking young gentlemen in silk attire. The gates were left wide open, and by 6 o'clock the crowd had swelled to several hundreds and a score or more of newspaper men held a point of vantage alongside the parties. The successive arrivals of the guests were watched with interest and their names were whispered by the more knowing to their companions.

Suddenly the strains of the wedding march floated through the open windows, and there was a general exclamation from the outside crowd:

"THE SERVICE HAS BEGUN!"

Then there came a tantalizing hush within the walls, which was soon ended by the strains of the bridal chorus from Lohengrin, and it was thereby known that the ceremony was over. One by one the lights sprung up at the windows, and the great burners on the portico cast their effulgence over the pavements. The scene resembled a summer night's festival, and the crowd gave itself up to the enjoyment of the delightful music.

With short intermissions the fine orchestra rendered the following selections: Bolero, "I O Son La Rosa," by Merienua; "Invitation a la Valse," Weber; "Spring Song," Mendelssohn; Romance, "Bright Star of Hope," Rolandi; Mosaic, "Desiree," Sousa.

About 6:30 o'clock the wedding guests began to arrive, their carriages rolling up to the main door of the mansion through the great iron gates on Pennsylvania avenue. The first arrival was Secretary Lamar at 6:30. He was closely followed by the Rev. Dr. Sunderland and wife, and during the next few minutes there came in quick succession Postmaster-General Vilas and wife, Mr. Wilson S. Bissell, Secretary and Mrs. Endicott, Secretary Bayard, Secretary and Mrs Whitney and Secretary Manning and his wife. Removing their wraps in the state dining-room, all the guests proceeded to the Blue Room, where they were received by Miss Rose Cleveland. The following is a complete

LIST OF THOSE PRESENT.

Mrs. Folsom, mother of the bride; Rev. W. N. Cleveland, the President's brother; Miss Cleveland and Mrs. Hoyt, the President's sisters; Thomas F. Bayard, Secretary of State; Daniel Manning, Secretary of the Treasury; Mrs. Manning; William Endicott, Secretary of War; Mrs. Endicott; William C. Whitney; Secretary of the Navy; Mrs. Whitney; William F. Vilas, the Postmaster-General; Mrs. Vilas; L. Q. C. Lamar, Secretary of the Interior; Daniel S. Lamont, private secretary of the President; Mrs. Lamont; Benjamin Folsom, of Buffalo, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Rogers, of Seneca Falls, N. Y.; Mrs. Codman and Miss Huddleston, of Detroit, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. Harmon, of Boston, Mass., relatives of the bride; Miss Nelson, of New York; Mr. W. T. Bissell, of Buffalo, N. Y., the President's former law partner; Dr. and Mrs. Byron Sunderland. Attorney-General Garland, although invited, was not present. For a few minutes the guests chatted gayly, but conversation was quickly suspended at 7:15 p. m., when a selected orchestra from the marine band, stationed in the corridor, struck up the familiar strains of the wedding march from Mendelssohn's Midsummer Night's Dream, and all eyes were turned to the doorway to catch the first glimpse of

THE COMING BRIDE AND GROOM.

Starting from the western corridor on the upper floor the President came slowly down the western staircase with his bride leaning on his arm. They were unaccompanied—even the bride's mother awaiting her with the other guests. Passing through the central corridor, the bride and groom entered the Blue Room and took a position near its southern wall, which was completely hidden from sight by a mass of nodding palms, tropical grasses, and an endless variety of choice flowers. The crystal chandelier poured a flood of mellow radiance upon the scene, and the colors of the massive banks of scarlet begonias and royal Jacqueminot roses, mingling with the blue and silver tints of the frescoed walls and ceiling, gave a warm and glowing tone to the whole brilliant interior. The delicate ivory shades of the bride's wedding gown found an exquisite setting in the masses of crimson roses immediately beyond. The President was in full evening dress with turn-down collar, white lawn necktie, and white enameled studs. A hush fell upon the assembly as Dr. Sunderland stepped forward to his position fronting the wedding couple, with the Rev. William Cleveland (the President's brother) at his left hand. In a distinct tone of voice and with a delicate utterance the doctor began the simple and beautiful words of

THE WEDDING SERVICE.

"For as much as we are assembled to observe the holy rites of marriage, it is needful that we should seek the blessing of the Great God, our father, whose institution it is. And therefore I beseech you now to follow me with reverent hearts in prayer to Him.

"Almighty and everlasting God, the father of our spirits, the framer of our bodies, the giver of every good and perfect gift, Thou who canst see the end from the beginning, who knowest what is best for us, Thy children, and has appointed the holy rite of marriage to be sacredly observed throughout all generations, regard now, we beseech Thee, Thy servant, our Chief Magistrate, endow him plenteously with Thy grace and fill him with wisdom to walk in Thy ordinances. Be very nigh to him in the midst of many cares and grave responsibilities. Day by day may Thy law direct him and Thy strength uphold him, and be Thou forever his sun and shield.

"And be graciously pleased to look down upon this Thy daughter, even as Thou didst favor the chosen Rebecca and many noble women that have adorned the world. May she indeed be a precious boon of God to her husband, to cheer and help him continually, a woman gifted with the beauty of the land and shedding the sweet influences of Christian life upon the Nation in whose sight she is to dwell.

"Wilt thou approve what we, Thy servants, come to do in Thy name by Thine authority and under the law of the land in which we live, and graciously assist them—this man and this woman—who are here to be united in the bonds of holy wedlock, according to the institution of Thy words. Mercifully be pleased, Almighty God, to vouchsafe to each of them Thy grace that they may well and truly weigh the unfailing vows which they are now about to make to each other in the presence of this company and before Thee, and that they may be enabled hereafter at all times so to live together as to rejoice in the solemnization of this union with joy unspeakable and full of glory through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen."

Addressing the company, Dr. Sunderland said:

"Marriage is honorable among all men, in that a man shall leave his father and mother and shall cleave unto his wife, and they twain shall be of one flesh. It was constituted by our Creator in the first Paradise. It was confessed by patriarch and priest, prophet and apostle. It was confirmed by the teaching and adorned with the presence of the Redeemer, and has been honored by the faithful keeping of all good men and women since the world began.

It is not, therefore, to be undertaken lightly or unadvisedly, but soberly, discreetly and in the fear of God. Into this holy estate this man and this woman come now to enter. If any one can show just cause why they may not be lawfully united in marriage let him now speak, or else hereafter forever hold his peace.

To the bride and groom—"If you desire to be united in marriage you will signify the same by joining your right hands."

(The groom and bride joined hands.)

"Grover," said the minister, "do you take this woman whom you hold by the hand to be your lawful wedded wife, to live together after God's ordinance in the holy estate of wedlock? Do you promise to love her, cherish, comfort and keep her in sickness and in health, in joy and in sorrow, and forsaking all others keep you only unto her so long as you both shall live?"

The groom (firmly)—I do.

Dr. Sunderland—Frances, do you take this man whom you hold by the hand to be your lawful wedded husband, to live together after God's ordinance in the holy estate of wedlock? Do you promise to love him, honor, comfort and keep him in sickness and in health, in joy and in sorrow, and forsaking all other keep only unto him so long as you both shall live?

The bride responded in a low but clear voice, "I do."

"In token of the same let the wedding ring be passed." (The groom placed the ring on the bride's finger.)

Dr. Sunderland (solemnly)—For as much as Grover and Frances have here agreed and covenanted to live together after God's ordinance in the holy estate of wedlock, and have confirmed the same by giving and taking a wedding ring, now, therefore, in the presence of this company, in the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, I pronounce and declare that they are husband and wife, and what God hath joined together let no man put asunder.

Rev. Mr. Cleveland then pronounced the following benediction:

"God the Father, God the Son and God the Holy Ghost, bless, preserve and keep you, the Lord mercifully fill you with all temporal and all spiritual blessings, and grant that you may so live together in this world that in the world to come you may have life ever lasting. Amen."

AT THE CONCLUSION

Of the ceremony Mrs. Folsom, showing traces of deep emotion, was the first to tender her congratulations to the newly-married pair. She was followed by Miss Cleveland, Rev. Mr. Cleveland and the other relatives and friends in turn. While the congratulations were in progress, the band, under the leadership of Prof. Sousa, performed the bridal chorus and march from Lohengrin, and to this music the President and his wife led the way to the stately East Room. The adornments of this noble hall were in keeping with the majestic proportions; and its ample space and brilliant illumination afforded an opportunity for a fitting display of the ladies' toilets.

Just as the wedding ceremony began a Presidential salute was fired by a battery of artillery near the river, and the chime bells of the M. E. Church pealed forth the Mendelssohn wedding march and bells in other churches joined in the happy salute.

The gentlemen present at the wedding were not fortunate enough to receive a salute from the bride, who confined her kisses to the ladies. Otherwise the ceremony was orthodox in form.

THE BRIDAL TRIP.

The Happy Couple Leave on a Special Train for Deer Park.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—From the East Room the company proceeded, after a season of promenading and conversation, to the family dining-room of the mansion, where the wedding supper was served. There was no formal order observed in the supper room, but a collation was served, and the guests sat at the small tables, or slowly promenaded the room as they discussed the menu and chatted over the event of the evening. The elegantly designed souvenirs of satin boxes containing dainty pieces of the bridal cake, and each one bearing the hand-painted monogram "C. F.," were received with great admiration.

While the orchestra was playing one of its happiest selections and the guests were gathered about the tables, the bride quietly slipped away to her room and changed her wedding dress for a heavy gray silk traveling dress. She then returned to the company and was soon afterward joined by the President, who had in the meantime changed his dress suit for a traveling costume. This was about 8:30 o'clock, and the President and his bride said a hasty "good-bye" to their friends and left the house through a private exit from the Red Room into the south ground. A closed carriage awaited them, and as they entered and the horses started off

A SHOWER OF RICE

Was thrown on the carriage, and their friends waved them a final "God speed" from the rear porch. It was expected that the President would try to slip away unobserved, and in order to prevent this a number of newspaper men stationed themselves near the southwest entrance to the grounds with carriages convenient to follow the President in case he should make his exit by that gate. This was reported to the President, so he instructed his driver to go out of the grounds by another and almost unused route, and in that way he avoided the reporters altogether. His carriage was driven directly to the Baltimore & Ohio railroad station, where a special train was in waiting to take the President and his bride to Deer Park. They were escorted through the station and into the car provided for them without attracting attention, and at 9 o'clock the train started off to its destination. The President and his bride were wholly unaccompanied on this journey. They will probably remain at Deer Park about a week, during which time they will occupy a small cottage attached to the hotel, which has not yet opened for the season.

THE GUESTS BEGAN TO LEAVE

The White House soon after the President's departure. The first ones to leave was Secretary Bayard, who smilingly stood on the portico for some time before his carriage drove up. The carriage of Dr. and Mrs. Sunderland was the next to drive up, and was immediately followed by that of Secretary and Mrs. Manning. The Secretary did not look very well. He appeared rather weak and seemed hardly able to walk. He was supported to his carriage by Postmaster-General Vilas and Mr. Bissel. The other guests lingered awhile and the orchestra continued to play enlivening music until nearly ten o'clock, by which time all the guests had taken their departure. The crowd of curious sightseers remained near the mansion until preparations to close it for the night.

THE WEDDING PRESENTS

Were many, but they were not exhibited, nor will any list be furnished. This is in deference to the wishes of the President. The groom's gift to his bride was a handsome diamond necklace, composed of a single string of brilliants. The presents from the Cabinet officers and their wives were mostly articles of jewelry, though there were several beautiful presents of silverware.

The Executive Mansion will be open to-morrow, and photographers have already received permission to perpetuate pictorially the elaborate decorations of the interior. The arrangements for the day's event were under the control and personal arrangement of Colonel Lamont, and they worked so smoothly and satisfactorily as to earn for him universal commendation and compliment.

THE TOILETS.

Description of the Dresses Worn by the Bride and the Guests.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—The bride wore an enchanting wedding dress of ivory satin, simply garnished on the high corsage with India muslin, crossed in Grecian fold and carried in exquisite falls of simplicity over the petticoat. The orange blossom garniture, commencing upon the veil in a superb coronet, is continued throughout the costume with artistic skill. Her veil of tulle, about five yards in length, completely enveloped her, falling to the edge of her petticoat in front and extending the entire length of her full court train. She carried no flowers and wore no jewelry except an engagement ring, containing a sapphire and two diamonds.

Mrs. Folsom wore a superb dress of violet satin, with garniture in white faille, with crystallized violet drops in pendants everywhere.

Miss Cleveland wore an exquisite dress, a combination of Nile green and cameo pink duchesse satin, with silver ornaments, low corsage, garnished with pink roses, short sleeves, semi-length gloves in light tan. She carried a fan of pink curlew feathers.

Mrs. Hoyt, the President's sister, wore a dainty costume en train of china crepe in robin's egg blue, most effectively garnitured with rare old lace. Her flowers were La France roses.

Mrs. Manning's dress was of white satin, flounced across the front with duchesse lace trimmings, finished with sea pearls, square neck and elbow sleeves; diamond ornaments.

Mrs. Endicott wore satin, with silver and white sapphire, draped in black Chantilly lace; red pompon in hair and diamond ornaments.

Mrs. Whitney wore a bodice of violet, with white satin and tulle skirt trimmed with violets; diamond ornaments.

Mrs. Vilas' dress was light blue silk, with long train strewn with daisies of silver, front of crystal and point lace and pearl trimmings; low neck and elbow sleeves.

Mrs. Lamont wore an ivory-tinted satin dress, demi-train, with a panel of crystal and pearl on the left side of the skirt, square neck, corsage edged with crystal and jet fringe, elbow sleeves and a beautiful corsage bouquet of Jacqueminot roses.

Mrs. Rogers, cousin of the bride, was dressed in a costume of delicate cameo pink with brocaded front.

Mrs. Codman, relative of the bride, wore a white satin dress en train with black lace draperies.

Mrs. Harmon wore a train dress of light orange.

Miss Nelson wore a handsome costume of corn-colored satin, with overdress of white antique lace, cut pompadour, with low corsage and elbow sleeves. Her flowers were Jacqueminot roses.

Miss Huddleston was dressed in pink silk with blue trimmings.

Mrs. Sunderland's dress was gray satin, trimmed with lace, long train, square neck and elbow sleeves.

THE DECORATIONS.

Elaborate Floral Displays in the Various Rooms of the White House.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—The decorations of the Executive Mansion to-night were of an elaborate character, and in the language of one of the oldest employes, "it never presented a handsomer appearance." The various public gardens in the city and many private conservatories here and in other cities contributed their choicest plants and flowers to lend their beauty and fragrance to the scene. Of course the Blue Room, where the ceremony was performed, occupied the principal attention of the decorators. It was transformed into a veritable bower of beauty. A stately group of tall exotic plants extended along almost the entire south end of the room, concealing the window and the south doorway and rising to within a few feet of the ceiling. The larger plants included eugenias and arecas, and among the smaller ones were crotons, marantas and aspidistras. The foliage plants were interspersed with a large variety of flowering plants, such as the medinella, magnifica, begonias, hydranges, roses and late flowering azaleas. To the right and left of the main entrance from the corridor were two groups of flowering pelargoniums, fuchsias, orchids and palms.

THE CENTER PLANT

In each group was the royal phœnicophorum sechalarum. On the right and left sides of the room were also two large groups of plants in full bloom, consisting mostly of roses, begonias and hydrangias. Two large kentias balmoreanus in these groups with their leaves formed an arch which stretched almost across the rooms. In the hearth under the east mantle was a floral arrangement representing a cheerful blazing fire. It was composed of the begonia rubia and centanias. The floor of the hearth was laid in mosaics of coleus althernantharus. On the mantel above was a solid bank of cut pansies in various bright colors, in which was written with white flowers the date of the occasion, "June 2, 1886." The letters were bordered with black pansies, and the edge of the mantel was formed of the golden selaginilla. The west mantel sustained a solid bank of roses, in which none but the choicest were used, commencing with the delicate pink at the end, and growing darker and richer toward the center, where was interwoven in white moss and hybrid roses

THE MONOGRAM "C. F."

The space immediately under this mantel was banked with a variety of cretone, and the golden selaginella. The two large mirrors above the mantels were draped and festooned with garlands of mixed roses. The doors leading to the room were also festooned with heavy garlands of roses in different distinct colors; then at both ends and thicker towards the centers. Over the main entrance from the corridor was a beautiful floral scroll in which the motto "E Pluribus Unum" was interwoven in immortelles.

The decoration of the private dining-room, where the wedding collation was served, was also of an elaborate character. The main table decoration was a full-rigged three-masted ship, composed of pinks, centaurea, eganas, roses and pansies, displaying the word "Hymen." It rested on a mirror representing a lake, the shores of which were composed of different varieties of selaginellas and tiny pieces of coral. The surrounding land was represented by banks of Jacqueminot roses.

THE NATIONAL COLORS

Hung from the mainmast and two small white ones with the monogram "C. F." in golden letters hung from the other masts. At either end of the table, resting on mirrors, were vases containing long-stemmed hybrid roses. The mirrors were festooned with asparagus tenuissimus, interspersed with loose roses in the corners of the room and in the windows were groups of palms, crotons, caladiums and some plants in bloom. The four handsome sideboards were suitably decorated with the choicest foliage and flowering plants, and the mantel was a solid bank of roses. The East Room and the Red and Green Parlors were decorated in the style usual at receptions and state dinners.

THE EAST ROOM.

Presented a particularly grand appearance with the groupings of tropical plants, masses of exotics and brilliant illumination. Festoons of smilax were gracefully suspended from the large chandeliers, and beautiful garlands ornamented the four pillars, upon each of which were conspicuously displayed a large floral shield composed of choice white and red roses, violets and cryasanthemums, representing the national colors. To the usual decorations of the main corridor were added four extra groups of palms and foliage and flowering plants.

AT DEER PARK.

The Presidential Party Arrives Safely and Will Possibly Remain a Whole Week.

CUMBERLAND, MD., June 3.—The President arrived at Deer Park at 4:20 a. m., standard time, this morning, after an uneventful run of four and a half hours. He and Mrs. Cleveland went direct to Senator Davis' cottage. It is thought that the President and bride will remain a week.

—We are under obligations to the sprightly and enterprising Cincinnati Evening Post for the use of the above excellent engraving of Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland. The Post leads all its Cincinnati cotemporaries.

PECULIAR SUICIDES.

An Insane German Whose Ambition It Was to Crucify Himself.

One of the evils inseparable from the modern general diffusion of all sorts of news is the encouragement of criminal imitation. It was long noticed that peculiar crimes are apt to be copied, and that this is especially the case in regard to suicide. Most readers probably remember the story of the grove of trees which Napoleon caused to be burned because it was found impossible to prevent the soldiers from hanging themselves in it. A similar story is told of a military sentry-box. It was found necessary to build a cage over the gallery at the top of the London monument, because it had become a favorite place for suicidal plunges. A similar reputation attached for many years to Waterloo bridge in London. In France, some years ago, a foolish young couple, saturated with Rousseauism, fastened themselves together with gay-colored ribbons and threw themselves into the Seine. The idea took, and for a time this mode of suicide was quite the fashion. Statistics show that the average number of suicides remains tolerably constant in proportion to population, though it no doubt rises when some widespread convulsion disorganizes society. But the ways of committing suicide change, and people not only exercise choice in the matter, but are influenced in selecting the mode by the recent occurrence of any striking events of the kind.

It is true that no imitator has yet been found of the insane German whose ambition it was to crucify himself, and who with an astonishing perversion of ingenuity contrived an apparatus by which, after fastening his feet and nailing one hand to the cross-piece, he was enabled to hoist the heavy cross out of the window and exhibit himself to the whole town suspended from it. That, however, involved too much labor, and suicides usually desire to shuffle off this mortal coil as easily as possible. Speaking roughly, it may be said that women prefer drowning, and men hanging. Of course, many of both sexes take poison. In France for a long time asphyxiation by charcoal gas was popular with the poor. The last reported French suicide, however, seems to have been suggested by one of Cherbuliez's novels. A carpenter in Belleville killed his lady-love and then himself. The double suicide had been agreed upon and its method settled deliberately. The details were somewhat different, but the general plan resembles that of the hero and heroine of "La Ravanche de Joseph Noirel." The resemblance in fact is so close that we should think the event calculated to make M. Cherbuliez feel rather uncomfortable, if he is particularly sensitive, though of course no real responsibility can be predicated in such a matter.—N. Y. Tribune.

ACCIDENTAL POISONING.

How to Get Rid of Poisonous Substances as Quickly as Possible.

If you have swallowed a poison, whether laudanum, arsenic, or other poisonous drugs put a teaspoonful of ground mustard in a glass of water, cold or warm, stir and swallow quickly. Instantaneously the contents of the stomach will be thrown up, not allowing the poisonous substance time to be absorbed and taken in to the blood. As soon as vomiting ceases, swallow the white of one or two eggs, for the purpose of antagonizing any small portion of the poison which may have been left behind. Let the reader remember the principle, which is to get the poison out of you as quickly as possible.

There are other things which will also serve as a speedy emetic, but the advantage of mustard is, it is always at hand, it acts instantaneously, without any other medicinal effects. The use of the white of an egg is that, although it does not nullify all poisons, it antagonizes a larger number than any other agent so readily attainable. But, having taken the mustard or egg, send for a physician; these are advised in order to save time, as the delay of twenty minutes often causes death.—Hall's Journal of Health.

BLOODSHED IN IRELAND.

The Orangemen Attack the Navvies in Belfast.

The Outcome of the Home Rule Movement and Religion.

BELFAST, June 4.—The Orange workmen employed at the Queen's Island Ship Yards here to-day attacked the navvies employed by the Harts, or Commissioners, and after overpowering them and beating them badly drove them into the water. It was with the greatest difficulty that the injured, exhausted and struggling navvies were rescued. The Orangemen made the assault because the navvies, it is alleged, had previously attacked some Loyalists for aspersing the home rule movement. Intense excitement prevails among the local Catholics in consequence of the attack. The Orangemen numbered two thousand and the navvies one hundred. A repetition of the historical riots is feared. Policemen, fully armed, are patrolling the city, and the military are held in readiness in the barracks. Thirty Catholics were injured, and twelve were taken to the hospitals. The body of James Curran, one of the navvies, who was missing for a time, has been recovered. He was the sole support of his widowed mother.

YANKEE FISHERMEN,

Finding a British Cutter at Anchor Without Steam, They Load Up in Full View and Escape.

BANGOR, ME., June 4.—The Canadian daring cutter General Middleton sailed into the harbor of Eastport the other day flying all her colors, anchoring on the British side of the campo bello, and closely watching the Eastport boats. Mr. Young, a prominent packer and boat-owner, went on board and asked the commander if Eastport's boats were to be seized if they went in the morning as usual for fish. The reply was: "We are waiting for full instructions from Ottawa. But," he said, looking sharply at Mr. Young and shaking his head in a significant way, "you had better not go on." After consultation with others it was decided if the weather was good to attempt to get the usual supply. The next morning was clear, without a breath of wind. The British cutter was close under the land and becalmed. Fifteen boats started from Eastport, going down five miles from Eastport on the British side. They filled their boats and returned. In the meantime the cutter seeing the American game, attempted to get under way. However, as she had no steam up, and the tide was against her, it was impossible to get out of the cove. Boats were got out and preparations made for a chase, but before this could be done the Americans had regained their own water, and signaled to the shore that they had fish, which, later on, they landed amid the noise of a dozen steam whistles on factories, greatly to the disgust and rage of the Canadian commander. As soon as a breeze sprang up the blue-nose privateer, as the Eastporters called her, departed amid the yells and laughter of the jolly canners of Passamaquoddy. The Woodbury goes to Portland for repairs to her boiler. Captain Dean expects to see the American North Atlantic squadron ordered soon to the fishing grounds.

An Ancient Claim.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—A very curious claim has been received at the Treasury Department in the shape of a certificated indebtedness on the Government to John Yesterday, of Philadelphia, dated February 16, 1783, signed by Joseph Nourse, Register, and bearing interest at 6 per cent., from December 20, 1781. Although the certificate is for only $17.50, the interest due on it amounts to $110.25, making the amount of the claim $127.75. First Comptroller Durham is looking into the matter to see if the claim is valid, so it may be paid to Yesterday's heirs.

Manning's Resignation Rumored.

NEW YORK, June 4.—The Herald this morning says: "It was reported in Wall street yesterday that Secretary Manning, some days ago sent a letter to President Cleveland, formally resigning his office; and the rumor was also current that the President will accept his resignation."

LATER.—Secretary of the Treasury Manning tendered his resignation, but at the suggestion of the President, accepts a leave of absence until October and goes to Hot Springs, Ark.

How Long Will Congress Last?

WASHINGTON, June 4.—The long delay caused by the oleomargarine bill, coupled with the prospective of a discussion over the civil service clause of the sundry civil appropriation bill, causes a good deal of apprehension among the people who were calculating on a close of the session of Congress by the middle of next month. There are members who now think that the session is going to run into August, and some are predicting that the month of September will find Congress still here.

Men-of-War for the Fisheries.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—The Secretary of the Navy says that the vessels of the North Atlantic Squadron have been under orders for several days to prepare for sea. They will go easterly, as usual, and report for further orders at Portland, Me. They will visit the fisheries, under instructions from the Department, and, it is hoped, will help to allay rather than increase the existing antagonisms.

A Prowling Darkey.

DEER PARK, MD., June 4.—To-night a colored man eluded the guards, stealing up near the house, looked into the parlor occupied by the President and his bride. Just then the guards pounced on him, hand-cuffed him and dragged him away. He said he meant no harm, and only wanted to see the President of the United States. He was subsequently released. The intruder was an Ohio man.

Seven Days' Failures.

NEW YORK, June 4.—The business failures occurring throughout the country during the last seven days number for the United States 160, and for Canada 27, or a total of 187, as compared with a total of 181 last week and 167 for the week previous to the last. More than one-half of the casualties are reported from the Western and Pacific States.

The Maxwell Case Gone to the Jury.

ST. LOUIS, June 4.—At 9:30 o'clock to-night Mr. Clover concluded the closing speech for the State in the Maxwell trial, and a few minutes later the jury retired. At 11:15 court was adjourned until to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock.

Powderly Will Resign if Antagonized.

WILKESBARRE, PA., June 4.—The Record will say to-morrow that in case Master Workman Powderly is antagonized in the least by his enemies in the Executive Board of the Knights he will resign at once. The rumor has given impetus to the Powderly boom for Congress in this district.

Confederate Bonds.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—The House Committee on War Claims, to-day, listened to an argument by a representative of the Confederate bondholders, who urged the redemption of these bonds by the Government.

Train Attacked by Foreign Laborers.

EAU CLAIRE, WIS., June 4.—Yesterday Conductor Schwartz's train was boarded by a gang of foreign laborers. A row about tickets ensued, the gang attacking the conductor with revolvers. Schwartz and his two brakemen were badly injured, but drove the crowd off the train. Several of them were arrested.

Gone Up the Spout.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 4.—The Providence Base-ball Club, at a meeting yesterday, decided to disband, owing to poor attendance at its games. It opened the season with $2,500 in the treasury, and is now in debt about $1,800.

HOME RULE VOTE.

His Opponents Too Much for the Grand Old Man,

And His Flag Goes Down Under a Majority of Thirty.

LONDON, June 7.—The second reading of the Home Rule bill was defeated in the House of Commons to-night amid a scene of indescribable excitement and confusion, by a majority of thirty votes, namely, 341 to 311. After the announcement of the vote Mr. Gladstone moved an adjournment of the House until Thursday to enable the Government to decide on their future course, and there being no opposition the House adjourned accordingly. Summonses have been issued for a Cabinet council to-morrow to make the preparations rendered necessary by the defeat of the Government. It is stated to-night in the lobby that Mr. Gladstone is against dissolving before the autumn, notwithstanding the defeat he has sustained, the state of supply being far in arrear and urgent, and that the Queen approves this course. The opponents of home rule, however, declare that Lord Salisbury and Lord Hartington are both prepared to accept the responsibility of carrying on the Government. There is strong feeling among Gladstone's principal supporters against a transfer of Government until supply has been disposed of and the finances of the country placed on a proper footing. Gossip on dissolution, however, is necessarily conjectural, as nothing can be positively known until the Cabinet have met and determined the course to be followed. The general opinion to-night is that at least three general elections will have to be held before Gladstone finds himself at the head of a solid working majority, and the country is now fairly in for a long term of excitement unparalleled in the history of Great Britain since the time of Cromwell.

EIGHT PERSONS SUFFOCATED

By a Presumed Incendiary Fire in a Chicago Tenement House.

CHICAGO, June 7.—A fire occurred in a frame building at 731 South Canal street, at 4 o'clock this morning, which is thought to have been of incendiary origin. Eight of the sleeping inmates had no warning and were burned in their beds. They were Michael Murphy and wife and two daughters, aged five and eleven years; Mrs Mary Durkin and infant child; Patsey Lavin, four years, and Wm. Hand, sixty-eight years. John Welsh, a teamster, said that he was at the scene of the fire five minutes after it started. He rendered what assistance he could and helped in caring for the suffocated victims. He said a great delay was made in sending in the alarm, caused by the man who pulled the box not understanding its workings, and the delay had much to do with the fatal results. The origin of the fire was at first a mystery, until a tub containing clothes saturated with coal oil was discovered in the basement. The articles in the tub burned from the top and a strong smell of the oil could be detected on raising the contents. The scene of the fire is in the midst of that quarter occupied by the poorer people or working classes, and to-day poorly-clad men, women and children stood around the place discussing the tragedy. The houses have been fired twice before within a year, but the fire each time was discovered before it had made any headway.

A Success in Surgery.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., June 7.—About a year ago a misshapen child was born to Mrs. Zwiers, of this city. The child was lacking a roof to its mouth; there was no floor to the nasal passage, a protuberance extended from the nose, and in other ways the child was so much of a monstrosity that it was kept from the mother's sight for several months. It was declared to be a type of double hair-lip, such as has seldom been seen even by surgeons of the widest experience. Each one who saw the child declared that it would be impossible for it to live, and, in fact, that it had better die. A physician took charge of the babe and undertook to reduce it to a human condition, with excellent results. All the parts lacking have been supplied, the protuberance has been removed, and the babe to-day is a bright, good-looking child. The operation is pronounced one of the most difficult and successful ever performed.

Prince Jerome Makes Threats.

PARIS, June 7.—Prince Jerome Napoleon has issued a manifesto in which he vehemently protests against the contemplated expulsion of himself, Prince Victor, and the Comte de Paris and his family. He predicts that if the Chamber of Deputies persist in its course, it will drive the Republic into civil war.

Death from an Exploding Boiler.

TROY, N. Y., June 7.—A boiler exploded this morning in the Rensselaer Mill. Michael Dumworth was instantly killed, and Patrick Gaynor so severely injured that he can not recover. Eight others were injured, but will probably recover.

Killed by the Falling of a Wall.

NEW YORK, June 7.—Two men were killed outright by the falling of the side wall of a house on East One Hundred and Fourteenth street this afternoon, and another was so badly injured that he died soon afterward.

Did Not Promise to Obey.

BOSTON, June 7.—A Washington special to the Herald says: Rev. Byron Sunderland says he left the word "obey" out of the President's wedding service purposely. He says he thinks the word "honor" covers the case.

Maxwell Disappointed.

ST. LOUIS, June 7.—Maxwell, the slayer of Preller, regrets that the verdict finding him guilty of murder in the first degree postpones his carrying into effect arrangements for lecturing or entering a dime museum.

Killed by the Collapse of a Stand.

ST. LOUIS, June 7.—The reporters' stand at the St. Louis Jockey Club fell to-day while the Eclipse stakes was being run. Chas. Dyer, of the St. Louis Republican, was killed, and several others were injured.

Crops Destroyed.

ARGYLE, MICH., June 7.—Crops of every description in this vicinity are badly damaged. Wheat seems to be almost hopelessly ruined.

—The antiquity of the harp appears in the fact that ancient Egyptian frescoes contain harps that are three thousand years old. Bruce gives some copies of paintings in one-hundred-gated Thebes of a harp in the tomb of Rameses, thus showing that before Athens was built the Egyptians used this instrument. Bible readers know King David's favorite instrument was the harp called kinnor. It is said that when hung over his couch the wind caused the strings to sound at midnight—the principle of the æolian harp.

—Chico, Cal., humbly calls Georgia's attention to the fact that two of its citizens recently killed a rattlesnake measuring five feet in length, which had in its stomach five jack-rabbits, besides a number of rats and mice.

—It is not generally known that the United States imports every year an immense quantity of potatoes. They come mainly from Germany and sell at about the same price as the American.—N. Y. Mail.

—The suicides at the Monte Carlo gaming tables are said to average one a day.

XLIXTH CONGRESS.

First Session.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—SENATE.—After routine morning business, the Northern Pacific Forfeiture bill was taken up and then informally laid aside to permit Mr. Brown to make a speech against the Bankruptcy bill. The land taxation was then resumed, Mr. Dolph speaking. After some debate the Senate went into executive session at 5:30 p. m., and at 5:40 p. m. adjourned.

HOUSE.—A bill was reported to legalize the incorporation of Trades Unions. The oleomargarine bill was taken up in committee of the whole and debated all day. An agreement was made to take a vote to-morrow on reducing the rate of tax, and at 5 p. m. the House adjourned.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—SENATE.—A resolution was agreed to directing an investigation of the appointment of Indian traders by a select committee of five. The subject of Canadian seizures of American vessels was informally discussed at some length before the Chair ruled the debate out of order. Van Wyck's bill taxing railroads was then taken up and discussed by Messrs. Plumb, Hoar, Evarts, Call and Blair, and finally passed. The Consular and Diplomatic Appropriation bill was reported with amendments increasing the total $49,700. The bill to indemnify Chinese for losses incurred by the riot in Wyoming was discussed by Messrs. Evarts and Call, and laid aside to allow Mr. Edmunds to submit an amendment to the Legislative bill for additional force in the Pension office. At 4:50 p. m. the Senate adjourned, after a short executive session.

HOUSE.—The Senate bill was reported back from the Labor Committee extending the provisions of the eight hour law to letter carriers. The oleomargarine bill was then taken up. Mr. Hatch made the closing speech. Votes were taken on amendments reducing the tax, which was finally fixed at five cents. The bill was then passed—yeas 177; nays 101. At 4:35 p. m. the House took a recess until 8 p. m., the night session being for a discussion of the Oklahoma bill.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—SENATE.—Mr. Ingalls offered a resolution calling for information as to a circular issued by Land Commissioner Sparks suspending the operations of the timber culture and preemption laws pending legislation by Congress. The Chinese indemnity bill was taken up, but informally laid aside for the Consular and diplomatic appropriation bill, which was debated until 2 p. m. The Chinese indemnity bill was then placed before the Senate. When brought to a vote it passed—yeas 30, nays 10. Those voting in the negative were Messrs. Beck, Berry, Cockrell, Coke, Eustis, George, Harris, Maxey, Mitchell (Ore.), and Vest. The bill appropriates $150,000 and authorizes the President to ascertain the actual losses sustained by Chinese at Rock Springs, Wy. T., in September 1885, and to pay such losses. The Consular and diplomatic bill was again taken up. A motion by Mr. Conger to strike out the appropriation of $2,700 as the American contribution to the International Bureau of Weights and Measures, was rejected—yeas 1, nays 42—Mr. Conger being alone in support of his motion. The Senate, at 5:30 p. m., without finishing the bill, adjourned until to-morrow.

HOUSE.—The Speaker presented a communication from the Secretary of War, recommending that $50,000 of the appropriation of 1883 for fortifications be reappropriated for the construction of guns. The privileged report of the Committee on Civil Service Reform recommending the dismissal of Assistant Doorkeeper Warder, was called up. After considerable debate a substitute for the committee's report was offered in the shape of a resolution declaring that the conduct of Warder in receiving money from the city of Jeffersonville to influence legislation was a gross impropriety, deserving emphatic condemnation, but stating that the evidence adduced did not, in the opinion of the House, require his expulsion from office. This resolution was agreed to—yeas 140, nays 67. The legislative appropriation bill was then taken up in committee of the whole, but no progress was made. Mr. Boutelle, of Maine, offered a bill practically terminating the free importation of fish, and increasing the import duties on all fish, thus compelling the Canadians to pay more for the privilege of selling fish in the United States. The House at 4:40 p. m., took a recess until eight o'clock, the evening session being for the consideration of pension bills.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—SENATE.—Messrs. Ingalls and Cockrell had a warm personal controversy. Afterward the session was devoted to pension bills.

HOUSE.—The House passed the Senate bill for a public building at Zanesville, reducing the amount from $150,000 to 100,000. The chief part of the session was devoted to the discussion of the Pacific railroad funding bill, but no vote was taken.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—SENATE.—Mr. Harris was excused from serving on the special committee appointed to investigate the appointment of Indian traders. By a vote of 22 to 21 the House oleomargarine bill was referred to the Agricultural Committee instead of the Finance Committee, thus insuring a favorable report. The consular and diplomatic bill was passed. Mr. Brown, of Georgia, withdrew a report from the Committee on Railroads containing an allusion to the Union troops as the "invading army." The bill providing for the admission to the navy of the Navy Academy graduates excluded by the appropriation of 1882, was taken up. Mr. Hale spoke in opposition. At 4:45 p. m. the Senate went into Executive session, and at 4:55 p. m. adjourned.

HOUSE.—Mr. Kelly, of Pennsylvania, moved to expunge from the record of Friday night's proceedings a long speech by Mr. Wheeler, of Alabama, criticising the late Secretary of War Stanton. Mr. Wheeler being absent action was postponed until to-morrow. Mr. Crisp and Mr. Holman apologized to each other for their heated remarks of Saturday last and were applauded. A number of bills and resolutions were then introduced and referred, including one by Mr. Butterworth granting a pension of $100 a month to the widow of General Durbin Ward. The legislative bill was set aside for the consideration of the bill to repeal the timber culture, preemption and desert land acts; it was passed 183 to 40, under suspension of the rules. The Arthur-kill bridge was next taken up and passed almost unanimously. A small public building bill was passed, after which the House adjourned, 4:50 p. m.

THE PRESIDENT'S PRESENTS.

It Seems That the U. S. Statute Will Prevent Acceptance of Wedding Gifts from Cabinet Officers.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—An accurate list of the presents sent to the President and his bride on the occasion of their wedding has not yet been obtained from the White House, but it has been publicly announced that members of the Cabinet and other officials of the Government have been among the donors. The President's well-known aversion to receiving gifts from any source whatever has been illustrated in a number of instances. This has given credence to the report that he will, on his return to Washington, privately request a withdrawal of some of the articles sent him, many of which must have been presented by persons to whom he can not in justice to himself remain under the obligations an acceptance would imply. There are some who go so far in commenting upon this subject as to claim that the presents from members of the Cabinet were made in violation of Section 1784 of the Revised Statutes, which reads in full as follows: "No officer, clerk or employe in the U. S. Government's employe shall at any time solicit contribution from other officers, clerks or employes in the Government service, for a gift or present for those in a superior official position, nor shall any such officials or clerical superiors receive any gift or present offered or presented to them as a contribution from persons in Government employ receiving a less salary than themselves, nor shall any officer or clerk make any donation as a gift or present to any official superior. Every person who violates this section shall be summarily discharged from Government employ."

AN IMPRESSIVE SCENE.

One Hundred and Seventeen Convicts Received Into the Catholic Church.

JOLIET, ILL., June 6.—The Joliet Penitentiary was the scene of a most interesting event this forenoon. It was the conferring of the rite of confirmation on 117 convicts by Archbishop Feehan, of Chicago. The ceremonies were conducted in the presence of a large number of outsiders and occurred in the prison chapel. The chapel was nicely decorated with flowers for the occasion, and each convict was provided with a bunch of white flowers to pin upon his breast. At nine o'clock the Archbishop commenced the confirmation, assisted by a number of priests of Chicago, St. Louis and Joliet. As the convicts advanced to the altar each man handed the Archbishop a slip of paper upon which was written the convict's name. Pronouncing the name, the Archbishop dipped his finger in a chalice of oil held by an attendant, and making a cross on the foreheads of the kneeling men said: "I sign thee with the sign of the cross and confirm thee with the chrism of salvation in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." The convict orchestra rendered some excellent music suitable to the occasion. Among those confirmed were some of the worst criminals in the West.

SCIENTIFIC SOCIALISTS.

An Organization for the Purpose of Arson, Robbery, Murder, and the Overthrow of the Government.

SEATTLE, W. T., June 6.—The U. S. grand jury here, finding indictments against leaders of the anti-Chinese riots, make an extraordinary report, declaring that there exists throughout the country a treasonable organization known as the "Red American International Workingmen's Association." The main articles of its creed are arson, robbery and murder. Its purpose is the overthrow of our Government and the erection upon its ruins of a so-called Socialistic Commonwealth. The Pacific Coast is believed to possess peculiar advantages for the inauguration of the movement.

Duel from Wagons.

OAKLAND, ILL., June 6.—Yesterday morning at seven o'clock Ben Mason and Geo. Scott met in the public road one mile north of Hynesboro and opened fire on each other with revolvers. Both were in wagons. Mason fired first, but missed. Scott fired three times, and each shot hit. The first penetrated Mason's right arm, fracturing it so that he dropped the revolver. The second entered the right cheek and came out of the left ear. The third entered the stomach, ranging downward. Scott went to Tuscola and gave himself up. Mason was taken to a neighbor's, when all the bullets but the one in the stomach were probed out. From the latter wound he will surely die. Both men are prominent citizens of Douglas County. Mason is worth $5,000. Some time last fall they traded horses, in which Mason claimed he was cheated. Bad feeling ensued. Each had threatened the other and the neighborhood, though excited, was not surprised at the fatal end of the quarrel yesterday.

Storms in Germany.

BERLIN, June 6.—Violent thunder-storms, accompanied by the bursting of water-spouts, have for several days past prevailed in Central Germany and in the Hartz Mountain territory in the northwestern part of the Empire. Houses and railways have been destroyed. Hail-stones weighing two ounces have fallen at Giessen. It is estimated that the damage done by the storms to the crops alone will exceed $250,000. A number of people have been killed by the lightning and floods.

President and Bride at Church.

DEER PARK, MD., June 6.—The President and his bride attended church in the mountains to-day, and witnessed the baptizing of a baby. They attracted more attention than the sermon, which was especially prepared for the occasion. The President put a five-dollar bill into the collection basket. An ex-Congressman, a Democrat, pronounced the benediction, and prayed that Mr. Cleveland might be continued as Chief Magistrate.

THE WHEAT CROP.

A Disastrous Drought in the West and Northwest.

CHICAGO, June 6.—The following is a summary of the crop report received by the Farmer's Review: Spring wheat in Dakota and Minnesota has been considerably impaired by the drought, while oats and flax have been almost entirely destroyed. In Kansas the drouth and chinch-bug have caused serious injury to wheat and oats. In Nebraska and Iowa there will be the average yield of wheat, and corn is looking well in both States. The outlook for winter wheat is good. Harvest has already begun in Tennessee, Kentucky and Missouri, and in Ohio and Indiana there will be an unusually large yield.

Maxwell Guilty.

ST. LOUIS, June 6.—The jury in the murder case of Maxwell returned a verdict of murder in the first degree. His attorneys will move for a new trial on grounds of improper testimony admitted, and on errors in the trial. If this is not granted they will appeal to the State Supreme Court, and will take it to the United States Supreme Court. Mr. Fauntleroy claims that there were nine fatal errors in the trial.

Disastrous Fire.

LEBANON, PA., June 6.—The Pennsylvania Bolt and Nut Works in this city, the largest in the country, was destroyed by fire. The loss is $150,000.

A Judge Murdered.

HANNIBAL, MO., June 6.—Judge Joseph Wenault, of the vicinity of Clarence, Shelby County, was waylaid and killed on the highway a short distance from his home, about eleven o'clock Friday night. The body was found lying beside the road yesterday morning, with two bullets in the head and the throat cut from ear to ear.

Murdered by Apaches.

BENSON, ARIZ., June 6.—M. Goldbaum, who left here two weeks ago to prospect in Whetstone mountains, was found murdered by the Apaches seventeen miles south of here yesterday. Thomas Lunt, a miner at French Mine near Harshaw, was killed by Apaches.

THE jury in the Maxwell case in St. Louis brought in a verdict of murder in the first degree.

UNDER the law passed by the last legislature three commissioners for this county have to be elected at the August election.

SOME localities in Texas are threatened with the grasshopper plague. It is attributed to the drouth that prevailed in these localities.

THE Republicans in this district contemplate putting Gen. John W. Finnell on the tract for Congress, but with no hopes of success.

LIEUT. GOV. HINDMAN has announced his candidacy for Congress in the Eleventh district, and will at once begin an active canvass.

PROHIBITION captured Logan Co., last week by a majority of 510 votes. The question had been a leading issue in that county for some time.

JOHN KELLY, the great Tammany leader, died at his home in New York City, last week. He was a man with a national reputation, and whose political foes long since learned to dread. He was a man whose frank disposition was admired by all who knew him.

OF all the men we can call to mind Hon. John W. Stevenson is the most to be desired for Governor of Kentucky. He is a man of almost unlimited experience in affairs of government, and although greatly advanced in years, the State would make no mistake by calling him to the head of affairs.

THE contest for Circuit Judge in the Covington district waxes warm. The Arthur and Desha factions cannot arrive at a compromise. Judge O'Hara, it is said, had been agreed upon by both parties as a compromise candidate, but the Judge would not accept the position on account of his large and paying practice.

IT is reported that Phil Thompson may be selected for the head of the Democratic Congressional committee in case Kenna insists upon retiring. The selection of Thompson and Robertson as secretary and assistant secretary of the committee has been said to indicate the preparation of a Presidential boom for Mr. Carlisle.

THE temperance people opened the campaign for this county with a mass meeting in the Court-house in this place, Monday. A large crowd listened to the two lectures delivered, after which the campaign committees were appointed, and other arrangements were made looking to the prosecution of the canvass until the question is settled at the August election.

JNO. J. MCCANN, the newly appointed postmaster at Ghent, Carroll county, is two or three hundred dollars behind in his account with the Government, and his sureties have taken charge of the office until a successor can be appointed. He bears a good reputation and it is thought that he overdrew his account in settling with his creditors, expecting to replace the money.—Owen News.

HON. DANIEL MANNING tendered his resignation as Secretary of the Treasury. The President has not accepted it, but suggested in its stead that the Secretary take a leave of absence until October 1, and then withdraw the resignation. The suggestion was accepted so far as concerns the leave of absence, at least, and Secretary Manning and family, accompanied by Internal Revenue Commissioner Miller and family, have gone to Hot Springs, Bath county, Va.

COL. STERLING B. TONEY has filed before Judge Jackson a petition for a writ of habeas corpus in the matter of Lee Hale and Edward Hale, two convicts now at work in the Greenwood coal mines. The question involved is whether a man who has been sentenced to confinement in the Penitentiary can be legally set to work outside the walls of that institution. The question has been the subject of much discussion in legal circles, and owing to its important bearing upon prison affairs in Kentucky the decision of Judge Jackson will be eagerly watched for. —Courier-Journal.

THE Owensboro Messenger thinks Hon. Thos. L. Jones ought not make himself ridiculous by again being a candidate for governor, while the Lexington Transcript is of the opinion that "the Democratic party ought not to have permitted the swindle on Col. Jones in its last State Convention; but, having done that it ought to come as near righting the matter now as near as possible by tendering him the nomination unanimously. If it does not do it it will show to the world that it cares very little for its honor; for it will make itself a party to the crime perpetrated on a most consistent Democrat and honorable gentleman."

Expect the latter opinion about coincides with that of Col. Jones on the subject.

OF the President's wedding the New York Star says; "When the hour approached for the ceremony the chimes in the tower of the Metropolitan Church rang out with the sweet melody of Mendelsshen's wedding march. Suddenly the guns at the Arsenal broke upon the evening stillness, and salute after salute was fired until the wedding hour was at hand, when the firing ceased. The chimes, too, were hushed momentarily, and the music within doors ceased. The ceremony was in progress. At 7:15 o'clock it was over. Then the chimes rang out again with the joyful notes of the regal wedding peal, the guns belched forth again, and for ten minutes the city rang with the sound of jubilee. Never was a wedding so joyously heralded to the world. The Marine Band played the Swedish wedding march, and professor Widdows, who played the chimes at the New Orleans Exposition, continued to give selections upon the Metropolitan bells."

AN editor once slowly wended his way down where he supposed a reception awaited him, says a wicked exchange. The devil awaited him and said: "For many years thou hast borne the blame of bad spelling that the printer has gotten off in the paper. The paper has come out for $1 50; alas! the $1 50 has often failed to come in. The printer has often bedeviled thee for wages Saturday night, when thou hast not a darn farthing to thy name. Men have taken thy paper without paying for it, and cursed thee for not getting up a better one. Thou hast been called a dead beat by passenger conductors, and a dead beat by freight conductors, when thou hast shown thy annual pass to their envious gaze. All these things thou hast borne in silence. Thou canst not come here." And he fired him, and as he did so the devil murmured to himself: "Heaven is thy home, and besides if we had him here he would be dunning delinquent subscribers, and thereby creating discord in my kingdom."—Ex.

THE new Revenue law makes the following important changes in the duties of the Assessor:

"Hereafter he will be required to assess each voting precinct separate so that his book will show the county by precincts. The county court Clerk is required to furnish the Assessor each year with a record of all sales and transfers of property in each precinct in the county, and he is under oath to assess all property at a fair cash value. Instead of getting fifteen cents on each list as formerly, he will now receive four cents on the one hundred dollars worth of property up to one million, and one cent on all sums up to ten million dollars and one-half cent on all over that amount. Persons listing their property are sworn to give in a true and correct list of all their property at a fair cash value. He shall commence his work on the 15th day of September in each year and complete it by the 15th of December following. The Supervisors shall examine his books the first of January and turn them over to the sheriff for collection by the first of February when the taxes are due. The law will take effect from its passage.

Under the old law three supervisors constituted a board to equalize the assessor's books. Under the new five men are to be appointed by the County Judge, no two men to live in the same precinct. They shall meet at the county seat the first Monday in January of each year to examine the assessor's books. Their pay is fixed at one dollar and fifty cents per day for the time actually engaged."

STATE NEWS.

There was never a finer prospect for an abundant crop of blue grass seed than at present.

Gen. Walter C. Whitaker, the well known Louisville lawyer, is a candidate for the Superior Court.

Several farmers of Fayette county plowed up their potatoes on account of the voracity of the potato bug.

A newly-born baby, at Maysville, was found in J. M. Mitchell's pond in a coffee sack, with a stone in it.

At Lebanon, a buzzard with a bell is scaring people into hysterics, and stampeding horses and cattle.

The Frankfort correspondent of the Louisville Post says that Judge Wm. Lindsay, of Frankfort, will be a candidate for the United States Senate to succeed Senator James B. Beck.

A Democratic convention will be held at Lebanon, Thursday, June 17, to nominate a candidate for Superior Judge to succeed Hon. A. E. Richards, whose term will expire in September.

The editor of the Powell county Journal says he took his wife to see Jumbo. It is not always the case that a man takes his wife along when he goes to see the elephant.—Kentuckian.

John M. Hunt, for many years a prominent livery man of Owenton, has rented the fine new livery stable of Mr. Soper, of Georgetown, and purchased his stock and all vehicles except the 'bus.

The wheat crop in Kentucky is still in the very best condition for a large yield. Without adverse weather or unlooked for accident it promises to be the largest yield per acre ever produced in the State.

Uncle Reuben Cook, an old and industrious citizen of the east side of the county, has discovered a cave on his farm that is not excelled in curiosity, even by the famous Mammoth Cave of this State.—Crittenden Press.

The Midway Clipper says: Tobacco growers are very much discouraged and almost despair of raising a crop because of the ravages of the cut worms. In some instances plants have been set and reset several times and yet the stand is very poor.

In portions of Fayette county the oat crop is rapidly being destroyed by the ravages of a worm resembling the cut-worm. Numbers are plowing their oat and hemp fields up and planting corn and other grains. The worms are generally black, and some are said to be as large as one's little finger.

Danville Board of Trustees received a check for $5,000 from the Trustees of the Cincinnati Southern Railway, being part payment of judgment recently rendered in favor of the town in the suit against the railway company for the nonfulfillment of their contract to build the machine shops of the road there.

The tobacco barn of B. N. Isaacs, of the Bradfordsville district was destroyed by fire last Thursday night together with about 14,000 pounds of tobacco. He had great difficulty in preventing the fire from extending to another barn, containing stock. The loss was $1,500 or $1,800. The barn was insured for $550 and the tobacco for $600.

Millard Weaver, of Persimmon Grove, on last Tuesday, while crossing a field came across a snake which he killed, the monster measuring 16 feet long and nearly 6 inches in diameter. He threw it over a fence and while looking at it was joined by a friend. The two were suddenly startled by hearing a whistle similar to that of a man, when turning they saw a mate of the snake coming for them with vengeance. After a desperate battle the snake was killed and was fully as large as the first.—Ditto.

The people of Garrard county have nominated Hon. Milton J. Durham for governor, and request him to become a candidate.

More tobacco has been set than ever before at this season of the year. Many farmers have finished setting and nearly everybody has set more or less. It seems that the crop will be as large as that of last year.—Carrollton Democrat.

BOTH gentlemen lay themselves liable to the suspicion that they are playing for position in politics. The Governor wants to be Senator and the Controller wants to be Governor. The letters have a close resemblance to the windy fights Blaine and Beck used to have in the Senate. They are intended for buncombe, and especially for home consumption. The probabilities are that when Knott and Durham meet they will laugh over the cheap advertising each has given the other, and, like Beck and Blaine, go out and take a drink.—Bardstown Record.

ELDERSLIE ROCK.

The Last Obstruction Removed from the Famous River Clyde.

The largest vessels afloat may now steam up the Clyde into the heart of Glasgow with perfect freedom and safety. For some years they have been confined to a narrow channel just above Renfrew, but now they will have the whole width of the river, with plenty of water on all sides. The last and greatest obstacle to the free navigation of the stream was removed a short time ago by the blowing up of all that remained of the Elderslie rock at a less depth than twenty feet beneath low water, and since then workmen have been busy lifting the blasted material. This is the end of a remarkable engineering achievement, accomplished by novel methods and under exceptional difficulties. The existence of the rock was not discovered until 1854, when a large steamer, the Glasgow, stuck fast and had to be lightened of her cargo before she could be got off. Up to that time the obstruction had been thought to be a sandbank, and it was known as Harthill sand. Before the Glasgow corporation began the improvement of the Clyde there had been a shallow ford at that place. By means of dredging the channel was deepened, until in 1836 there was a depth of over thirteen feet at high water. All the sand had been dredged away by 1854, and it was then proved that a wall of hard whinstone, about three hundred feet broad, extended across the bed of the river. In 1860 blasting with gunpowder for its removal was begun, and after seven years' work one-half of the width of the river was cleared so as to give a depth of fourteen feet at low water, the other half having only eight feet. It was resolved in 1880 that the whole of the rock should be removed to give a depth of twenty feet at low water and thirty feet six inches at high water. This is the work which has now been completed. Colonel Beaumont's diamond drills have been used for the boring, and dynamite has been the principle agent for the blasting. The operations have been carried out by means of ingenious machinery on a floating barge, diving being almost entirely dispensed with, and in this has been the novelty of the proceedings, which have been entirely successful, without loss of life or injury of limb. About 100,000 tons of rock have been removed, and the total cost has been nearly £70,000. The work is worth the money. The whole width of the river is available, and no vessel that has left the stocks has a draught too great for the depth of water. Great things have been done by the Clyde Trust, but nothing more useful than this removal of the last barrier to the increasing trade of the port. We have all reason to be proud of the Clyde—excepting its needless impurities. The enterprise of Glasgow has made it what it is. That which is now a noble navigable river was a hundred years ago a winding, shallow, fordable stream. Its transformation has cost about £11,000,000, yet the weight of this enormous expenditure is scarcely felt, because the work has been done gradually, to meet the extension of trade and the growth in the size of vessels, and there has been an encouraging return for the investment. In 1780 the income of the Clyde Trust was £1,515; in 1880 it was £223,709; now it is about £300,000. The difference between the receipts of 1880 and the present annual income is more than sufficient to pay the whole cost of the removal of Elderslie rock. "Progress" is still the watchword of the Clyde Trust; and when we have the new docks at Govan we shall be able to say that the second city of the empire has a river and a harbor second to none.—Glasgow Mail.

LABOR AND MACHINERY.

An Interesting Extract from the Recent Report of the Statistical Bureau.

The mechanical industries of the United States are carried on by steam and water power, representing in round numbers 3,500,000 horse-power, each horse-power equaling the muscular labor of six men; that is to say, if men were employed to furnish the power to carry on the industries of this country it would require 21,000,000 men, and 21,000,000 men represent a population, according to the census of 1880, of 100,000,000. The industries are now carried on by 400,000 persons in round numbers, representing a population of 20,000,000 only. To do the work, then, accomplished by power machinery in our mechanical industries and upon our railroads, would require men representing a population 172,500,000 in addition to the present population of the country of 55,000,000, or a total population, with hand processes and with horse-power, of 227,500,000, which population would be obliged to subsist on present means. In an economic view the cost to the country would be enormous. The present cost of operating the railroads of the country with steam-power is in round numbers $500,000,000 per annum, but to carry on the same amount of work with men and horses would cost the country $11,308,500,000. These illustrations, of course, show the extreme straits to which a country would be brought if it undertook to perform its work in the old way.

Eugene Isabey's Modesty.

The following anecdote is told in a Paris paper of the well-known genre painter, Eugene Isabey, who died recently, aged eighty-two. When he was twenty-two years old, his father, the famous miniature painter, gave him four hundred francs and told him to go and earn his living, as he would receive nothing more from him. Eugene did not believe he had any talent for art. He went to Havre and spent several days observing the ocean. Then, in fourteen days, he painted two pictures of the scene before him, and took them to his father to prove to him that he had no talent. But the father declared with tears in his eyes that he had more talent than he himself; and he succeeded the same day in disposing of the two pictures for one thousand francs.—N. Y. Post.

THE COMBINATION FENCE

A fence that is wanted, and in time will be used by every one that wants a fence, either around the House, Garden or Farm, as it is cheap, durable and serviceable, to keep in check horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, chickens, etc., and restrain wolves, dogs, and rabbits, etc.

Having all the advantages of a picket fence in restraining animals from jumping, and not so liable to decay, and at much less cost, and no barbs to injure valuable stock, thus placing it far in advance of any other fence now in use, hence it must be the fence of the future; all who have it want more.

It is portable and can be removed from field to field by drawing staples from posts, taking out the splice lath and rebundling it. We offer this fence for sale in bundles of five and six rod at Burlington.

Henry Utz, writing us from Palouse City, Washington Territory says:

"Weather warm; crops looking fine; plenty of R. R. building; but little politics and few Democrats. May you always have plenty of 'garden sass'; may your shadow never grow less, and your RECORDER always prove a success."

A negro fortuneteller and his wife struck the town a few days since and have been relieving the colored population of considerable of their change. The Burlington darkies are especially easily duped and are taken in on an average of once a year by some colored sharper, and each time they swear that they will be on the alert for such characters in the future, but the next one finds them as unsuspecting as did the first, and it is the same way the country over.

A Burlingtonian seining party visited Woolper last Thursday and caught about 75 pounds of fish, among which were some very handsome bass. The party descended the creek to the Minor hole, by which time some of the boys were but little more than walking icicles. Cy Crisler, of the Boone House, was Captain-General, W. E. Piper being second in command. The crowd had lots of fun on the trip, and did not return until late in the after noon.

The Methodist congregation at Walton is few in number, but a more earnest and determined little band of workers in the Cause can't be found anywhere. A year or so a go this little congregation, having no place of worship that they could call their own, concluded to make an effort to erect a church edifice. The scheme was soon under way, and it soon became evident that success would crown their efforts, so nobly and liberally did the good people of Walton and vicinity respond to every demand upon them. The entire community interested itself in behalf of its Methodist members' undertaking, and the harmonious work was not long in commencing to materialise in a building which is now developed into an elegant church edifice, the handsomest in the county. Last Sunday was the day appointed to dedicated the building. It was a beautiful day and an immense crowd, composed of persons from far and near, was present, and listened to a very able dedicatory sermon by Rev. Taylor, of Covington. The attendance was estimated at from 1,500 to 2,000, all of whom were fed out of the abundance of provisions that were on the grounds.

In response to an invitation extended by Miss Eva, daughter of Dr. Scott, of Florence, three of our young men attended a select party at her residence on Tuesday evening of last week. The occasion was, in every particular, of a superior nature. Invitations had been extended to Walton, Union Burlington, besides being circulated quite extensively in Florence and vicinity, and the number of regrets sent as substitutes by those compelled to deny themselves the pleasure of accepting the invitation, were so few as to render them almost unworthy of note.

The parlors and dining rooms, in addition to being filled with youth and beauty, were also heavily decorated with lovely flowers, and the odor they emitted mingling with the oven sweeter, (if possible,) strains of music produced by the popular harpist, Rocco Ferro, were such as to almost lead one to believe they were enjoying an etherial pleasure. At 11 o'clock a bountiful supply of refreshments were fairly showered upon the guests, and after half an hour's conversation enlivened by the fact that all were appeasing their hunger, the dancing was resumed until 2 o'clock, at which time all having had as much pleasure as their physical beings were able to support, and with many expressed desires for a repetition of the pleasures of the evening at some future date, and many thanks to the fair young hostess, as also to Mrs. Kate Conrad and jovial doctor and his wife tor their exertions to have all spend a pleasant time, the guests gently withdrew leaving Somnus rightful possessor of the hours during Sol's slumbers.

ONE OF THE GUESTS.

Temperance Meeting.

The temperance mass meeting was called to order in the Court-house in the afternoon, Monday, and Oscar Gaines elected chairman and Dr. Samuel M. Adams, secretary.

On motion and second Oscar Gaines was appointed chairman of the central committee and authorized to appoint the other members of said committee for this county.

On motion and second the chairman was authorized to appoint one man in each voting district in the county, he to select three or five others in his district to cooperate with him and the central committee. The chair then appointed the following named gentlemen in their respective districts:

Bullittsville, Rev. R. E. Kirtley;
Walton, W. L. Norman;
Hamilton, Dr. S. M. Adams;
Verona, James Calhoun;
Beaver, Andrew Ellis;
Union, M. C. Norman;
Bellevue, J. S. Huey;
Florence, Benjamin Stephens;
Carlton, A. G. McConnell;
Burlington, H. P. Stephens;
Petersburg, J. Frank Grant.

In the Beaver district the following gentlemen were appointed to cooperate with the committeeman of that district: J. C. Hughes, J. O. Griffith, C. C. Sleet and G. W. Ossman. In the Petersburg district the following gentlemen were appointed: Charles Schramm, N. S. Walton, W. R. Green, J. D. Terrill and R. Randall.

Revs. Fullilove, of the Baptist church and Keller, of the Lutheran church addressed the meeting, the former in quite a lengthy speech.

The chairman of the various committees took the following action:

On motion and second the various district committees were directed to raise a fund to be placed in the hands of the chairman of the central committee for the purpose of procuring tracts and other literature to be distributed to aid in the work in Boone county during the present campaign, and for securing the services of speakers.

On motion and second the chairman of the central committee was authorized to call a meeting of the various committees at any time.

Adjourned.

OSCAR GAINES, Chairman.
DR S. M. ADAMS, Secretary.

I have appointed the following central committee:

J. C. Revill, G. G. Hughes.

Rev. Lafe Johnson will deliver a temperance address in the Court-house in Burlington, Wednesday evening, June 16th, 1886, at 8 o'clock p. m.

OSCAR GAINES, Ch'm'n Ex. Com't.

Miss Nellie Blythe leaves to-morrow for Hanover, Ind., to be present at the college commencement on the 15th inst., when her brother, David, graduates.

Joseph Collins, E. Y. Chapin, Joseph Kennedy and M. L. Swetnam of Covington; Benjamin Calkins and two Mr. Gibsons, of Rising Sun, attended court Monday.

The Commissioner and Sheriff made several land sales yesterday. Among the sales made by the Commissioner was the house and lot in Hebron occupied by J. W. Davis, which brought $1,701, T. A. Rouse purchaser.

County Court.

Dr. Corlis appointed administrator of John Corlis.

J. D. Terrill appointed administrator of Maria Parker colored.

Viewers on proposition to discontinue Steep Gut road filed report.

Viewers on Mike Ryans proposition to change public road given further time to file and report.

A bouncer—not huge in weight, just 8¼ pounds in his "stocking feet," but as "fine as split silk." The first thing he did, so the happy father says, was to give three cheers for Cleveland, and send congratulations on his marriage. Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Campbell are as happy as they well can be over their new boy, and profuse in thanks to the accomplished accoucher, Dr. J. F. Smith.—Sanford, (Fla.) Journal.

Miss Mary Thompson's school closed last Friday, and she returned to Burlington Monday. Having taught many sessions in the Sandrun neighborhood, she had a reunion of her old pupils, at the close of a three month's term in the Fairview school house. There were scholars present, whom she had taught as far back as twenty years ago, and on that day they and their children sat around the same teacher. The closing exercise were very interesting and satisfactory to all parties. Miss Fannie Hoshal read the salutatory, Miss Laura Gaines the valedictory; Miss Mary Corn read an essay on "The works of Nature and Art." There were other compositions, readings and recitations from the younger pupils. After the exercises a sumptuous feast that had been provided by the patrons was spread, and served by the young ladies of the school.

M'VILLE.

Mrs. Wilson was visiting L. B. Lefever last Sunday.

J. H. Walton, of Waterloo, is visiting J. N. Humphry of this place.

Leen Smith and wife left here last Monday for Aurora, from which place they will return home.

George Bachelor of this place and Lizzie Knipher, of Petersburg, were married last Saturday at Rising Sun.

ERLANGER.

Mrs. J. L. Conner spent Saturday with friends in Florence.

Quite a number of young folks from this point attended the races last Saturday.

Mr. James Shannon, the genial operator for the Southern, spent a few days in visiting relatives in Hebron.

An elderly gentleman, a passenger on the north-bound express, in attempting to get off at this place Saturday evening, fell between the cars, and was seriously, but we are happy to say, not fatally hurt.

GUNPOWDER.

Aunt Ella Rouse is very poorly with paralysis. She was stricken last Wednesday.

George Vaughn is at home from Danville, Indiana. He will return in September.

The Sunday-school at Pleasant Valley has organized, and a good attendance last Sunday.

The hall at Gunpowder was crowded Sunday night to hear the evangelist. The meeting will continue all this week, and perhaps longer.

FRANCISVILLE.

Cherry season is here with a bountiful crop.

New potatoes with peas on toast are in order now.

Health of the neighborhood is remarkably good.

The crops in this locality are suffering for rain and warm weather.

The Colorado potato bug is doing considerable damage to the growing crop.

Miss Mary Thompson's school closed Friday with quite a number of visitors in attendance. Miss Mary has taught us a splendid school, and given entire satisfaction.

One of the quietest and yet most enjoyable society events that it has been our good fortune to participate in in a long time, came off at the residence of Mr. Wm. Hayes last Sunday evening. The affair was the marriage of Mr. Sparks Bruce and Miss Nannie Runyan, of Wilmington, Ind. Miss Runyan is a cousin of Mr. Hayes and daughter of Mrs. Agnes Runyan formerly of this county. It was quite unexpected to Mr. Hayes' folks, as they were not aware until the night before that our quiet town was on the eve of a wedding and that the marriage ceremony would take place in their parlor. Notwithstanding the short time they had to prepare, Mrs. Hayes and her daughters prepared a splendid supper for the occasion, the tables fairly groaning under the weight of rich cakes, fruits and all the luxuries of the season. There was a limited number of guests in attendance and but few of them knew there was to be a wedding until the hour arrival. The Rev. H. J. Foster officiated in tying the hymeneal knot. The attendants were John Cave and Annie Hayes. The bride and groom, with their attendants were dressed in the height of fashion, presenting fine specimens of man and womanhood. The contracting parties will begin housekeeping at Wilmington, Ind., where they have all the good wishes of their Boone county friends as also no doubt the well wishes of their friends there.

The shark is still worshiped on the African coast, and offerings of poultry and goats are made. Once a year a child is sacrificed to propitiate it.

The old device of novel and drama, a blotting pad that retains an impression of a missing document, has actually turned up as evidence in a real California law-suit.

A Chinese Viceroy has propounded a new earthquake theory. In a memorial to the throne this high official attributes an earthquake of last January to the mildness of the winter, which caused an excess of "yang," or male element of nature; although the shock was in a measure due to local officials who neglected their duties, and thus failed to gain the harmonizing influence of Heaven.

A Manitoba farmer was sharpening a stake with an axe, when a flash of lightning, accompanied by a single clap of thunder, came from the only cloud visible, a small one immediately overhead. The bolt struck the head of the axe, spliting it into two pieces and breaking the handle. The farmer was knocked to the ground insensible, but speedily recovered, and upon searching about found the fragments of his axe forced deeply into the ground.

Here is one way of removing objects from the eye: Take a horse hair and double it, leaving a loop. If the object can be seen, lay the loop over it, close the eye, and the mote will come out as the hair is withdrawn. If the irritating object can not be seen, raise the lid of the eye as high as possible and place the loop as far as you can, close the eye and roll the ball around a few times, draw out the hair and the substance which caused the pain will be sure to come with it. The method is practiced by axemakers and other workers in steel.

Japan sends us a tale which, for wild and sublime untruthfulness, probably exceeds any thing that either America or Australia has produced. According to the correspondent of a Tokio journal, a native philosopher living at Hakodadi has discovered a method by which he can at will materialize his own soul. This remarkable man is, so it is asserted, accustomed, for the benefit of himself and his friends, to take his seat toward evening in a large bamboo chair, and to become apparently unconscious. No sooner has his body lost all sensitiveness than there issues from his open mouth a faint blue flame, which slowly takes form and assumes the proportions of a well-developed manikin of some six inches in height. This manikin, which is the materialized soul of the philosopher, talks freely with those present, and eats, drinks, writes, and in fact has all the functions of a civilized and perfectly constituted human being. He dare not, however, so he is reported to declare, break contact with the inanimate body of his possessor; and on one occasion, when he was removed and set upon a neighboring table, the philosopher began to gasp and struggle as if in the agonies of death, whereupon the manikin was quickly placed on his master's head. The correspondent professes to give the names of several Japanese gentlemen who have more than once witnessed the experiment.—Montreal Star.

RAISING DUCKS.

An Occupation Which Can Easily Be Made Remunerative.

Ducks are very hardy when young, and grow faster than any other class of young stock. They require but very little brooding, and if fed all they will eat, with plenty of drinking water, they can be made to attain the weight of five pounds in ten weeks from the time they are hatched. They require mixed food, which should consist of meat scraps, mashed potatoes or turnips, and scalded bran, meal and middlings. They come into market after the prices for early chicks begin to decline, thus extending the season for securing the highest prices. It is best to hatch chicks early and then follow with young ducks.

The favorite breeds are the Pekin, Aylesbury and Rouen. The first are easily kept in confinement, and require no ponds of water. The adults should have a large trough of fresh water, but ducklings should not get their bodies wet from the time they are hatched till they are marketed, although until recently it was supposed that a pond of water was necessary.

The Pekins lay when five or six months old, and the favorite month for laying by all the breeds is February. Plenty of nests should be provided, as ducks usually lay very early in the morning. In feeding, the cheapest mode is to give them plenty of bulky food. A lot of clover hay, chopped fine, scalded and mixed with mashed turnips, and thickened with bran and ground oats, makes a delicious meal for them; but they should have meat once a day. Duck eggs command at the present time double the price of those from hens, and as they will lay as many as one hundred and forty a year, they are capable of yielding a fair profit for all that may be invested in them. The feathers are also salable, and usually pay for the labor of killing and picking them for market. The best crosses are the Pekins and Aylesburys. The Muscovy drake and Rouen duck produce a large and elegant carcass for market, but the produce is sterile, and a second cross can not be made from it. When roaming at large, a pond and plenty of grass, with a good feed at night and warm, dry quarters, will keep the adult ducks thrifty and productive.—Rural New Yorker.

—Prof. Barrett, in a lecture at Dublin, on "Fluid Jets and their Vibrations," showed that a jet of water emitted in water would shorten up and flare in response to a musical note of proper pitch; and a jet of smoke in air would be similarly affected by a musical note, and that a musical note is produced when a small flame is brought underneath a long jar. This phenomenon has been applied to the explanation of the dark lines in the solar spectrum.

—One of those things which no man has ever explained, and which in all probability will remain a secret until the end of time, is why ice, which can be had in any quantity in most winters for the mere cost of hauling, costs more than coal, which has to be dug out of the earth at great expense, and must be prepared for the market by the aid of expensive machinery, and then carried one hundred miles by rail.—*Lancaster (Pa.) B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S
VERMIFUGE
ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country; but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and spasms are most frequently the result of these hidden sappers and miners. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing to eat, grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms. Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy, therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge. Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a saterpurgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in one sense, and to examine every bottle he buys of it. The simple name of FAHNESTOCK is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK and be satisfied with nothing else.

NOW.

Love me now! Love has such a little minute,
Day crowds on day with swift and noiseless tread,
Life's sad courses ere fairly we begin it,
Pain jostles joy, and Hope gives place to dread.
Love me now!
It will be too late when we are dead!

Love me now! While we still are young together,
While glad and brave the sun shines overhead,
Hand locked in hand, in bliss, smiling weather,
Sighing were sin, and variance ill bestead,
It will be too late when you are dead!

Love me now! Shadows hover in the distance,
Cold winds are coming, green leaves must turn red.
Knowest thou, my Love, at this sad insistence?
Even this moment may the dart be sped!
Love me now!
It will be too late when I am dead!

IN THE FAMILY.

Mr. Gobelin's Nephew Decorated With the Coveted "Red Ribbon."

M. Exupere Gobelin, the retired agent for an insurance company, over sixty, and one of the best preserved bachelors in the north of Paris, would have also been one of the happiest had not the cravings of an unsatisfied ambition rendered him miserable. This fly in M. Exupere's ointment was nothing more nor less than an unappeasable desire to be decorated with the ribbon of the Legion of Honor. On the evening of a certain day, when life without the aforesaid red ribbon had seemed less worth having than usual—he had been reading in his journal the nomination of one of the companions of his childhood as Chevalier of the Legion—a friend proposed to him to visit a theater in the Rue de la Tour d'Auvergne, now Haussmannized out of existence. Exupere consented, and was taken behind the scenes by his host, who was intimate with the stage manager. This worthy official received them politely, but seemed abstracted and no little annoyed.

On noticing Exupere's fine presence and imposing bearing, the stage manager, suddenly turning to him, said:

"Monsieur, allow me to ask you to do me a favor—a real favor. The principal witness in the marriage ceremony that is celebrated in the third act has disappointed me. It is not a speaking part, but none the less an important one. Might I so trespass on your good nature as to ask you to fill the role?"

"I, monsieur? Why, I've never been on the stage in my life. I shouldn't know how to look."

"You have only to look naturally, my dear monsieur, and you will have the appearance of a man perfectly comme il faut and distingue. The witness is supposed to be a retired cavalry officer, and it may be said without flattery you have exactly the physique for the service, as we say in the theater."

"But I should be recognized."

"Not the slightest danger. Our hair dresser will, in a second, 'make up' your head and face in a way that would puzzle your most intimate friend. And then, with the red ribbon in your button-hole—"

"The ribbon—a red ribbon in my button-hole," broke in Exupere, in a voice trembling with emotion, and his face suddenly becoming a deep purple.

He had hardly got the words out of his mouth when the cunning stage manager, feeling that he had gained his point, pinned deftly upon the ex-agent's breast the coveted decoration. Exupere was calm, but majestic, under the fire of the opera-glasses—as calm as a French officer might have been under the fire of the enemy's artillery. On beholding his handsome figure in the mirror in the green-room, after the curtain had fallen, and where the stage manager was waiting to compliment him, he said to himself:

"No; in fact I am no longer the same person; now I am the man I should be!"

The unhappy Exupere dreamed that he was really a member of the Legion for the rest of his days. Meantime, a piece of good fortune came to him. From being possessed of a very limited income, he suddenly became quite well-to-do, thanks to an unexpected inheritance. One morning he received a communication from a country notary informing him that his first cousin, Eustache Verduron, had bequeathed to him his entire property, real and personal, which represented an income of over twenty thousand francs. At the close of this agreeable epistle the village attorney added that he did not consider that he was trangressing the bounds of professional discretion by observing that in so making his will his cousin had disinherited his nephew, Albert Gobelin, who had been guilty of having married against his wishes, in Algiers, a respectable but poor girl. "The whole countryside," added the kind-hearted notary, "pities the young man, who is a fine fellow and deserves the greatest sympathy."

Thus it came to pass that Exupere Gobelin inherited a fortune, but not without greatly commiserating his unfortunate relative.

"I shall certainly make inquiries about this young fellow," he said to himself, "and discover if I can in what corner of Africa he has hidden himself with the girl of his choice. If he is really as deserving as they say, well—I'll make him my heir. I'm not one of your selfish, rapacious old curmudgeons. I am not like some of the surly old misers of my acquaintance; I am generous and charitable. And to think that there are some shabby fellows who have been unscrupulous enough to get themselves decorated and to strut around with the cross, while I—"

His mania for being decorated had now over-mastered all other passions in the breast of the late dabbler in insurance. He was tempted more powerfully than ever was St. Anthony in the desert and felt urged to the point of illegally assuming the coveted honor by something within him stronger than his better self.

One morning, not being able to stand the moral (or immoral) pressure any longer, he entered a shop and purchased a dozen assorted "Legion" ribbons. Then, hurrying home, like some culprit, he fastened the decoration neatly, but conspicuously to his breast, put on his great-coat, buttoned it carefully over the garment ornamented with the tell-tale bit of red without quite knowing what he was about, being in a mental condition somewhat resembling that of those who "see stars" in the daytime, he climbed up into the seat of an omnibus and was in due time set down at Auteuil.

There Exupere entered a cafe and ordered a "bock." He seemed to be suffocating like a man stricken with apoplexy. In order to breathe more freely he unbuttoned his top-coat and before him in a mirror he saw a man on whose breast glistened something like a purple spark. He had surrendered himself to the guilty contemplation of this marvel, when he was abruptly aroused by the voice of the landlady:

"Joseph, bring me the Illustrated Journal on table No. 8; it is lying before that gentleman with the decoration."

A cold perspiration suddenly broke out on the forehead of the unfortunate man, whose senses had a moment before been wrapped in a delicious revery. He hurriedly rebuttoned his coat, threw a five-franc piece on the table and rushed from the room without waiting for his change. The shock had been a terrible one.

That evening on returning home, Exupere was accosted by his concierge, who handed him an official-looking document.

"A Garde Republican on horseback just left that for monsieur."

He read the address, "To Monsieur Gobelin, Rue de la Condamine, 160;" and in one corner, these printed words.

"Bureau of the Grand Chancellor of the Legion of Honor."

Poor old Exupere's head swam, and he felt as though he were about to faint in the arms of the concierge. He, however, managed to stumble up to his apartments, rang, rushed past his astonished servant and locked himself into his own room.

"It's all over," he muttered. "I have been discovered, and shall have to go to prison! I am disgraced—ruined! Oh, what a fate!"

Had the retired insurance agent been the happy possessor of more hair his bristling locks and the terror-stricken aspect of his countenance would have exactly reproduced the head of "Orestes pursued by the Furies." After some time he nerved himself to the task of opening the fatal missive. It read thus:

> MY DEAR FRIEND: Your very proper ambition has been satisfied; you have at last received a well-merited reward! I have been ordered by the Secretary-General to make out your nomination for the Legion of Honor. It is with the greatest satisfaction that I communicate this good news to an old and dear comrade in arms.
>
> Yours, ——.

Of course, according to all precedent, the signature of the official was entirely illegible.

Exupere rubbed his forehead and asked himself whether he was really insane. He carefully reread the letter, tried to make out the name of the writer, and swallowed at one gulp half the contents of a carafe of cold water. By this operation he recovered something of his usual equanimity and clear-headedness. "The communication" he argued with himself, "is either a stupid joke or is really intended for some namesake of mine who lives in this same street. I will inquire into the matter."

He started at once, and his quest was soon ended. At No. 150 he found the mystic sign: "Furnished rooms."

"Is there any one named Gobelin here?" he asked at the office, and on receiving a reply in the affirmative he climbed up to the fourth story. At the end of a dingy corridor he found a card nailed to a door and bearing the legend: "Albert Gobelin."

"Ah!" said Exupere to himself, "my worthy cousin from Africa."

He knocked. A young woman, with regular features, mild-eyed and sad looking, opened the door. A small oil lamp on a table lit up the features of a girl of seven or eight who was industriously working at her exercises. This pretty, blonde child, suspending her occupation for a moment, cast anxious, inquiring glances at the stranger. In the shadow that covered the end of the room another pair of eyes were also watching Exupere. These latter, glittering with the brilliancy that fever insures, belonged to Albert Gobelin. Exupere was deeply affected.

"Monsieur," he said, handing him the Chancellor's letter, "this document fell into my hands through an error in the address. I think it must be intended for you."

The invalid unfolded the paper, and the child brought the lamp.

"It is from my friend Des Villiers, no doubt," he said. "Read it, little one."

The child read in her silvery tones and school-girl manner. The father's eyes filled with tears, the wife embraced her husband with nervous energy and sobbed convulsively on his shoulder. The good Exupere wept, too, and never before had tears brought him such a sweet feeling of relief. Ah! how far away seemed his mania for decoration then.

"I thank you, monsieur," Albert said to him, "and ask your pardon for not having more command of myself! Ah! that cross has cost me dearly! To gain it I ruined my health by exploring the Sahara, where I sought and where I felt sure of finding the real route of the Trans-Sahara road. Unfortunately this reward will not prevent my wife and child from remaining here without the means of support if I am taken from them. But again, monsieur, let me ask your pardon for my want of self-control. Thanks, and farewell!"

"No, Monsieur Albert Gobelin, not farewell," said Exupere in decided tones. "This is your lucky day!" It has not only brought you the cross that you deserve, but it also returns to you what is yours by right—the inheritance, the Verduron inheritance, of which I, Exupere Gobelin, have been only the temporary custodian."

It would be useless to attempt to describe the scene that ensued. An hour later Exupere returned to his room calm, happy, cured. Noticing on the mantelpiece a bit of red ribbon that had so nearly caused him to commit mortal sin he apostrophized with a sigh:

"You will still decorate the breast of a Gobelin. What matters it what his other name may be?"—From the French, in N. Y. Graphic.

INCOMMODING THE DOG.

A Famous Violinist's Answer to the Czar's Satirical Question.

The famous Polish violinist, M. Henri Wieniawski, when "starring" at St. Petersburg, was ordered to play before the Czar Alexander II. In due time he appeared at the Winter Palace, was shown into a state apartment where the Emperor made his appearance, accompanied by a large Newfoundland dog. When the artist began his performance, the dog, who was lying at his master's feet, got up and slowly approached Wieniawski, who began to feel somewhat uncomfortable, fearing that the animal, according to the manner of his kind, might begin to accompany his play by a howl. Instead of this, however, the dog came close up to him and put his two fore-paws on the artist's knees. Such a situation was any thing but advantageous to the musical performance. Nevertheless Wieniawski continued his concert, while the dog, not satisfied with his demonstrations, came closer and closer, following with his head every movement of the arm. At the thought that his art would be forever ended if the gigantic mouth should open to bite his right hand off, the violinist trembled inwardly with fear, but dared not discontinue his play. At last the Emperor, who had evidently enjoyed the situation, inquired: "Wieniawski, does the dog incommode you at all?" "Your Majesty," replied the artist, "I fear I incommode the dog." Alexander II. was much amused by the answer, and the dog was called back.—N. Y. Post.

The Widow's Inconsolable Grief.

"My dear Mrs. Brown, I'm so glad to see you. I am well nigh broken-hearted. My poor husband died not five minutes ago."

"And you are out so soon?"

"Yes. Poor man? I loved him so, Mrs. Brown, I don't think I shall ever recover from the shock. I am just on my way to the insurance agents to see about his life insurance. Won't you come with me? Then we will go round and select my mourning."—Rambler.

A FOE TO JOBS.

The Surprise and Consternation Which the President Is Causing Politicians—A Business-Like, Common-Sense, Fearless, Honest and Able Democratic Executive.

The conscientious industry of President Cleveland, shown in his careful examination of every bill laid before him, is the wonder of members of Congress, who did not look for such close scrutiny into private bills in which they were interested. They can not understand how the President, in his multitudinous duties and cares, can find time to go below the surface of apparently inoffensive measures and expose their real nature and object, which is generally a raid on the treasury without any adequate return for the people's money. But they little know Mr. Cleveland's capacity for work and that his vetoes form the most prominent and positive part of his record. He made it a point as mayor and Governor of studying carefully every measure laid before him, not only with a view of judging of its effect and bearing upon public interests, but to ascertain that it was consistent with existing laws and free in its form from such defects as would produce trouble in its operation. Any tinge of jobbery renders a bill, no matter whence it emanates, obnoxious to him. He evinces the utmost candor in his vetoes, and completely disregards the question whether certain persons or interests would not be aggrieved by the failure of measures which he believes are not demanded by the wider interests of the public.

Some superficial observers may look upon this as not good politics, but those who study the character of the American people to advantage will regard it as the highest and most successful standard of politics. President Cleveland has steadily kept in view the rule of action he laid down as mayor of Buffalo. In a communication to the Common Council. "It seems to me," he then said, "that a successful and faithful ministration of the government of a city may be accomplished by constantly bearing in mind that we are the trustees and agents of our fellow citizens, holding their funds in sacred trust, to be expended for their benefit, that we should at all times be prepared to render an honest account to them touching the manner of their expenditure, and that the affairs of the city should be conducted, as far as possible, upon the same principles as a good business man manages his private concerns." This may not be the recognized rule of action in some political circles, but it tells powerfully with the people. It is orthodox Democratic doctrine, expounded at many a convention and many a meeting, notwithstanding the growl of some so-called Democratic papers, which are incensed because President Cleveland adheres to the pledges of the party platform with the strictest fidelity.

He has incurred the enmity of certain office-seekers, political leaders, who boasted of their power to use him and editors, who imagined that he would unhesitatingly agree to all their suggestions. Those people make a great outcry and cause the unthinking to imagine that there is a formidable opposition arrayed against the President, all on account of the offices and his independent way of conducting the affairs of his Administration. Do they ever reflect that there are millions of voters, whose concern is not offices, but the honest and safe administration of the affairs of the Government? Mr. Cleveland is, immeasurably, a better Democrat than any of his critics, for he has respect for the pledges of the party, and aims at giving a faultless administration of the affairs of the whole people and placing himself abreast with the spirit of the times, instead of falling back on old policies and forgotten issues. He steadfastly refuses to be led away from the path of duty, no matter what pressure is brought to bear on him, replying to all in the memorable words: "It is willful blindness not to see that the people care but little for party obligations when they are invoked to countenance and sustain fraudulent and corrupt practices. And it is well for our country and the purification of politics, the people, at times fully roused to danger, remind their leaders that party methods should be something more than a means used to answer the purposes of those who profit by political occupation."

Against such a man the clamor of disappointed politicians is powerless. His strength lies in the hearts of the people and there is a daily developing until when the time comes to test it the would-be dictators in the councils of the party will be astonished to find how insignificant they are when matched against such a fearless, painstaking, conscientious leader. Mr. Cleveland has demonstrated to the country that the Democratic party may be relied upon for a faithful administration of the affairs of the Government and that treachery, hypocrisy and betrayal of pledges do not characterize the course of that party when it is in power. When Congress experiences a few more of his vetoes, it will, perhaps, learn what manner of man Grover Cleveland is, as the guardian of the interests of the people and the uncompromising foe to jobs, be they ever so alluring and artfully disguised.—Albany Argus.

A Republican Trick.

Secretary McPherson, of the Republican Congressional Committee, is in Washington. He comes thus early on the ground to begin the work of the campaign. The Republicans are encouraged to believe that with active management they will be able to get control of the next House of Representatives. To do this they must gain twenty-four districts. They anticipate gains in Ohio, Indiana, California, Iowa, New York, Michigan and Pennsylvania sufficient to give them control, but they are likewise planning for a vigorous campaign in Tennessee and Virginia. It is represented that a gain of two Republican members can be anticipated in Tennessee because of the divisions among the Democrats of the State on the tariff and debt questions. In Michigan they will work to secure every district except that in which Detroit is located, which is graciously conceded to the Democrats. One feature of the work of the Congressional Committee will be a liberal distribution of the recent speeches made by Jeff Davis. Mr. McPherson will soon have verbatim copies of these speeches, and they are to be carefully edited, so as to cull from them the breathings of what the Republicans call treason and disloyalty.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

——The confirmation by the Senate of all but a baker's dozen of the nominations of the President thus far acted on has put a stop to most of the talk about the appointment of "jail birds" to office. A high old moral party like that represented by the Republican Senators could never "advise and consent" to the appointment of bad men to office. Shades of Belknap, Robeson, Dorsey, Kilpatrick, and Hurlburt forbid.—Boston Herald.

——The consciousness that there is a man of the utmost integrity and independence in the Chief Executive office, who is essentially and in the best sense conservative and patriotic, is practically universal, and the President is unquestionably very much stronger in the popular confidence than when he was elected.—Harper's Weekly.

NOT FLYING ABROAD.

The Stars and Stripes Keep at Home Because It Doesn't Pay to Compete with Cheap Foreign Ships, Cheap Captains and Cheap Crews.

Our flag is not on the sea to any great extent. Why should it be? Is that sort of national vanity which is the mere cockade of patriotism more important than are our genuine commercial interests?

Because the Democrats in Congress decline to go into the subsidy business the Tribune indulges in the following loose talk:

> The Democrats still persist in playing into the hands of England and other nations on this question of foreign commerce. The steady decline in ships carrying the American flag, and the increase at our expense of the commerce of other nations, has opened the eyes of some few Democrats; but the party leaders are not yet willing to admit that they have blundered on this matter.

The Tribune is so located that it ought to know the bottom facts which it sedulously keeps from its readers. It ought to know that our merchant ships were driven from the ocean—not primarily because we were at war, but because the business of ocean-carrying had ceased to pay. It ought to know that the foreign vessels that tie up within sight of its windows at the wharves of Manhattan Island do not return two per cent. profit to their owners as an investment. It ought to know that ocean-carrying is about the least remunerative business in the world, and that Americans can not afford to engage in it to any great extent in direct competition with the cheap ships, cheap captains and cheap crews of Europe. The captain of an Amsterdam or Genoese bark gets $800 a year, but a man for the same service in New York costs $1,500 to $1,800. To make a serious effort to rebuild our merchant marine would be about as wise as it would be for American capitalists to go and establish maccaroni factories in Naples or pulque mills in Mexico.

To-day it costs less to transport a can of kerosene from New York to Marseilles, France, than it does to carry it from New York to Philadelphia, and it costs just about as much to get a ladies' band-box carried from Willard's Hotel across the Potomac to Alexandria as it does to send a package of the same size from Baltimore to Calcutta in Hindostan. This is the serious fact: The reason why American ships are not on the ocean is because they do not want to be; because it does not pay to be; because they can not afford to be. If the thronging paupers of Holland, Spain and Italy are eager to serve us as oceanic porters, why not let them do it, while we calmly continue to busy ourselves about something that pays? A bank president might, on arriving at the depot, shoulder his own trunk and carry it to his home; but why should he, when there are clamorous hundreds who want the job and can do it cheaper than he can?

In times of peace we can not afford to struggle with the hungry stevedores of Amsterdam and Liverpool and the wretched lazzaroni of Italy for the privilege of carrying the flour barrels and kerosene cans of the world, because there is so much more money in manufacturing the load; and in times of war, a large merchant marine is always an element of weakness.

What we want, and want at once, is a respectable navy, worthy of our wealth and our pretensions. Let puissant ships-of-war bear our flag where it is needed, and let the poverty-stricken porter-fleets of the world carry any flag they please.

On this platform the Democratic party can securely stand.—Washington Post.

DEMOCRATIC DROPS.

——Mr. Blaine denies his recent interview on the fishery question. Mr. Blaine's denials are always effective in establishing the truth of whatever he denies.—Chicago Times.

——Here is another occasion for a Bourbon howl. Postmaster-General Vilas refuses to discharge the colored servant in his department to make room for a white man from Confederate X Roads. Truly, the revolution revolted in vain.—N. Y. World.

——There is no doubt that Mr. Blaine is getting together a strong organization, and yet we believe the next Republican convention will hesitate long before it decides to nominate a man who has the prestige of defeat. We can assure Mr. Blaine that not only would he fail to carry New York, New Jersey, Indiana and Connecticut in 1888, but that Wisconsin would also cast its electoral vote against him.—N. Y. Star.

——Congress is plainly to blame for the pending fisheries dispute and the seizure of the Adams. President Cleveland felt the imminence of this very danger, and in his message last December urged Congress to provide for a mixed commission to settle "the entire question of the fishery rights of the two governments and their respective citizens" on these coasts; but our lawmakers have been too busy to attend to this imperative requirement.—Washington Post.

——The popular confidence of the people in the President is a thing which the managers of both parties will be wise not to ignore as the time approaches for the summer campaign. Making due allowance for all mistakes of inexperience, and perhaps of too great self-reliance, it is still true that the things for which the President most stoutly stands, in politics and in government, are the things which the intelligence, the virtue and the business sense of this country believe in. Any mistake on this point will be disastrous to the politicians who make it.—Boston Statesman.

——General Logan announced a very important discovery recently in his Providence speech, one which bids fair to solve the labor problem if both employers and employees will give their undivided attention to it. What is needed, he says, in order to secure harmony between labor and capital is to pay a fair day's wages for a fair day's work. The simplicity of this remedy must strike every body with sudden and peculiar force. The customary way of looking at the subject—that of paying an unfair day's wages for a fair day's work, or a fair day's wages for an unfair day's work—is clearly at the bottom of all the disturbances of the time.—N. Y. Post.

Good Eastern Advice.

Mr. Cleveland has never been West. He believes in its existence, but he couldn't swear to it as a matter of personal knowledge. What better opportunity could he have than that afforded by a wedding trip to enjoy the hospitality and become acquainted with the wonders of that marvelous region. Living here at the East is mere stagnation compared to the velocity of life out there. Accustomed to drowsy villages like Buffalo and Albany, he can have no conception of the tumultuous progress and vivacity of the communities that now dot the primeval bison ranges. If he needs shaking up they are just the people to shake him. If his understanding lacks breadth, there are the visions to broaden it. If his imagination is dull, there he will find the means to kindle it. He could not come into contact with so much animation, he could not traverse scenes of such extraordinary development without cracking the crust of his provincialism, and feeling bigger and better for the experience.—Brooklyn Daily Eagle.

THE COMMONWEALTH.

Louisville Leaf Tobacco Market.

There is but little change of price in any type or grade. Everything is either steady or firm, and we note an advance in medium and good dark leaf and burley lugs. The better grades have not been tested to any great extent. The progress of planting northward has been checked south of the central belt. The rain factor will proceed to loom as a matter of increasing interest, and its importance will increase, as usual, the longer it may prolong its absence. The crop ought to be pitched by June 20, and there is no greater reason than usual in sight at present why it should not. A week later than this in 1885, 80 per cent. of the crop had been planted, but in the same week in 1884 it was also announced that only 10 per cent. had been planted. The latter crop was not only the larger, but also the largest on record. We quote 1884 tobaccos as follows for full weight packages:

Mrs. Thompson jumped out and saved herself, but Mrs. Riggs was thrown over a bridge abutment, a distance of forty feet, into a creek, and her life is despaired of. She has only been married two months.

TWENTY years ago, in Grant County, G. W. Osborn and Samuel Anderson, sons of prosperous farmers, quarreled about the sale of sheep, and Anderson shot and killed Osborn. It was said to have been an unprovoked murder, and Anderson fled the State and disappeared. A short while ago a man forty years old, haggard and worn, returned to the scene of the crime, which had almost been forgotten, and gave himself up, saying he was Osborn's slayer. He was disbelieved at first, but the matter was investigated and new indictments were made out, and the case has been called for trial.

FRANK BOURNE, a well-known Kentucky outlaw, who has been operating in Kentucky as a horse-thief for twenty-five years, has come to his end by his own hand. He cut his throat late the other night at the home of his old demented mother, three miles west of Nicholasville. It was not known that he was in the county or State, as he has jumped several bail bonds, and a number of indictments are on the criminal court records. Since he was convicted, and got a new trial and several postponements and finally a change of venue to Versailles, where he broke jail, he has not been heard from, except once in Missouri, where he eluded a mob.

JOSHUA LAMB was shot and killed by John Padgett at Polly's Bend, in Girard County. The difficulty originated over the ownership of a kettle, and after a knock-down and scrimmage Padgett shot.

MRS. ELIZABETH SPEKER, aged fifty, fell down a pair of stairs at her home in Louisville, sustaining terrible injuries.

JAMES BANNON, a brute who inveigled a little girl named Vonderheid into a deserted house in Louisville, on the 14th of April and bit her cheek and took improper liberties with her without accomplishing his hellish design, was convicted and sentenced to the full limit of twenty years.

WM. MOODY, aged sixteen years, who lived with his father, Thomas Moody, just across the Bath line in Rowan County, met a horrible death near his home the other evening. He was riding a horse, with the plow-gears on him, to work in a cornfield, when the animal suddenly became frightened, and running away threw his rider, one of whose feet became entangled in the gearing, and with his head and shoulders on the ground was thus dragged a distance of a half mile, with the horse going at full speed. In this condition he survived until dashed against a log which lay in the way, which put an immediate end to his life. The skull was crushed and the body and face fearfully bruised and lacerated. The horse was supposed to be perfectly gentle, as he had never been known to scare before.

AT Louisville, the other morning, Alexander Long, a well-known blacksmith, aged fifty-one years, was discovered bathing his feet in the basin of the west fountain in the court-house yard. When approached he exhibited signs of insanity, and was shortly afterward taken before a jury in the circuit court. As he entered the bar he said he had been in the habit of saying the Lord's Prayer every time he entered a court-room, and asked Judge Jackson's permission to repeat it. Without waiting he began to repeat the prayer in a reverential tone, and the scene was a most unexpected and in some respects indicrous one. When he got through he addressed the jury, and quickly convinced them of his insanity. He was ordered to Anchorage Asylum.

THE condition of the corn crop in this State is reported at 80 per cent., and the acreage at 98, by the Commissioner of Agriculture. There is general complaint of the "cut-worm," many of the crops having been planted the second and some the third time. The condition of the wheat crop is 102 per cent., and the acreage 86 per cent. The hail-storm of the 12th of May did much damage to wheat, rye, barley and hemp crops in the counties of Fayette and Woodford.

THE stone-cutters of Newport struck for eight hours' work and ten hours' pay a few days ago. This caused the brick work on several buildings to stop.

JUDGE T. P. MAKIBBEN and Court-house Commissioner John Cline had a little set-to in the street at Newport, a few days ago. They were separated by friends before much damage was done.

THE bakers of Louisville met the other day and effected an organization for the protection of their interests and the promotion of trade.

THE stables of the Covington Transfer Company were burned; loss, $4,000. The horses were saved.

A. D. TAYLOR, colored, Treasurer of Falls City Lodge of Odd-fellows, Louisville, was arrested and locked up the other night on a warrant charging him with embezzling funds of the lodge to the amount of $149.15. His bondsmen are good for the amount to the lodge.

AUGUST E. WILSON was nominated to be the Republican candidate for Congress of the Fifth District, at the ensuing election, Mr. Wilson was defeated last election on the same ticket.

EDNIA TABLER, an eight-year-old child of M. Tabler, superintendent of the Southwestern railroad, was drowned the other evening while swimming in Saltriver, near Harrodsburg. The body was recovered.

A HOT CAVERN

Description of the Natural Turkish Bath at Idaho Springs, Col.

The "Hot Water Belt" which produces the thermal waters of Idaho Springs, lies at the foot of Santa Fe mountain, which forms the eastern boundary of Soda Creek Gorge. At one point, a perpendicular wall of rock rises to a considerable height, and it is into this cliff that the famous cavern penetrates. This cavern excites much curiosity on the part of pleasure-seekers, and is a source from which the invalid derives great benefit. The excavation is about twelve feet in height and extends sixty to seventy feet into the mountain; at the farthest end bubbles a spring of hot mineral water, which furnishes a liberal supply to the large bath hollowed in the rocky floor. The air is intensely hot, heavy laden with vapory steam, filling the cavern to the roof, upon which it is condensed in crystal drops. The sensation experienced when the cavern is first entered is that of insufficient air, but in a short time the perspiration pours out in a torrent, and one enjoys all the pleasures of a natural Turkish bath. Various diseases have been successfully treated by these baths, and in some cases the results have been remarkable; especially has this been the case with those affected with paralysis, chronic rheumatism and neuralgia. In all cases where copious perspiration is desired, either for the purpose of relieving the system of noxious elements in the blood or for the elimination of mineral medicines used in the treatment of disease, the best of results have been obtained. Being only thirty-eight miles from Denver, Idaho Springs is the most acceptable point in Colorado where both hot and cold mineral waters are found. The natural temperature of these waters, being such that they can be used both winter and summer, has much to do with their popularity, and combined with them are many advantages of climate and scenery, which are unobtainable at other points in the State.—Chicago Graphic News.

WOOLEN CLOTHING.

Why Nothing But Pure Wool Should Enter Into Dress or Bedding.

A physician who has for six months tested Dr. Jager's plan of wearing nothing but wool, day and night, writes: "The result has been complete immunity from colds and a very marked increase in my capacity for work. I have not put on a great-coat night or day, have slept with an open window in my bed-room, and have been able to enjoy the luxury of an open cab instead of a close brougham. Instead of alternating feelings of heat and cold, there has been a uniform and most agreeable glow of warmth. I have, without any alteration of diet or regimen, lost seven pounds in weight, and (which will, I believe, tax the credulity of some) have witnessed the disappearance of a lipoma of the nape of the neck, which had existed for some years, and had suggested the necessity for an operation. These latter facts powerfully illustrate the truth of Dr. Jager's contention that the complete and continuous action of the skin drains the organism of water and superfluous fat. I would say, further, that the feeling induced of perfect health is not the least of the recommendations to adopt the system. I may mention that of the many who have, more or less, fully addicted themselves to it from my example or advice, I have not known one who has been disappointed. Lastly, I would add a word on the need there is, if the full benefit to be derived is wished for, that nothing but pure wool should enter either into dress or bedding.—London Lancet.

—A few days ago a gentleman directed by his better half called upon a well-known milliner for his wife's new bonnet. "Really," said the milliner, "it isn't ready yet. We are so crowded with work I don't know what we will do. Can't your wife wait until the rush is over?" "Wait?" said the gentleman, "of course she can. She has four or five hats at home now." The next morning the store had hardly opened before the same gentleman rushed in; "For goodness sake," he exclaimed, "get that hat ready right off. I have been married twenty-three years, and I never knew that my wife had a temper. Whew!"—Indianapolis Journal.

—As far as we have noticed there has been thus far no organized movement for an increase in "the wages of sin."—Boston Record. As "the wages of sin is death," will the Record tell us what a twenty-five per cent. advance would be?—Lowell Courier.

"Work, Work, Work!"

How many women there are working today in various branches of industry—to say nothing of the thousands of patient housewives whose lives are an unceasing round of toil—who are martyrs to those complaints to which the weaker sex is liable. Their tasks are rendered doubly hard and irksome and their lives shortened, yet hard necessity compels them to keep on. To such Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" offers a sure means of relief. For all female weaknesses it is a certain cure. All druggists.

AN OPIUM EATER'S STORY.

Crawling Over Red Hot Bars of Iron in His Fearful Frenzy—A Scientific Investigation and Its Results.

Cincinnati Times-Star.

"Opium or death!"

This brief sentence was fairly hissed into the ear of a prominent druggist on Vine street by a person who, a few years ago well off is to-day a hopeless wreck!

One can scarcely realize the sufferings of an opium victim. De Quincey has vividly portrayed it. But who can fitly describe the joy of the rescued victim!

H. C. Wilson, of Loveland, O., formerly with March, Harwood & Co., manufacturing chemists of St. Louis, and of the well-known firm of H. C. Wilson & Co., chemists, formerly of this city, gave our reporter yesterday a bit of thrilling personal experience in this line.

"I have crawled over red hot bars of iron and coals of fire," he said, "in my agony during an opium frenzy. The very thought of my sufferings freezes my blood and chills my bones. I was then eating over thirty grains of opium daily."

"How did you contract the habit?"

"Excessive business cares broke me down and my doctor prescribed opium! That is the way nine-tenths of cases commence. When I determined to stop, however, I found I could not do it.

"You may be surprised to know," he said, "that two-fifths of the slaves of morphine and opium are physicians. Many of these I met. We studied our cases carefully. We found out what the organs were in which the appetite was developed and sustained; that no victim was free from a demoralized condition of those organs; that the hope of a cure depended entirely upon the degree of vigor which could be imparted to them. I have seen patients, while undergoing treatment, compelled to resort to opium again to deaden the horrible pain in those organs. I marvel how I ever escaped."

"Do you mean to say, Mr. Wilson, that you have conquered the habit?"

"Indeed I have."

"Do you object to telling me how?"

"No, sir. Studying the matter with several opium-eating physicians, we became satisfied that the appetite for opium was located in the kidneys and liver. Our next object was to find a specific for restoring those organs to health. The physicians, much against their code, addressed their attention to a certain remedy and became thoroughly convinced on its scientific merits alone that it was the only one that could be relied upon in every case of disordered kidneys and liver. I thereupon began using it and, supplementing it with my own special treatment, finally got fully over the habit. I may say that the most important part of the treatment is to get those organs first into good working condition, for in them the appetite originates and is sustained, and in them over ninety per cent of all other human ailments originate."

"For the last seven years this position has been taken by the proprietors of that remedy and finally it is becoming an acknowledged scientific truth among the medical profession; many of them, however, do not openly acknowledge it, and yet, knowing they have no other scientific specific, their code not allowing them to use it, they buy it upon the quiet and prescribe it in their own bottles."

"As I said before, the opium and morphine habits can never be cured until the appetite for them is routed out of the kidneys and liver. I have tried everything—experimented with everything and as the result of my studies and investigation, I can say I know nothing can accomplish this result but Warner's safe cure."

"Have others tried your treatment?"

"Yes, sir, many; and all who have followed it fully have recovered. Several of them who did not first treat their kidneys and liver for six or eight weeks, as I advised them, completely failed. This form of treatment is always insisted upon for all patients, whether treated by mail or at the Loveland Opium Institute, and supplemented by our special private treatment, it always cures."

Mr. Wilson stands very high wherever known. His experience is only another proof of the wonderful and conceded power of Warner's safe cure over all diseases of the kidneys, liver and blood, and the diseases caused by derangements of those organs. We may say that it is very flattering to the proprietors of Warner's safe cure that it has received the highest medical endorsement and, after persistent study, it is admitted by scientists that there is nothing in materia medica for the restoration of those great organs that equals it in power. We take pleasure in publishing the above statements coming from so reliable a source as Mr. Wilson and confirming by personal experience what we have time and again published in our columns. We also extend to the proprietors our hearty congratulations on the results wrought.

The Oft Told Story

Of the peculiar medicinal merits of Hood's Sarsaparilla is fully confirmed by the voluntary testimony of thousands who have tried it. Peculiar in the combination, proportion, and preparation of its ingredients, peculiar in the extreme care with which it is put up, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures where other preparations entirely fail. Peculiar in the unequal good name it has made at home, which is a "tower of strength abroad," peculiar in the phenomenal sales it has attained, Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most popular and successful medicine before the public to-day for purifying the blood, giving strength, and creating an appetite. Give it a trial. Be sure to get Hood's.

"I suffered from wakefulness and low spirits, and also had eczema on the back of my head and neck, which was very annoying. I took one bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and I have received so much benefit that I am very grateful, and I am always glad to speak a good word for Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. J. S. BLOOD AT BELFAST.

The Merciless Mob Continues Its Murderous Work.

Another Night of Terror—Thieves and Thugs Compose the Bloodthirsty Throng.

BELFAST, June 11.—The fighting between the Orange mob and the police last night, was probably the most desperate since the commencement of the trouble. All night long the mob fought the police, and the latter had hard work in several conflicts with desperate rioters to hold their ground, but they finally, in almost every instance, succeeded in scattering the rioters. The mob for the most part consisted of the lowest class of ruffians obtainable in the city. The greatest damage last night was done in the vicinity of the Shank Hill and York Roads. The rioters fought in these places with the desperation of madmen. Although the police charged on them several times with fixed bayonets, the mob held its ground and finally rallied in force and steadily beat back the police. In retreating, as a last resort to disperse the mob, the police fired several volleys of buckshot into its ranks, but despite the fact that several of its members fell, the mob pressed on and completely routed the police. The mob then held possession of both roads until 2:30 this morning, pillaging and wrecking houses and stores in a most wanton way. When they had tired of their efforts the rioters dispersed. In opposing the police the mob used stones weighing from fifteen to twenty pounds and numerous small arms. The fiends even attacked the firemen who had been called out to battle with the flames which were consuming several buildings fired by the rioters. They stoned the firemen whenever they got within reach and greatly retarded them in the work of quenching the flames. Dozens of eye witnesses state that the mob was composed of thieves and thugs, who looted private dwellings, stores, etc., and carried off all valuables they could. Many of them could be seen struggling off in the darkness with bundles of all kinds, composed of their ill-gotten gains. The Catholic residents are in a state of terror bordering on frenzy, and are afraid to venture abroad, even to purchase the necessaries of life. Scores of Catholics were shot down last evening by the blood thirsty rioters. Ten were admitted to the hospitals to-day for treatment. Comparative quiet reigned this morning, but fears are entertained that the rioting will be renewed during the funerals of the victims.

Frightened by Fenians.

OTTAWA, ONT., June 11.—The report that Fenians, owing to the defeat of the Home Rule bill, contemplated an attack on the Canadian frontier, has created great excitement here. Several members of the militia force in this city attached significance to it, owing to the hurried visit paid to the militia department yesterday by Lieutenant-Colonel Straubenzie, Adjutant-General of the Fifth Military District, with head-quarters at Montreal. The latter gentleman escaped the interviewers, and after accomplishing his business returned home by the evening train. The intelligence of the alleged plans of the invaders was given by an officer from a frontier county, who came to Montreal and stated that he had incontestable evidence to the effect that the Fenians were hard at work drilling for a raid, in which they were to be assisted by the aggrieved fishermen of Maine. Lieutenant-Colonel Panet, Deputy Minister of Militia, said that he had not heard of the threatened action. "I am not disposed to attach much credence to such a story," remarked the colonel; "however, if they come," he added, with a grim smile, "they will be given a warm reception. In the first place, we were never better prepared. Thousands of men under our present system could be called out on a few hour's notice, supplies are plentiful and every thing is in readiness from the Gatling gun downward." "Is there a likelihood of trouble later on?" "I do not know, but think not. You must remember we have England at our back. She is a foe not to be despised, even by America."

He Read the Dime Novel Too Much.

MADISON, WIS., June 11.—A young bachelor farmer named Wm. Ross, who is an inveterate reader of sensational literature, has been arrested and lodged in jail for highway robbery. Ross lives near Dano Station, and several nights ago entered the station equipped with sombrero, mask and spurs and compelled the agent to deliver up the contents of his money drawer. The agent recognized Ross' voice and had him arrested.

White Man Murdered By a Negro.

EVANSVILLE, IND., June 11.—At Elizabethtown, Ill., about 10 o'clock last night, a negro, named Bill Jackson, shot and killed a white man, named Williams, who was watchman on a barge lying at that place. Both men were intoxicated. The citizens are greatly incensed over the affair, this being the third murder in that village during the last three months. A lynching is expected.

No More Flowers at Funerals.

ST. PAUL, MINN., June 11.—It has been announced at the cathedral here that flowers will no longer be allowed at funerals. Among the reasons given are those that many of the designs used at the funerals are apt to be any thing but Catholic in their meaning, and money is apt to be squandered in useless and un-Catholic display which too often is badly needed for the necessaries of life.

Seven Hundred Rioters Arrested.

PESTH, June 11.—The crowds reassembled in the streets to-night, and when the police commanded them to disperse they were greeted with howls of derision. At a given signal troops were advanced from the side streets, surrounded the rioters, and arrested 700 of them. Many have since been released, but the ringleaders are held in prison.

Gored to Death.

EFFINGHAM, ILL., June 11.—Mrs. Henry Topp, residing four miles northwest of this city, was killed this morning by a ferocious bull, which she was trying to drive out of the barnyard. She was gored in the abdomen, and lived only about one hour. She was about fifty years old, and leaves a husband and five children.

Judge Lynch Hard at Work.

FORT KEOGH, MONT., June 11.—A dispatch from Limestone, Idaho, says that four noted horsethieves who had been in the neighborhood for some time, were seized by a party of vigilantes Tuesday night and hanged.

The Week's Failures.

NEW YORK, June 11.—The business failures occurring throughout the country during the last seven days, as reported to R. G. Dun & Co., number for the United States 180, and for Canada 29, or a total of 209 failures, as compared with a total of 187 last week and 181 the week previous to the last.

Incorporation of Trades Unions.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—The U. S. Senate bill to incorporate trades unions now only awaits the President's signature in order to become a law.

Deadheads Mourn.

CHICAGO, June 11.—On and after August 1 the seven principal theaters of the city will abandon all manner of window advertising and lithographs. This action on the part of the managers is taken because the highly and multi-colored lithograph is no longer a "drawing card," and because they will not be given room in windows without two seats a week being allowed for the privilege of placing them therein. It will cut off an average of 3,000 deadheads a week.

Court-House Burned.

LITCHFIELD, CT., June 11.—The Court-house and a number of business buildings were burned to-day; loss, $200,000; insurance about half.

CURED BY FAITH.

The Remarkable Recovery of a Young Woman Who Had Been Two Years in Bed.

MATTOON, ILL., June 13.—A remarkable case of faith cure has been effected near Tolono during the past week. Miss Jessie Crawford, a young lady about twenty-two years of age, has for the past two years been confined to her room, and most of the time to her bed, with spinal disease, which was the result of too close application to study while attending school. She was a student of more than ordinary ability, and was so ambitious to reach the top round of the ladder that she neglected to take recreation necessary for the preservation of her health. She has always lived a true Christian life, possessing great faith in God, and for some time past has firmly believed that her case might be cured by prayer. Thursday she requested that a number of her friends meet and pray for her recovery. The meeting took place the same evening, when fervent prayers were offered for the sick girl. On the morning following she arose while the family were at breakfast, dressed herself, went down stairs, making the first step taken in nearly two years, and entered the dining room. The astonishment and joy of the family were unbounded at her sudden recovery, for she seemed perfectly well. Saturday she paid a visit to a friend, and to-day attended church, to the great surprise of her friends who had not already heard of her regained health.

NEW FISHERIES TROUBLE.

Pound-Net Men From Ohio Invading Pennsylvania Waters—A Halt Called.

ERIE, PA., June 13.—A legal contest of large proportions will be commenced here to-morrow between the authorities of Pennsylvania and the pound-net fishermen, which will most likely drive an interest worth $200,000 from the waters of Lake Erie bordering on Pennsylvania. The action is commenced by Attorney-General Cassidy, of Pennsylvania, who alleges that the pound-net fishermen, mostly from Ohio, have monopolized an inherent right of all citizens to fish in waters of Lake Erie, are a common nuisance, obstructing navigation and destroying unmarketable fish indiscriminately. The pound-net fisheries cover thirty-three acres, and through their immensity have now forced the gill-net fishermen, an interest worth $1,000,000, out of the trade, but have almost depopulated the waters of Lake Erie at this port of game fish. Great indignation exists among citizens against the pound-net men. The latter have armed forces watching their acts. The courts will be asked to restrain the pound-net men from fishing in Pennsylvania waters.

A GIGANTIC SCHEME.

Texas Cattlemen form an Organization for the Purpose of Sinking Wells in the Drouth Districts.

CORPUS CHRISTI, TEX., June 13.—Cattlemen in this section, profiting by dear experience, resulting from the recent disastrous drouth, have organized an association with a common fund, for the purpose of sinking wells at regular intervals on the vast pastures lying west of here to the Rio Grande. The undertaking is gigantic, but the value of such wells can be estimated at millions of dollars. A dozen wells have already been dug and good water found, at an average depth of forty feet. As the diggers get further west it is calculated that artesian wells will have to be sunk. Leading cattle and sheepmen of this section regard it as only a question of a few years before the great flocks and herds in Presidio and far Western Texas will be watered by artesian wells. An unusual number of horses are passing northward, through Collin County, this season, for Northern markets. The output of horses is estimated at double the number of the previous years. This ought to make horses cheap at Chicago, St. Louis and the East.

A WOMAN'S GOOD LUCK.

Mrs. Vining, of St. Louis, To Be Paid One Million Dollars from the French Claims.

ST. LOUIS, June 13.—Mrs. Samuel L. Vining, residing at No. 3613 St. Louis avenue, has received from Secretary of State Bayard information to the effect that she is about to receive from the United States Treasurer $1,000,000 awarded by the Court of Claims under the terms of the French spoliation bill. Mrs. Vining has prudently retained possession of her claim during all the uncertainty of its ever being paid, and now congratulates herself that she has not disposed of it, as some others have theirs, for what shrewd lawyers were willing to give.

Mobbing a Catholic Apostate.

WILKESBARRE, PA., June 13.—John Daley, who recently abjured Catholicism, attempted to preach in River Park this afternoon, but was prevented by a mob of 3,000, including some of the roughest element of the mining region, who assailed him with a view of throwing him into the Susquehanna river. Had it not been for the interposition of the police, who were present in strong force, Daley would doubtless have been seriously injured, if not killed. He was finally escorted home by officers, followed by an infuriated mob, who made violent efforts to lay hands upon him. Daley attempted to preach at the same place last Sunday, but was prevented.

King Ludwig's Deposition Regretted.

MUNICH, June 13.—King Ludwig to-day took his departure for Berg Castle, on Lake Starnberg. The scenes along the route of the journey were very affecting. The peasants knelt in the roadways weeping. The King responded to their greetings mournfully, but kindly. He looked pale and weary. The utmost precautions have been taken to prevent him from committing suicide.

Going to Enforce the Laws.

CINCINNATI, June 13.—The police board of this city have declared their intention of enforcing the laws against gambling and policy selling, as well as the closing of saloons at midnight.

National Salvation Army Meeting.

WEIRS, N. H., June 13.—The Salvation Army of America will hold a camp-meeting, holiness and baptismal services here ten days, commencing July 1. Major D. Howie, Division Officer for New England, will conduct the meetings. General T. E. Moore, with staff officers, including Colonel Hunter, the Highland Chief, will be present. They will occupy the Methodist Grove.

McKenzie Was Insane.

DUBLIN, June 12.—The coroner's jury in the case of Mr. McKenzie, the American Vice Consul here, who yesterday killed himself after fatally shooting his wife, rendered a verdict to-day that McKenzie was insane when he did the shooting.

Death Relieves His Sufferings.

CHICAGO, June 13.—Little Johnny Durkin, who, a few days ago, was horribly burnt in the Canal street tenement-house fire, by which his mother and seven others were cremated alive, died to-day. In addition to other injuries he had been nearly scalped by a falling timber and was scorched internally.

Must Have Married Young.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., June 13.—Minnie Probst, seventeen years of age, has applied for a divorce from her husband, aged twenty-one, charging three years of willful desertion.

A Child's Terrible Fall.

CINCINNATI, June 13.—The fourteen-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Brockel, at No. 251 East Third street, while standing on a stair near an open window tipped the chair and fell from the fourth story window to the pavement below. The baby was not instantly killed, but Dr. Hazard, who was summoned at once, says it can not live.

Relic of the Rebellion.

CAIRO, ILL., June 13.—Yesterday, at the Paducah Lumber Company's mill, the saw struck a hard substance, which was found to be an eighteen-pound shell that had been buried in the tree during the war. The fuse was cut to explode at twelve hundred yards.

FRIGHTFUL STORM.

Galveston, Texas, Becomes an Island.

For Ten Hours a Gale, Having a Speed of Fifty Miles an Hour, Sweeps Over the City.

GALVESTON, TEXAS, June 14.—A violent gale set in about sundown last evening from the east, and increased in fury until four o'clock this morning, when it was at its height, registering fifty miles an hour. At the same time torrents of rain fell, and at daybreak the water was rising rapidly all around the city. The shifting of the wind to north-east at nine o'clock saved the city from being completely inundated. The water of the bay had at this time risen so as to submerge the wharves and the lower ends of the streets. All means of communication with the mainland was cut off until afternoon. The Missouri Pacific was the first road to get a train out. Two miles of the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe railroad track, approaching the long bridge over the bay, is washed away, and it will take a week's time to repair the damage. The road will use the Missouri Pacific track meanwhile. The damage on the island, on the Gulf side, amounts to many thousand dollars. The track of the Gulf City street railway is washed away and a number of bath houses on the beach were carried away. Shipping is not seriously damaged. Large vessels took the precaution to weigh anchor and stand out to sea, and ride out the storm in safety.

ST. LOUIS, June 14.—A severe wind storm prevailed in Texas last night and early this morning, and it is feared great damage has been done. No particulars are obtainable, owing to the fact that telegraphic communication has been severed since half-past seven this morning. At that hour Galveston reported the wind blowing at the rate of sixty miles an hour. The lower part of the island on which the city of Galveston is situated was under water.

LATER.—Communication with Galveston has not yet been restored. It seems that the storm this morning swept away portions of the two bridges which span Galveston Bay, and swept away every telegraph line running into Galveston; and the city is completely cut off from railroad and telegraph communication.

KING LUDWIG.

Bavaria's Mad Monarch, Ends His Erratic Career by a Leap Into the Lake.

MUNICH, June 14.—Ludwig II, who was recently deposed from the Bavarian throne, committed suicide at 6 o'clock yesterday evening, while his attendants were momentarily off their guard. The King was promenading in the park surrounding Berg Castle. Dr. Gudden, the attending physician, was also in the park, watching the patient. The King, awaiting a favorable moment, made a dash for Lake Sternberg, on which the Castle grounds are situated, and threw himself into the water. He was almost instantly missed by the doctor, who immediately gave the alarm and dashed off after his royal charge. The latter, however, reached the lake before any one could intercept him, and when the doctor had reached the edge of the lake the King was struggling in the water. The doctor sprang into the lake in hopes of rescuing the drowning sovereign, and in the desperate struggle which ensued both King and physician went down and were seen no more.

A Dishonest Official's Sentence.

CINCINNATI, June 14.—Fred Herrmann, a City Infirmary boodler, received his sentence in Judge Maxwell's court. Herrmann was brought in a hack from some unknown spot, and appeared before His Honor ready to enter a plea to the six indictments found against him. He pleaded guilty to them all unconditionally. The court thereupon proceeded to sentence him. He was given two years in the penitentiary for each offense, making the term of his imprisonment twelve years. The words of the sentence were hardly uttered when his attorneys, Messrs. Goodman and Miller, served notice upon Prosecutor Pugh that they would apply to the Governor for a pardon.

Horrible Experience in an Asylum.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., June 15.—Dr. A. J. Houghton, of Knox County, Ind., claims that he was for ten months confined in the public insane asylum, at Buffalo, N. Y., and cruelly treated. He was returned to the Indiana Hospital as a dangerous man, but since his arrival has shown himself to be not only not dangerous but of sane mind, and has been sent to his home.

An Editor Shot.

KANSAS CITY, MO., June 14.—W. A. Carlile, an attorney, fired five shots at Dr. Morrison Munford, proprietor of the Times, resulting in the wounding of Dr. Munford and two other passengers. Carlile claims that the Times published articles traducing him.

The Effect of Natural Gas.

PITTSBURGH, June 14.—The mines along the Monongahela river are mostly shut down, and unless there should be a rise in the river, all will be idle by the end of the week. From 5,000,000 to 6,000,000 bushels of coal are now ready to be sent out on the first water.

Another Victim of the Riot.

CHICAGO, June 14.—Nels Hansen, a police officer injured in the Anarchist riot, died to-day after great suffering. Transfusion of blood—four ounces from his brother-in-law's arm—was tried as a last resort, but without avail.

A City in Ashes.

TORONTO, June 14.—The following telegram has just been received.

"NEW WESTMINSTER, B. C., June 14.—To the Mayor of Toronto: Vancouver is in ashes. Three thousand people homeless. Please send us aid at once.

"M. A. MCLEAN, Mayor."

Injured at a Fire.

CHICAGO, June 14.—Payne, Perrin & Menzies' mattress factory burned to-day. Five female employes were injured by jumping from the windows—one fatally.

Drowned on a Sunday Fishing Trip.

HAZLETON, PA., June 14.—Stanley Jacobs and Thomas Dolan were drowned yesterday in Pond Lake while on a fishing excursion.

The Argentine's President.

BUENOS AYRES, June 14.—Juarez Selman has been elected President of the Argentine Republic.

—The story goes that a manufacturer in a Massachusetts town paid to his army of employes seven hundred bright, crisp ten-dollar bills. Each man got one with his pay. They were all marked so as to be recognized. By Tuesday 410 of them had been deposited in the banks of the city by saloon-keepers. When the facts became known to the workmen they organized a temperance society.—Chicago Times.

—Four men were tried for larceny in Dooley County, Ga., last week. One was convicted, and the other three, who were cleared by a technicality, were notified by the citizens to leave town forthwith. One of them lingered too long and was taken into the swamp and flogged unmercifully.

—In the Peshawur Cemetery, in India, is the following amusing epitaph: "Sacred to the memory of Rev. ——, missionary, aged —, murdered by his chowkidar. 'Well done, thou good and faithful servant.'"

—In England the Speaker of the House of Commons is the first commoner of the kingdom, and always receives a peerage when he resigns, that he may not step back into the ranks.

A WATERSPOUT.

Destructive Storm in North Carolina—Brooks Become Raging Rivers—Houses and Stock Swept Away and Crops Destroyed.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., June 10.—A water-spout burst over Marshall yesterday afternoon and the most terrific rain fell upon the surrounding country that has been witnessed within the memory of the oldest inhabitant. Houses fell before the advancing flood, cattle were swept away and drowned and the crops throughout the region roundabout were destroyed. A puny stream, known as Rugby Run, ordinarily three or four feet wide, became a raging river, overflowing its banks and sweeping away every thing movable that came within its reach. Fortunately no loss of life is reported. One of the most exciting incidents of the storm was the narrow escape of a train filled with passengers. Two or three small breaks in the track had occurred before the train reached Asheville, but by proceeding cautiously they had been passed in safety. At Asheville your correspondent boarded the train. It was then just 6 o'clock, and the rain was pouring down in torrents. Progress was slow, the engineer narrowly scanning every foot of the track ahead before trusting the train to it. Just before reaching Marshall, however, a part of the track slipped away almost in front of the advancing train. The brakes were instantly applied and the train was brought to a standstill only just in time. A consultation by the train officers was held, and it was decided to return to the last station. Here, however, a fresh difficulty occurred. A mountain stream, which five minutes before the train had crossed in safety, was now a raging torrent, piling driftwood, trees, house timbers and huge bowlders upon the track in hopeless confusion. The road bed was on the margin of the river, the turnpike road being on the other side, the mountain rising behind it. On the river side the embankment was rapidly crumbling away and train officials and passengers fled in consternation. Already the track was covered and the water was rising at the rate of six inches a minute. Heavy logs were thrown, crashing against the sides of the cars, threatening to push them from the track. Volunteers were called for, and there was a generous response, all hands doing their best to clear away the obstructions. This done, the engineer, Mr. Clark, bravely drove the train through the waters over a track that was actually melting away to a place of safety. Captain Murphy, the conductor, said afterward that he had never spent such a moment of danger in all his years of railway experience.

RISEN FROM THE DEAD.

Left for Dead in a Vault and Found Alive Eight Days After—A Strange Story.

TOLEDO, O., June 10.—A most remarkable story was made public to-day, to this effect: A young Irishman named McIntyre, of Detroit, married a young lady of this city named Cunningham. He died in Detroit a few days ago, and his remains were placed in a vault. Eight days later his uncle visited the vault to remove the body for interment, when he was horrified to see McIntyre sitting upon his coffin very pale and weak. His hands were terribly lacerated and bleeding from breaking out of the coffin through the glass plate over his face. He was removed to his uncle's residence, and as soon as able to travel came here to see his wife, who had returned to her father's house after his supposed death. She was at first terribly frightened at meeting him, veritably one risen from the dead. So runs the story, which became public to-day. Reporters visited the house, but the family drove them away, refusing to say anything about the case. The first one to call saw McIntyre himself, looking pale and as if just recovering from illness, but as soon as he discovered the reporter's mission he abruptly left the room, without answering any questions. The mysterious conduct of the family is believed to indicate that the story is true.

Mysterious Subterranean Movement.

WILKESBARRE, PA., June 10.—At Parsons at a late hour last night the people were terrified by what is supposed to have been an explosion of gas in the Mineral Spring Mine of the Lehigh Coal Company. Many persons living within a short distance of the mine were hurled about in their homes, and they thought for a moment that an earthquake had occurred. A large number of houses in the vicinity of the mine were badly shaken, and a great many windows were shattered. The surface of the ground in the vicinity of the Philadelphia and Reading depot has fallen fully two feet, and is still sinking. Three houses belonging to one man about three hundred feet from the mine were moved a surprising distance from their original position. No lives were lost. Some miners think there was no explosion, and that the concussion was caused by a rush of air due to an extensive cave in.

Highbinders Must Hang.

ST. LOUIS, June 10.—Mr. Fauntleroy, of the counsel for the six Chinese Highbinders, convicted last winter of the murder of Lou. Johnson, a Chinese detective who had furnished the authorities with information which convicted the Highbinders of gambling and keeping opium dens, and of enticing strangers thither and then robbing them, moved that they be granted a new trial. The Judge refused to give them a hearing, and they will soon be sentenced to be hanged.

Cider Knocked Out.

MATTOON, ILL., June 10.—The Windsor City Council places a high estimate on the intoxicating qualities of cider, hard or sweet, requiring a license of $1,000 per annum to retail it in that town. Two saloons were licensed in Windsor last year, but the temperance people elected a majority of the board last spring, and they elevated the fee to such a notch as to prohibit the sale of intoxicants in the town.

Embezzler Released by Masked Men.

CALAIS, ME., June 10.—Three masked men presented themselves at the station-house last night, overpowered the officer in charge at the point of a revolver, released William Buckley, who was held under a charge of embezzlement on a Lynn (Mass.) warrant, and escaped with him to the provinces. Buckley is the man who was recently enticed across the line and arrested by an American detective.

Theater Burned.

TONAWANDA, N. Y., June 10.—The Mozart theater and a dozen small buildings were destroyed by fire to-day; loss $30,000. The remains of an unknown man were found in the ruins.

Don't Want to Die Yet.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Frederick Ellison, of Indiana, recently appointed U. S. Consul at Asuncion, Paraguay, has tendered his resignation, and it has been accepted. Mr. Ellison explains that since his confirmation he has understood from friends that Asuncion is a very unhealthy place, and that he would probably not live over two or three weeks if he went there.

Destructive Earthquake.

LONDON, June 10.—Advices from Auckland, New Zealand, state that at Tarawera there has been a volcanic eruption preceded by an earthquake. Many natives and Europeans perished.

A Home for Printers.

PITTSBURGH, PA., June 10.—The International Typographical Union, in to-day's session, considered the matter of nine hours as a day's work, and referred it to subordinate lodges, to be voted on between February and April next year. The Childs and Drexel donation of $10,000 is to be used as a nucleus around which to gather $50,000 for the building in Philadelphia of a fine hall to be known as the home of the craft.

Not Guilty.

ST. LOUIS, June 10.—The jury in the cases of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company against the thirteen employes active in the late Southwestern railroad strike returned a verdict of not guilty.

XLIXTH CONGRESS.

First Session.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—SENATE.—A bill creating an additional Secretary of the Treasury was reported and placed on the calendar. Mr. Dawes offered a resolution calling upon the Secretary of the Treasury for all papers and information connected with the extension of the bonded period on whisky. Consideration of the bill for the relief of the Annapolis cadets was then resumed, Mr. Hale continuing his remarks in opposition. A motion to lay the bill on the table was finally carried by a viva voce vote. The Senate then proceeded with bills on the private calendar. Among the measures passed were the following: A bill to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to settle claims of the State of Florida made in suppressing Indian hostilities. The bill was afterward reconsidered for the purpose of amendment. A bill for the appointment of a commission to investigate alleged discoveries of the specific causes of yellow fever. The Senate refused to pass a bill authorizing Lieutenant Mannix to accept a decoration from the Emperor of China for acting as torpedo instructor.

HOUSE.—A Senate bill was passed for the relief of Chester A. Arthur and Wm. H. Robertson, late Collectors of Customs for New York. This measure cancels technical deficiencies in their accounts with the Government. Mr. Kelley called up as a privileged question the motion submitted by him yesterday to expunge from the record the speech of Mr. Wheeler, of Alabama, upon E. M. Stanton. After a defense of the War Secretary by Mr. Kelley, the resolution was referred to the Committee on Rules. The Legislative appropriation bill was taken up. The Union Pacific extension bill being a continuing special order, its friends did not try to get a vote to-day. Speeches were made on the civil service amendment until 5 p. m., when the House adjourned.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—SENATE.—After routine business, bills on the calendar were considered under the five-minute rule. The bill to repeal the Civil Service law was called up, but on a motion to postpone it indefinitely was objected to, and the matter went over. The bill providing for the purchase of the portrait of General George H. Thomas, painted by General Price, was passed, together with a number of other measures. The Senate adjourned at 5 p. m.

HOUSE.—The legislative appropriation bill was considered in general debate, continuing the discussion of yesterday on the civil service amendment. At 4:50 o'clock the general debate was closed by agreement. The reading of the bill was then commenced. Mr. Morrison raised the point of order against the words "in full compensation" where they occurred in the general appropriation clause.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—SENATE.—After routine business, Mr. Beck called up his bill to prohibit members of Congress from accepting retainers from railroad companies which have received subsidies or land grants from Congress. It was passed without reference to any committee by a vote of 37 to 11. The agricultural bill was then taken up and passed substantially as it came from the committee. Mr. McPherson introduced a bill to increase the naval establishment, appropriating $6,425,000. The Northern Pacific forfeiture bill was laid before the Senate. Mr. Riddleberger insisted on a vote on the question of taking up his resolution against executive sessions. The Senate refused to take it up—yeas 8, nays 32. Mr. Cockrell offered an amendment to the forfeiture bill forfeiting all lands not earned within the time required by the granting act. The bill and amendment were then ordered printed. On motion of Mr. Hawley, it was agreed to reconsider the vote on Senator Beck's bill, passed earlier in the day.

HOUSE.—The Tennessee members consumed over an hour discussing the alleged misappropriation of school funds by Senator Harris when that gentleman was Governor of the State. The matter was finally dropped, and after several bills had been reported from committees the Legislative Appropriation bill was taken up. A point of order that the rules of the House prohibiting the reduction of salaries already established was sustained by the Chair. Nine of the 106 pages of the bill had been considered up to 6 o'clock, when the House adjourned.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—SENATE.—The Northern Pacific forfeiture bill was taken up. Mr. George spoke at length against the road. The army appropriation bill was taken up and placed on the calendar. Mr. Sherman opposed the Northern Pacific forfeiture where the company had completed its road. Mr. Eustis considered the bill only a nominal forfeiture. At 4:40 the bill went over until to-morrow. Mr. Spooner announced the death of Representative Rankin, of Mississippi. At 5 p. m. the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE.—The Senate bill to legalize the incorporation of trades unions was passed. The Atlantic and Pacific land forfeiture bill was reported with the Senate amendments. Concurrence was moved, but no action was taken. The matter went over to Monday. The legislative bill was then taken up. An amendment providing that none of the contingent funds shall be used in paying the funeral expenses of members was rejected—yeas 12, nays 53. The clause appropriating for the salary of the President having been reached, Mr. Bayne (Pa.) offered an amendment, providing that none of the money should be paid until the civil service rules shall have been changed as recommended by the committee on appropriations. The point of order was raised, and Mr. Findlay and Mr. Compton engaged in a controversy on Maryland politics. The amendment was ruled out of order. The civil service amendment having been reached, Mr. Morrison made a point of order against it that it changed the rules of the commission. Pending the decision the committee rose. Mr. Morrison gave notice he would call up his tariff bill Thursday. Mr. McKinley gave notice on behalf of the opponents of the bill that he would oppose its consideration. A recess was taken at 5 o'clock until 8:30, the evening session being for the consideration of the appropriation bill. General debate was indulged in until late in the evening, all points of order being passed over.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—SENATE.—Mr. Whitthorne spoke in favor of Frye's bill to promote the prosperity of American Nations. The Northern Pacific forfeiture bill was taken up, but laid aside for the army appropriation bill, which was passed as it came from the House. The Senate then adjourned at 1:55 p. m., leaving the Northern Pacific bill the unfinished business for Monday.

HOUSE.—Bills were reported for the erection of monuments to Anthony Wayne and Wm. Penn. The legislative appropriation bill was taken up and considered by sections. The chair sustained the point of order made against the provision attached to the civil service clause requiring the Commission to amend its regulations. At 5 o'clock the House took a recess until 8 o'clock, the night session being for the consideration of pension bills.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—SENATE.—Consideration of the Northern Pacific land forfeiture bill was resumed, Mr. McCall having the floor. Messrs. Maxey, Dolph, Van Wyck, Brown and George followed. Mr. Plumb gave notice that on Friday next he would call up the conference report on the post-office appropriation bill. At six o'clock the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE.—The Senate amendments to the Atlantic and Pacific land forfeiture bill were concurred in. Under the call of States a number of bills and resolutions were introduced. Business from the District of Columbia Committee was the regular order under the rules, and measures were passed incorporating the Young Women's Christian Home, prohibiting pool selling and book making in the District. The bill to incorporate the Washington Cabin Railway Company, of the District of Columbia, was taken from the calendar and talked to death, the hour of adjournment having arrived before a vote could be taken.

—A mining engineer wants mining companies to be compelled by law to put down bore holes, from the surface of the ground, at greater or less intervals over the entire course of mines. The holes would not be very expensive to put down, and could be sunk with any prospecting well or oil rig. They should be large enough to contain a tube two or three inches in diameter, with good valves at each end. This plan, he thinks, would do away with part of the risk that miners undergo from being imprisoned by a cave-in.—Philadelphia Press.

—Georgie is four years old. One day the youngster had been taken with a slight attack of prevarication, and, wishing to impress upon his infantile understanding the sinfulness of telling fibs, the father related the story about George Washington and his little hatchet, closing with the remark that George Washington was a good boy and never told a lie. The child sat in deep thought a moment and then said: "Papa, tooden't he talk?"—Boston Record.

THE COMMONWEALTH.

Louisville Leaf Tobacco Market.

The market has not developed any important change of feature or tendency. There has been a good healthy demand for both Burley and dark and heavy tobaccos, and this has extended to all the kinds and grades on offer. Planting has made better progress, and the state of planting is to-day not far behind the average. The Clarksville and western districts have probably about 70 per cent. of the crop planted, the Green river district about 35@40 per cent., the Ohio river districts about 25@30 per cent., and the districts east of Louisville about 35@40 per cent. Showery spells are reported from several sections of the State. There are opinions and predictions about a large voluntary reduction of planting, but while urgently advising that policy we shall not believe that it is to be adopted in practice until the physical evidence shall appear. We quote 1884 tobaccos as follows for full weight packages:

AT Louisville, the other morning, fire was discovered in that portion of the new Grand Theater behind the stage. The canvas and oil of the scenes and stage settings burned fiercely, and in five minutes after the discovery of the fire the entire stage was burning furiously. An alarm was sent in but the engines that responded were unable to do anything toward extinguishing the conflagration, which by this time covered all of the middle of the block between Third and Fourth, Jefferson and Green streets. A second alarm was turned in, but the entire theater was then on fire and resisted the greatest efforts of the firemen. The blaze spread to the rear of the saloons fronting on Green and Jefferson streets, and at daybreak the entire center of the square was a glowing mess of red-hot metal and blazing wood. Enough engines were by this time on the spot, and the firemen directed their efforts to stopping the spread of the flames. The block was occupied by Joseph Camozzi, Hoke & Hughes, Brinkworth's restaurant, J. R. Gotel's lottery office and the Kentucky School of Medicine. The theater was in the rear of these. All of the interior of the Grand Theater, the rear of the building occupied by the Kentucky School of Medicine, the restaurant on Green street, the rear of Denunzio's fruit store and the barber-shop on Jefferson street were burned out, and serious damage was done to the other stores on both Green and Jefferson streets. The theater was leased to the Whallen Brothers about four years ago, and was one of the finest in the West or South. The block was valued at $100,000, and is a complete loss, the Green street front, which was occupied by the Medical College, being all that remains standing. At 5 o'clock the flames broke out with renewed vigor in the Medical College building, and at the Jefferson street side of the theater. The roofs of all the burned structures fell in, and the block was threatened with destruction. Shortly after 5 a. m. the fire was got under control. The new Grand Theater had just closed for the season, and will be rebuilt at once, so that no next season's dates will be canceled.

CONGRESSMAN TOM ROBERTSON succeeded in getting a little Kentucky bill through the House, a few days ago, by unanimous consent. It is to refund to Bush & Grigsby, distillers in Washington County, $1,100 internal revenue taxes improperly assessed against them and collected in 1874. Their distillery fell short of the minimum on account of accidents, and the assessment was enforced without taking the accident into account. The distillers failed to apply for relief within the two years allowed by law, and the fund was covered into the treasury, from which now it can only be drawn by act of Congress. A duplicate bill is pending in the Senate with a favorable report from the Finance Committee.

THE tobacco men of Louisville are at work on a great scheme to build an immense union tobacco warehouse at the corner of Thirteenth and High streets. Mr. W. T. Grant conceived the idea, and, with several others, have purchased a lot, 200 by 225 feet. The building will have a capacity of ten thousand hogsheads, and will be a handsome and durable structure. It is proposed to build steam elevators on the river, so that tobacco can be placed in the warehouse direct from the river elevators. The idea has been enthusiastically received by many of the tobacco buyers, and will be put in substantial shape at once.

PAT. CONNIFF, of Louisville, died at Lebanon, the other morning at the home of his brother, Thomas Conniff, from the effect of injuries received. He was engaged in the yard of the L. and N. railroad, and undertook to throw a switch before an approaching locomotive. He was a little too late; the engine struck the rail and the lever of the switch, rebounding, struck Conniff across the stomach, inflicting injuries which proved fatal.

MISS MARY BOAZ, a young lady who lived with her father, a short distance from Owingsville, received a severe electric shock from a bolt of lightning which struck a tree a short distance in front of the door in which she was sitting, sewing, on the evening of the 8th inst. She lingered for several days, when she died. A doctor was called to attend her, but thought at the time she had not been seriously hurt.

THE lost ring story comes to hand as usual. This time the scene is laid in Kentucky, where five years ago Wm. Howe, of Moorefield, lost his sister's ring while fishing in a pond. Not long ago he went shooting bull frogs in the same pond, and while cutting off the hind legs of a big one that he had shot, what should he see protruding from the bullet wound in the side of the victim but his sister's long lost ring, with identifying inscription still quite legible.

THE Greenwood campaign is ended. All the troops there have returned home. No trouble is anticipated from the miners.

LOUIS ZIEGLER, son of Balser Ziegler, proprietor of the Ten Mile House, on the Alexandria pike near Newport, met with a severe and painful accident a few days ago. While out coon hunting with his brother he was in the act of passing a revolver to the latter, who was up a tree, when the weapon was discharged, the ball entering his hip and passing down lodged in the leg. The ball has not as yet been recovered.

Two women, whose combined ages are one hundred and eighty-one years were arrested for fighting, in Louisville, the other morning. One was Mrs. Walters, aged seventy-seven, and the other Mrs. Raphael, a somewhat famous character because of her great age of one hundred and four years. The old ladies live in the same house and have numerous squabbles. They were released upon their own recognizance.

A UNITED PEOPLE.

The Broad and Brotherly Sentiment Which Pervades Postmaster-General Vilas' Grand Oration on Decoration Day Honor to the Forgiving, Brave Conquerors and Honor to the Brave Conquered—Tender Tributes to Grant, McClellan and Hancock.

President Cleveland and his Cabinet attended the meeting at the Academy of Music, New York, which was held upon Decoration Day. Postmaster-General Vilas delivering an affecting, broad-minded and brilliant oration, from which the following extracts are selected:

"Mr. President, Comrades of the War, Ladies and Gentlemen: The day has been taken from our eager labors for the future to testify our reverence for the past. In decorous parades, with music and with banners, with solemn pomp and show, amid every circumstance of honor, the people of the Nation have repaired to hallowed graves and celebrated with the tender rite of flowers the memory of the Nation's saviors. And now that we are gathered by prayer, by song and speech to fittingly finish our share in the honored ceremonial, the spirit of the day rules the thought and points the theme. A quarter of a century has sunk into the grave of time since the dread alarm of civil war rang through our land. A new era has begun, a new generation is upon the stage of life. You see now everywhere, in all your daily walks, active men, whose hands are on the levers of affairs, who carry no useless memory of the events of those direful years. By many a fireside, amid circles of blooming children, sit happy mothers who can tell of the great war but as a troublous affrightment of their childhood. Of our present population, more, by millions, were in that period not existent here or possess no remembrance of its scenes, than all, of every class and age, then within the compass of the Union. History has foreclosed upon your great achievements, comrades, and to the Nation of to-day they are as a tale to be told. Swiftly, oh! how swiftly, do the actors of that mighty drama now fall from the column of living men. Yet a few years more, and none shall be to bear personal witness to the children of the great Republic of the trying hours of her deliverance.

"It is a duty and a privilege of two-fold value to recount and emphasize the features of the patriotism, purposes and grand results by which our Union soldiers gained their title to the veneration of their countrymen and the world; first, to them, in the keeping of their rightful glory bright and pure; and then to living men and to our children, by emulous quickening and better understanding of the love and duty due our country.

"It is not from their soldiership alone that the sheen of their renown is so bright; their labors, privations and dreadful sufferings, their valorous courage and gallant deeds in arms, for these were not distinctive in their ennoblement. These they shared with their adversaries, whose soldiership, approved on many a hard-fought and bloody field, worthily competes for its equal place on the page of military fame. Beyond the soldier's qualities, though unsurpassed in them, the men who wrought by arms the salvation of this Government raise nobler claim to gratitude and remembrance in the unselfish chivalric spirit of their sacrifice for the liberty and progress of man, and in the vast, far-reaching benefits bestowed by them on their countrymen. Their meed of praise rests on their acceptance of conditions never before imposed in human affairs; conditions exigent of more generous, self-forgetting national and personal sacrifice—for fruits to be gathered chiefly by other men in after times—than liberty or philanthropy ever demanded, or it had entered into the heart of man to conceive could be offered by any numerous, wide spread people to such a cause alone. In the calm of history, now that the clouds of contemporaneous turmoil have disappeared, we may distinguish, in clear view, 'the height of the great argument' to which their souls responded * * * * * *

"I have spoken of these facts in the Nation's history as peculiar titles of honor to the soldiers of the Union. But, comrades, it would be false as vain-glorious to arrogate as theirs alone any feature of these honors. They are the property of the Nation. Patriotism, high purpose, and great sacrifices in the time of war were shared by all, however varying in degree. And for more than twenty years the outcome of results has been incumbent wholly on the patriotism and conduct of Americans as citizens and not as soldiers. Not those of the faithful States alone, let it be justly remembered, but of the South as well. Vanquished as well as victors had to bend passion's knee to duty; and to accept, not less than to bestow, forgiveness and magnanimity, requires the generous mind. The trial of temper, wisdom and character has been unexampled, but the issue has been triumphant, and the great purposes of the war have been secured by magnanimity on the one hand and honor on the other, blended in restored common national love and pride. The paramount remaining duty is fraternity and mutual human love. The best and bravest of the soldiers of the Union, and the best and bravest of the soldiers of the South, long since joined their friendly hands, honoring each other's valor, proud of their common nationality, banishing remembrance of error, uniting their spirit and pride to the traditions of the Nation, and pledging themselves to its future power and glory. They who have justified their manhood by the ordeal of battle are brave enough to trust and worthy to be trusted. In brigades and divisions they have marched off the field in this world's strife, and passed across the dark valley to the mysterious land of death. In that unknown world, if our hopes and faith for the life beyond have value, the nobility of their manhood here is assurance of their condition there, and in joyous happy union they possess the realms of bliss. Shall their children left behind pursue their earthly quarrel or accept the richer legacy of their reconciliation? The past can not be altered; the future, under God, is in our hands. The hope of that future is in union of fellowship, cemented by interest, by patriotism and by pride. Reproaches for deeds beyond redemption, for conditions gone forever; sighs for hopes once entertained, but long turned to ashes, may be worse than folly—they may become a crime. Whoever gives his voice or his example to light or fan a flame of sectional discord among this fraternal people aims at the Nation's peace and life. He has spoken treason though not dared to act it, who from the one side flings vain taunts and scoffs, the lingering demons of the past, or on the other sentimentally prates of the resurrection of the moldering mummy, the "lost cause." Let him who can, pitch his prophetic vision through the coming years over the prosperity, the grandeur of this land teeming with multiplied millions of freemen, rich in resources, enlightened by well-diffused knowledge, and happy in developed life, and as he contemplates the safely-moving train of human happiness, weigh the iniquity that would cast an obstruction on its track. Rash with enthusiasm and inexperience, we sent out our earliest body of troops as if victories in war required only a feverish desire. They soon returned in panic, and the land quivered with tremor of humiliation and fear.

"McClellan took the mob, and an army came into being never surpassed in all the ages of war. That splendid corps was his, the Army of the Potomac. From the beginning to the end it coped in constant struggle with the best trained and best led enemy. In checkered fortune, it bore the direst shocks and blows of war, but none could break its spirit or its form. Relentless in its iron purpose, at last it gained the triumph of the age and took the sword of Lee. Never more magnificent than when he led it, through all its renowned career it remained McClellan's army and loved him as its father to the end. And though cruel fate denied him but to look upon the glittering capital promised to its prowess, the glory of his army that won it will forever irradiate his name.

"And Hancock's name was also called by that dread constable who summons to the grave. The superb Hancock! The beau ideal of manhood's splendor! Fancy's figure of the fighting General! Bred in all the learning of the martial art, practiced in its exercises, in stature, port and speech, the soldier and the gentleman in lustrous perfection. His brilliant star shines in the galaxy of the heroes of the battle-field, whom from both sides history has chosen for the firmament of military fame. In that great combat on which, more than any single one beside, the Nation's safety hung, the supreme moment of decision was committed to his conduct. His command sustained the desperate assault which Pickett led, staking the battle on the issue; with bloody penalty, drove him back and won the momentous day. And there, stricken with a grievous wound, his own blood poured upon the earth. But it fell upon the roots of his renown, and among the laurels of the field of Gettysburg Hancock's springs immortal.

"Upon the rocky side of your majestic Hudson another sepulcher has been builded, an urn of mortality inclosed within it. And thither, through coming ages far beyond the stretch of human ken to tell, the patriots of ours and the great-souled of every land in unceasing pilgrimage will hold their way to feel the touch of glory there. For, in that shrine of immortality are stored the ashes of the invincible instrument of God, whose genius ruled the whirlwind of war to the salvation of the Republic. There, parted from the sight of his lamenting countrymen, the perishable form of the unconquered Grant.

"Let us pause for a brief space to view the outlines of the character and deeds which are forever to be sweetly cherished in human memory and love. In the wreaths you place upon his tomb you typify your reverent gratitude to all the heroes of the Union. Not that he was their victorious leader; but because in his own person, he was the idealization of the ideal attributes of the freeman in war, in soul, in faculties, in character, in power, in action, in personification of the Union cause, and the combination of the brightest excellences of its soldiery.

"The outbreak of the rebellion found him a plain, unpretending man, modestly pursuing an ordinary business, in the calm ambition honestly to gain the moderate money needful to simple happiness in life. He was a husband and a father; he loved his wife and children and they loved him; the pure joys of home and friends and an honorable life among his fellow men were the measure of his wishes and his hopes. Nothing else save the wisdom of such continence—an unread sign—marked his power or presaged his then impending greatness. Oh! happy land of freemen! In whose unpretentious homes, in wise contentment, despising pomp and show, live heroes and statesmen equal to any need and ready for any exigence! Whatever the perilous conjecture, whether the alarms of war demand the conquering General, or giant wrong of state the upright, fearless, puissant Chief Magistrate, lo! there is he found, Heaven-marked for choice, among the Republic's simple citizens.

"But the soul of this plain man of Illinois was tuned on the highest key of manhood. He had been instructed in the art of war at the Nation's cost, and enjoyed a subaltern's experience in its army. He recognized his duty, and instantly responded by the proffer of his services. Modest and unassuming it was the fortunate penetration of others which gave him first a regiment and then a Brigadier's commission. There followed the long and anxious months of gathering and preparation. From our bad beginning hopeful anticipation of quick result had disappeared; long and dreadful war was certain; the vastness of the territory and forces to be vanquished seemed appalling; nowhere progress made; and, though resolute of purpose, the public mind was heavily oppressed. Who, who, and where is he, who shall lead the army of our rescue? was the question which tormented thought, while clouds of doubt and gloom hung over all.

"Upon a sudden, the unexpected thunder of artillery reverberated on the sky from far-off Tennessee, and, voicing all the Nation's prayers and hope, rung the victor's demand of the unknown citizen of Galena to his country's enemy: 'Nothing but unconditional surrender. I propose to move immediately on your works.' Soon Shiloh's two days' battle came, and through the desperate and bloody turmoil of that first great field-fight Grant's unbending spirit held commanding sway, and, prophetically representing the field of the entire war, he wrought through the threatened ruin to complete victory. The country saw its desired leader now, but military pedantry and envy threw unjust toils about him, and fettered his ascendency. Never were the riches of his character more clear and useful. The true patriot, he disturbed by no clamor the cares and counsels of those above him; able to grandly lead, he was honestly subordinate; nobly patient, he wrought on for his country as best he might, and waited for his day.

"It came. Restored to command, he was pointed to Vicksburg. There lay the impregnable town, intrenched on the curving hills, defiantly and securely guarding the great highways of Confederate supply from the rich Southwest. Nature had made its access by an army from the North practically impossible, and even if successfully approached it was deemed invincible. Experts who have compared the two by observation affirm Sebastapol to have been weaker in defensibility. During intense months of trial Grant essayed to approach it with his army by every route daring ingenuity could devise. In vain. Nature lent her apparent aid to discomfit him; in truth, to press from his undaunted brain its most glorious conception. Casting off the chains of military teaching, and led by the inward light of genius, he gathered his valiant men around him, intrepidly cut loose from supply or succor, sprang suddenly across the great river into the midst of a surrounding and outnumbering enemy. He instantly struck the foe on the field of Fort Gibson, and thereby Grand Gulf fell. Then, like the rapid lightning of a fearful storm, at Raymond, at Jackson, at Champion's Hills, at the Black river, he hurled the bolts of war on this side and on that against the amazed and divided adversary, won the four battles in six days, and drove the routed fragments within their ramparts, his corralled prisoners of war.

"Having now securely re-established communication by the river, he was able to receive from the commander at Washington an order to forbear attempting the campaign he had won. Bless Heaven for the difference and the distance between the general in the closet and the general in the field! It enabled Grant to make his country a birthday gift of Vicksburg, with more guns and prisoners than ever before were yielded with a captured city. It dissevered the Confederacy, and, with Meade's concurrent victory, first gave Europe perception of the probability of Northern triumph.

"Hardly was he breathed, another herculean labor waited. Hotly they cried to him from Washington to rescue the Army of the Cumberland. Overpowered on the field of Chickamauga, it lay in Chattanooga at bay, watched and guarded by the victorious and confident enemy from the crests of the mountains above, starvation or surrender its seeming alternative. Still on crutches from a recent injury, riding sometimes on his horse and sometimes borne through dangerous paths by the arms of his men, there hastened over the rugged hills of Tennessee this small, silent man of Illinois, with the lion's heart and Minerva's brain. Immediately the front of things was changed. Rapid dispositions brought food and clothes in plenty; reinforcements obeyed his call, among them Sherman with the Army of the Tennessee. And almost before he had ceased to expect its surrender, the exultant enemy was by that beleaguered army swept from the cloudy heights of Missionary ridge and sent flying in disordered rout among the hills of Georgia. And the gate was opened for the grand campaign to Atlanta and Sherman's renowned march down to the sea.

"The man of destiny was found. Raised to supreme command, he seized the whole vast enginery of the war, and in harmonious cooperation the mighty forces responded to his will. I may not protract the story through its entrancing details. Apportioning to his great lieutenants the controversy with others, he entered the lists with Lee. The giants grappled and never parted from the fight. It was worthy of both, and stands unequaled, in modern war at least, in its deadly tenacity and ferocity. Within a year it ended and the great rebellion fell, crushed to utter, abject ruin.

"Study the timeliness and effect of his victories; the cheer of Donelson to the country's drooping spirit; what, without him, Shiloh would have proven; how, despite the objection of those beside him and the command of those above him, he drove the rending wedge of war through Vicksburg and burst the Confederacy in twain; the peril and the rescue of the armies at Knoxville and Chattanooga; consider the fate of all before him who had attempted the attack of Lee on his own familiar ground; recall the desperate need of haste to the burdened country, and the chances for the Union had the war been protracted by even a year or two; and tell me if, without Grant, the Republic's victory stood assured? If, still you say, might the Union have withstood its peril, reckon the further cost in life and wealth of at least another year of war. Bethink ye, then, who in this grand metropolis keep the keys of the country's wealth, what would now have been your comparative condition had Heaven not vouchsafed him to your needs! Does not that tomb upon the Hudson deserve from you, right soon, appropriate commemoration of the mighty dead it covers? View the colossal riches piled along your streets, the granaries of the continent's prosperity, and say if your necessity be not pressing, lest that sacred grave, in want of fitting honor, become a monument to your reproach!

"Unpretentious, but heroic in daring and fortitude, skillfully intelligent in military learning, and gifted with intuitive genius to perceive conditions and create new terms; with the inner light that truly forecasts issues, his iron resolution never failing in calm serenity and confidence—he was the true soldier of liberty. And, beyond his soldiership, he was a great and noble man. He met on equal terms half the royalty of earth, he heard the plaudits of the world, he suffered the 'extreme extremity' of contumely and false report, and never lost his self-control or broke his silence. He never failed in friendship, though he experienced the cruelest betrayal of his trust. No profane word or impure tale ever passed his lips, and grief to-day is dumb in presence of his certain glory, for to him was the promise of the great sermon: 'Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God.'

"Wrapped in the sweetest love of family, his heart was big with love of his fellow-men. He knew the spirit of the cause he led and the necessities of the victory he won. Sad pity moved him, not exultation, in that very hour when final triumph gave the finish to his martial crown. He thought not of himself, the assured idol of undying renown, but of them who bore the agony of defeat. He forbade the guns of victory to sound humiliation to their ears; and kindly counseling their future, he left their private goods to the soldiers of the ruined army and encouraged them to restore their homes. Recognizing with joy the fruition of his hope in the new era opening to his country, even in the rack of torture he spoke the supremest glory of his work to the first of the great antagonists he overcame, when he said to General Buckner: 'I have witnessed since my sickness just what I wished to see ever since the war—harmony and good feeling between the sections.' Visited with excruciating pain, mental and physical, his suffering and his patience wrung the tears of his countrymen. Even then was not Heaven with him for his greater glory? His majestic heroism brought light into the eyes of all men, and the grandeur of his character was exalted far above the clouds of calumny and misfortune. Bravely struggling with coming death, and wrung with anguish, he uttered no cry or moan; but toiling on to finish his life work in the narrative of his deeds, he gave it as a tribute to the honor of the soldiers and sailors on both sides of the war, and thanked God for the lingering hours of torture which had enabled him to see the happy harmony between those engaged but a few short years ago in deadly conflict. * * *

"Oh, noble dead! Your sacrifice was not in vain! Safely rests the land you saved in the patriotic breasts of your countrymen. 'With malice toward none, with charity for all,' they shall fraternally pursue their grand career; and in their hearts your hallowed memory shall be your country's treasure and stay forever."

THE graves of the confederate dead in Fairview cemetery, Bowling Green were decorated last Saturday.

PEOPLE who have abused the Legislature will conclude they have not done the subject justice when they learn the true inwardness of the so called "revenue law," which was one of the new laws created last winter. Referring to it in brief, it contains a provision for two assessments this year and the payment of taxes twice next year. The Assessor has already made his rounds, as property owners are aware. This law requires them to make another assessment before September 15th. The assessment already made is for a levy, which must be paid, or a penalty will be added by the first of next April. The other assessment provided for by the new law must be subject to a specific levy for State purposes, to be paid on September 1, 1887, a little over five months after the April payment. This looks very much like doubling up the taxes on the people—being assessed twice in one year and having to pay taxes twice next year. But the oppression does not stop here. The assessment to be completed before next September is to be based on the full valuation plan. If a farmer has land worth $100 an acre he must place its assessment value at that figure. The law even goes so far as to provide for the payment of the assessor of a commission on the sum total of the assessments he makes, thus putting him in a position to want to materially increase the amount of the assessments in his county. Under the plan in force in this new revenue law, the taxpayers will have their taxes to pay twice in a year, and thribbled by the additional increase of the assessment.—Lexington Transcript.

GREEN R. KELLAR, late clerk of the house, tells in his paper, the Carlisle Mercury, what good work was done by the Legislature: "Under Offutt's bill the constitutional change will be accomplished; under Spaulding's bill the convicts will be taken within the prison walls as soon as the Eldyville prison is completed; under Jackson's bill sufficient revenue will be raised to meet all State expenses, under Thorn's bill the trouble between the people and railroads over division fences will be adjusted; under Senator Worthington's bill criminals will be brought to a speedy trial, under Thompson's bill the criminal will be permitted to place his case before the jury; under Senator Smith's bill public gambling will be broken up; under Bradford's bill common school teachers will be able to get their pay monthly; under Bowman's bill districts will be enabled to build good schoolhouses and secure competent teachers; under John H. Crain's bill insurance companies will be held responsible for the acts of their agents; under Owen's bill honest men will be protected against dishonest debtors; under Dr. Allen's bill pleuro-pneumonia has been driven from the State; under Dr. Thomas' bill the colored people who wish to become teachers may be able to attend a normal school, to be established for them."

Peck, of Peck's Sun says: "Were I rich I'd publish a new kind of newspaper that would be both novel and [illegible] to read. I'd have [illegible] writers [illegible] the good [illegible] I'd [illegible] the [illegible] that are [illegible] around us all the time, note the deeds of unselfishness, tell of the self-denial that is practised by so many continually, talk about all the good men and women instead of the bad; write up the heroes and heroines that we find in [illegible] palaces, everywhere, and the love that wreathes itself around the unhappiness, lightens the labor, [illegible] unkindness and neglect, and pervades all things in its beautiful, silent way, just as a rose fills a room with fragrance you can inhale but cannot describe, and touches everything with its invisible hands; and instead of weeping and waiting for the awful storm to burst, my readers should take a cheerful view of life, and be thinking that in a little while the gray mists would change into sunshine."

THE Owensboro Messenger has this to say of Gen. Buckner and his late boom for Governor: "A year ago the papers all over the State were teeming of kind words of Gen. Buckner. He was herald as the next Governor, and all other aspirants were warned to stand aside or be run over by the procession. Now nearly every exchange we pick up wants to know why Buckner should be Governor. They say he has no record as a statesman, military chieftain or Democratic leader, and ask what it is that commends him for the position. Who will answer? Don't all speak at once."

THERE are several gentlemen in Covington and Newport who are impatiently awaiting the start of a Congressional boom in their interest. If these small fry could only persuade themselves that Carlisle can be defeated, there would be one of most remarkable scrambles for the nomination ever known in this district. There are so many great men in the element that is endeavoring to work up the opposition to Carlisle, each of whom is, doubtless, actuated by a selfish motive, that they will scarcely be able to unite the opposing elements.

THE following, from that sterling Democratic sheet, the Louisville Times, hits it right: "First Assistant Postmaster General Stevenson says that the Democrats now have eighty per cent of the post-offices of this country, and as soon as the good work can be completed with becoming decency they will have all of them. It is gratifying to know that there is one department where Mugwumpery is upon the ragged edge. All Congressmen are not of the Willis stripe.

THE Kentucky Hawkeye is the name of new paper, the first number of which we have before us. Its date line reads: "Covington and Newport," and it will probably finally settle down in one or the other of those cities. In politics it is Republican, and it is said it will be a channel through which the DeGruyter branch of the opposition to Carlisle is to be promulgated.

A Frankfort special to the Courier-Journal says that the sale under execution against Col. S. I. M. Major took place, and that the library, which is one of the best private collections, embracing a number of the oldest and rarest books to be found in the State was sold to A. J. Alexander, of Woodford county for $3,900.

In this issue appears the statement of the Farmers and Traders National Bank, of Covington, at the close of business June 3d 1886. This bank has been very successful, and when its statement is compared with those of the older banks of that city, it is certainly very encouraging to the stockholders.

THE reports from the Memphis district reports the growing cotton crop in good shape, with only slight complaints of drouth from Alabama and Mississippi. The corn crop in the same district is only in fair condition, but with propitious seasons the yield will equal that of last year.

THE entire police force of East St. Louis, with the exception of the chief, has been dismissed on the charge of conspiracy to rob the banks and business houses of that city. The scamps ought to have been fired off the center of the bridge that spans the Father of Waters.

THEY are beginning to corn feed their cattle in Texas and find it profitable too. A lot of them averaging 1,232 pounds, sold in St. Louis at $5 50 per cwt., while the general range for Texas grass steers was $3 25 to $4 75.

DRS. BUCKNER and Emmerich have found evidence during studies in Sicily as to the origin of cholera that disease makes its way into the system through the lungs rather than through the alimentary canal.

THE wheat harvest has begun in Tennessee, Missouri and Kentucky and the promise of a full average yield has been fulfilled. In portions of Missouri an unusually large yield is assured.

MR. CARLISLE is paying about as much attention to those persons in Covington who are [illegible]

JUDGE DURHAM replies to Gov. Knott's second letter saying evidently the Governor feels that his administration needed much defense.

Our river bottom farmers report that their corn crops are in good condition. Mr. P. B. Birnett has a little patch of 300 acres he says looks promising.—Crittenden Press.

The planters of Owen county are about through setting tobacco, and we regret to say that the acerage is is great, if not greater, than last or any preceding year.—Democrat.

William Talbot, a young farmer living near Paris, met with a serious accident in which a hay rack in a barn was pulled down upon his head, producing concussion of the brain. He is not expected to recover.

Something near an average crop of tobacco has been set, and there is more to follow. With a propitious season there will be a large crop raised in Crittenden this year—probably the largest ever yet raised.—Press.

Henry county is agitated from center to circumference on the temperance question. Rousing mass meetings are being held in all the precincts, and in nearly all the school houses. The crowd is large every time.

In some portions of the county the grasshoppers have attacked the young tobacco plants as soon as set, making it a big job replanting, and in many instances the farmers have not had the plants to reset and put the ground in corn.—Owen News.

The new fence law, as it was adopted by the last legislature and signed by the governor, provides that the fences shall be erected upon both sides of all railroads in the State at the joint expense of the railroad companies and the lands through which they pass. The proviso is added that if the land for the right of way is given to the railroad free of cost, then the companies are to bear the entire cost of fencing.

J. Smith Kenney says, that about eighteen months ago, he had a pond about to be drained by musk-rats, and he concluded to try dynamite on them. He bored several holes near where they were living, and loaded them with Judson powder and dynamite, which, when exploded, tore up the ground considerably, since which he has seen no signs of them. They were either killed or scared away. Try the experiment; there's no patent on it.—Bourbon News.

A gentleman of undoubted veracity informed us Friday that a fish, supposed to be of the cat variety, was recently caught in the Cumberland river between the mouth of Rockcastle river and Cumberland falls which weighed 109½ pounds, and was about 12 feet long. A man by the name Reuben Cassidy caught it, and it required the work of several men to pull it out of the water after it had been worried for two days. This is by far the largest fish ever caught in the Cumberland, and it is a great pity that it was killed and cut up so quickly, as to find was of very [illegible]

[illegible] Worm's Enemy

[illegible] M. [illegible] the interesting spectacle of [illegible] the [illegible] of all [illegible]. It is a black bug [illegible] and three fourths long, slender [illegible] and very agile in movement. It scurries over the ground rapidly in search of his prey, and when a cut-worm is found it is seized instantly at the first point of contact, and a deadly conflict at once ensues. The sharp mandibles of the devourer are sunk into the tender body of the worm and after many savage writhings and rapid somersaults the juice is rapidly pumped out of the cut worm, and the empty skin tossed aside. It is surprising with what avidity the work goes on, nor can he be shaken loose from his hold until his appetite is glutted. Mr. Parrish informs the Clipper that in many places countless hundreds of the dry skins of the cut-worms can be counted, the result of this industrious and hungry conflict. This friend is the larvae of the "carabus" the full grown insect of which is a handsome, large bronze-green beetle, long legged and sharp mandibles and a rapid runner. A farmer's friend, truly, and one worthy of encouragement.—Bluegrass Clipper.

THE RECORDER has in the past sincerely advocated the appointment of some of its friends to office and was disappointed, but on that account it does not now propose jumping on Mr. Carlisle with both feet, and assist in an attempt to elect to Congress in his stead some man who has no political reputation beyond the limits of his magisterial district. Mr. Carlisle is among the ablest men in Congress, and the RECORDER is in line for his retention.

DR. J. G. FURNISH, of Burlington, has been chosen health officer for this county, and is ready to correspond with any physician in the county, who desires to ascertain what the duties of the county board of health are, and instruct him as to what can be expected from the State board of health in case of an epidemic.

THE State Board of Equalization met in Frankfort last Thursday and adjourned to meet again on the 6th of next month, in order to give the clerks of the county courts time in which to complete their reports. Boone's returns have been in for several weeks.

WE hear the name of Edgar Cropper, of this district, very favorably mentioned as a probable candidate as one of the county commissioners under the new law. We believe that Edgar would make a good and fearless officer.

THE Covington Commonwealth is now in a condition to take some of the advice it tendered the RECORDER a few months since, when the latter had something to say about an appointment.

HAVANA MILKMEN.

How the Lecheros of the Cuban Capital Deliver Their Milk.

Among other interesting street folk of the Cuban capital are the lechero or milkman, the dulcero or vender of sweets, the cochero or cabman, the mercanchiste or notion peddler, the aguador or water-seller, the regatonear or huckster, the zapatero or shoemaker and the latonero or tinker.

The lechero and his system here are worthy of magazine illustration. Milk for the markets and hotels is brought into the city by immense ox-carts in cans having the appearance of diminutive cylindrical pagodas, but a large proportion of the inhabitants cling with obstinate conservatism to the ancient method of supply. At all hours of the morning I have met on the highways away out in the suburbs sober droves of a half-dozen cows accompanied by a half-dozen muzzled calves as they were being leisurely driven into the city by a brown-faced countryman and two or three of his barefooted boys. Arrived in Havana, these rustic groups become the traveling milk supply. Almost without guidance the animals seek the beginning of the "milk route," and, on reaching the door of the first customer, come to a halt, the cows and calves taking position with military precision, in single file, alongside the flagstone footways of the narrow street. Our guajiro or countryman is now the city lechero or milkman. The urchins run into the customer's house, secure the order, and the lechero milks the required quantity there and then before the very eye of the housemaid, the portero, or el senor himself. In this way from house to house the queer cavalcade passes, until cow after cow is milked clean, when the muzzle is in turn removed from each mother's calf, and the little ternerillas are free to take undisputed possession of the "strippings." The system has obvious advantages. The milk is assuredly fresh. It would be difficult for the lechero to secrete a water-butt about his person.—Edgar L. Wakeman, in Chicago News.

A Fish Story from Peru.

The British ship Alexander Yeats, Captain Dunban, from Labos for Falmouth, while leaving her anchorage struck heavily upon a shoal and commenced to make water. It was some time before the pumps would suck, but they were got in working order and were gaining on the leak, when the influx of water suddenly stopped. The vessel put into Callao, Peru, for examination, and the diver found that a large hole had been knocked in the bottom. In the hole and completely filling it was the body of a very large fish. It is supposed that the fish while swimming past the vessel was carried in by the water. At all events the fish saved the vessel and her cargo of two thousand tons of guano, which is now being discharged. The ship will be docked for repairs.—Panama Cor. N. Y. Post.

COMBINATION FENCE

A fence that is wanted, and in time will be used by every one that wants a fence, either around the House, Garden or Farm, as it is cheap, durable and serviceable, to keep in check horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, chickens, etc. and restrain wolves, dogs, and rabbits, etc.

Having all the advantages of a picket fence in restraining animals from jumping, and not so liable to decay, and at much less cost, and no barbs to injure valuable stock, thus placing it far in advance of any other fence now in use, hence it must be the fence of the future; all who have it want more.

It is portable and can be removed from field to field by drawing staples from posts, taking out the splice laths and rebundling it. We offer this fence for sale in bundles of five and six rod at Burlington.

The lamb crop has commenced moving towards the market.

Joe Reed has planted a patch of watermelons, and don't want the boys to know it.

The clover hay harvest is now on hand, and so is the weed harvest in the corn fields.

Alice Sutton, one of Burlington's most worthy colored men left yesterday for Arkansas.

Nail Laths at $2 75 per thousand and all other building material at reasonable prices.

For fencing lumber, siding or sheeting from $10 to $12 50 go to the Petersburg saw-mill.

The corn crop in the north end of the county seems to be very backward for this season of the year.

An artesian well is being sunk at Parlor Grove, and the grounds have been improved generally.

We have not heard of the usual number of persons this spring who have the finest garden in the country.

For Sale—Wm. Fritz's best Corn Beef at 8 cents per pound at B. F. Zimmers, Constance, Boone county, Ky. 26tf.

The weather the past few days has been injurious to small grain. Rust has attacked the wheat in some fields.

Rev. N. R. Quackenbush will preach at Burlington, Ky., on Sunday morning and evening, June 27.—Rising Sun Local.

G. G. Hughes has been employed to assist in the prosecution of Floyd Willson and thirteen others at Florence, Saturday.

There is no better indications than a single man's negotiating, or wanting to, for a house. It is almost conclusive evidence that—

Rev. Gibson, Universalist minister, requests us to say that he has retired from this field, and will preach at North Vernon, Indian.

If next Saturday is a good day, there will be more people at the Odd-Fellows' picnic than you can shake a crooked stick at in a week.

WANTED—1,000 men with 40 cents each to buy a pound of Ligett & Meyers best Star Tobacco, at B. F. Zimmer's, Constance, Boone county, Ky.

The Rev. Mr. Nicholas has been employed to preach for the Presbyterian church at this place, and will preach on the second Sunday in each month.

There is no use of being discouraged over the crop prospects. Providence will provide plenty of hog and hominy agin. We judge the future by the past.

Tim and his daily market on wheels started out Saturday morning. Some of the boys were cruel enough to suggest that it ought to be called "Monthly Market."

W. S. Cole has purchased the stock of groceries owned by George Hoover in Florence and will open up the grocery business next Monday at the Hoover stand.

The Floyd Wilson & 13 others, trial which at the last term of the Boone Circuit Court was appealed (?) to Esq. Dixon's court, will be tried in Florence next Saturday.

The planters were furnished a splendid season for planting tobacco last week. In some instances the supply of plants was exhausted before the entire crop was planted.

The green apple season has returned, and the small boy is happy until there is warning of a rebellion beneath the belt. Who wouldn't be a small boy at this season of the year?

Mrs. Mollie Ryle, whose illness was mentioned in this column, last week, died last Sunday at 1 a. m. She was thought to be getting better up to within a few hours before she died.

Fritzy Zimmer, of Constance, has commenced his annual job of hauling fruit from John Berkshire's. If there is any fruit in the country it can be found at John's, a fact of which Fritzy is aware.

We are authorized to state that the heads of families bringing baskets of provisions to the Odd-Fellows' picnic at Silver Grove next Saturday, will be admitted free, as will also the ladies and children generally.

The directors of the Farmers Insurance Company held a meeting in their office at this place last Saturday, to adjust the loss of James Thompson, whose tobacco barn was destroyed by fire several weeks since.

The number of colored people living in that section of Burlington known as "Buck Town," has been greatly reduced within the past twelve month, and where there used to be a dozen or so families there are now but two or 3.

William B. Grubbs, jr., son of W. B. Grubbs, of Taylorport, who, a few days since, graduated at the Cincinnati Law School, was, last Friday admitted by Chancellor Menzies, of Covington, to practice law in the courts of Kentucky.

Sam—"Pa, where do all those men carrying boxes, come from?" Father—"From the merchant tailoring establishment of H. F. Blase, 510 Madison avenue, Covington, where they each had a suit of clothes made." Goods and fit guaranteed.

Miss Susan Utz, who has a very fine grape arbor is putting paper sacks over the bunches of grapes, which is said to be a very effectual way of protecting them. She says the grapes thus protected will retain their perfection until freezing weather comes, when they must be pulled off the vine and unsacked.

This is cholera year. Be particular about your diet. At one meal you should not eat more than half a peck new potatoes, half gallon green pease, a small measure of beans, half a dozen large cucumbers, fourteen years of green corn and other vegetables in proportion. We again caution you to be careful how you eat vegetables.

June is the month of all the year best suited to the pure enjoyment of living. It is the month of roses, of strawberries, of buttercups, thistles, clover blossoms, fried chickens and picnics, and next Saturday is the day the Odd-Fellows will give their picnic at Silver Grove. Don't forget the day and date, and let everybody come and hear the music furnished by Bross' brass band.

Last Thursday was Esquire Baker's regular June term of court. The big trial that day was the case of the Commonwealth against William Sebree, who several days since pummeled Jas. Henderson pretty severely. The Commonwealth wanted to hold Sebree over for a felony, but when the court heard the evidence it failed to see that the defendant was guilty of an offense higher than an assault and battery, and empaneled a jury and proceeded to try Sebree for that offense. Having heard the evidence the jury returned a verdict of "not guilty." A long list of witnesses were in attendance, but only few of them were call to the witness stand.

NOTICE—To those whom it may concern: By a late act of the legislature, the county judge, the county clerk and the county attorney, together with another competent person selected by them, will compose a board before which shall be held an examination of any candidate for the office of county superintendent of common schools in the county. In compliance with the above act, we have selected L. M. Whitehead to act with us on that occasion, and will meet at Burlington on Friday and Saturday, the 25th and 26th days of June, 1886.

Board of Examiners.

The beautiful weather last Saturday tempted about twelve hundred lovers of the merry dance to the fifth annual picnic given by the Son's of Temperance, of Petersburg, at Parlor Grove, among which was a RECORDER scribe. At 11 o'clock the Str. Minnie which had been chartered to convey those along the river, landed at the grove with about eight hundred on board. This number was swelled by persons from the adjoining neighborhoods.

At Lawrenceburg, the last stopping place, nearly a hundred were refused, but a way was soon provided for them on an O. & M. train.

At North Bend and Balsly's landing quite a crowd was in waiting, but, having on board as many as could well be carried, she refused to stop.

After arriving at the grove no time was lost until the dancing was begun, which was continued for a short time when a halt was called for dinner, of which we were invited to partake by that genial, whole-soul fellow, Chas. Schramm, and to him and his lady friends we desire to tender our thanks for a splendid feast, which we enjoyed very much.

In refreshing the inner man about an hour was consumed, and then the dancing was again resumed and continued until 6 o'clock, when a toot from the whistle of the steamer announced the hour for starting, and the great mass of youth and beauty was soon dispersed and on their way home, all seeming well pleased with the day's enjoyment.

For picnics and a jolly, good time this lodge has quite a reputation, and much credit is due to those clever, big-harted souls, Solon Early and Bishop Schramm for the manner in which everybody was made to enjoy themselves.

The jury in the case of the Commonwealth vs. Anderson rendered a verdict Thursday evening of guilty and fixed his punishment at 8 years in the penitentiary. This is the most remarkable case that has ever come up in the county. The defendant, Sam Anderson, killed Wash Osborn at Dry Ridge in October 1865, and made his escape. Nothing was heard or seen of him until in 1885, after a lapse of twenty years, when he returned to Grant county.

It was found upon examination of the records that the old indictment had been filed away without leave to re-docket, and as the old indictment could not be reinstated a new one was returned in the May term, 1885, and he was arrested at his home on a bench warrant shortly after the adjournment of circuit court. He immediately sued out a writ of habeas corpus and was admitted to bail in the sum of $10,000. Judge McManama closed the argument for the defense and Gen. Hardin for the Commonwealth. The general was the recipient of many compliments on his masterly argument and eloquence and his scathing arraignment of Anderson; especially was he eloquent in referring to the spirit hand of Wash Osborn resting upon the shoulder of Anderson, driving him from place to place until he was driven back to the scene of his crime; and the spirit voice of Osborn in plaintive tones continually ringing in the ears of Anderson, saying, "Sam, you have shot me." Anderson has filed grounds and moved for a new trial.

During the time he was in Texas, Mexico, China and many other countries. All the witnesses in the case are, we believe, still living. The wife of Osborn lived to raise her family and died three or four years ago. The prosecuting attorney is a brother to Osborn's wife.

The jury in the case was out seven days and six nights.—Williamstown Courier.

John J. Berkshire says there will not be over half a crop of apples.

GENTEEL BEGGING.

A Nuisance Which Has Had a Phenomenal Growth in This Country.

There is some chance for escape from the professional mendicants who assail people on the streets, crowd into their houses and often interrupt men in their places of business. They are outside the pale of the law; they can be handed over to a policeman if they become impertinently importunate as they often do; but they are a severe tax upon both the time and means of the charitably inclined. A few who thus appear as common beggars are worthy objects of benevolence, and the fear of withholding from the few who merit aid, often resolves the doubts of busy men in favor of the always cunning appeals of the criminal idlers, who ply their vocation as beggars while prospecting for new opportunities for crime.

But the grave and steadily growing evil in the begging line is the genteel or quasi-genteel beggar, who would be mortally offended if regarded as one of the begging class. They come from almost every condition of life, and invade the counting room, the office, the store, the shop, the home; indeed every place seems to be regarded as the temple of genteel beggars and all seasons are their own. Most of them do not consider that they are begging at all. On the contrary, they appear to regard their presence and solicitation as a favor to the person whose time they waste and whose means they seek to obtain. They represent every thing and every phase of invention that cultivates idleness, from the book-agent that sells his or her own book as an escape from want, to the countless fairs and the innumerable benefits and testimonials down to ten-cent election tickets on the contest between Miss Smith and Miss Jones for a cream mug or sugar tongs or a silver dart for the back hair. There is not a place of business at all accessible to these genteel beggars that is not invaded every day by them, and valuable time must be given them to determine the merits of the appeal or the victim must choose between giving blindly without thanks or giving offense for life. There are many men and women of liberal means who would give away more than their whole income or earnings before noon every day if they gave a tithe of what is demanded and confidently expected of them by the genteel begging fraternity.

This large and rapidly growing class of genteel beggars must not be confounded with the thoroughly reputable, honest and earnest representatives of our well-governed and deserving charities. They are known, properly accredited and their labors are so well appreciated by charitable citizens that it is generally a pleasure to contribute to their respective organizations. There are very many generous citizens who ever welcome the representatives of our deserving charities, glad to give them money to the extent of their ability while others are giving their time and labor to temper the sorrows and misfortunes of the world. Those who unselfishly devote their efforts to gather and disburse the willing contributions of busy citizens are on an entirely different plane from the genteel beggar. They are not beggars in any sense. They do not importune when people are unable or unwilling to pay. They present the needs of the helpless they aim to aid, and there their mission ends. They proffer the opportunity for each to give as his or her abundance will justify, and their visits are not regretted, as a rule, even if their appeals can not be favorably responded to; but the genteel beggar, who literally begs for what neither charity nor generosity would reasonably feel bound to give, is mandatory or persuasive as circumstances dictate, and when successful the giver often regrets the questionable necessity that forced the gift much more than the amount and time involved.

The growing drift into habits of idleness has much to do with the increase of what is kindly called genteel begging. Idleness begets every shade of vice, and one of its first lessons is to get what you need without earning it, whether honestly or dishonestly. Its grade down to actual crime is not steep and the descent is seldom sudden. It begins by exhaustive invention to live in some apparently decent way on the earnings of others. Its followers call upon friends and acquaintances and extort money from them in the flimsiest guise of business, when both well know that it is simply a strike for so much money without meeting any need or wish of the giver. It is not called begging, but it is none the less begging, and, in point of fact, even less genteel and honest than if the truth were told and the contribution asked for and given without the deceit that vexes the giver more than the loss of the money that is known to be wasted. It is this presumably genteel begging that now intrudes upon and harasses every place of business and every home, and it has become a nuisance of fearful magnitude. It not only exacts largely from the time and means of citizens, but it is spreading idleness and demoralization, discouraging honest industry and is rapidly multiplying crime, as idlers once on the drift of deceit, logically gravitate downward until there is hardly a perceptible line between genteel begging and criminal fraud. It is a pestiferous nuisance to all who seek to earn money before they spend it, and it can be halted in its growth only by a well-enforced public sentiment branding it as disreputable. Let the genteel begging trade be stamped out.—Philadelphia Times.

LIMEKILN CLUB.

Some Things That Are a Mystery of Brother Gardner.

"I has been walkin' 'round on top dis airth mighty nigh my allotted time," said Brother Gardner, as the band ceased playing, "and yit some things are jist as much a mystery to me as when I was twenty.

"How does it happen dat de folks who am head-ober-heels in debt put on de mose style?

"Why am it dat de man wid a head full of brains mus' play second-fiddle to a monkey wid a pocket full o' money?

"How does it come dat while we purfess to lub our naybor, nuthin' tickles us mo' dan to h'ar he has received a set-back and mus' take a cheaper house?

"How am it dat de man wid de biggest di'mun pin, an' de woman wid de mos' real lace on her dress, git shet of deir counterfeit nickles sooner dan any body else?

"Show me a party of fifty pussons gwine to make a trip to Yurup, an' I'll pint out thirty-five who am stavin' off creditors to do it.

"We complain dat servant gals doan' know deir duties, an' we eddicate our darters to ignore house-work as beneaf 'em. De hired gals of de next generashun won't be to blame if dey mix bread in de bath-tub an' mash 'taters wid a beer-bottle.

"Seems to me, as I lean on de fence an' look ober de landscape, dat a good sheer of dis world am wrong end to. De shine of brass keetches de eye whar' silver am unnoticed. A loud voice gathers a crowd sooner dan sweet song. Society demands a dress coat an' a white shirt, an' if dat demand am satisfied nobody will ax de wearer whether he has bin in State prison or de State Legislachur! Let us now purceed to dispatch de routine bizness of de evenin'."

Shindig Watkins desired to call the attention of the meeting to the fact that there was a shoal in Lake Huron which had been set down on the charts by the Government surveyors as "Nigger-Head Shoal." He for one felt it to be a reflection on his race, and he hoped the club would forward its protest to Congress.

"Brudder Watkins, do you call yourself a nigger?" blandly inquired the President.

"No, sah—no, sah! In co'se I don't! Ize a cull'd man, sah!"

"Zactly, Brudder Watkins, an' so am I an' all de res' of de crowd. If dar' am any nigger who wants to complain about dat shoal let him go ahead; it am none of our funeral."

Brother Watkins sat down, but he didn't look exactly like a man who had gained a barrel and a half of valuable information for nothing.—Detroit Free Press.

Bound to Succeed.

Fond Grandpa—Well, Freddie, what do you intend to be when you grow up?

Freddie—An author, sir.

"Why?"

"It pays. Howells gets two hundred dollars a week, an' doesn't write more'n one thousand words a day."

"But, Freddie, where will you get the words?"

"Outen the dictionary, of course."

"Ah, but Mr. Howells' words are picked words."

"Then I'll pick 'em, too."—Philadelphia Call.

DOUBT.

Where is it leading us, this sad procession
Of veiled hours and weeks, all grim and gray?
The Summer dies in Autumn's chill embraces,
Then Winter calls great Autumn's time away,
Till Spring days come, all redolent with flowers
Once more to mock us with their brief, bright smile,
And Summer comes but once again to vanish,
For all the seasons last so short a while.

But whither do they take us in their passing?
Eyes wax but dim, hearts beat a slower tune;
Hands fail to do the work that seems so pressing;
'Tis Winter time, ere we have welcomed June.
We can not stay them, passing, ever passing,
E'en though our lives wax shorter as they go,
Although we tremble at the gathering shadows
That wait around, and hide what none may know.

Oh, life, sad life, I did not ask thy dower,
I did not take on me thy weary path,
Thy pleasures never were by me demanded,
And having lived, I would not live again,
Still would I fain be given wider knowledge,
See clear and fair, not darkly through a glass,
Made darker yet to sight dimmed oft by crying,
So dim I can not see the way I pass!

There is no sunshine here without a shadow,
No smile that has not its swift following tear,
No bliss that is not paid for by a sorrow,
That casts before its shade of mortal fear.
Is there no land, oh, life, where we are happy,
Safe in the knowledge that our blessings are,
That love is real, life's best joys unending
Beyond the horrors of some judgment bar?

None answer, for the shadows grim and dreary
Are silent with the silence of the dead—
The dead, that are so quiet, safe, untroubled,
Not knowing aught, within their church-yard bed!
Oh, can it be that all our lives but tend us
To share the silence where past ages sleep;
That Life himself doth yield our only harvest,
And what we sow we here alone may reap?

SARCASM OUTWITTED.

"Baroko," Its Disciple, Falls Before Artless Girlhood.

The professor of mathematics taught logic to a few of the girls at the academy, the older girls, who were going in for many examinations. His real name was Brandon, but none of the students called him Professor Brandon except to his face. Even logical girls will invent nicknames. They called him Baroko, and it was considered a good joke by the initiated to say that Baroke was in his worst mood. Nearly all the teachers at the academy were honored with new titles, flattering or unflattering, and generally containing some reference to their particular branches of instruction. The science master, Mr. Maddison, had been called Sirius until some especially intelligent member of the class that dealt with the ecliptics, parallaxes, and the like discovered that Sirius was the dog star. It was felt that nothing less than a constellation or a planet would do for Mr. Maddison, he was so universally popular; so from Sirius his name passed to Arcturus, or, sentimentally, the Bright One, or even "The Archangel." The amount of adoration that was lavished on Arcturus was incalculable; but luckily he was a modest young fellow enough, and it did not turn his head.

The girls could never understand why Arcturus had anything to do with Baroko. They were excellent friends, though Baroko was as generally disliked as Arcturus was admired. He looked too old, perhaps, though he was ten or fifteen years younger than he looked, to be fascinating. But a worse drawback was that, though he never got vexed, he was given to making the most bitter remarks in the coolest, blandest of tones. A master who wishes to be unpopular can not do better than keep his temper and be sarcastic. One polished sentence does more to make his pupils hate him than a dozen ebullitions of wrath.

So far as learning went, the logical girls were very advanced. They knew a little about statics, a little about anatomy, they were always knowing and forgetting again the difference between the cerebrum and the cerebellum. It was an exceptional class. There was only one backward girl in it: and she was not stupid, but logic seemed to burn her brain. It was Molly Drummond. She was bright enough at music, and drawing, and history, and literature, and could even write bad verses in the albums of the other girls. Her arithmetic, truly, was a failure; she owned, in fact, frankly enough to the arithmetic master, who was not Professor Brandon, that the other girls always did her sums for her; but she considered it a sufficient expiation of this offense that she did their essays for them. The morality of the average schoolgirl is hazy. Would she do the sums by herself for once? Yes, certainly; Molly would do any thing she was asked to do—and she did. They were wrong, all of them. They were more than wrong; they were ridiculous. Evidently the girl—seventeen, too!—did not know her multiplication table.

As for logic, she had as clear a head for it as any one, when she chose. But she did not choose. She disliked the logical girls, whose virtues afflicted her with too painful a sense of contrast; and she consoled herself with the reflection that she could outstrip them if she liked; also, that she dressed more tastefully, and was prettier than any of them, except Alicia Hargreaves. Alicia was nineteen, tall and dark and handsome, with a fine figure, and eyeglasses—gold ones. Nearly all the logical girls wore eyeglasses, except those who wore spectacles; and they were subject most of them to headaches and neuralgia. Molly was exceptional in having excellent sight and health and a fresh color. She was not beautiful, but her face was very charming, with its laughing, yet earnest, dark gray eyes. Her figure was lithe and rounded, and she walked well and seemed to dance by instinct. Altogether a winning girl, with a woman's power of passion and of sympathy, a greater favorite with the teachers, in spite of her idleness, than Alicia, who was first in every thing. Alicia was really intellectual, and could understand satire more or less; but even Prof. Brandon never made her his victim. She was too unimpeachable. Nevertheless, they were not attached to each other. There was even, as Molly Drummond soon discovered, an enmity between them, veiled by an exceeding urbanity on both sides. Alicia was not to Baroko's liking. The fact was she had detected him in a purely technical error years ago, and instead of passing it by she had brought it forward in the assembled class and made the most of it. Every one had forgotten the incident long ago, except Alicia and the Professor himself; but he never forgave her. He registered her in his mind as the type of an especially disagreeable woman, and solemnly warned Arcturus one day of the danger of allowing his appreciation of her talents to carry him too far.

"Don't be captivated, my dear fellow," he said, lightly, "by her interest in the megatherium. A woman has no real admiration for chunks of old red sandstone. You are young and handsome; and Miss Alicia persuades herself that she has a great liking for paleontology. It is the paleontologist she likes, my friend. The same with botany. She brought you a camelia the other day, I think, to ask you if it were an example of centripetal inflorescence. Certainly. If I had been young and handsome she would never have robbed out that unlucky " The professor paused and sighed. "She would have sworn that Barbara was Celarent."

"I don't understand logic," said his companion, looking up with a laugh. Baroko was two inches the taller, being five feet eleven, and painfully gaunt. Arcturus was young and handsome, as the professor said, and he was, moreover, a wonderfully winning fellow.

"Why do you talk so?" he proceeded. "You know you are not really cynical."

"I object to Miss Alicia," returned the professor snappishly. "Beware of her, Frank, my young friend. She gives herself the airs of a Senior Wrangler."

"I have a new pupil," said Maddison, good-naturedly changing the subject. "Miss Drummond—Molly the girls call her. What do you think of her?"

"Think?" replied Baroko grimly. "I can get nothing out of her. She is always staring at her ribbons. That girl wears new ribbons every time she comes to the class. No wonder she can't understand logic."

"She is very bright at botany," said Maddison, apologetically.

"At botany? Yes. Girls are. It is a subject calculated "

"Stop," said Maddison, laughing. "I won't hear any more."

"I was merely going to say—calculated to inspire the weakest mind," said Baroko blandly. "Certainly I will refrain."

The logical girls met that morning and the two masters separated, Arcturus to the correction of exercises, Baroko to the sixth class lecture room. The pupils were assembled, with books before them, and with weary faces that betrayed no natural affinity for logic. Only Alicia Hargreaves was, as usual, equal to the occasion. Molly was nervous, and well she might be, for she had not done her exercise, and the professor had a reputation for being rigid in the extreme. He looked over the neat pile on his desk.

"Nine books," he said, frigidly. "Hargreaves, Matthews—" he ran over the list of names. "I should have ten. Miss Drummond, will you kindly hand me your exercise?"

Molly was frightened. She had only been half a dozen times to the class, and her first awe of the professor had not yet evaporated. She was also tired and her head ached, owing to previous dissipation. She had tried to do that exercise, but the logical girls were all too busy to help her. Moreover—and this weighed her down with a sense of guilt—there had been a party last night in which she played a prominent part, and she could not help wondering whether, if she had not gone to that party—but regret came too late. Her fellow-students had been consoling her, since she arrived that morning, with the assurance that they should not like to be in her shoes, and she was inwardly quaking, though she lifted up a brave face.

"I am sorry, Prof. Brandon. I have not done it!"

"Indeed!" said Baroko, in a voice of profound civility just tinged with surprise, that scared her yet more. "Might I ask the reason?"

"I could not do it," replied Molly, feeling very much ashamed of herself—she, who had been accustomed to place considerable faith in her own talents. "It was too difficult."

"Too difficult!" repeated Baroko suavely. "I understand you to say that you had studied logic previously, Miss Drummond. How long?"

"I studied it about a year," replied the doomed one, "in my last school. The book was different," she added, desperately.

"So I should have judged," said Baroko, "from your previous exercises. If you will kindly give me the name of the book, which you have studied, Miss Drummond, I shall be happy to read it. It will doubtless cast new light on the principles of logic. As, however, your attainments are quite beyond the level—"

He had gone so far in the bland sneering fashion the pupils detested, when a smothered sob interrupted him. He glanced at Molly. She had bent her flushed face over the desk, but the next second she raised it again, and he saw how desperately and indignantly she was striving to keep back the tears. His heart smote him, though none of the logical girls knew that he had a heart at all. After all he had been too hard; he should have remembered that Molly was a new pupil and not accustomed to the cool, seathing remarks with which he was accustomed to indulge the logic students. He said no more, and the work of the class continued. Molly recovered herself and joined in it more or less, generally less. When she did speak it was to blunder, but the professor was not hard upon her. If it had not been for the inevitable satire in his tones one would almost have said he tried to be encouraging. The hour passed slowly—very slowly, but it was over at last.

"You may go," said Baroko. "Miss Drummond, will you stay a moment?"

One or two of the girls cast sympathetic glances at Molly as they went out. Alicia wore exactly the look of mingled hatred for sin and pity for the sinner which was appropriate under the circumstances. The professor saw her expression, and it did the culprit very good service. As for Molly, she remained alone, feeling a little stubborn, utterly determined not to break down, however exquisite might be the torture; and sarcasm always harrowed her feelings most deeply. How could she have cried for that odious man? Why did he not speak? It was another method of torture. The professor spoke:

"I think you are not quite equal at present, Miss Drummond, to the work of the class." He paused.

"No, indeed, I am not," said Molly proudly. "Thank you, I will not return to it."

The professor smiled, in spite of himself, at the idea that any of his pupils should adopt a tragedy to smooth the satire out of his voice.

"You misunderstand me. I think all you need is a little help at the beginning. 'Ce n'est que le premier pas qui coute,' you know, Miss Drummond. (Does she know? he wondered mentally.) Your natural faculty is quite equal, I think, to that of any of the pupils, but as yet you have not chosen to apply yourself to the subject. But if you will come to my room once or twice we will just run over the old ground together; and you will soon be qualified to take your share in the class work. Let me see—when could you come?"

Molly looked astounded. It was, indeed, an unusual offer for Professor Brandon, who seldom troubled himself with his pupils out of class time, unlike Maddison, whose spare hours were filled up with coaching. Had she been mistaken after all? Baroko's tones were not wholly reassuring; there was a very faint under-current of amusement in them that she recognized immediately. The professor had not been used to deal with such a quick perception. But her glance met a kindly gleam in his eyes that disarmed her at once.

"It is very kind of you," she said, humbly.

"Oh, not at all. I shall be pleased to give you any help. But I should like you to make an effort, Miss Drummond. It will repay you."

His tones were more humanly cordial than Molly could have believed possible. She forgot how his satire had frightened her.

"I will," she said, earnestly, looking up at him with her candid eyes. "I am sorry about the exercise. And I am afraid—I ought to tell you—I made you believe—I might have tried a little more—but there was—a party!"

The professor laughed out. He would never have done it if he had not been taken by surprise, but somehow Molly had thawed him completely, unawares. His laugh cleared the air. Molly laughed herself, merrily, with an instant perception of the humor of the thing, but she regained her gravity at once.

"I will not do it another time," she said, humbly, looking up into his face again.

How long was it, wondered Baroko dimly, since any one had raised such clear and trustful eyes to his?

"I will do my best," she added, earnestly, and the professor said:

"I am sure you will."

It was with some trepidation that Molly knocked at Baroko's door the next morning. She had been trying to get up logic, but the attempt had been unsuccessful, and the ordeal was rather formidable. But there was a fire burning in the small room; and though Baroko seemed to have frozen up since yesterday, his frigidity melted before Molly's frank girlish gratitude. One by one the difficulties vanished. Baroko found that it was pleasant work to explain things to Molly. The girl had brains, and a large share of intuition. They got on excellently, and the professor did not cavil at the dainty ruffles at Molly's throat and wrists, nor at the knot of scarlet geranium. And Molly was fascinating. Schoolgirl as she was, the arts of fascination were—had always been—natural to her. She had never been suggestive of bread and butter. Her instinct was to try to win people's liking, male or female, young or old; she could no more help it than she could help her hair falling in pretty brown waves. One could not justly call her a coquette—though, by the by, very many did—her charm was too spontaneous; and it lay to a great extent in the consciousness that she would have suffered or sacrificed any thing for one who had been kind to her, and whom she loved. She cared a great deal too much, probably, to win affection; but she was certain to repay it in full measure. On this occasion her desire to win Baroko's liking, and her desire to please him because he was good to her, were blended beyond the possibility of discrimination. To do her justice, she regarded him as about sixty, and never dreamed of what might happen. The lesson went off brilliantly, and Molly rose to go.

"Thank you so very much," she said. "I am sure I shall manage now. And thank you for not laughing at me," she added on the spur of the moment. "I mean for not being sarcastic."

Baroko rose, but he seemed in no hurry to end the interview.

"Do you object to sarcasm?" he inquired good-humoredly.

"I can't bear it," said Molly with her usual frankness. She had altogether lost her fear of this formidable professor. "It goes through one. I don't mind what hard things people say if they will only say them straight out; but when they sound angelic and stab you—oh, it makes one hate one's self, and vexed with every one else besides. I dare say it is good for me," she added as an afterthought.

"I will try not to inflict any more of it upon you," said Baroko with some amusement.

"Oh, I had forgotten," said Molly, blushing. "I was thinking of people I know. Please excuse me. Thank you again, Professor Brandon, and good-bye."

It was pleasant to see Molly's earnest and confident air when she next came to Baroko's study for what she called a private rehearsal. She was carrying a spray of sweetbrier that she had brought from home—it was her wont to bring flowers to all her particular friends—and she cast it down carelessly on the table as she shook hands.

"Sweetbrier?" remarked Baroko, calmly. "Ah, how pleasant it smells!"

"Isn't it delicious?" said Molly, blithely. "It always reminds me of old times. Take it if you care, Prof. Brandon. I can get plenty more."

"Thank you," said Baroko, with grave courtesy, taking the spray from her hand. It would have been difficult to tell from his tones whether the gift pleased him, and Molly half fancied that she had been foolish to offer him any thing so frivolous as sweetbrier. But she dismissed the subject with girlish light-heartedness, and it never crossed her mind again.

Baroko, however, took the sweetbrier home and kept it in a vase till it grew limp and drooping. When the servant came in to dust one morning it was gone.

"If she notices its absence," said Baroko to himself with a guilty conscience, referring to the domestic, as he stole the sweetbrier out of the vase, "she will probably think that I have thrown it into the fire."

After this Molly made rapid progress. Two months later, when Alicia, with an amiable condescension calculated to melt the hardest heart, offered to help her through a difficult exercise at the end of "Jevons," she was able to refuse the offer with equal amiability.

"Oh, I suppose Prof. Brandon will help you," said Alicia, sweetly. "I forgot."

"Oh, no," returned Molly, who, young as she was, quite understood the art of fencing. "He only helped me once or twice at first, to bring me to a level with the others. Not with you, of course; but then you are so far above the rest of us poor mortals. Still, I can manage this, I think. It is not very hard," she added, audaciously, knowing that Alicia had complained of its difficulty.

"Isn't it?" said Alicia, with calm superiority. "I thought it hard for any one not very far advanced; but we shall all have to come to you for help soon, I dare say."

She sailed away with an amiable smile. Sailing was natural to Alicia. Next Monday the logic class met as usual, and it was remarked by one or two observant damsels that Prof. Brandon's countenance wore an unusually ethereal expression.

"The papers this week," he said, benignly, "with one exception, show an utter misunderstanding of the whole subject involved. Miss Hargreaves, I regret to say, that for once you have shown yourself completely at sea—a most unusual occurrence," he added, with heartfelt rejoicing, hardly veiled by tones of ultra courtesy. "The only successful paper was Miss Drummond's."

He darted a keen glance at Molly as he spoke. She blushed, but she did not look triumphant, as he had half expected. In fact, her predominant feeling at the moment was sympathy for Alicia, and she cast a remorseful look at that heroine.

"It won't occur again," she exclaimed hastily, bent on soothing her rival's mortification. But Alicia's steady smile made her shrink back into herself.

"I had such a terrible headache," Alicia said apologetically, after she had bestowed that smile of congratulation on Molly.

"Ah, I was sure there must be some excellent reason for the remarkable confusion of your paper," observed Baroko suavely. It was too bad, but he did not believe in Alicia's headache, and she knew it. This was the more trying because she had told the truth.

Molly, half amused and half penitent, lingered a moment when the class was over to speak to Baroko. There was a book he had promised to lend her.

"Well, Miss Drummond, I hope you are content with your victory," said the professor, who was.

"I have vexed Alicia," returned Molly serio-comically. "I couldn't help it, could I?"

"Certainly not. Miss Hargraves will recover from the blow—in time," said the professor, who could not resist opportunity of giving his enemy a stab, even when she was not there. "I am very pleased with your success."

"Oh, I'm glad some one is pleased," said Molly half dolefully.

Baroko looked at her kindly.

"You must learn to be less sensitive," he said in a cordial, almost brotherly tone. "It doesn't pay, Miss Drummond."

"Oh, how can I help it," exclaimed Molly, the tears springing to her eyes. Baroko watched her for a few seconds in silence; then he roused himself.

"Here is your book, Miss Drummond. Don't fret about Alicia; she will get over it. I fear you are too generous with your sympathy—not a very common failing." The satire returned to his voice with the last words, but Molly's grateful, wistful look charmed it away again.

"Good-bye," he said. He shook her hand more warmly than usual—it was generally like shaking hands with a fish to shake hands with Baroko—and hurried away.

II.

It was near the end of the summer term. The Higher Local Examination was over, and Baroko's logical girls, four of them, had won through Group D almost by a miracle, and "satisfied" the examiners. Only Alice Hargreaves passed with second-class honors, and the professor congratulated her before the others in the blandest of all bland tones, while Molly, listening smothered a laugh, for she, like the rest of us, was not averse to sarcasm when it was leveled at people she did not care for. But Molly was leaving the academy. She was eighteen and the accomplished young lady. Her conduct, all the masters said, had been eminently satisfactory through the term. Baroko said so. Arcturus had taught her botany and geology; he said so too. There had been botanical excursions lately, which were very enjoyable. The summer term closed with a garden party, which was, every one said, a tremendous success. But with the bulk of the proceedings I have nothing to do; suffice it that the weather was glorious, and that the grounds were really excellent for a garden party, with a tennis lawn and shrubberies and green alleys, down which the guests wandered at their will.

Molly was present, of course, looking extremely charming in a white dress, with her favorite red geraniums at the throat. She had never been like a schoolgirl: but to-day she seemed to have lost the last vestige of the type—for was it not her eighteenth birthday, and she thought that she was growing old? She played in a lawn tennis match, and Baroko looked on. When it was over he went up to her. She had several cavaliers already; all the girls' brothers wanted an introduction, but Molly was not given to forsaking old friends, and she turned from the throng to greet Baroko.

"I am tired," she said.

"Come into the shrubbery; it is cooler there," said the professor, in his old tones of calm authority, and the two marched away. Molly's young cavaliers were dismayed and indignant, but they were Baroko's pupils at the neighboring college, and too much in awe of him to follow. So Baroko and Molly wandered down one of the green alleys together, and there was a smell of sweetbrier in the air.

"So you are leaving us, Miss Drummond," said the professor rather curtly. "You are not sorry?"

"Indeed I am," exclaimed Molly warmly. "Sometimes I think I should like to go to school all my life. I have enjoyed every thing this term."

"You will soon recover from the pang of parting, and in six months all you have learned will have slipped blissfully from your memory," said Baroko, unkindly. "I promised Miss Drummond never to be sarcastic; otherwise I should say that your attainments were more brilliant than lasting. I never had a more promising pupil; but however quickly you have learned, trust me, you will forget much more quickly."

"Knowledge is not every thing," said Molly a little proudly, for she thought the thrust uncalled for. "It does not make one happy. I know I shall forget; but I shall not forget the pleasure I have had, nor the kindness. You have been very, very kind to me, Prof. Brandon. I shall not forget that."

"You think not?" observed Baroko, dryly.

"I don't think—I know," said Molly, indignantly. "Why are you so unkind to me on this last day? I was so happy, and now you have made me miserable."

"I did not mean to be unkind to you," said the professor quietly, but with a sudden strange warmth at the heart. "You have no truer friend. I am old and cynical—"

"No!" interrupted Molly, hotly.

"Old and cynical," repeated the professor, "and universally detested. That you have been able to place some confidence in me has afforded me great pleasure. I was wishing for an opportunity to tell you—Ah!"

He was conscious that a sudden thrill passed through the frame of his companion, and glancing at her face he saw it irradiated with a new light. The reason was not far to seek. At the other end of the green alley Arcturus was advancing—handsome and radiant, with a new fossil cephalopod in his hand that he wished to show Molly. In a moment he was at the girl's other side.

"And now," said Baroko five minutes later, with the old inevitable satire in his voice that was like a laugh, half bitter and half kindly, at himself and at the community at large. "I must leave you two, for I have an engagement."

"Don't go," said Molly earnestly. A transient doubt struck Baroko. Could he possibly have been wrong? He looked into Molly's candid eyes once more, and knew that he had not been wrong.

"I must go," he replied suavely, turning away. "You are aware that my engagements in society are numerous. You will be able to entertain Miss Drummond, Maddison. I know that she is interested in fossils."—May Kendall, in Longman's Magazine.

In interstellar space meteors travel at the rate of forty to fifty miles per second, but the speed here recorded was only about thirty-six miles per minute. This is supposed to be accounted for by the retardation due to the passage of the meteor through the earth's atmosphere.

FEEDING HORSES.

The Amount and Quality of Food Required By Working Animals.

The farm team might very properly be considered as athletes about to engage in the most exhaustive work which taxes all their strength and endurance. Fat is not wanted; it is, in fact, an injury. Muscle, hard and tough, with no spare weight, is needed, and this is a point which is too often neglected, and mere fatness, with soft, flabby, watery muscle, and weak, unworked tendons, are thought to be the most desirable condition for farm animals. When horses in this condition are put to the plow under the unaccustomed hot sun they melt and wilt and lose flesh fast, and all this without performing more than half the work of a seasoned team. This experience, however, will serve to admonish those concerned to avoid the mistake in the future and to put the horses in a good condition for work by previous good and nutritious feeding. Horses on full work should be fed on highly nutritious food, so that the stomach should never be over filled. The horse's stomach holds no more than twelve quarts, and this quantity of food should never be exceeded, even when it consists of cut hay and meal mixed, of which twelve quarts, or a pailful, is the usual ration. Three quarts of ground feed, consisting of corn and oats in equal bulk, will make a good and sufficient single ration for a farm horse when mixed with five pounds of hay finely cut and moistened. This may be given night and morning, with three quarts of corn or oats whole and a little dry hay at noon. This is equal to 13 1-2 pounds of grain and 12 pounds of hay per day, and is very similar to the allowance given to the car horses of New York and the tramway horses of England and Ireland. The ration for these horses is 10 pounds of corn, 7 pounds of oats and 12 pounds of hay per day. But ground grain is at least 25 per cent. more nutritious, because so much more digestible, than whole grain, so that the ration recommended for farm horses is quite equal to the other, and the work of farm horses is considerably less that that of the car and tramway horses.

A horse not working can be kept in fair condition on twelve pounds of hay and five pounds of oats or four pounds of corn per day; but as work uses up flesh, a horse under work requires an additional quantity of grain, and not hay, because the stomach is not large enough to hold sufficient hay or any other bulky food to supply the waste caused by the work. Something should be said about watering, which is important because eighty per cent. of the weight of an animal is made up of water, and a working animal discharges an enormous quantity of moisture through the skin in the shape of perspiration. Water is absorbed into the system very rapidly. As the stomach of a horse can contain no more than twelve quarts, and a thirsty horse will often drink two pailfuls of water at one time, it is obvious that a large quantity is absorbed into the system and passes from the stomach into the bowels—from whence it is chiefly absorbed—while the animal is drinking. The results are obvious. If a horse is fed when it is thirsty and watered after feeding, the masticated and puffy food in the stomach is washed from it, by the too copious flood of water swallowed, and there is not only a waste of food, but danger of distress for hours afterward while the undigested food is passing painfully through the bowels accompanied by the large volumes of gas produced by its rapid fermentation. This serious mistake, often made, explains the frequent colics which disable the farm team thus unadvisedly supplied with water. A working horse requires water at least five times a day—three times always before feeding and twice in the intervals between feeds. Given in this manner, the water is never taken to excess, and supplies the system fully and healthfully. A large quantity of water is consumed in supplying the salivary glands for the production of the saliva, of which several quarts are secreted during the eating of a meal. If the horse has been watered between meals, the saliva will flow freely and perform its useful function as a solvent fluid, indispensable to the digestive process with perfection; otherwise it is insufficient for the purpose and the food is not properly digested. One word may be said in conclusion as to the temperature of the water. Cold water from a well is injurious and chils the stomach, so that when well water is used it should be pumped into the trough or pail and aired for some hours before it is drank. With the most careful feeding most of the ills which shorten the useful life of farm horses may be avoided.—N. Y. Times.

SHOCKING GRAIN.

Work Which Requires More Care Than Is Generally Bestowed On It.

In the saving of grain there is no more important work than the shocking of it. If poorly shocked it is certain to be damaged. It seems necessary to leave it in the field to cure after being cut, and yet it so often suffers damage that we might well hope that shocking could be avoided altogether. The only remedy, however, is to shock well, which is rarely done. Very few know how to shock properly; and yet others shock poorly because of indolence. It is poor policy to have the shocking done by boys. Surely, enough men can now be got to do this work. The self-binder is usually set to make rather large bundles and they are always compact. Hence, not more than twelve of these bundles should be put in a shock. If more are used, the grain will not cure properly; and more are not required to give the shock the needed stability. Two persons should always work together. Let each take two bundles and set the two pairs together. Then let each man set one bundle at the end nearest to him, alternating with the two already set. Two bundles at each side, alternating with those previously set, and the two cap sheaves, complete this model shock. Each bundle should be driven down solidly into the stubble. All should lean slightly toward a common center. Do not place the shock in a depression; but this is the only excuse for not placing them in a straight line—making the loading less inconvenient. For cap sheaves select long, slender bundles. Break them thoroughly, and be careful to place the tops toward the prevailing winds. After the ten bundles are set, gather their tops in your arms and draw them together. When the cap sheaf is placed, do not pat it down with a stroke in the middle, but by bringing an arm down across each end. Spread the cap sheaves to cover the entire shock. Any wisp of grain standing out can be tucked in.

If the bundles are small, as they must be in short grain bound by hand, as many as eighteen may well be put into the shock. In ordinary grain, fourteen hand-bound bundles may well be put into a shock—three being placed at each side, instead of two as directed above. Wheat, if well ripened, may be shocked when damp, but oats never. Oats dry out very slowly in the shock; and if shocked when damp, especially if that dampness proceeds from dew, will mould. Shocks properly set will not fall down unless in the force of a wind storm. If they should fall down in a hurricane, set them up again as soon as dry, placing the bundles in the same positions that they occupied before.—American Agriculturist.

HOME AND FARM.

—One who has used it says that the manure from stock that has been fed on ensilage is of better quality than that made by feeding hay.

—Toads are very fond of bees, and destroy large numbers of them, patiently waiting near the hives for the purpose of securing those that come within their reach.

—Vick's Magazine says that flowers in California lack fragrance, even such as honeysuckle, heliotrope and mignonette. It attributes it to the dryness of the climate.

—Put five drops of chloroform on a little cotton or wool in the bowl of a clay pipe, then blow the vapor through the stem into an aching ear, and instant relief will be afforded.—Cincinnati Times.

—A capital method of administering castor oil to children is to pour the oil into a pan over a moderate fire, break an egg into it and stir up. Then flavor with a little salt, sugar or current jelly.—Exchange.

—In planting trees it should be remembered that a tree is not a post, requiring only a small, deep hole. To insure success with trees a broad hole is required, and this should be filled up with rich, friable earth.—Chicago Journal.

—It is told of a kicking horse that he was cured by suspending a sack behind him filled with hay. At first his kicking was something terrible, but he subsided entirely when the hay returned toward his heels every time.—Troy Times.

—Bread Pudding: Pour half a pint of beef tea, boiling, over the crumbs of a French roll, beat well together and let it soak for half an hour; add two eggs beaten up in milk; beat all together, add salt and pepper, put the pudding into a buttered pie dish and bake quickly for three-quarters of an hour.—Western Rural.

—Farmers who have been in the habit of drawing potato vines to their barnyards to be worked up into manure had better omit the practice this year, especially in places where the potato rot has been prevalent. The rot is undoubtedly produced by a fungus growth which originates in the leaf, and carrying this to the manure heap is the most certain mode of spreading it over the farm.—N. Y. Telegram.

—Beets and Butter Sauce: Take two Bermuda beets of medium size. Wash and dry them without breaking the skin. Boil them for thirty-five minutes in fast-boiling water, slightly salted, which must entirely cover them. Then scrape of the skins, cut the beets into slices, and the slices into strips. Melt an ounce of butter, add to it a little salt, pepper and a teaspoonful of vinegar. Pour it over the beets and serve.—Boston Globe.

—Rice Pudding: Wash a cupful of rice, put into a deep baking dish which will hold a quart and a pint of milk; add four tablespoonfuls of sugar and a pinch of salt. Bake in a slow oven three hours, stirring frequently, so that the top does not brown till done; as the milk cooks away add more, using that which has been kept hot on the stove. This is a nice dish for children, as it is simple and more palatable than plain rice.—The Caterer.

POTATO ROT.

The Tiny Parasitic Plant Which Causes This Disease.

Prof. J. H. Ponton, of the Ontario Agricultural College, in an article on this subject, writes: This disease has received a great deal of attention from botanists since the days when it became a scourge in Ireland and other parts of the British Isles, and it is now conceded to be the result of a minute fungus called phytopthora infestans. This attacks all parts of the plant—leaf, stem and tubes. By those ignorant of the life history of this tiny parasitic plant little attention is paid to its appearance on the tops, and no alarm is experienced until the potatoes are affected. But being very contagious, its presence on the leaves should become a serious matter, especially when we remember that it spreads with great rapidity. It is usually indicated by the tops presenting a blotched, brownish, spotted, dead appearance. A close examination of the potatoes showing this will discover innumerable slender stems growing up out of the surface of the leaves and stems of the affected plants. These branch and swell out at the ends into pear-shaped minute bodies (spores), which are produced by millions. When ripe they separate from the stem and, being exceedingly light, pass into the atmosphere, where they are wafted about, many of them finally reaching the ground or settling upon plants. Under favorable conditions of moisture and heat the contents of a microscopic spore may push out a long, minute tube, which can penetrate into any part of the potato plant and give rise to the fungus; or may separate into several distinct portions (swarm spores), which burst through the spore wall and become the source of the parasitic plant. The mature plant which lives in the tops and tubers is very minute, and can be seen only by the aid of the microscope. It consists of many colorless, branching, thread-like structures. These penetrate the tissues of the potato and feed upon the juices, so that it soon weakens and begins to waste away. From the thread-like structures tiny stalks arise, assuming beautiful plant-like forms and bearing upon their branches the spores already referred to. They live but a short time, but the thread-like structure is perennial and hardy, and from fragments of it new fungi may arise. It is said by some that another kind of spore is produced which can winter, and thus give rise to the organism in another season. These are the so-called resting spores, apparently for the purpose of keeping the species over certain periods, while the spores already considered are produced rapidly so as to hasten the spread of the fungus under favorable conditions. This minute microscopic plant is certainly a low form of vegetable life, incapable of manufacturing food from the mineral kingdom, but fastening upon other plants and feeding upon their juices. A wet season supplies conditions well adapted for its development, and hence we find the "rot" associated with such weather. There is no doubt that many spores are always more or less present, but they are prevented from being a source of trouble because the weather is not suited for their growth.—Chicago Times.

New System of Profit-Sharing.

Mr. J. G. Batterson, President of the New England Granite works, has established a satisfactory relationship between capital and labor at his quarry in Westerly, R. I. The arrangement is that on all orders executed both capital and labor shall share in the net profits in proportion to the amounts or values contributed by each. Out of the gross receipts or from the capital employed are first drawn the wages of the men employed as journeymen, at the rates mutually agreed upon; then all other expenses of conducting the business, including superintendence, clerk hire, taxes, insurance and legal interest on the capital employed. The balance is treated as the net profits, from which a dividend is declared and paid; this dividend is divided into three parts, one of which is paid as a dividend to labor, one as a dividend to capital, and the third reserved as a guarantee fund, to which is charged all losses from bad debts. The labor dividend is made and paid before any dividend is paid to capital.—N. Y. Post.

WHAT SCIENCE SAYS.

The "Fearful and Wonderful" Mechanism of the Human System Graphically Portrayed.

[In the editorial columns of the New York Analyst, H. Lassing, M. D., editor, writes the following beautiful description of the laboratories of the human system. We think we have never read a finer or more trustworthy one.]

"Man is the greatest of all chemical laboratories. Magnify the smallest cell of the body and what a factory is spread before the eyes: countless chambers in which are globes of air, masses of solid matter, globules of dying liquid; a flash comes and the whole is consumed and needful heat is carried into every part of the system. Electrical forces also generate and are conveyed to the brain, the muscles and the various nerve centers.

"In another set of a million chambers we see various gasses and vapors. By chemical action these are changed and purified in the lungs and the skin. The blood we often say is a great living river. In its current are masses which the air in the lungs did not affect: blocks of chalk; slabs of tartar; pieces of bone-ash, strings of albumen; drops of molasses, and lines of alcohol. How are these waste masses disposed of? Begin where you will in this great stream you must come to the purifying places of the system. Here is all activity and an invisible force reaches out into the stream, seizes and carries this mass of waste into vast trenches, thence into a smaller reservoir, and finally into a larger reservoir, which regularly discharges its contents.

"This separation of lime, uric acid and other waste material from the blood without robbing it of a particle of the life fluid, passes human comprehension. In health this blood-purifying process is carried on without our knowledge. The organs in which it is done are faithful servants whose work is silent as long as health remains.

"People strangely wait until pain strikes a nerve before they will realize that they have any trouble. They do not know that pain concerns chiefly the exterior not the interior of the body. A certain set of nerves connect these blood-purifying organs with the brain. They may not gnaw and bite as does the tooth-ache or a scratch, but they regularly, silently report. When these organs are failing these nerves indicate it by drawing the blood from the face and cheek, leaving the lip and eye blanched, by sending uric acid poison into the smallest veins, the skin then becoming gray, yellow or brown. They also prevent the purification of the blood in the lungs and cause pulmonary difficulties, weariness and pain. Who enjoys perfect health, especially in this land where we burn the candle in one mass? The athlete breaks down in the race; the editor fails at his desk; the merchant succumbs in his counting-room. These events should not have been unexpected for nature long ago hung out her 'lanterns of alarm.' When the 'accident' finally comes, its fatal effect is seen in a hundred forms; either as congestion, chronic weakness, as wrong action, as variable appetite, as head troubles, as palpitation and irregularities of the heart, as premature decay, as dryness and harshness of the skin causing the hair to drop out or turn gray, as apoplexy, as paralysis, as general debility, blood poisoning, etc.

"Put no faith then in the wiseacre who says there is no danger as long as there is no pain. Put no faith in the physician, whoever he may be, who says it is a mere cold or a slight indisposition. He knows little, if any, more than you do about it. He can neither see nor examine these organs and depends entirely upon experimental tests, that you can make as well as he.

"If the output is discolored or muddy, if it contains albumen, lymph, crystals, sweet or morbid matter, is red with escaped blood, or roily with gravel, mucus and froth, something is wrong and disease and death are not far away.

"Those organs which we have described thus at length, because they are really the most important ones in the human system, the ones in which a large majority of human ailments originate and are sustained, are the kidneys. They have not been much discussed in public because it is conceded that the profession has little known power over them. What is wanted for such organs is a simple medicine, which can do no harm to the most delicate but must be of the greatest benefit to the afflicted. Such a remedy, tried and proved by many thousands all over the world is Warner's safe cure. With those in whom disease is deep seated it is the only specific. For those in whom the seeds are sown and the beginning of illness started it is an unfailing reliance. It may be recommended to the well to prevent sickness and the sick to prevent death. With its aid the great filtering engines of the system keep on in their silent work without interruption; without it they get out of gear and then disease and death open the door and cross the threshold."

Such writing ought not only to please but to carry conviction that what Editor Lassing, M. D.—so high an authority—says is true, and that his counsel is worthy the attention and heed of all prudent, right-minded people.

Tired Languid Dull

Expresses the condition of thousands of people at this season. The depressing effects of the warm weather and that tired feeling are quickly overcome by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla. It gives strength in place of weakness, gives tone to every organ, creates an appetite, and purifies the blood. Give it a trial now.

"Two months ago I commenced taking Hood's Sarsaparilla as an experiment, as I had no appetite or strength, and felt tired all the time. I attributed my condition to scrofulous humor. I had tried several different kinds of medicine, without receiving any benefit. But as soon as I had taken half a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, my appetite was restored, and my stomach felt better. I have taken three bottles, and I never felt better." MRS. J. F. DOLBEARE, Pascoag, R. I.

COWARDLY ANARCHISTS.

The First Move of the Defense in Their Cases Made.

The Chief Conspirators Endeavoring to Place the Onus on Others.

CHICAGO, June 18.—The first move of the defense in the Anarchist case was made to-day. An application for a separate trial for Spies, Fielden, Schwab and Neebe was filed with State's Attorney Grinnell. The application is accompanied by affidavits of four men, indicating that they, the leaders, will attempt to save themselves at the expense of their three companions—Engel, Lingg and Fischer. The paper sets forth that affiants are advised of the State's intention to attempt to prove their participation in the conspiracy meetings of May 3 and 3, and their co-operation in the plans of violence laid and executed at the Haymarket on the night of the 4th. A denial of these charges they are prepared to prove. They further declare that they are convinced that in a trial of such magnitude as will occur under the indictments, no jury will be capable of discerning the competency of the evidence, as affecting themselves and the other three men. The full significance of their statement appears to be that they declare they are innocent of the charges, but are afraid of being involved, by confusion, in the guilt of the three other men, whom they thus tacitly convict. For that reason the affiants are solicitous of obtaining a separate trial. Judge Gary will hear the petition tomorrow afternoon.

INDIAN AFFAIRS.

Reservations in Dakota Too Large for the Tribes Upon Them.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—Senator Harrison, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to-day filed a supplementary report regarding the investigation of the condition of the Indians in the Indian Territory and other reservations. In the report the committee say regarding the Crow, Creek and Winnebago reservations in Dakota Territory, that there are about one thousand and fifty Indians drawing rations there. The trouble, which a sub-committee consisting of Senators Harrison, Ingalls and Jones, of Arkansas, were sent to inquire into, grew out of the throwing open to settlement by order of President Arthur of certain lands embraced in this reservation, and the subsequent revocation of that order by President Cleveland. On this subject the report says: "The committee are of the opinion that the reservation is much larger than is needed or can be wisely used for the Indians residing thereon; but if the lands are covenanted by a treaty with them we can not repossess them without the consent of the Indians. We believe it is entirely practicable to procure the consent of the Indians to a reasonable reduction of the reservation as well as of the greater one lying west of the Missouri river. An attempt in that direction has already been inaugurated, and the necessary legislation has been passed by the Senate. But the committee believe that the settlers who went upon the lands thrown open to settlement by the Executive order of February 27, 1885, and in good faith made settlement thereon, are entitled to be protected as fully as possible from the consequences of this unfortunate complication." In regard to the Crow reservation in Montana, the report recommends that it be reduced to such limit as will enable the Indians to use what they retain and vest the titles in individuals. In the opinion of the committee, the consideration of $30,000 a year given by Messrs. Blake and Wilson for the rental of between 2,500,000 and 3,000,000 acres of these lands was very inadequate, and the report says: "Charges of fraud in the negotiation of the lease were made. It is enough," the report continues, "to say that the Indians are incapable of the intelligent transaction of such business. If leases are to be allowed at all, the department should have taken entire supervision of the business."

Supplanting "the 4th of March."

WASHINGTON, June 18.—The Senate to-day, by a two-thirds vote, passed the joint resolution introduced by Mr. Ingalls, providing for the submission to the several States of a constitutional amendment extending the period of the President's term and the session of the Fiftieth Congress until the 30th of April, 1889, and substituting the 30th of April for the 4th of March as the commencement in future of the Presidential and Congressional terms. The measure now goes to the House of Representatives for concurrence.

Sam Jones Challenged.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 18.—J. W. Perkins, a Southern evangelist, has publicly addressed a letter to Sam Jones in reply to the latter's denunciations of "immersionists." In his letter, Perkins says: "I have been preaching about fifteen years that baptism is immersion, and I, too, am a Southern man with Kentucky grit and love enough for God's work, that if you will set your time and the place to investigate the subject, we will see who is a 'lier,' you or me."

The Way of the South American.

PANAMA, June 18.—A terrible affray has occurred at Bogota, the Capital of the Republic, between the guard of the prisons and members of one of the National Battalions. One General, several officers and thirty soldiers were killed. The affray is looked upon as the outcome of an old grudge between the guards and the soldiers, without any political significance whatever.

An Ex-Convict's Yarn.

CHICAGO, June 18.—Thomas Stewart was released from Joliet prison Tuesday, after serving sixteen years for the murder of one Harry Hurlburt. Before leaving the prison he declared that he was innocent, but had submitted to conviction and imprisonment in order to shield the real guilty person, who was a woman with whom he was infatuated, and who had killed Hurlburt in defending herself from an attack by him.

Probable Adjournment of Congress July 10.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—A resolution was offered in the House to-day providing for the adjournment of Congress on the 3d of July next. It was referred to the Ways and Means Committee, but it will not be considered until next week. The committee will amend the resolution so as to report in favor of a final adjournment on July 10.

"Hitting the Pipe."

WASHINGTON, June 18.—It is alleged that there are fifteen "opium joints" in this city and Georgetown. There is one fashionable resort frequented by women of society circles, as well as shop girls and school girls.

Living on Almost Nothing.

JACKSON, MICH., June 18.—Mrs. Elizabeth Reed, of this city, affected with internal cancer, with an exception of two spoonfuls of port wine each day, has taken no nourishment in ninety-one days. She has lost some flesh, but at the last visit of her physician appeared brighter than eight weeks ago. There are no hopes of recovery.

Business Failures

NEW YORK, June 18.—There were 155 failures in the United States and Canada during the week, against 209 last week, and 187 the week previous to the last.

Newspaper Manager Shot.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., June 18.—Colonel J. W. Strong, manager of the Herald, was approached behind and fatally shot by Dr. S. A. Richmond, the proprietor of a patent medicine. After the murder Richmond, believed insane, shot himself in the head, and it is thought he will die.

Knights of Labor Ticket.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., June 18.—Knights of Labor have called a State Convention at Fort Howard to nominate a full State ticket. A labor convention had previously been called to meet at LaCrosse for the same purpose. The cause of the split in the labor ranks is not explained.

TEXAS LANDS.

One Million Six Hundred Thousand Acres Restored to Government Possession.

FORTH WORTH, TEX., June 20.—The Greer Country Boundary Commission, which comprises four officers of the United States Army and four citizens of Texas, convened in secret session at Austin on the 15th inst. The question under consideration by this Commission is a very important one to the people of Texas, since it involves the ownership of a snug little back yard some 1,600,000 acres in area. Each member seems bound by a Knight of Labor oath to divulge nothing. Your correspondent is able to make the positive announcement that the Commission has overwhelmingly decided that the Greer County does not belong to Texas, but that it is part and parcel of the lands belonging to the Federal Government. It is learned quite recently that the Commission was nearly, if not quite, unanimous in their conclusion, but no official announcement can be made until the report of the Federal branch of the Commission has been submitted to the Secretary of War and by him approved. Greer County for years has been by many Texans considered part and parcel of the Lone Star State, but a well informed member of the Commission is authority for the statement that there never was the smallest grounds for this presumption on the part of Texas. It is certain that the State of Texas made a big mistake when it presumed to give patents for land it never had the shadow of a legal claim to. Something over half a million acres of fine grazing land in Greer County are now located upon by veteran land certificates issued by the State of Texas. The finding of the commission nullifies these certificates of pre-emption, and the parties holding them will be compelled to vacate them. The prospects are that veteran land certificates can be bought pretty cheap in a few weeks.

THE TEXAS STORM.

Exceedingly Heavy Damages Reported from the Localities Visited.

ST. LOUIS, MO., June 20.—Word comes from Texas that a terrible wind and rain storm passed over parts of the interior of that State last evening, and that great damage was done to town property and to crops in the country. At Waco several houses were badly wrecked and one man severely wounded. At Dallas a good deal of havoc was caused by the blowing down of small buildings and the uprooting of trees, etc. At Weatherford the residences of Mr. S. B. Wemne, W. F. Budd, S. L. Weatherford, Mrs. M. B. Roach, the grain warehouse of George P. Levy and the Colored Baptist Church were demolished, and the Methodist Church, the opera-house, three public school buildings, the Sikes House, the Franco Land Company's office and a number of other buildings were badly damaged. Mrs. Ella Womac, Mrs. Gammond were injured by falling timbers. Accounts from the country are that a large amount of corn and cotton was beaten to the ground, and that barns and other out-buildings, fences, trees, etc., were destroyed. The damage in Weatherford is estimated at from $40,000 to $50,000, and the loss in Parker County is placed at over $100,000.

INSANELY RELIGIOUS.

An Armed Negro Commands a Steamboat Load of Passengers to Jump Overboard.

NEW YORK, June 20.—As the steamboat which plies between Harlem Bridge and High Bridge was about leaving her landing at High Bridge at six o'clock this evening, a colored man stepped aboard. After the boat had gone a short distance he suddenly sprang to his feet, and, drawing a revolver, cried out: "It is the will of the Lord that every person aboard this boat shall drown, and I command you all in His name to leap overboard or I will slay you all." The terrified passengers, together with the deck hands, fled into the cabin, while the negro walked up and down the deck, flourishing the pistol and yelling. Finally, while his back was turned for an instant, two of the deck hands rushed out of the cabin and seized him. The negro fought desperately; but was disarmed.

FATHER'S HORRIBLE DEED.

He Cuts the Throats of His Two Little Children and Then His Own.

CRESTON, ILL., June 20.—Jacob Swingley, of this place, killed his little daughter, three years old, by cutting her throat with a razor, tried to kill his ten-year-old boy in the same way, and then cut his own throat. A lady who kept house for him and another daughter were sleeping up-stairs, and did not know about it till morning. The boy is not expected to live. Mr. Swingley was suffering with malarial fever, and did not have watchers. His mother was in an insane asylum for some time. The immediate cause of the tragedy was the death of his wife last summer and financial troubles.

Shoot Them.

WELLSVILLE, O., June 20.—Sheep-killing dogs are becoming such a nuisance in this county and are worrying farmers to such an extent that the county commissioners are considering some means of stopping these depredations and ridding the community of these pests by imposing a heavier tax. At the quarterly session of the commissioners just held, claims to the extent of nearly $800 were allowed farmers for stock killed in amounts ranging from $9 to $2.75. Stock men consider they have sufficient cause for alarm.

Dr. Richmond Under Guard at Home.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., June 20.—There are no new developments in the Richmond-Strong shooting affair. Dr. Richmond is at home, guarded by policemen, and though a warrant has been read to him charging him with murder, his physician will not permit his removal to the county jail, and the prosecuting attorney has consented to allow him to remain at home under police surveillance until he can be safely removed.

Salvation Army Captured.

DAYTON, O., June 20.—The Salvation Army was arrested here last night charged with disturbing the Park street Presbyterian Church in this city by parading in front of the edifice with their drums beating, tambourines jingling and their chorus of ten male singers in full blast. Lieutenant Anna Herris, of Cincinnati; Cadet Lizzie Harrison and a girl named Mary Pfauhi were the only women arrested. Ten men complete the party. At last accounts they were engaged in singing and praying in the cell room.

Wheat Destroyed by Fire.

MODESTA, CAL., June 20.—Three thousand acres of wheat were destroyed by fire.

St. Louis Furniture Strike Ended.

ST. LOUIS, June 20.—After a six weeks' attempt to force the manufacturers to accede to their demand for the adoption of the eight-hour system, the furniture workers have ended their strike. The men, about five hundred in all, will return to work to-morrow on the old plan.

Mr. Manning's Successor.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—An article to-day in the Sunday Capital strongly intimates that, according to information received, it will not be surprising if, when Mr. Manning's resignation finally takes effect, Mr. McLane, Minister to France, will be his successor.

Couldn't Stand the Disgrace.

ST. LOUIS, June 20.—Ferdinand Bel, a German farm hand, committed suicide at Belleville, Ill., this morning by hanging himself. He was found drunk on the street Saturday night, and was locked up over night. Upon being released this morning he went to the barn on the farm where he was employed and hanged himself with his handkerchief from a beam only four feet from the floor.

But They Got the Keg Open.

FOSTERVILLE, O., June 20.—Yesterday David and William Williams, brothers and coal miners, attempted to open a keg of powder with a pick. The powder exploded, burning both men frightfully. William died to-day from the effects of his injuries.

ACRES OF FLAMES,

In Which a Number of Workmen Perish.

The New England Institute Building Destroyed—Loss, $300,000.

BOSTON, June 21.—The New England Institute Fair Building, constructed for exhibition purposes at a cost of $500,000 and sold last winter to the street railroad company for $300,000, was totally destroyed by fire this afternoon, and with it were sacrificed not less than twelve lives. When the firemen arrived the eight-acre structure was a mass of flame, the roof had fallen in and the walls were tottering. Of the four hundred stored cars one was saved. The victory of fire over water was complete. Next came the dangerous work of recovering the dead bodies. There was many men inside when the fire broke out and all rushed for the rear windows. Most of them were helped out, but while a rush was being made to one of the windows, at which a scorched and bleeding face was seen, the person who had been looking out fell back into the seething mass, and was past all help. A colored man, name unknown, went back into the burning building to save some property, and was not seen to come out again. By nine o'clock eight bodies, burned beyond recognition, were recovered. The experiences of some of the one hundred workmen employed in the building were terrible. The spread of the flames when they finally burst forth was something almost incredible. Workmen on the opposite side of the building from the point where the fire originated had almost as great a difficulty in making their escape as did those nearer the first fierce burst of flame. It was at the east of the building in the carpenter-shop that a most heart-rending incident occurred. A man, who is as yet unknown, was driven out of a window of the second story by the flames. He was about to leap, and had put one leg over the window-sill, when the roof fell in and pinned him fast to the spot where he was. No ladder company had arrived, and the crowd outside was powerless to render aid. The flames followed almost instantly, and the imprisoned men underwent agonizing torture before the horrified eyes of his friends below. Two of his fellow-workmen, John McNulty and J. F. Fallen, were terribly burned while trying to scale the well to reach their dying comrade. His sufferings were mercifully short. The awful furnace of flames enwrapped him about with fire and smoke, hiding him during his last moments from the gaze of the spectators. Not long afterward the well itself gave way, and nothing more was seen. E. L. Fallen says he was the last man to leave the wood-workers' shop alive. The room is in the southeast corner of the building. At the first cry of fire he ran, but turned back at the door to see if he had time to gather up his tools. The moment's hesitation nearly cost him his life. He hardly got out of the building before it was one mass of flames. Four or five of his fellow-workmen, he says, turned back. They were left behind, and were certainly burned to death. The loss will reach $300,000.

ANARCHISTS' TRIALS.

Parsons, the Long-Lost, Surprises the Police and Court by Walking Into the Court-room and Surrendering.

CHICAGO, June 21.—The first formal move in connection with the trial of the Anarchists engaged in the Haymarket riot was taken before Judge Gary this morning. Shortly before 3 o'clock this afternoon, Anarchist Parsons, who has been missing since the Haymarket riots, walked into the Criminal Court-room, accompanied by his attorney. His appearance was a surprise to the Court and police officers. He is supposed to have remained in hiding in this city since the night of May 3. He was so thoroughly disguised that his own mother would not have known him. When Court adjourned at noon the State had accepted four jurors, but in the afternoon they were excused by the defense, and the latter took up the task of finding four men acceptable to them. When court adjourned, at 5 o'clock, two men were on the panel who had not been formally accepted by the defense, however, so that the first day closed without any actual progress having been made toward obtaining a panel. After the adjournment of court Parsons was taken to the county jail with the other prisoners.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., June 21.—The trial of the alleged conspirators indicted by the grand jury in the recent investigation of the labor troubles and riots, was begun this afternoon, Judge Sloan presiding. About thirty defendants appeared at the bar.

An Ohio Jumbo.

NEW PHILADELPHIA, O., June 21.—Elmer Heeter, son of Mr. F. Heeter, of near Trenton, this county, is certainly the Jumbo baby of Ohio. He now weighs sixty-eight pounds and is but sixteen months old. He is a beautiful child, with light-blue eyes, rosy cheeks and a magnificent head of hair, which hangs in ringlets to his shoulders. The mouth is small, and when open discloses a fine full set of pearly teeth. Elmer measures twenty-eight inches around the chest, thirty-three inches at the waist and twenty around the thigh. The child enjoys the best of health, is exceedingly good-natured and is perfectly formed and developed in every respect. Both the parents are of ordinary size.

A Pennsylvania Mite.

SHARON, PA., June 21.—The most diminutive baby in Sharon is probably the little visitor which took up its abode with Mr. and Mrs. Steve Boyer, of the East Hill, a week ago. It is such a little mite of humanity that in order to insure its being safely handled the nurse wrapped it up in a pound of cotton. The child was weighed on accurate scales yesterday, with its sixteen ounces of cotton protector, and only tipped the beam at two pounds and three ounces.

Fifteen Vetoes.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Among the fifteen vetoes sent by the President to the Senate to-day were two disapproving bills to appropriate $150,000 each for public buildings at Zanesville, O., and Sioux City, Iowa. It is intimated that the Dayton bill will share the same fate. The veto of the Zanesville bill causes much unpleasant comment. In vetoing a pension bill the President says he is thoroughly tired of disapproving gifts of public money to individuals who have no claim to them.

David Davis' Death Expected Soon.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL., June 21.—A consultation of Chicago and Bloomington physicians to-day pronounced Judge Davis beyond hope of recovery.

—There are forty-eight women lawyers in practice in the United States, distributed as follows, the States being given in the order in which they first admitted them: Iowa, 3; Missouri, 2; Michigan, 6; Utah Territory, 1; District of Columbia, 3; Maine, 1; Ohio, 4; Illinois, 7; Wisconsin, 5; Indiana, 2; Kansas, 3; Minnesota 1, (from Iowa); California, 3; Connecticut, 1; Massachusetts, 1; Nebraska, 1; Washington Territory, 1; Pennsylvania, 1.—Chicago Journal.

—There are nearly 150,000 owners of real estate in Philadelphia who pay taxes upon the 225,000 separate properties assessed in the city limits. These figures show a larger proportion of tax-payers than can be found in any city in the United States.—N. Y. Post.

—George Holyland, of Fork, Md., was shearing a sheep the other day when the animal kicked and drove one of the blades of the sharp shears into George's abdomen, inflicting a wound from which he soon died.

—A Maitland (Fla.) lady has received a letter from Japan which has traveled sixteen thousand miles in three weeks.

A CITY IN RUINS.

Awful Work of a Volcano and an Accompanying Earthquake at the Capital of Nicaragua.

NEW YORK, June 17.—An Albany dispatch to the Sun says: "Mr. John Hotchkiss, a prominent manufacturer of Birmingham, England, arrived here yesterday from Realjo, Nicaragua. He says that the day before he sailed (May 22) there was a terrific eruption from the Volcano Momotombo. Telegraphic information was received at Realjo on the 23d to the effect that the city of Managua, the capital of the country, had been practically destroyed by the violent earthquakes which accompanied the eruption. The earth upon which the city was built suddenly sank, soon after the convulsion began, three feet below its former level. All buildings of any considerable value were completely wrecked. It was reported that there was great loss of life. "Telegraphic intelligence from a town at the terminus of a railroad forty miles from Realjo was even more startling. That place was being fast buried beneath hot volcanic ashes, and many lives had been lost. In response to the appeal for help from the survivors, a train was made up at Realjo and sent out about two hours before the Pacific Mail steamer left the port. The situation in Realjo began to grow somewhat threatening, and the departure of the steamer was somewhat hastened on that account. The sky became dark and of a strange grey tint, and fine volcanic ashes began to fall, and the atmosphere became oppressive and breathing painful. Mr. Hotchkiss says the fall of ashes increased as the ship left the harbor, and they continued to sift down upon the decks until the vessel was fully forty miles out. Over the interior of the country toward the volcano there appeared to hang a dense dark cloud. The decks of the ship received a coating about half an inch deep of the volcanic ashes before getting beyond reach of the shower. Mr. Hotchkiss brought with him a specimen. The ashes are a dry gray dust or powder. There was great excitement in Realjo when the steamer sailed, and details of the calamity could not be obtained. Full information will doubtless come by the next steamer, which reaches San Francisco in a few days. Managua, the capital of Nicaragua, which is said to be destroyed is a city of about 10,000 inhabitants. It had a national palace, several churches, city hall, and other large buildings."

THROUGH A TRESTLE.

Twenty Cars Thrown Into a Creek, Killing Four of the Train's Crew.

FOXBURG, PA., June 17.—Paint Creek trestle, on the Pittsburgh & Western railroad near here, was the scene of a terrible railroad accident last night, by which three persons lost their lives, and another was so badly injured that recovery is doubtful. The axle of a middle car of a long freight train broke just as the train was on the centre of the trestle, and the entire train of twenty cars was thrown into the creek forty feet below. A large portion of the trestle work was carried with the falling train. Four of the crew were buried in the debris, the fifth, Conductor Kime, escaping serious injury by jumping. When the wreck was cleared, it was found that engineer George Settig and brakemen Steffey and Kase had been killed. Fireman Geoughler was still living, but his injuries are believed to be fatal.

CANADA CONCILIATORY.

A Much Better Feeling Displayed on the Fisheries Question.

CHICAGO, June 17.—The Daily News' Montreal special says: The Dominion Government has changed its policy on the fisheries question, having issued instructions to captains of cruisers and Collectors of Customs cancelling former instructions regarding the seizure of American vessels for a contravention of the treaty in this last circular. No mention is made regarding the purchase of bait, transhipping of cargo or shipping of men as being contrary to the treaty. The question, therefore, seems to be narrowed down to the three-mile limit. The move is said to be in deference to the wishes of the Imperial Government for a conciliatory enforcement of the treaty, in the hope of a speedy appointment of the commission.

THE TARIFF BILL.

The House by a Majority of Twenty Refuses to Consider It.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—At exactly half-past one Mr. Morrison, of Illinois, arose in his seat, and, addressing the Speaker, moved that the House resolve itself in Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, for the purpose of considering the general tariff bill, and on that motion demanded the previous question. The ayes and nays were demanded and the Clerk proceeded to call the roll. The House by a yea and nay vote declined to go in Committee of the Whole for the purpose of considering the general tariff bill. The opposing faction have a majority of about twenty. Speaker Carlisle voted in the affirmative.

Ludwig's Lunacy.

MUNICH, June 17.—Among the documents which have been submitted to the Diet to prove the insanity of the late King Ludwig is a decree of the dead monarch sentencing all the Ministers to death, copies of which were sent to all members of the Government, and a decree sentencing a number of the Ministers to banishment to America. The affidavits of thirty persons have also been submitted, in which it is stated that the King injured them by throwing at them knives, china and glass. There is also a document relating to a proposal of the King to form a Cabinet, with his valet as President. Crown Prince Rudolph will attend the funeral of King Ludwig on Saturday as the representative of the Austrian Court. A number of persons have been arrested here for distributing pamphlets containing attacks on the Bavarian Ministry for alleged relations to the circumstances attending King Ludwig's death.

Disastrous Tornado in Texas.

FORT WORTH, TEXAS, June 17.—A tornado occurred last night in Cook and Denton Counties. Sallie Brigmore was fatally injured at Stoney, Denton County, and several lives are known to have been lost. Further west immense damage was done to crops and farm buildings.

The Chicago Incendiary Fire.

CHICAGO, June 17.—The Coroner's jury, which has been investigating the Canal-street tenement-house fire of June 7, in which eight persons were suffocated and a little child so injured that it has since died, finished its labors this afternoon and held Charles Reilly to the grand jury.

The Ohio Senate a Legal Body.

COLUMBUS, O., June 17.—The Supreme Court of Ohio has announced its decision in the quo warranto proceedings instituted by the board of public works of Cincinnati against the board of public affairs. It establishes the legality of the Senate and the legislation enacted by it, and holds the act creating the board of public affairs constitutional. The board of public works is no more. The court stood three to two, the dissenters being Democrats. After some consideration of the Dow liquor law, the court adjourned until next Tuesday.

Nominated by Prohibitionists.

PORTLAND, ME., June 17.—The Prohibitionists of the Second District to-day nominated Colonel W. S. Eustis for Congress.

EMPORIA, KAN., June 17.—The Fourth District Republicans to-day nominated Thomas Ryan for re-election to Congress. There was no opposition.

PORTLAND, ME., June 17.—The Prohibition State Convention was held here to-day. Aaron Clerk, of Buxton, a farmer, was nominated for Governor, and accepted.

Good Price for Wool.

WARREN, O., June 17.—One hundred and fifty thousand pounds of wool were purchased here yesterday by Eastern buyers at thirty cents per pound.

XLIXTH CONGRESS.

First Session.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—SENATE.—The Northern Pacific forfeiture bill was taken up. Van Wyck's amendment was passed, declaring the forfeiture of lands coterminous with the uncompleted portion of the Cascade branch at the date of the passage of the act. Mr. Eustis' amendment, proposing to forfeit all lands coterminous with such portions of the road as were not completed on July 4, 1879, and to confirm the title of actual settlers was rejected.

HOUSE.—The Senate bill for the relief of soldiers of the late war discharged after three months' service, who are disabled and dependent on their own labor for support, was reported favorably. Consideration of the Legislative bill was resumed. Several speeches bearing on the tariff were delivered. The salaries of the assistant treasurers at St. Louis and San Francisco were increased to $5,000. A proposition to strike out the clause making an appropriation for inspectors and clerks of the general land officers engaged in investigating fraudulent entries was rejected. The salary of the Commissioner of Pensions was fixed at $4,000.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—SENATE.—Mr. Dawes presented a memorial of the Massachusetts Legislature, which was read. The memorial recites that the "General Court" of Massachusetts views with deep concern the recent interferences of the Government of Canada with the rights of fishermen of the United States, and urges Congress to secure immediate relief for that class of citizens. The Senate declined to take up the House bill providing for the repeal of the preemption, timber-culture and desert land acts. Mr. Wilson (Ia.) obtained leave, pending the regular order, to address the Senate on the bill making the rate of postage on fourth-class mail matter two cents an ounce. Mr. Wilson gave way, however, for the consideration of the invalid pensions appropriation bill, which was reported by Mr. Logan and at once passed by the Senate, as reported from the Senate Committee on Appropriations. The Military Academy appropriation bill was then taken up and passed, as reported from the Appropriation Committee. The Senate then proceeded to the consideration of the House bill repealing the pre-emption, timber culture and desert land acts, which was discussed until adjournment.

HOUSE.—The bill authorizing a Railway Company to build a road through the Indian Territory was passed. The House went into committee of the whole, Mr. Blount (Ga.) in the chair, on the legislative appropriation bill. The clause relating to the Pension Office gave rise to the usual discussion as to partisan methods employed in the conduct of that bureau by the present and previous Administrations. The salary of the Commissioner of Patents was fixed at $4,000 instead of $5,000, as recommended by the bill. Mr. Cannon (Ill.) offered an amendment which, after a short debate was agreed to, increasing the appropriations for the Bureau of Labor in the aggregate $39,810, so as to make the appropriation equal to the estimates of the Commissioner of Labor. Mr. Cabell, (Va.) offered an amendment, which was agreed to, reducing from $2,050,000 to $1,900,000 the appropriation for the salaries and expenses of agents, surveyors, gaugers and store-keepers in the Bureau of Internal Revenue. The committee then rose and reported the bill to the House, and the bill was passed. Some twenty-five bills of a private class were passed at the evening session.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—SENATE.—A bill was passed to secure to the Cherokee freedmen their proportion of certain proceeds of lands sold. After passing a number of private bills the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE.—The morning hour was spent in filibustering against the consideration of a bill for the forfeiture of the Sioux City and St. Paul land grant. A motion by Morrison to go into committee of the whole, for the purpose of taking up the Morrison tariff bill, was lost—yeas 140, nays 157. The naval appropriation bill was then taken up and considered until adjournment.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—SENATE.—Mr. Beck gave notice that he would call up on Tuesday Mr. Hawley's motion to reconsider the vote on the bill to prohibit Senators and members from accepting retainers from railroads aided by the Government. A resolution was agreed to calling upon the Postmaster General for information as to the amount of compensation alleged to be due postmasters under the act of March 3, 1883. The Fitz John Porter bill was made a special order for next Thursday. The bill to repeal the Civil Service law was indefinitely postponed by a vote of 31 yeas to 6 nays. The Senate then went to the calendar and passed a number of bills. At 4:55 executive session was ordered, and at 5:20 adjourned until Monday.

HOUSE.—The Diplomatic Appropriation bill was passed, and after some resolutions had been offered and reports made, the Naval Appropriation bill was taken up. The debate on Stanton was renewed and continued at length. The Dolphin episode was discussed until 5 p. m., when the House took a recess until 8 p. m., the night session being for the consideration of pension bills.

WASHINGTON, June 19.—SENATE.—Not in session.

HOUSE.—Soon after the reading of the journal in the House this morning, Congressman Anderson again asked for unanimous consent to take up and pass the bill providing for an appropriation of $150,000 for the erection of a public building at Dayton, O. Before the bill had been read through Mr. Beach, of New York, arose and said that the bill was probably the most meritorious one of the character on the calendar, but he objected to its consideration for the reason that if Congress kept on there would be no money left in the Treasury. The House then resumed consideration of the Naval Appropriation bill, and disposed of it a few minutes before three o'clock. Immediately upon the passage of the Naval bill General Anderson noticed that Beach, "the objector," was not in his seat, so he at once renewed the motion to take up the Dayton bill. This time he was successful, and the bill passed without any further opposition. It has already passed the Senate, and will become a law just as soon as the President gives it his approval, which will be early next week.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—SENATE.—The credentials of the re-election of Senator Aldrich, of Rhode Island, were presented. A bill was passed granting Dearborn Park to the city of Chicago for the use and benefit of public institutions. A resolution was agreed to calling on the Secretary of the Interior for information regarding the cancellation of land entries for fraud from and during the year 1883. The Senate took up the bill to grant right of way through Yellowstone Park to the Cinnabar and Clerks Forks Railroad Company. It was laid aside for the army appropriation bill, which comes from the House with a message of non-concurrence in the Senate amendments. A conference committee was appointed. The diplomatic appropriation bill was also received with a message of non-concurrence. A conference committee was appointed. Notice was given that the conference report on the post-office appropriation bill would be called up on Wednesday. The bill to repeal the preemption timber culture and desert lands was then taken up. Mr. Blair submitted an amendment providing that not more than six hundred and forty acres of desert land should be held in single ownership. Mr. Edmunds opposed the amendment. After a speech by Mr. Teller, Mr. Call offered a letter to be printed in the Record from the Commissioner on public lands relating to the bill. At 5:15 p. m. the Senate went into executive session, and at 5:40 p. m. adjourned.

HOUSE.—Conferees were appointed on the pension appropriation bill. The naval appropropriation bill was passed. Under the call of States a number of bills and resolutions were introduced. The sundry civil bill was taken up in committee of the whole and read by paragraphs for amendment. Several amendments offered to the appropriation bill for the Bureau of Printing of one and two dollar notes were ruled out on a point of order after considerable discussion. Pending consideration of the bill, the House adjourned at 5 p. m.

THE COMMONWEALTH.

Louisville Leaf Tobacco Market.

Dark and heavy types have either held their own or improved slightly. Common grades do not appear to have any friends just now, and sell sluggishly on the very low basis to which they had been reduced some time back. Medium leaf has been steady, and the better grades of medium, as also good leaf of regie types, have been in sellers' favor. Wrappers and long leaf remain firm. Planting interests have been more extensively favored by the weather, and planting seasons are reported from nearly all sections. The Clarksville and Western districts, the Upper Green river district, the Ohio river district and a goodly proportion of the Eastern districts, and latterly Indiana, which until now had been denied any share in the current pluvial favors, have been enabled to put in a good part of the intended planting. Some sections, probably the Clarksville, Western and Green river districts, have probably about finished. On the whole, about 70 to 80 per cent. of the intended area is covered.

A DOUBLE-HEADED calf, born on the farm of Isaac Wingate, of Franklin County, was on exhibition at Frankfort, a few days ago. It lived only a short time. The heads are joined together like the Latin Janus, both being perfect in every feature, having four eyes but only two ears.

A SOCIETY was formed in Louisville, the other day, for the purpose of conducting summer fresh-air excursions for the benefit of the mothers and children of the poor.

HON. H. J. DURHAM, first comptroller of the treasury, was married to Mrs. Margaret Letcher Carter, both of Kentucky.

POST-OFFICES have been established at Hillinghum, Adair County, and Elfrieda, Davies County, and John W. Moore and John W. Cummins appointed postmasters respectively. Also at Flournoy, Union County; Goff, Edmonson County; Holy Cross, Marion County; Steele, Morgan County; Torfolk, Breckenridge County; View, Crittenden County, and Viper, Perry County, and J. R. Thompson, W. H. Goff, Thos. E. Ferrell, J. M. Adkins, W. L. Ball, J. S. McMurry and E. C. Campbell appointed postmasters respectively.

MR. L. C. MILAM was knocked down on the street, in Owingsville, the other night and robbed of $8.50 and two gold rings. Three men assaulted him. His skull is fractured.

JOHN VONDERSCHMITT, of Covington, was drowned in the Ohio river while bathing at the foot of Madison street.

JUDGE H. J. STITES, of the Louisville common pleas court, closed nineteen years of active service a few days ago, and will retire to private life.

AT Louisville, Martha Holmes, a young woman about thirty years old, was arraigned in the circuit court for examination into her mental condition. Miss Holmes is crazy upon the subject of picnics, and it has been her habit to walk along the streets and ask gentlemen to take her to any picnic that was announced. All last winter she heard of innumerable picnics in the woods and was constantly disappearing in search of them. She was once confined in an asylum at Carthage, O. She was sent to Anchorage.

JOHN DALLER, an old and distinguished citizen of Newport, died a few days ago, after a three-months' illness from consumption. He was the first jeweler and watchmaker in Cincinnati. Mrs. J. C. Dueber, wife of the watch-case maker, is his daughter.

THE other night the family of Colonel Neff, of Newport, were awakened by the cries of an infant which had been laid on the doorstep, neatly dressed. In the basket was a small alcohol stove, a can of condensed milk, and a letter with the following information: "Baby is five weeks old, its father is dead and the mother is not able to take care of it. Its name is Lucy Garfield." It was a white child, apparently only a few weeks old and was taken to the jail to await charitable disposition.

THE work of building the piers for the elevated railroad bridge between Covington and Cincinnati will begin as soon the stage of water in the Ohio river will permit.

THE public schools of Newport and Covington have closed for the vacation.

AFTER a stormy all-night session, the Democratic convention at Lebanon nominated Joseph Barbour for Judge of the Superior Court.

ACCORDING to the last report of the Agricultural Department all conditions have been most favorable for wheat, and the present prospect is many points above the average. No damage is reported in any county in the State from the fly, chinch-bug or smut.

THERE is a decrease in the area seeded to oats of about 10 per cent., as compared with last year, due to the fact that the crop last year was the largest and best ever grown in the State, and there is little or no market for it.

HUGH CRUMLEY was almost instantly killed the other afternoon at Harper's Rolling-mill, Newport. He was employed at the blast furnace as a watchman at the elevator. They have a couple of cars at the place which are used in hoisting up material for the furnace, and by some chance he accidentally got caught between them and was crushed to death. The deceased was sixty-five years of age, and leaves a widow and five children. When his remains were brought home his widow fell on the floor in an insensible condition, and it required the united efforts of several people to hold her.

SAMUEL HARLAN, of Boyle County, clerk in the sixth auditor's office, will exchange places with Mr. McCracken, of Meade County, a gauger in Collector Cox's district. Mr. Harlan is in bad health, and his physician says he must change his climate.

THE Mason-Foard Company, that has a contract for building the Maysville and Newport railroad, have erected a number of sheds along the line of the road, near California, to shelter their convicts in. They will commence work soon with about two hundred convicts. The State receives about eight cents a day for each convict.

THE assessor's books for Fayette County, sent to the auditor the other day, show the assessed value of property in that county to be $13,550,000. The total legal vote is 8,555, of which 4,944 are white and 3,611 black.

AT the Democratic convention at Alexandria, a few days ago, Cleveland and Carlisle were indorsed.

A DESTRUCTIVE rain visited Henry County the other evening, washing away the new iron bridge, costing $15,000 across the mouth of Drennon creek, besides carrying away several smaller bridges, the property of the county. Corn was washed out of the ground, while a large acreage of ripe wheat will be lost by its fallen condition. Fences, etc., suffered in proportion. No estimate of the damage can be made at this writing. No loss of life.

CHIEF OF POLICE GOODSON, of Covington, has ordered the police to arrest all stray cows running the streets.

MR. AND MRS. CLEVELAND.

"May Their Sun Ride High in the Heavens"—A Simple, Democratic Marriage.

"Give me health and a day," says Emerson, "and I will make the pomp of empires ridiculous." President Cleveland has been given health and a day, and he has made the pomp of royalty absurd. Many a splendid pageantry of royal marriage has been potrayed by the pen of the historian and chronicled in the columns of the public press: but more impressive than the pomp and fanfare of royalty was the simple ceremonial at the White House, when President Cleveland was united in marriage to Miss Folsom. And whatever the political antagonisms which the President may invite, there can be no question that the simplicity which characterized his recent marriage has won the hearty recognition of the whole country.

And the spectacle is assuredly an imposing one. Mr. Cleveland is the chosen ruler of sixty millions of people. He is the head of the most intelligent, the wealthiest, and—despite its small army and its paper navy—the most powerful Nation on earth. And yet his wedding at his official residence was so simple as to present a striking contrast to many a wedding which has taken place in our principal cities, whose pomp and glitter and display were depicted in the newspapers the next day from a very different feeling and for a very different reason from those which caused the public press to give to an interested yet deferential and respectful public the particulars of the simple White House ceremony. At that wedding there were no gorgeous uniforms. There was no show of the military—the White House was unguarded by a single trooper, or police officer; the grounds were just as free to the public occupancy as ever, and even the doors of the White House were open. A distinguished Englishman, struck with this unusual sight, was constrained to pronounce it on the whole the most notable sight he had seen in the United States.

We are told there were but twenty-five persons, including the President's and the bride's relatives, intimate friends, and the members of the Cabinet and their wives, present. But in reality the whole Nation was present; at least it took a deep interest in the event which itself is as unprecedented—no other President was ever married there—as it is important. For there can be no question that it is far better that the President should be a married man, although in the present instance, as in the case of a former bachelor President, the loss was inappreciable from the fact that the social side was so well cared for by the one who up to his wedding had performed the responsible duties of lady of the President's house. And let us say woman has her place in this country and in the home of its Chief Executive, though we have no court, and though there is no circle of royal families on this continent. And the social success of men, we may even say of Administrations, which counts for so much in public life, is due to no small extent to the character of the President's wife. The people want to see American social life at its best at the White House. They want to see an absence of vulgarity, of narrowness, of any cause for evil report. Recognizing what public duties and official intercourse demand, they yet want to see a timely simplicity, and they want to know that the atmosphere of that Washington home is pure and sweet.

The country will like the President the better for his entering into the marriage state—and so worthily into it—peculiarly fitting the head of the Nation. And it will like him the better for having maintained the simplicity so dear to the hearts of Americans, and especially to the "plain people" whom Mr. Lincoln's heart so well appreciated. The whole Nation will wish for long life, happiness and prosperity to the President and his bride, in whom are crystallized the virtues and graces of American womanhood. May their sun ride high in the heavens, and their sunset be as calm and peaceful as the morning is auspicious and radiant with promise.—Christian at Work.

TRYING TO EXPLAIN.

The Hard Task Before Governor Foraker, of Ohio—What a Prominent Republican Has to Say of Him.

Governor Foraker has arrived in Cincinnati. His coming was not heralded with trumpets and "sich," nor was he met at the depot by the Young Men's Blaine Club of this city. Of course this failure to properly receive his Excellency has no significance. Some people might imagine that because the Blaine Club went to Springfield in a body to secure his nomination at the hands of the Republican State Convention the same organization would welcome him with outstretched arms. A few persons, and they might be misinformed, say such is the feeling of the Blaine Club. The band of young Republicans has taken no action in the premises.

The Governor's visit to the Queen City is said to be that of a private citizen. It is rumored that he requested that no public demonstration be made, which accounts for what might appear to be a lack of enthusiasm. Report has it that his Excellency will be tendered a reception by the Lincoln Club before his return to Columbus. There are some peculiar stories floating around as to the cause of the Governor's quiet visit. It is asserted by a number of gentlemen who should be well informed that he is anxious to make a few explanations. The Governor has always been classed among the smartest and shrewdest of politicians. That he should have occasion to explain might appear strange. Several persons, probably evilly disposed, have, however, likened Little Breeches to an ex-Governor who has the reputation of having made more mistakes in a less time than all his predecessors. In short, he is said to have beaten the record.

There is a bare suspicion that the Governor and his friends, Mayor Smith, Sam Bailey, William B. Smith et al., meant to have a conference as to the proper course to pursue at the coming fall convention and election. There is also a growing belief that the last named gentlemen have discovered that a screw is loose somewhere in the party machinery, and that there is danger of a revolt—a sort of mutiny, so to speak. That there is something wrong can not be questioned.

A reporter spent an entire night doing detective work, but was unable to learn exactly what was up. He was satisfied, however, that a few panels of fencing were down; that the pasture was unprotected, and that there were grave doubts as to whether the posts could be reset unless the entire Republican herd was given an even chance for the clover spots.

The esteem with which Governor Foraker is held by the Blaine Club is best evidenced by the remarks of one of the officers of that organization as made at the house on Fourth street very lately. Said he: "Foraker is either foolishly inconsistent or else is a deliberate falsifier. One day he declares he will not interfere with any of the appointments of his appointees, and the next he states he will see that certain gentlemen are named for positions."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

DISGRACEFUL POLITICS.

Under a Specious Pretense of Helping Union Veterans Massachusetts Republicans Attack Civil-Service Reform.

Some weeks ago the opponents of reform in Massachusetts brought forward a bill in the lower branch of the Legislature authorizing the exemption of every body who served in the Union Army for the necessity of passing a competitive examination in any case where such examination is required by law. The measure was ostensibly introduced as "the payment of a debt of gratitude to the veterans," but the hollowness of this pretense was speedily exposed by the veterans themselves. Several Representatives who had served with honor in the war made earnest protest against the idea that their comrades either needed or desired any favoritism, and it was made perfectly plain that there was no demand for the proposed change on the part of the old soldiers. The real motive of the movement consequently had to be disclosed, and it was openly admitted by advocates of the scheme that they were pushing it as a means of breaking down the whole reform system in the State. The bill finally passed the lower branch by a vote of nearly three to one.

It came up in the Senate lately, and was discussed at length. President Pillsbury made an admirable speech showing that the change was not needed and not wanted by the veterans, and that it could by no possibility benefit any old soldier except one who was disqualified by incompetency to fill an office and who had a "pull" on the appointing power. He pointed out that the bill was supported "by all the members of the Republican party who want to discredit and break down the reform of the civil service," and he told them frankly that "they can not deal the Republican party a more deadly blow than the passage of this bill." The Boston Journal, the leading Republican organ of the State, made an earnest appeal to Senators of its party to reject the measure. "The passage of this bill," it said, "would be a lasting reproach to Massachusetts Republicanism." It declared that the bill was "insincere in its purpose and retrogressive in its tendency," and affirmed that "the Republican party can not afford to shoulder it." Yet, in the face of such warnings, the Senate first made the bill worse by requiring instead of allowing the exemption of veterans from examination, and then passed it, thirteen Republicans voting for it and only eleven against it.—N. Y. Post.

WAR-LIKE REPUBLICANS.

How Former Administrations in Power Have Provided for Protecting the National Honor.

The assurance exhibited by various of our Republican contemporaries, in speaking of what would be done and what would not be done for our fishermen if Mr. Blaine were President is simply sublime. It challenges admiration.

Would Mr. Blaine, in Mr. Bayard's place, have done better? "Yes," say the Blaineomaniacs. The Plumed Knight, we are informed, would have ordered the navy to proceed at once to the Canadian shores, reprisals would have been made, and England would have heard news calculated to make the British lion quiver with fear from the end of his nose to the tip of his tail. But Mr. Blaine in Mr. Bayard's place, or in the Presidential chair, would have done no such thing. Why? Well, because pitching into Peruvian guano beds and fighting John Bull are two altogether different things. Mr. Blaine gave us a specimen of his method of twisting the lion's tail when American citizens were locked up as suspects in British prisons. Again, even were Mr. Blaine in office and fully disposed to show fight, he would have nothing to do it with. The Republican party after four-and-twenty years of power left our navy what we see it—an unsuccessful opponent of a coal barge. Untold millions have been spent for a navy under Republican Presidents, and the country has what to show for it? The Tallapoosa and Secor Robeson. Mr. Bayard might never be anxious to vindicate the honor of the flag, yet Mr. Blaine's party has left the country without so much as a reliable dispatch boat. Wonderful things Mr. Blaine or any one else could do with the American navy as handed down from Republican Administrations to President Cleveland!

If any trouble were to arise the genius of the American people would doubtless rise to the emergency, and provide adequate means of offense and defense. But it would not be because of the Republican party or any of its leaders. They are responsible for our present lack of facilities for protecting the national honor, and they are the last who, without making themselves ridiculous, could stand up and tell what a terrible rumpus they would make about England's ears were they in power.—Boston Globe.

——Mr. Blaine never could get along with the stenographers. A man of fluent speech, speaking on an inspiring theme, seldom faces with satisfaction the transcription of his words in cold type. The stenographer asserts he reported Mr. Blaine's abuse of Lord Salisbury verbatim. Mr. Blaine denies this and furnishes an amended version calculated to show that even in a stump speech he observes the courtesies of parliamentary bodies. And the English papers declare that his correction is no better than the original version. However, Mr. Blaine would be glad of a little abuse from the English press.—St. Louis Republican.

——When Mr. Conkling dominated the Republican side of the United States Senate, his voice was wont to fall like a lash upon those who misbehaved themselves. In his absence, Mr. Ingalls, of Kansas, has conceived the fond fancy that the mantle of Mr. Conkling fell upon him. The result is a ludicrous exhibition of weak scolding, which he fancies to be sarcasm. Mr. Ingalls should be vigorously squelched.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

THE Bellevue country is making a loud and long call on one of its citizens to become a candidate for commissioner.

THE condition of Hon. David Davis, of Illinois, is daily growing worse, and eminent physicians say nothing can be done for him.

THE Knott-Durham controversy has become a thing of the past, to be thought of now by the latter by the light of a honeymoon.

A vein of natural gas has been struck at Lexington, Ind., at depth of 167 feet, of sufficient strength to light and fuel the town.

ABOUT two hundred bills were introduced in congress Monday, which brings the total number for the session up to eight thousand five hundred.

THE convention to nominate a Democratic candidate for Congress in the ninth district, has been called to meet at Augusta, Saturday, September the fourth.

MORRISON says that he wants to emphasize the position of those Democrats who voted against the consideration of his tariff bill by another effort to have it considered.

THE Greensburg, Indiana, Democratic convention, held last Thursday, renominated Hon. William S. Holman for Congress. That was one occasion on which Mr. Holman had no objection to interpose.

THE Chicago Farmers' Review states that the yield of wheat in Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, Missouri, Kansas, and Tennessee, where the crop has been largely harvested, promises to be above the average.

HON. M. J. DURHAM, of Kentucky, First Comptroller of the Treasury, was married in Washington, Thursday afternoon, to Mrs. Margaret Letcher Carter, of Kentucky. The bride is a neice of ex-Gov. Letcher, of Kentucky.

SAM HIND, JR., of the Walton district is announced as a candidate for county commissioner. He is located in the section of the county which is surely entitled to one of the commissioners, and having the reputation of being a sagacious business man will, doubtless, make him a formidable candidate.

SECRETARY Thomas A. Robertson, of the Congressional Campaign Committee, says, "such a fight will be made by the committee as will bring out the full Democratic strength. An early and aggressive fight will be waged all along the line, and one which, under existing conditions, must necessarily insure the Democracy success."

THE continued wet weather is now working heavy losses to the farmers throughout the State. Weeds are taking the corn, while the wheat and grass harvests are needing attention. A season of rain could not come at a time in which to more incommode the farmers than just at present. The only work for which the weather has been suitable the past month was the setting of tobacco.

S. I. M. MAJOR, of Frankfort, and a brother of Judge P. U. Major, died of jaundice, at his home in Frankfort, last Monday [illegible] o'clock, after a brief illness. For many years Mr. Major was a prominent politician in this State, and was elected to the office of public printer several times, and represented his county in the last legislature. He was well known throughout the State and his death will be generally lamented. A good man has been taken.

THERE is no good Democrat who can read the report of the proceedings of the Lebanon convention without feelings of regret, to state it mildly. A convention whose high duty it is to nominate a candidate to sit upon the bench of a court of justice should illustrate in its deliberations coolness, fairness and absolute justice to all men. We fear that zeal has far out-stretched calm judgment in the proceedings at Lebanon, and it bodes no good to the State nor to the party to which they belong that a number of Democrats can not meet and deliberate without resolving themselves into a disorderly assembly. And these words are intended for each and every delegate to whom they correctly apply, let him be for one or the other of the candidates.—Courier-Journal.

A CALL.

BELLEVUE, KY., June 11, 1886.

We, the undersigned, voters of Boone county, would respectfully solicit Esq. T. H. Sutton, of Bellevue precint, to become a candidate for the office of Commissioner to be elected at the August election 1886:

Josiah H. Walton, W. H. Stamper, F. T. Riley, J. R. Akin, J. N. Humphries, L. L. Snyder, W. W. Grant, D. M. Snyder, W. M. Balsly, cyrus Kelley, M. J. corbin, Louis Kantz, John J. Walton, L. M. STATE NEWS.

There are two women, sister-in-laws in Nicholus county, whose ages aggregate 220.

Telegrams from the Kentucky ranches in Texas state that the drouth there has been ended by fine rains.

R. B. Morehead, aged 19, and Laura Taylor, aged 17, eloped from Butler county to Richland, Tenn., and were married.

The Interior Journal has received a telegram from George O. Barnes, the Kentucky evangelist, announcing the safe arrival of himself and family as San Francisco.

Wheat harvest will commence in some parts of the county the last of this week. From present indications the crop will be the best ever harvested in Clark county.—Democrat.

Rev. Dr. Doyce, of the Biptist Theological Seminary, has the largest and finest private library in the South. It contains over 13,000 volumes, some of which are worth small fortunes in themselves.

The late heavy rains have been very damaging to the wheat crop. It is hard, indeed, on our farmers that just at harvesting time the finest crop that has grown for years should be spoiled, or nearly so.—Owen Democrat.

A small grasshopper, as well as the cut-worms, has been destructive to corn and tobacco. One farmer says he has set tobacco three times on one piece of ground this season, and the grasshoppers still appear hungry.—Trimble Press.

Black rust is doing great damage to wheat in Woodford county. Some of the farmers have abandoned their wheat crop. Heavy rains last week have badly injured hemp by washing it up out of the ground. Corn, oats and tobacco are looking well.

The Elizabethtown News says that a Mr. Eaton and a Miss Gibson, both white, went to Hodgenville to get married, but not finding a minister or county official, they secured the services of a colored preacher, who performed the ceremony "in the middle of the road."

The week has been one of general depression to farmers because of the incessant rains, not a day passing without a shower. All the farmers are behind with their work and the weeds are almost covering up corn and other growing crops.—Warsaw Independent.

The grand jury in the Fayette circuit court refused to indict the pool sellers of Lexington. Several indictments were framed and submitted, but the grand jury sent them into court with the endorsement, "dismissed" written across the back and gave as the reason that it was not just to prosecute the pool sellers in the city and excuse those on the race track. The matter has been disposed of in the same manner in Louisville.

State Politics.

Campbell county has Indorsed Senator [illegible] for Governor.

The Hon. C. I. McElroy declines to run for Congress in the Third district.

It is understood that State Auditor Hewitt will be a candidate for reelection.

The county of Taylor has only three candidates for Congress in the Eleventh District.

A. E. Wilson has been nominated for Congress by the Republicans in the Louisville district.

Hon. S. C. Bascom, of Owingsville, is announced as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress.

The Democratic Convention of the Eleventh Congressional district has been called to assemble July 21st at Somerset.

Hon. J. Q. Ward is out for reelection as Judge of the Superior Court, opposed by Hon. J. J. Nesbitt, of Bath.

The Louisville Truth wants to see a young man elected Governor and prefers Hon. W. C. Owens to either Durham or Buckner.

Lieut. Gov. Jas. R. Hindman has announced his candidacy for Congress in the Eleventh district, and will at once begin an active canvass.

In many parts of the State the Republicans are effecting thorough organization, and placing full tickets in the field for both district and county offices.

Peter Noeller, the newly appointed Covington postmaster, has already received 200 applications for positions. Democrats are an awfully hungry set anyhow.

At a convention held at Richmond the action of the District Committee, declaring Hon. P. J. Scott the nominee of the Democratic party for Common Pleas Judge, was indorsed.

The statement that Gen. Finnell had resigned the Chairmanship of the Republican County Committee, and that John P. Ernst, cashier of the Northern Bank, had been elected instead, proves to be a mistake. Mr. Ernst takes the place of Capt. Michie as secretary of the committee, and Gen. Finnell remains the chairman.

The politicians of Lee county have taken a new departure. The chairmen of the Democratic and Republican County Committees united in calling a mass-meeting to "select county officers from each political party, thereby dividing the offices between the two factions." In a test Lee county is Republican by a small majority.

The Covington correspondent to the Louisville Commercial says: The Kenton county delegation in the next Democratic State Convention will vote for Col. J. W. Bryan, of this city, for Lieutenant Govenor. Col. Bryan is the most promising young Democrat in Northern Kentucky, and will have the solid support of this section in the convention.

THE President sent into congress only fifteen veto messages Monday, thirteen of them referring to private pension bills, the other two providing for the erection of public buildings at points where he thinks they are not needed. The President is now watching private pension bills very closely, be it said to his credit. He does not believe that sore eyes ought to be included among the results of diarrhea, and if they are, that congress is not thereby authorized to increase a pension.

HON. W. S. HOLMAN was pretty well informed as to the condition of his political fences, as the result of the Greensburg convention shows. While he remained in Washington attending to his business the small opposition became very defiant and noisy, but when the convention assembled it was surprised to find that it was so insignificant.

GEN. BUCKNER says he does not know how to manipulate political conventions. If he wants to be Governor of Kentucky it is high time that he be learning something about the wires, or getting intimate with some fellow who does comprehend them.

ONLY a few days since Galveston was nearly blown out of the county, and now comes the tidings that her life was nearly beaten out of her the other day by a hail storm. If variety is the spice of life they are having considerable spice in Galveston.

THE Beecher party took to sea with them several homing pigeon, some of which were liberated when the ship was a hundred miles at sea, and have reached New York bearing messages from Beecher and party.

IF the President is not too busy with his honeymoon and official business this summer, he will run across to the windy city and spend a few hours at the big show in progress there.

IT takes an Avoca, Iowa, man to get drunk, most shamefully beat his wife, kill a policeman, and then kill himself. The last of his performance should have been first.

JUDGE DILLS returned from the capital Monday.

NEW ANÆSTHETIC.

Discovery of a Compound Which May Prove of Great Benefit.

[illegible] a little bald-headed dentist, [illegible] Brooklyn, sent invitations to the eminent doctors in this city and Philadelphia, asking them to be present at a series of experiments that he proposed making with a new anesthetic he had discovered. He explained that this compound was something entirely unknown hitherto, and the result of five years' work. He pleaded that he was poor, and could not afford to give his formula to the world, and although he was willing to demonstrate the uses of his discovery, he preferred to keep the ingredients to himself.

Here the little dentist went into a discussion of the functions of nerves and the effect of the old anesthetics on the system and their tendency to produce nausea, headache, prostration and perhaps death. He wound up by saying his discovery produced natural sleep almost instantaneously, and the patients recovered of their own accord invigorated and refreshed. He hobbled into a side room and soon appeared with a decrepit old woman. He promised to remove all the decayed stumps from her mouth if she allowed him to use his anesthetic in the operation. He saturated a napkin with a substance that looked like water and emitted a pleasant odor. For an instant he held it over the old lady's nose telling her to breathe freely, and in thirty seconds she was unconscious. He allowed the napkin to remain and for over two minutes he worked extracting sixteen teeth. The patient never moved, and to all appearances she did not feel the pain attending the operation. On removing the napkin almost immediately she revived and stepped out of the chair as fresh and hearty as she got into it.

She said she had a vague idea of what was going on while under the influence of the anæsthetic, but could not move hand or foot. She said she knew that the dentist was pulling her teeth out, but felt no pain.

Eight persons were made and kept unconscious from a half to two and a half minutes. In one case the napkin was allowed to remain for six minutes. The patients all told stories similar to the old lady's and went away in good spirits. The Star man was the last subject, and these, in brief, were the sensations he experienced:

From the moment the napkin was placed over his face a feeling of unconsciousness came over him, and at the end of third free inspiration every thing became blank. His arms hung at his side, and he could feel that they were there, but they were beyond the voluntary control of the will; a sense of dreamy languor followed, and, as if on the wings of a fleet bird, he was borne through the air high above the earth. The sensation was altogether pleasant. Then the scene changed, and his skull tingled, a million minute hammers no bigger than a fine needle began pounding all at once. They shattered into fragments in an instant, the napkin was removed all was over. Recovery was instantaneous, and all effect was gone. The time taken by one of the physicians was one and three-quarter minutes.—N. Y. Star.

A FRAUD EXPOSED.

How a Clever Chinaman Confounded an Unscrupulous American.

An exchange gives the following instance of the manner in which a clever Chinaman exposed the trickery of an unscrupulous American. A man who had found a Chinese laundry ticket in the street took it to the only washhouse in the town and asked for the clothes it represented. John took the bit of paper with its curious inscription and retired behind a screen. After a good deal of chattering between the two washer-men, the one who had taken the ticket again came forward, and glancing suspiciously at the American, asked:

"Shirtee?"
"Yes."
"Colla?"
"Yes."
"Han'chiff?"
"Yes."
"Socks?"
"Yes."

The Chinaman's patience here vanished, and throwing down the ticket, he flung the door open, pointed towards it, and screamed, at the top of his voice:

"Alle one big lie!"—Youth's Companion.

VICTIMS OF TERROR.

A Popular Folly Which Should No Longer Be Countenanced.

It is very generally believed that if a healthy dog should bite a man, and at any period become rabid, the man will also become rabid—no matter how many months or years have elapsed. The consequence of this absurd prejudice is that healthy dogs are frequently killed in order to prevent their becoming rabid. There was an example of this only a few weeks ago; and unhappily the bitten man died a victim to the terrors of hydrophobia. It was quite clear, from the symptoms, that he was not affected by hydrophobia; and the magistrate very properly expressed disapprobation at the folly of destroying the dog before it was evident whether or not it was rabid. The rule in such a case is perfectly simple. If the dog is suspected of being rabid it should be kept chained up, out of the way of injury, until the disease declares itself. By this plan it may very soon be shown whether the suspicion was ill-founded, and whether the dog was or was not rabid. Such a proof would often greatly relieve the mind of the bitten man and his family, and remove that terrible anxiety which, in spite of every surgical aid, must for some weeks assail them.—N. Y. Ledger.

—It is seldom that a drunken man will admit that he is intoxicated, the insane person is the last to find out that his mind is not right, and it is impossible to convince the bore that of all the people in the world he is the most obnoxious and unbearable—Buffalo Express.

THE COMBINATION FENCE

A fence that is wanted, and in time will be used by every one that want a fence, either around the House, Garden or Farm, as it is cheap, durable and serviceable, to keep in check horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, chickens, etc. and restrain wolves, dogs, and rabbits, etc.

Having all the advantages of a picket fence in restraining animals from jumping, and not so liable to decay, and at much less cost, and no barbs to injure valuable stock, thus placing it far in advance of any other fence now in use, hence it must be the fence of the future; all who have it want more.

It is portable and can be removed from field to field by drawing staples from posts, taking out the splice lath and rebundling it. We offer this fence for sale in bundles of five and six rod at Burlington.

H. J. Foster, Co. Supt.

Rev. Lafe Johnson delivered a temperance lecture in the Court-house last Wednesday evening. Owing to the unsettled condition of the weather the audience was not as large as it otherwise would probably have been. He spoke for an hour and fifteen minutes, assailing the use of intoxicants in strong terms.

The negro [illegible] who has been confined in the upper story of the jail made his escape last Saturday night by breaking a bar across the window inside of the jail, and then punching out a few brick, he climbed down a sheet and took his leave. The exit was made at identically the same place through which the last negro escaped. These frequent escapes are what leads to the hanging of every negro who is suspicioned of any of the higher crimes. The negro who got out Saturday night was put in for knifing a Walton negro not long since.

Notice: To those whom it may concern: By a late act of the legislature, the county judge, the county clerk and the county attorney, together with another competent person selected by them, will compose a board before which shall be held an examination of any candidate for the office of county superintendent of common schools in the county. In compliance with the above act, we have selected L. M. Whitehead to act with us on that occasion, and will meet at Burlington on Friday and Saturday, the 25th and 26th days of June, 1886.

MULDOON'S PIC-NIC.

A Big Parade—Lots of Fun—And Nothing to Eat.

Having appointed several different evenings for a festival at his house and disappointing the boys as often, last Thursday evening they hit upon a plan which will make Col. Jim Westbay either shut up or put up. That was one of the evenings he flickered on the boys, and when he came up in town after supper, though very reluctant, was escorted back home by Drs. Grant and Furnish, followed by whose diagram as above presented was captured by our special artist. Reed had command of a procession which was headed by the GOOSE QUILL BAND.

MARSHAL JOE REED

The procession was a very enthusiastic organization, and the air was rent with cheers the entire length of the line of march. When Mr. Westbay's residence was reached he was called on for a speech, when our artist again got in his work, and we are able to present our readers with his handsome phiz as he addressed the audience on the goose question. Here he is as an expounder of the aforesaid g. q.

The procession, after the speech, was marched back up in town when it was disbanded, having had about an hour of "exceedingly much fun." Jim says that when the whole town, as it looked to him that it did, turns out on an occasion of that kind, he thinks he will not disappoint them again by fixing a date for his festival.

Profs. Whitehead and Mack are receiving considerable encouragement in their efforts towards making up a school to be taught in the Morgan Academy. We would like to see them open school with not less than a hundred pupils.

The I. O. O. F. Picnic.

The picnic given by the Odd Fellows lodge of this place last Saturday was not as largely attended as was hoped it would be owing to the fact that that day was the only one in the week the farmers could work the soil on account of the rain.

Slightly cool, the day was decidedly more favorable than many had anticipated, and by nine o'clock quite a crowd had assembled in town to witness the procession which paraded the streets about ten o'clock, headed by a brass band from Cincinnati. The procession broke ranks in town and was again organized near the picnic grounds and marching to the stand Rev. A. J. Reed, of Richmond, this State, addressed the crowd in about an hour's speech, devoted principally to the history of the organization of the Independent Order of Odd-Fellows.

Grand Master James T. Willis arrived on the grounds just before the conclusion of Reed's address, but when called to the stand excused himself from speech making. This brought the programme up to the point where the dancers were given possession of the platform for the day, and the preparations for spreading dinner commenced, and shortly after twelve o'clock everybody was invited to partake of an elegant and bountiful dinner, one calculated to tempt the appetite of the most dainty. A large lot of provisions was left after everybody had satisfied their appetite.

After noon the crowd was considerably increased and at three o'clock there probably were as many as 500 people on the grounds, all seemingly enjoying themselves.

The following lodges were represented in the procession: Rising Sun, Morning Star, of Petersburg, and Venus, of Florence.

NOTES.

O. P. Winters makes a boss collector.

Good order prevailed through out the day.

Geo. A. Yates, of Covington, was in attendance.

Some of the young people never tire of dancing.

The platform was densely crowded in the afternoon.

Quite a number of ladies came over from Rising Sun.

The beautiful banner carried in the procession, was made by Mrs. W. E. Piper and Mrs. O. F. Bange.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

PLATTSBURG.

The blackberry crop will be immense.

New potatoes and green beans are on the bill of fare at present.

Mrs. Medline Hensley, of Ludlow, is visiting her sick father at this place.

Miss Lourena Sullivan will spend several weeks visiting relatives at Ludlow, Ky.

Grafton won his race in three straight heats at Dayton, Ohio, last Wednesday. Time—2:25¼.

M. F. Wingate was initiated into the mysteries of Odd-Fellowship at Petersburg, last lodge night.

The late heavy rains caused the wheat to fall down, and in consequence a great amount will be lost.

Some of the farmers got a fine stand of tobacco, while others planted three or four times and have no stand yet.

If a churn costs $7½ when butter is selling at 8½ cents, what will a churn cost when butter is selling at 25 cents.

The reaper and mower moweth, and the festive bumble bee getteth up the busy grangers trousers legs and bumbleth.

The price of tobacco has advanced some, and our tobacco merchants are shipping a considerable quantity of the weed.

Sidney Gaines and Ira Wingate have started a grocery and butcher shop in connection with their drug store at Petersburg.

Miss Bell Eames and her little brother, Willie, of Jeffersonville, Ind., are visiting their aunt, Mrs. Ollie Johnson, of this place.

Mr. Wood Sullivan, what are your chances for being Justice of the Peace in Burlington precinct? "Going to get there, and don't you forget it."

W. J. Cowen was with the seining party that struck Woolper the other day. Will was seeing about his political fences in this eend of the deestrict.

We met J. M. Conner at Bellevue a few days ago. Jim is one of the busiest men in the county. He says the wool crop will bring $80,000 into the county this year.

Thomas Wingate will soon be a resident of our town, having rented Andy Kroser's farm near here. Andy will move back to his old home at Lawrenceburg, Ind.

W. L. Gaines found a gold pin belonging to some secret society on the Woolper pike the other day. Owner can have same by calling at the Woolper store and proving property.

The Recorder should present Mr. L. Nichols with a chromo or a side bar buggy, as his paper has been coming to this office longer than any subscriber in this neighborood.

Miss Mary Bradley, the Petersburg postmistress, has moved her office around on Front street opposite the river. Miss Mary is the most accommodating P. M., Petersburg ever had.

Scott Johnson has a chicken hatched last March that has layed ten eggs and gone to setting. Mr. Johnson broke one of the eggs and found it perfect in every particular. The pullet is now setting on the eggs and we are patiently waiting developements.

We received a dispatch the other morning announcing the fact that the Circuit Clerk and County Attorney would soon commence building them a new residence a piece in the capitol. Nothing unusual about this only guess Billy Rice will get the job.

Mr. B. F. Jarrell, at one time one of the largest land holders in the county, is lying at the point of death, and unless he rallies, cannot survive but a few days. Bad management has brought Mr. J. down to a tolerably low point as to this world's goods.

We are for Edgar Cropper for one of the county Commissioners, and Hon. T. F. Curley, of Walton, for another. Now, lets pick another good man and we will have a trio that can't be beat. What you say Messrs. Editors to Cur- [illegible] K [illegible]

[illegible] W. J. [illegible] school in Woolper will close for the summer term in a few days. [illegible] is a good teacher and the patrons will employ him for the winter term. Saturday is the day we elect trustees, and if any person attends it will be the first time in several years.

The traveling public is under many obligations to the directors of the Woolper pike for the excellent condition of the bridges on said road. When going any place come our road; we will treat you well and make the toll low for cash. Four or five fence rails and a few clap boards make a good bridge, and then the management are erecting another toll house, which will make the accommodations first class.

UNION.

Miss Jennie Crouch is a guest of Mrs James A. Huey.

Mr. J. A. Huey and wife are visiting relatives in Ohio.

A VENERABLE WOMAN.

Death of Mrs. Monahan at the Age of One Hundred and Three Years.

The oldest inhabitant of the metropolis was that pleasant and cheerful old lady, the late Mrs. Mary Monahan, who lived more than half a century in Ireland and another half a century in New York. At the age of one hundred and three years and some months she died suddenly a few days ago, and was buried in Calvary Cemetery. There is no mistake about her great age, for the day of her birth is recorded in the parish church in Mino, in the County Tipperary, where she was christened.

She was born in the last year of the American revolution and was six years old when the French revolution began. She was ten years old when Louis XVI. was beheaded and heard the execution discussed as a contemporary event. She was fifteen years old when the rebellion of 1798 broke out in Ireland and when she was over one hundred years old remembered seeing her brothers at work 1798 contriving arms, and recounted how the English soldiers came to her father's house in the night and searched it while she remained hid in a pit in the ground. She was married in the year that young General Bonaparte closed his second campaign in Italy. She was a middle-aged woman when the battle of Waterloo was fought. She began to wear spectacles at sixty years, five years before the Mexican war broke out, and she wore them thirty-eight years. When she had grown to be ninety-eight years old her eyes grew bright again and her "second sight" returned. She laid aside her spectacles, having no further use for them, and never put them on again. At the age of one hundred and one years her vision was so good that she could thread a needle. When she was a century old she got her second hair. She had been slightly gray from her sixtieth to her one hundredth year, but now her hair came out as black as a raven's wing. She was stout, had a white complexion and fine features and was a handsome and pleasing centenarian. In her hundred and first year she played a good game of forty-five with cards and often sat down to the card table with people who were seventy and eighty years younger than herself and was always able to detect them in any attempt at cheating.

There was another old lady in the street, Mrs. Skelly, who was ninety-eight years old, and Mrs. Monahan and she used to visit back and forth, take tea at each other's house and talk of old times together, being particularly wont to discuss things that happened in the eighteenth century. At the age of one hundred and three years Mrs. Monahan took her great-grandchildren on her knee and told them fairy stories. She had eleven great-grandchildren and twenty grandchildren. Her faculties were unimpaired to the last. When this old lady of more than one hundred and three years lay in her coffin, with her black hair and her snow-white complexion, she looked like a young woman of twenty-five. Time had not left a wrinkle on her face.—N. Y. Morning Journal.

The Winsome Resting Places of the Gay City of Havana.

The cafes of Havana are as bright and breezy as those of Paris, but are more winsome at all seasons of the year, for the climate allows a greater openness to the street, which is taken advantage of in all little ways of decoration and arrangement that stand for invitation and welcome. Some of them are very grand affairs, but all have an atmosphere of snugness and daintiness that is delicious. And it must be set down to the credit of all these people that the delicate refinements of life are inherent. Courtesy, politeness, consideration, or at least surface use of it, are universal. They are an artistic people in the environment of little things, though themselves unconscious of that national characteristic, and both facts are delightful to one who tarries with them. Havana is as bustling, busy a city as exists, but this quality of tolerance, or consideration, or of kindly indifference, or of whatever it is, that allows a respectable stranger or a domestic tramp to rest his body anywhere, at any time, without being hustled or, worse, levied upon and brutally menaced into purchase, whether or not—is a grateful one; and you may sit in a church all day, in a cafe as long as you like, or step into a shop and take possession of one of the rocking chairs that are found everywhere, remaining there contemplating street-scenes half a day, if you wish, and no one will approach you unless you indicate such desire. These cafes and fondas (or eating-houses)—for the latter are equally resorted to—are the resting-places of the gay city. Their number and patronage are remarkable. They are all wide open to the street, one fancies almost a part of it, frequently more than one-half the cafe being underneath long, wide, huge-pillared porticoes, where chattering crowds by day and brilliant crowds by night, under the flare of lamps in great century-old metal frames, never cease cigarette-smoking, gin and wine drinking—although all liquors are used in sparing quantities, however frequently ordered—and between the shrill cries of the dulceros, or confection peddlers, the hoarse importunities of the lottery-ticket mobs, the ever-minor music of the wandering street minstrels and the numberless sounds of a marvelously gay but never brutal and more than half-oriental city life, the "click, click, click" of the never-silent dominoes upon the marble tables, come to you as an undertone staccato of myriads of unseen castanets.—Edgar L. Wakeman, in Chicago News.

—A witty nobleman once asked a clerical gentleman at the bottom of the table why the goose, when there was one, was always placed next to the parson. "Really, my lord," said the clergyman, "your question is somewhat difficult to answer, and so remarkably odd that I shall never see a goose again without being reminded of your lordship."

SATURDAY NIGHT.

The week is o'er and all its work is done;
The weary toiler seeks his rest;
[illegible] is he glad to see the [illegible] sun
A deep lull sink in the west.

Six days of steady, unremitting heat,
Of fretting heart and throbbing brain,
Of busy hands and quick [illegible] feet,
Of ever present, a constant strain.

How good it is to have the tension then relaxed,
The heavy burden laid aside,
And all our bonded faculties unbound,
And freedom come, a joyous tide.

To leave behind the counting room and mart,
To think no more of unpaid bills,
To find [illegible] from these dull things apart
That which our higher nature fills.

To quaff the fragrance of the flowers again,
To open nature's pictured book,
To listen to the robin's [illegible] strain
Within some cool, sequestered nook.

To feel that God did not intend this life
To be a constant round of care,
Nor that amid its ceaseless toil and strife
Men should a brow of sorrow wear.

These resting spots, these happy breathing spells,
When [illegible] murmuring streams we stray,
Or gaze on meadows starred with asphodels
Are God's sweet whisperings by the way.

God's whisperings are these unto our souls,
Distinct [illegible] and prophecies
Of that which is to come, where ever rolls
The peace of God, beyond the skies.

Leave then thy toil and care, my brother man,
When thy six days of labor end;
Accept of Heaven's benignest plan,
And walk with God as friend with friend.
—G. W. Crofts, in Chicago Inter Ocean.

TWO KINDS OF LOVE.

A Graphic Tale of Army Life and Death.

It would be difficult to find a region wherein extremes meet more strikingly than in that portion of the Pacific coast along which some of the posts of the United States army are situated. The refinements in advanced civilization are, in many cases, as scrupulously adhered to by the garrison officers and their families as they are unknown and uncared-for among the rough miners and ranchers who surround them. As a natural result of all this there is no sort of intercourse between the two classes, and each knows comparatively little of the habits and lives of the other.

One exquisite afternoon, when the sun was going down with a soft gorgeousness unknown to Eastern skies, there came along a little woodland path a tall, young girl, whom it would have been somewhat difficult to identify with either of the classes referred to. She might have been daughter or sister to one of the officers but that a sort of ruralness, as far as possible from awkwardness, seemed to characterize her. But, as to her face, she was beautiful enough to be Clara Vere de Vere—or a wood nymph—though in reality she was very far removed from either type. She was only Mary Gray, the teacher of the little school, where the rough miners' children went to get their early store of learning. Being left dependent on her own exertions, on the death of her father, she had come from a somewhat more civilized community to take this school, and had got board in the family of the parents of some of her pupils, plain, hard-working people, who did not understand her ways and cared so little to investigate them that they let her entirely alone, not knowing what a boon they conferred thereby.

So she lived her lonely life, scarcely knowing that it was lonely. No girl could have been less introspective and analytical of self, and she did not once suspect that her soul was enfolded like the fragrance in a rosebud. She no more dreamed of a fuller life than the colorless, scentless bud, in its wrappings of dingy green, dreams that it needs but the magic touch of the sun to burst into a joyous and fragrant rose.

Was the costume she wore on the evening we are speaking of an elegant toilet or not? Who shall say? It was the simplest white cotton dress that clad her slim beauty with a fitness that made it seem a part of it, and the hat she wore was a plain white straw that seemed to set on her dainty head and shade her blue eyes as no other bit of millinery in the world could have done. It was a warm evening, and the kerchief that crossed on her breast left bare a portion of the roundness of her milk-white throat, and outlined, rather than concealed, the slim beauty of her figure. She had two shabby little books in one hand, and in the other a great glowing bunch of heliotrope, pulled with the wanton greediness with which we mass together the ox-eye daisies and golden rod of our country walks. Now and then, as she strolled along, she held this bouquet close to her face and inhaled its sweetness with a keen, sensuous enjoyment.

She was entirely unconscious of self and certainly nothing was farther from her thoughts just now than that she was the object of attention from a pair of very interested eyes. These were in the possession of a tall young officer, who came sauntering toward her, with that indescribable ease of bearing which familiarity with barracks and ballrooms sometimes—by no means always—imparts. He was dressed in a sort of fatigue uniform and was smoking a cigarette, which he threw away as he came nearer the young girl, lifting his cap at the same moment. Mary knew, of course that he was one of the officers from the post. She had often seen them, as she had seen the birds of the air, but she had never spoken to one of them, and she would almost as soon have expected one of the birds to sweep down and engage her in conversation as she would have expected one of the officers to talk to her. It was not exactly that she felt them so far above her—only altogether different. Five minutes later the espisode had passed out of her mind.

Not so with Capt. Darcy. He had once had susceptibilities almost as keen as Mary's now, and while these were now some, what the worse for wear he was still fastidious enough to be fired to something like enthusiasm by the wonderful beauty of the girl he had met so unexpectedly in that lonely wood. He must find out who she was at all costs, and so, after watching her out of sight, he set off rather rapidly toward the post to make inquiries at once. He had recently been ordered here, in a general upturning in army circles, but he was determined to find some one to give him the information he desired.

A month passed. Perhaps it was very much such a month to Darcy as numerous others he could recall. But what a month for Mary Gray! What a revelation of wonder! What an undreamed of flood of glory had been poured out on her poor, dull, patient little life! Poor little life, indeed! It had been stagnant and uninspiring enough before, and now it was to learn to the last letter, all the mysterious lessons of joy and pain that are taught only in the school of love.

* * * * * * *

Once more the setting sun illuminated the quiet little woodland path, and once more little Mary Gray is strolling homeward in the scented summer air. But this time she was not alone. A handsome young soldier walked, with familiar ease, at her side, and now, as they reached a fallen log that obstructed their path-way, he gave her his hand to help her to cross it, and when she stepped upon it and paused a moment, he drew closer and passed his arm around her waist.

"What a picture," he said softly, "let us stop and watch the sunset."

Their present position put their faces on a level, and by a common impulse they turned toward each other and their [illegible] were [illegible] together. They [illegible] in the stillness of their [illegible] and then the young man moved a little apart from her and [illegible] her [illegible] with his hands, feasting his gaze upon the sweetness of her eyes. The silence which neither knew how long was broken at last by Darcy, as his lips softly framed the word:

"Darling!"

She moved her head a little that she might rest it on his shoulder and the great wave of tenderness that swept from her to him lifted the young man's soul to a conscious exaltation.

"Strange, how new this feeling is to me! I have never felt it before," he said, surprised at the sincerity of his own words. A score of love affairs he had had—one, indeed, that antedated and he thought would outlast all the rest—but nothing in his past experience had been like this. A sudden look of trouble crossed his face, and he moved away from her as he said:

"I forgot to tell you, little one, that I won't be able to meet you to-morrow evening as usual. The Colonel's wife expects some lady visitors, who are to arrive to-night, and there is to be a dance in their honor to-morrow night—a stupid affair, which I shall be greatly bored by, but I can't refuse to lend a hand at the preparations, especially as one of the ladies happens to be an old acquaintance. So you must bid me good-bye now, for two whole days, and you must promise not to miss me too much."

A look of frightened trouble came into her face as he spoke, and she ran her arm through his and clung so close to him that he could not help clasping her to his heart.

"Don't speak to me of not missing you. You would not have me not to! But, oh, I shall be so anxious about you. Forgive me for begging you once more to be very careful about Ben Woods."

"What a determined little goose it is!" said Darcy, caressingly. "The next time I catch Ben Woods committing a midnight trespass upon another man's claim, I shall not be content to let him off simply with one knock-down blow, but I'll cudgel him well for having caused my little one all these fears and misgivings."

"But you don't know how desperate these men are," said Mary, anxiously. "He never will forgive you, and the worst of it is he will not dare to attack you openly. Oh, be careful, for my sake. Keep out of his way until his anger has had time to cool, and don't go about after dark. I almost feel as if he might start up from behind those bushes now."

He put her from him a moment, that he might give her a look of fond reassurance. Then he said suddenly:

"You will make me late for drill, you small enchantress, you! I will meet you, as usual, in the wood, day after to-morrow. And now come and give me a kiss, all of your own accord."

But Mary had never done this yet, and she only smiled and stood still.

"Think about Ben Woods," he said. "Remember I am in danger."

Then she raised her beautiful troubled eyes and looked at him. He met her look with one of answering fondness.

"Come," he said softly, "if Mary loves me, she will surely come."

"My little darling," he said softly, over again. His voice was quiet and tender and reflecting nothing of the agitation that shook hers as she murmured in low, incoherent whispers:

"Oh, my dear one! My dear one! Take care of yourself. Think what it would be to me if anything should happen to you. Oh, be prudent, be watchful, for my sake."

He put her from him with fond reassurances, and saying a hasty good-bye, vanished from her sight.

It happened that as Mary was returning from a solitary walk, which had been inexpressibly lonely and depressing, on the evening appointed for the dance at the garrison, she came suddenly upon Ben Woods, talking in low threatening tones with a man whom she recognized as one of the most reckless characters of the mining camp near by. Both men had evidently been startled at seeing her. She longed to see Darcy again that she might put him on his guard, but he had told her he would be otherwise engaged this evening and so the prospect of being able to communicate with him seemed hopeless.

She walked on very sadly and when she reached the rough dwelling that was all she had of home, she observed rather languidly that its inmates were talking together on the porch, with an appearance of unusual interest. She cared little about it, until Darcy's name struck her ear, and then she listened eagerly. All she could learn was that during the morning Darcy had ridden up to the post-office of the village, in company with a lady who was staying at the post, and that Ben Woods, who happened to be lounging near the horse-block in front of the office, had cut at the lady's horse with a switch he had held in his hand, which had caused it to rear suddenly, and although the lady was a good horsewoman and quickly controlled the animal, she had been a good deal alarmed. Darcy, meantime, had gone into the office, but returned just in time to see what had happened, and had struck the ruffian with his whip across the cheek and neck, making the blood come, after which, the lady being a good deal unstrung, he had mounted and ridden away with her, leaving Ben uttering savage threats of vengeance.

All this, recited in Mary's ears, chilled her poor little heart with terror, and made what had seemed hopeless and impossible ten minutes ago, seem now practical and imperative. She was resolved to communicate with Darcy, and, as only one way presented itself to her mind, that she must take.

She waited until the father of the family had gone off for his evening gossip at the village store, and the kind mother had taken her little ones to bed, and then, when she herself was supposed to be safe in her own room up stairs, she crept out of the house, wrapped in a dark cloak, with the hood drawn over her head, and flew rapidly down the garden path and out into the road. She felt no impulse of fear for herself. It was all absorbed in her terror for the safety of him who was so much dearer to her than her own life. It was a quiet time and she met no one. When she reached the garrison there was a great deal of excitement prevailing and she was allowed to slip in unnoticed. Making her way around to the back of the long, low room, from which she could hear the sounds of music and festivity, she saw that, as there was no porch here, there was no one standing about who might see her; so she climbed upon some lumber which happened to be there and tried to see into the room. The shutters, however, were closed on this side, but when she cautiously tried to part the ones near which she stood, she found that it yielded a little. Through the aperture thus created she looked in. The sight that met her gaze literally dazzled her. The festoons of green and flowers, the brilliant lights and, above all, the bewildering costumes were so unlike anything she had ever seen before that she became breathless for an instant. But in all this brilliant throng one couple was pre-eminent. Surely no man of them all had such elegance of form and distinction of bearing as Capt. Darcy, who was looking splendid to-night in his glittering uniform and surely no woman of them all could compare with his companion [illegible] as he was [illegible] in his arms as they whirled around the room to a maddening waltz tune which the band was playing. She was a dazzling brunette, dressed in a gorgeous pink satin which displayed her [illegible] neck and arms with a [illegible] to Mary's astonished gaze. A circlet of diamonds clasped her round throat and solitaire diamonds gleamed at her ears and scintillated in her dark hair.

In an interval of the dance this couple paused just inside the window at which Mary was watching. He bent eagerly toward his companion and said in fervent, excited tones, as he lightly wielded her jeweled fan:

"Have I tried you, dearest? Forgive me. It has been so long since I have held you to my heart—and I have missed you so—and longed for you and been so wretched and lonely without you."

How the fine eyes, that Mary loved so, gleamed as he said it! How the dark cheek flushed! How fast and eager came the deep-drawn breaths! He looked at her with an excited, fervid look, compared with which the fond and tender gaze he had so often bestowed on little Mary seemed weak and meaningless.

"Have you, indeed, been so wretched?" asked Darcy's companion, with a splendid gleam of her dark eyes. "I might perhaps have doubted that, from certain hints let fall."

"What hints?" asked Darcy, suddenly.

"As to a certain rustic beauty, with whom Captain Darcy has been seen walking in quiet and sequestered spots."

Mary's heart beat loud and she listened breathlessly.

"How can you listen to such nonsense?" said Darcy, lightly, gazing at her with a fond reproachfulness.

"I did not listen to it—or, if I did, it was only to laugh at it," returned his companion, showing her gleaming teeth in a dazzling smile. "No, indeed! If ever I conclude to try the undiverting pastime of being jealous, it will be of no rustic beauty. I know you too well. The luxuries and refinements of life are all potent with you. Rusticity and poverty are not for you. Cleopatra sailing down the Nile might possibly cause one a pang or so, but no rural Phyllis."

"You know me well, as you say, my beautiful one," he answered. "What created being could ever charm me after you? You will have to acknowledge at least that you are my destiny, as I am yours."

Mary heard it all and her heart seemed turned to stone. She did not, for one instant deceive herself. She not only felt and knew that Darcy did not love her, but she perfectly realized that he never had loved her. And she comprehended, at the same time, as she had never done before the depth and length and hight and strength of the great love he had awakened in her.

But now once more those strains of music smote the air and Darcy put his arm around his beautiful companion and they floated away among the merry whirl of dancers. The rapid motion, the confusion of colors, the mingled sounds seemed to take away little Mary's senses and she sank into a sitting posture, almost fainting. In a few minutes she was roused by hearing voices, and when she recognized Ben Wood's in one of these, her strength seemed to return to her, at a bound, and in a moment, she was eager and alert. Listening intently, she was made aware of the plan which these two men were plotting—a plan of such recklessness as only crazy men would have attempted. They had resolved to watch Darcy, and, when an opportunity offered, to fire at him, and then make their escape. In a few minutes, they passed on, without having seen Mary, who was screened by the shadows of the house.

She sprang to her feet, animated and resolute. A present, immediate danger threatened the being who was still all the world to her, and although she knew now that she was nothing to him, she was ready to do and dare anything to save him. She bent forward to the window once more, and sought, with eager eyes, for the couple she had recently been watching, but they were nowhere to be seen. Convincing herself that they had left the room she slipped noiselessly from her place and stole around to the other side of the house. There she caught a glimpse, ahead of her, of two figures walking off towards the sea-wall that skirted the garrison of one side. Treading lightly over the grassy path, she kept them in view, herself quite unobserved, until she reached a little clump of bushes very near to where the wall ran, and as they passed by this and kept straight on, she resolved to screen herself there until she could think of some expedient to warn Darcy. From here she could see every movement of the handsome couple, as they walked up to the sea-wall and stood a moment gazing out over the waters radiant beneath the silver moon.

For a moment they stood there in silence, her hand within his arm, their faces turned seaward. Then, at the same instant, they turned toward each other and their eyes met. For an instant Mary felt as if she must cry out in her agony and desolation, and she might have done so had she not that instant become aware of certain sounds that reawakened her fears and made her forget herself.

Ben Woods and his accomplice were standing within a few feet of her, and as she stood breathless listening to their muttered words, one of them raised a pistol and took deliberate aim at Darcy.

But before the click of the trigger was heard, Mary had sprung from her place of concealment and thrown herself forward. She was just in time. A second more and Darcy would have been a dead man; but he was saved. The bullet, aimed at his heart, was turned aside, and little Mary had received it in her own. She fell forward, almost without a cry, and as the murderer turned and fled, Darcy caught her in his arms.

"Mary!" he cried, dimly comprehending in the midst of his bewilderment that she had given up her life for his, "what is it, are you hurt? Are you dying, Mary? Speak to me, darling!"

The little familiar word came from him unconsciously in his excitement, and surely it did no harm. The sumptuous creature, on whom he had so recently lavished his endearments, had fallen swooning to the ground, and the poor little forsaken one to whom it had once been applied so tenderly heard it now for the last time. She was almost gone, but at that word a gleam of light came into her eyes, and for one instant they were raised to his with the old confiding light, and then they closed forever.—Julia Magruder in Detroit Free Press.

Minnesota's Progress.

The contrast of the Minnesota of to-day with the infant State of twenty-eight years ago must constitute one of most grateful reflections of the pioneers of that epoch. They see her now, a vigorous and prosperous commonwealth, with over 2,200,000 inhabitants, an assessed valuation of over $400,000,000; with 4,226 miles of railroad; with all its State institutions well equipped and endowed and in successful operation; with its farming, manufacturing, dairy and stock-raising and lumbering interests profitably carried on, and adding to its wealth daily; while education, intelligence, thrift and prosperity are the free heritage of its fortunate people.—St. Paul Pioneer-Press.

ORIENTAL LIFE.

Ceremonies Observed at a Fashionable Turkish Dining Party.

In the Oriental household there are no fixed hours, no fixed habits, no regular sitting-rooms, dining-rooms, bedrooms. The divan, which serves as a seat or lounging-place during the day, serves as a couch at night. Each person eats when disposed to. Sweetmeats, herbets and coffee, particularly the last, are partaken of at intervals all day long. When a regular meal is served, it is usually an "occasion" of some sort, and it is served in courses. The greater the "occasion," the larger the number of courses. One dish composes the course. It is served on a large circular platter of copper or brass or silver or gold, according to the wealth of the host. The platter is placed on a circular table of the same circumference as the platter, and about a couple of feet high. Around this table the guests place themselves either on cushions or—in order to be accurate I must be inelegant—squatting. There are neither knives, forks nor plates, nothing but the huge platter, which entirely covers the table; and from this huge dish each person helps himself with the first two fingers of the right hand. Never under any circumstances must food be touched with the left hand: to do so would be to defile it. A meal served in this way consists of any where from six to twenty-six courses. Some of them are very nice, many of them very nasty. It is hardly necessary to say that no wine is served. The good Mussulman never drinks wine in public. After every course servants hand to each guest a small basin containing tepid water delicately perfumed and a clean napkin. This is very refreshing, and, when the manner of dining is remembered, very necessary. There is no lack of liquid refreshment, but as this is made up of sherbets of various flavors, but all extremely sweet, one is apt, about midway of the feast, to long for a draught of cool, clean, comfortable water.

Of course, it is always more or less of an "event" when the master of the household visits the harem. There is always sad heart-burning and jealousy of the favorite wife—generally the last of the lot. From this circumstance one is apt to conclude that there is a great deal of human nature about the Turk, after all.

It is a very pretty sight to see a Turkish lady of rank taking her afternoon drive. This is always in a coupe or clarence; never in an open carriage. First comes the "saice," or running footman, always a tall, lithe, handsome young Arab, with bare legs and feet, clothed as to body in a thin white shirt, with wide, open flowing sleeves: a sash of gay colors around his waist, his head covered with the inevitable "tarboosh," around which is rolled a great turban of soft, white muslin. Armed with a long, light staff, he waves it in graceful curves and evolutions in the air as he runs in advance of the horses, clearing the way. Then comes in great state the eunuchs—two four or six, according to the rank of the "Pasha" to whom belongs the cortege, and then, lying back as only an Oriental woman can, is a soft, lovely, fat creature, with great, languishing black eyes, whose softness and brightness are enhanced by the "kohl" with which brows and lashes are colored. They shine like great stars above the white "yashmak" which covers the lower portions of the face. Some times may be seen a little, soft, dimpled hand, with palm and finger-tips rosy with "henna." The whole woman is enveloped in clouds of soft, white drapery, with here and there a great jewel gleaming. The "saice" flies on with his light, swinging pace and musical cry. The eunuchs ride rapidly and well, but with great "state and ancientry." Then the carriage bearing Fatima appears—a mass of white drapery, a gleam of jewels, a flash of dark eyes, a vision of beauty! and then—a cloud of dust.—N. Y. Mail and Express.

IN THE POULTRY YARD.

How Hens and Young Chicks Should Be Cared For in Early Summer.

One must not expect too much. The poultry-keeper certainly will be disappointed unless he discounts his hopes fifty per cent. and is contented with half as much as he expected. The maiden of the old story who counted her chickens too soon is only a type of the modern poultry amateur, who uses additional and multiplication too freely, and is badly cut up by division when he comes to sum up the results of his business. Nevertheless, there is a way of being successful in keeping poultry, and the man or woman, boy or girl, who can keep a flock of twelve or twenty fowls, and can figure up at the end of the season a profit of a few dollars from them, is on the way to make a larger business profitable. One thing at least is favorable, which is that poultry products are salable everywhere at fair prices, while near a large town or city quite a good price can be obtained for both eggs and chickens. Near a large city a profit of $7 per head has been made from a flock of twenty-two light Brahma hens, the eggs averaging seven dozen to each hen for the year and the young fowls forty pounds per hen, which resulted from an average of eight chicks to each hen, and each young fowl when fat for the holidays, weighing one with another, five pounds. At 25 cents a dozen for the eggs and 18 cents a pound for the chickens the sum total equaled $8.75 per hen. This instance will afford a basis for comparison with other flocks less favorably situated, and if the usual division be indulged in and the product be halved, and the prices then be halved, there will still be the very comfortable and satisfactory profit of nearly $2 per hen. This figuring ought to be encouraging to the ambitious young poultry-keeper, who can see very clearly that it does pay to rear poultry, although the price of eggs and fowls may be low, if he is careful and attentive to the needs of his flock.

In spring and summer care is most needed. The brooders are busy and the young chicks arriving freely require attention. The greatest bane however, of the poultry yard is fussing. When a hen is well set she should be left alone. The hen understands the business of incubation better than any incubator maker, and the only care required after a hen is safely on the nest is to watch for the chicks and be ready to take them from the nest until all the brood is hatched. A small basket, with a piece of blanket or soft woolen cloth to cover the young nestlings will be found very useful to save the young chicks from being crushed in the nest. As they are hatched they should be brought in and put in the basket, which is kept in a warm place. No feeding is required for twenty-four hours or more. The little creatures will sleep and digest the remnants of the yolk inclosed within them during the one or two days the remainder of the brood are coming forth.

The coops should be roomy and should be put in a dry place. After a number of years' practice we think an open shed facing the south is the best place for the coops, which are thus protected from sudden rain storms or rough weather. When the hen is in the coop with her brood she will get along without being watched, and fussing is again a bane to her. The staple food for young chicks is cracked wheat and corn. A coffee mill will serve to crack the wheat and a bushel of corn may be taken to the mill and be ground into coarse hominy. This is for the first few days' feeding. Whole wheat may be given when the chicks are ten days old. The greatest treat is a few earth worms dug from rich damp soil, and these are swallowed with avidity, and seem to be healthful. In place of these we take some lean beef and chop it fine and give a teaspoonful to a brood of ten or twelve once a day. Pure water renewed three times a day is indispensable. The very frequent "gapes" which destroys one-third of all the chickens hatched, as we believe, is easily avoided by keeping the chicks on clean ground. Our chicks have the run of the garden, the coops being set among the melons, where there is more room, but adjacent to the other coops. The sprightly, active young creatures will wander over half an acre of garden, picking up the flea beetles from the radishes and turnips, the flies from the onions, jumping up to take striped bugs from the melons and cucumbers, and by their restlessness disturbing every insect pest and saving something from its ravages. In a garden of half an acre there is room for twenty crops of ten chicks each, and the service these 200 chicks will do will pay all the cost of rearing them. A little corn-meal scattered around a plum tree, which is jarred immediately afterward, will bring up the chicks, which will seize upon every sly curculio which drops and lies as if dead, and will thus save the plums. The garden ground is clean and the gape worms are not picked up to infest the young chicks.

But the hens should not be neglected altogether. They are, or should be, inclosed in a yard and kept out of mischief. If the yard is large, as it should be, and divided into two parts to afford a change, and each half alternately sown with oats or peas, or rape seed, for green picking for the hens, they will do as well as if on a range. But among other varied food, a liberal tri-weekly allowance of fresh bones from the butcher, broken up small with a hammer, should not be neglected and an abundance of pure water should be provided. We have found a pasture of young rape and mustard sown upon half of the yard to be a most excellent provocative of eggs, and the plowing or spading of the yard—a hand plow is very useful for this purpose—buries all the foul matter and keeps the ground sweet, pure and healthful. This sort of food and ground is particularly conducive to health, and health to eggs and flesh, and consequently to profit.—Henry Stewart, in N. Y. Times.

ALASKAN CUSTOMS.

The Queer Method of Choosing a King Prevailing Among the Chilkat Indians.

As among nearly all savages, the women are brutalized, but they appear to have one prerogative of the most singular character that is well worth relating. Nearly everything descends on the mother's side, yet a chattel may be owned, or at least controled, by the men, although a traveler will notice many bargains wherein the woman's consent is first obtained. The royal succession is most oddly managed with reference to women's rights. The heir-apparent to the throne is not the oldest or any other child of the King and Queen, but is the Queen's nearest blood relative of the male persuasion, although the relationship may be no closer, perhaps, than that of cousin. As this curiously chosen King may marry any woman of the tribe, it is easy to see that any one may in this indirect way become the sovereign of the savages, and with the help of luck alone may acquire royal honors. One rich Indian woman of Sitka, who took a fancy to a slave, purchased him for the purpose of converting him into a husband, at a cost of nearly a thousand dollars in goods and chattels, and if he was not very expensive thereafter he may have been cheaper than the usual run of such bargains.—From Lieutenant Schwatka's "Along Alaska's Great River."

ROAD IMPROVEMENT.

How Dirt Roads Can Be Kept In a Reasonably Good Condition.

The matter of country roads and their improvement is to many like the roof of the man's house which could not be made water-tight when it rained, and when it was dry weather it did not require repair. It often happens that poor roads, especially what are commonly called dirt roads, are found to be tremendous inconveniences when they are miry or impassable, and then when it is dry and pleasant wheeling and riding it is unnecessary to rebuild them or abolish their defects.

Prof. G. E. Morrow, of the University of Illinois at Champaign, has given this subject much careful attention, and recently read a paper on dirt roads at the convention of Highway Commissioners at Springfield. The broad view is taken that good roads in every neighborhood are essential not only to the economical transportation of produce, but also to the best development of the people, socially, intellectually and religiously.

The perfect road is straight, level, smooth and hard. The main difficulty lies in keeping the roads in good condition during wet weather. In a level country it is necessary to make adequate provision for promptly removing or carrying off the surplus water. As Prof. Morrow forcibly remarks, to most effectively do this is the great object of work in making or repairing dirt roads on the prairies. Chiefly to secure this the road-bed is raised above the general level, its surface is "crowned," and ditches are made at the sides, and tiles are sometimes laid, frequently the most important point of all, because they most effectively prevent trouble from stagnant water. Doing these things in the best way, and then frequently smoothing the surface and preserving its slopes, is about all the wisest can do in securing good earth roads, aside from building and caring for bridges and culverts and reducing the grade where it is exceptionally great.

It is a suggestion worth considering that it is sometimes economy to vary the rule requiring roads to follow section lines. The departure from this rule is to run the roads along ridges or high and dry land rather than to blindly and rigorously go through thick and thin, ponds, slough or sags, which can not be easily drained. The road-bed should be graded, also, so that the surface is made higher than that of the land on either side, but this should not be done to the exclusion or neglect of good ditches, kept well opened and with free outlets. In recent tests at the University at Champaign it has been found that dry soil will take up from thirty-eight to forty per cent. of its weight of water by capillary attraction. Where there is standing water at the road-sides, or where the soil is saturated, it will draw much water even to the height of three feet. The engineering on railroads has this always in view, and the engineer prevents, as far as possible, water standing within three feet of the surface, even though the cars move on the rails held in place by heavy ties, often ballasted with stone or gravel. A narrow, raised road-way is recommended in preference to one of greater width, as the surface drainage will be better, but a very narrow bed with heavy slope to the sides is almost always objectionable, as not giving enough choice in travel, thus causing deeper ruts.

In wet land, lines of tile laid at the sides of the road, inside the open ditches, are recommended as a great help in carrying off water, which would otherwise have to be removed by evaporation. This tile work should be well done and the drain outlets kept free. Highway or road commissioners have considerable authority, let it be remembered, over the land beyond the narrow limits of the road itself, and ditches and their outlets come within their jurisdiction, and can be made to contribute materially to the success of road-making and repairing will be done by men whose special business this is, and not men working out their tax. The throwing of a lot of unpacked earth on the surface at certain seasons is alluded to as an abomination, and particularly, it may be added, when that loose earth is too often dragged up from the still damp ditches and put into the middle of the road, only to make vile pitch-holes during moist months of the year, and an indifferent road at any time.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Buried Treasuries in Silesia.

Some laborers digging out sand lately near Sacran, in the Oels district, in Silesia, found, about six feet below the surface, in a space hemmed around by large stones, a quantity of valuable objects, including many gold, silver and copper ornaments, with some porcelain, glass and bronze. There was a bronze stand over a meter high, adorned with numerous figures, apparently suited for hanging a kettle or pot, with it some exquisitely polished and engraved glass plates and some quite rude barbaric gold ornaments. Most probably it was plunder taken in war, hidden away by some one who could never return for it. Some precious articles disappeared during the first few hours after discovery, but the rest has been taken possession of for the Silesian Archaeological museum at Breslau.—London Times.

At the age of over ninety years, on July 4, 1828, Charles Carroll, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, laid the corner stone of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. The story that he appended "of Carrollton" to his name defiantly, to enable the British crown to identify him, is a fiction. He was accustomed to sign it so to avoid confusion, as there was another Charles Carroll.—Boston Budget.

Storm Signals.

As the coming of a great storm is heralded by the display of cautionary signals, so is the approach of that dread and fatal disease, Consumption of the Lungs, usually announced in advance by pimples, blotches, eruptions, ulcers, glandular swellings, and kindred outward manifestations of the internal blood poison, which, if not promptly expelled from the system, attacks the delicate tissues of the lungs, causing them to ulcerate and break down. Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" is the great remedy for this, as for all diseases having their origin in bad blood. It improves the appetite and digestion, increases nutrition and builds up the wasted system.

BECOMING SERIOUS.

The Lake Shore Switchmen's Strike at Chicago.

A Sharp Move on the Officials' Part—Trouble Expected All Along the Line.

CHICAGO, June 26.—Late this afternoon the Lake Shore officials scored their first triumph since the beginning of the strike, by moving a loaded freight train out of the city. Earlier efforts were frustrated by the strikers and their sympathetic followers, and the situation was exceedingly squally. Fifty special policemen arrived at the town of Lake Police Station at nine o'clock this morning with Superintendent Amsden. General Freight Agent Blodgett arrived at Forty-third street about the same time with twenty-five switchmen from Toledo and other points. The strikers also began to gather in apparently well-disciplined ranks, with a determination to prevent, if possible, any movement of freight trains. An engine moved out of the round-house and was attached to a train of ten freight cars which started up the track. It had not proceeded far when the strikers "threw" the switch and two cars were derailed. At four o'clock fifty police, accompanied by thirty new switchmen appeared on the scene. An engine was promptly run out from the round house, but the strikers had blocked the way with a box-car. The police charged, knocking men right and left with their clubs. Several arrests were made, the crowd gave way, and a freight train which had been abandoned in the forenoon was coupled to the engine and ran north to Thirty-eighth street. Here it was switched onto the main track and, guarded by over one hundred police, pulled safely out of the city. To-morrow curious things are looked for, and it is expected the strike will extend the whole length of the road.

NO PAYNE INVESTIGATION

Will be Held, Says a Majority of the Senate Committee.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections held a short meeting this morning and voted to report adversely to any investigation of the charges of bribery in connection with the election of Senator Payne. The majority of the committee think there is not sufficient evidence to show that money was used in the election, and are very confident that the result was not in any way affected by improper means. There will be a minority report in favor of an investigation. It is said that only Senators Hoar and Frye will sign the minority report, and that Senators Teller, Evarts, Logan, Saulsbury, Vance, Pugh and Eustis will sign the majority report.

OUT AFTER ELEVEN,

And Ducked By the Village Vigilantes.

NEW YORK, June 25.—Benjamin Thompson, a printer of Flushing, L. I., was detected by the vigilance organization of the town in the act of being on the street at 11 o'clock on Wednesday night. This is against the organization's rules, and Thompson was taken to the village fountain in the basin of which the water is always two or three feet deep. Notwithstanding his struggles he was thrown in, and when he crawled out, he was thrown in again. He would have been thrown back a third time had he not promised never to transgress the rules of the vigilantes again. This is Thompson's second experience at the hands of the vigilants.

An Important Discovery.

ANN ARBOR, MICH., June 25.—Dr. V. C. Vaughn, in examining a specimen of the ice-cream which recently poisoned a number of persons at Newton, has made the discovery that tyrotoxicon, the active element in poisonous cheese which he discovered some time since, was also present in the ice-cream, and was the cause of the sickness. This proves that tyrotoxicon is due to decomposition of milk, and may be developed in any milk which is kept in an impure atmosphere or unclean vessel. The germ seems to multiply very rapidly, and a small amount of tainted milk will poison a whole can. It is Dr. Vaughn's theory that tyrotoxicon has much to do with cholera infantum, the symptoms of which are similar to the symptoms of cheese poisoning.

Four Men Killed in a Collision.

DES MOINES, IA., June 25.—Last night about six miles from here an extra train crashed into the broken section of a freight train, smashing the caboose into splinters. Of the eight railroad laborers who were asleep in the caboose, four were killed, two injured and two escaped unhurt. The engineer and firemen saved themselves by jumping. Five cars were demolished, three of which were loaded with horses. Four of the horses were killed. The names of the laborers killed are Henry Hughes, S. M. Davidson, Dall Aldret and Thos. W. Hite. The collision occurred on a high embankment and bridge.

Dishonored His Calling.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., June 25.—The Rev. Father J. E. O'Sullivan, formerly Catholic priest in Camillus, this county, who was last evening found guilty of rape on Abbie O'Connar, formerly a domestic in his house, was this morning sentenced to eleven years in Auburn State prison.

A Matter of National Importance.

EL PASO, TEX., June 25.—Cutting, an American citizen, is illegally confined by Mexican authorities at Paso del Norte for an offense committed in this city. The United States Consul is unable to secure his release, and has forwarded a report to Washington.

Judge Davis' Death Hourly Expected.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL., June 25.—Ex-Vice President David Davis has declined steadily to-day, and may die before morning. His physician says he can not possibly live more than two days at most.

Trouble in Court.

ST. LOUIS, June 25.—During the trial of Judge Advocate McGary, of the Knights of Labor, hot words arose between him and Prosecuting Attorney McDonald, followed by blows.

The Anarchists' Jury.

CHICAGO, June 25.—As the result of to-day's work in the criminal court, a fourth juror, named C. B. Todd, was accepted by both sides and sworn in.

A Law Unless Vetoed.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—The Fitz John Porter bill passed the Senate by a vote of yeas 30, nays 17.

Child Killed by Lightning.

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—This evening hail as large as hazelnuts fell in many sections near Philadelphia. A barn at Holmesburg was struck, and Jacob Cove, an eight-year-old child, was instantly killed. His brother William, who was milking, was also stunned, and lies in a critical condition.

Plenty of Food in Ireland.

NEW YORK, June 25.—Michael Davitt has cabled Patrick Ford, of this city, that the crops in the west of Ireland are looking well, the people in much improved condition and that the famine fund may now be dropped.

Child Attacked by a Bald Eagle.

GREENVILLE, ILL., June 25.—A bald eagle made an attack upon the seven-year-old son of Washburn Wright near Mulberry Grove. As the boy was on his way to the pasture the bird swooped down on him and fastening his talons in his clothes raised him in the air, soaring several feet with him, when his clothing parted and the child dropped to the ground. The youth's screams brought to him his father, who was fortunately near by, and his presence frightened the eagle away.

Destructive Flames.

PEORIA, ILL., June 26.—An oil fire burned 40,000 gallons, a railroad freight-house and thirty cars. Loss $200,000.

SIX PERSONS DROWNED.

A Sailboat with a Pleasure Party Aboard is Capsized.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 27.—R. J. Farmer, his wife, Mary C., and daughter Mamie, aged 6, Mr. C. W. Hirsch, wife and three children, both men being members of the firm of Farmer, Hirsch & Co., engravers and printers; also, Wm. G. Brayton, their traveling salesman, and his wife, went for a sail down the bay at 2 p. m. in the sailboat Wanderer. They reached Bristol safely, and after a short stop started toward Prudence Island. The wind was blowing strong and Mr. Brayton, who was sailing the boat, was unable to manage it. About 4 p. m., when entering Potter's Cove, the boat capsized, and six of the party were drowned. The four children were in the cabin, and were not again seen alive. The names of the other victims are not known at this writing. Later accounts add the name of another victim to the list of drowned, that of Lottie Garland, twelve years of age.

Gatling's New Life Destroyer.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—Dr. Gatling, the inventor of the famous Gatling gun, is in the city. He will soon have ready a new form of his machine gun specially devised for use by the police in our great cities. It will be constructed on the same principle as his large street and field gun, but will be very light and compact. The barrels of the gun are only twelve inches long, and the whole thing, when mounted on a police wagon, will not weigh more than fifty pounds. His idea is to have two or three of these guns mounted on a police wagon which can be driven rapidly to the scene of a threatening riot. Each gun will fire at least 1,000 shots a minute, and the doctor's notion is that the mere knowledge that such weapons are in the possession of the police will of itself prevent any violent action by a mob.

A Strike Ended.

NEW YORK, June 27.—Fifteen thousand girls and women will be at work in Troy to-morrow, as a result of Grand Master Workman Powderly's visit to this city. They are employed in the collar, cuff and shirt factories, and they have been idle two months. Mr. Powderly examined into the matter and promptly advised the immediate withdrawal of the Knights of Labor Committee, who had been in Troy conducting the campaign for the woman. He not only deemed the cause hopeless, but was convinced that the original strike was a mistake.

Gasoline Explosion.

CORRY, PA., June 27.—This evening Mrs. Mark Sheldon, after returning home from a drive with her husband, went into the kitchen to light the gasoline stove. Mr. Sheldon was standing on the stoop. Instantly a horrible explosion occurred, and Mr. Sheldon turning to go into the kitchen was confronted with his wife in a sheet of flames. After an awful struggle the fire was put out, but not until Mrs. Sheldon was burned nearly to death, her whole person presenting a sickening appearance. There are yet hopes that she may recover. The house took fire and, with its contents, was burned to the ground.

Double Killing at a Railway Crossing.

LAFAYETTE, IND., June 27.—Yesterday morning Alexander Miller and wife, of Jackson Township, this county, were instantly killed. They were driving across the track of the Louisville, New Albany and Chicago road, when the north-going passenger train, which was six hours behind time, struck the wagon. Both Miller and his wife were instantly killed. The engine carried the wagon nearly a third of a mile before it could be checked. There is a dispute as to whether or not the engineer whistled at the crossing.

Mail Pouch Robbed.

ANN HARBOR, MICH., June 27.—The through mail pouch to Ann Harbor from the East, which arrived late at night and was locked in the baggage room till morning, was stolen last night and rifled of its contents. The open mail bag and the scattered letters were found in a neighboring field. Drafts to the amount of $1,000 were left with the mail as not being available, while as much more in cash is believed to have been taken.

Heavy Hail-Storm in Indiana.

FAIRFIELD, IND., June 27.—About 5 o'clock Friday afternoon a terrific rain and hail-storm swept over this locality, doing considerable damage to the uncut wheat, cutting the corn-blades into shoe-strings, sadly demoralizing truck patches, and badly injuring the grape, apple, and pear crops. The hail fell for some fifteen minutes, completely hiding mother earth from view in the public highways.

Strange Freak of Lightning.

WILKESBARRE, PA., June 27.—The lightning played a curious freak here Friday evening. It struck the head house on the surface, and the fluid passed down the wire rope into the mine below, a distance of one thousand feet, and, coming in contact with a steel drill in the hands of Wm. Evans, a miner, drove it with great violence into the body of his laborer, Daniel Monahan, inflicting probable fatal injuries. Evans fainted from the shock.

One Suicide Caused by Another.

PITTSBURGH, June 27.—Mrs. John Campbell, sister-in-law of John McGiffen, the livery man who shot and killed himself last night, committed suicide to-day by taking laudanum. Ill health and the suicide of McGiffen are believed to have been the causes which prompted her to the terrible act.

Arrested for Forgery.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., June 27.—Louis Beum was arrested here for forging the name of ex-Senator Thurman to several checks. He will return to Columbus, O., without a requisition.

Aid for the Vancouver Sufferers.

OTTAWA, ONT., June 27.—Five thousand dollars has been granted by the Dominion Government in aid of the Vancouver fire sufferers.

The Chicago Strike.

CHICAGO, June 27.—A Lake Shore train succeeded in stealing past the strikers yesterday and proceeded on its way out of the city. The train was heavily guarded by police. Another engine coming up soon after was taken possession of by the strikers, who gave chase after the fleeing train. On overtaking the train a short battle occurred between the pursuers and the pursued, the police using revolvers and the strikers coal. Several rioters were shot and one or two killed. They finally effected a coupling to the train and hauled it back to the city. The police compromised with the strikers.

The Rhinoceros Is Dead.

NEW YORK June 27.—The dead rhinoceros Bomby weighed two and one-half tons, and three elephants this morning dragged his carcass from the iron cage and onto a truck, which carried it to a retired spot, where a post-mortem was held. The brute died of pneumonia. The skeleton and stuffed hide will be placed in the Museum of Natural History.

Wheat Destroyed by Army Worm.

LEBANON, PA., June 27.—Nearly half of the wheat throughout the Lebanon Valley, it is reported, has been destroyed by the army worm. Much damage has also been done by recent storms.

Killed by a Newspaper Train.

MILTON, PA., June 27.—Robert Hillands and wife, of Chillisquaque, aged sixty and fifty years respectively, were instantly killed by the newspaper train at the Manning street railroad crossing this morning while on their way to church. Their horse was badly injured and their carriage was broken to splinters.

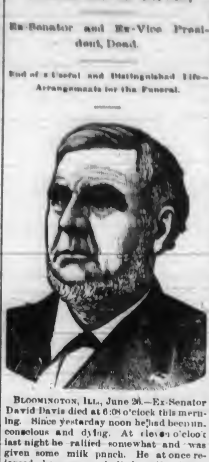
Killed by Indians.

GUAYMAS, MEX., June 27.—Word has just been received here that Yaqui Indians attacked a mule train loaded with freight near Bason, on the 24th inst., killed two men and captured thirty mules. Later reports state that a Lieutenant Colonel, name not ascertained, and sixteen sailors were killed by the Yaquis near Batam.

JUDGE DAVID DAVIS,

Ex-Senator and Ex-Vice President, Dead.

End of a Useful and Distinguished Life—Arrangements for the Funeral.



BLOOMINGTON, ILL., June 26.—Ex-Senator David Davis died at 6:08 o'clock this morning. Since yesterday noon he had been unconscious and dying. At eleven o'clock last night he rallied somewhat and was given some milk punch. He at once relapsed, however, and died as if going to sleep, peacefully and without pain. During the early morning hours he continued to talk incoherently, and continued to talk all day up to five o'clock yesterday. He did not recognize those about him. But few people called in the evening except reporters, who were in the library awaiting his death. Those at his bedside were Dr. Luce, the family physician; his son, George P. Davis and wife; Mr. Henry Swayne and wife, the latter a daughter, and the wife of Justice Swayne; Mrs. Pierrepont, of Chicago, a niece, and Mr. John Walker, of this city, a brother-in-law, Judge Lawrence Weldon, of the United States Court of Claims; Francis Orme, of Washington; David Davis Walker, of St. Louis, a nephew, and his wife. They sat up all night awaiting for the approaching dissolution. But little attendance was necessary, as the Judge lay in a sleep.

The city bells were tolled one hour this morning. Flags are hung at half-mast, and the business houses are all draped in mourning. The funeral will occur Tuesday at three o'clock. Hon. Leonard Swett and Hon. Robert T. Lincoln, of Chicago, have arrived. Judge Davis was executor of the estate of Abraham Lincoln. Telegrams of condolence have been coming in all afternoon. Judge Davis leaves an estate of a million and a quarter, and the heirs are his wife, son and daughter. The estate is nearly all in land.

David Davis was born in Cecil County, Md., March 9, 1815. He graduated at Kenyon college in 1832. He studied law in Massachusetts and New Haven, and in 1835 was admitted to the bar and settled in Bloomington, Ill. He was member of the State Legislature in 1844; a member of the State Constitutional Convention in 1847. He was Judge of the Eighth Judicial Circuit from 1848 to 1862; application Judge of the United States Supreme Court in December, 1862. For many years he was the intimate friend of Abraham Lincoln and a delegate of the Chicago Convention in 1860, which nominated Lincoln for President. In 1877 Mr. Davis was elected to the United States Senate as an Independent, and, being elected President of that body, he became President pro tem. of the United States Senate in place of Vice-President Arthur, who became President when Garfield was assassinated.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL., June 27.—To-day presented a scene of universal mourning. The day was a beautiful one, and many by carriage and street car visited the mansion of Judge Davis and strolled around the grounds. But few visitors called at the house and no strangers arrived in the city. The family received telegrams of condolence from ex-President Arthur, Senators Sherman and Cullom and many others. The body will lay in state at the residence from nine until two o'clock on Tuesday, when the funeral will take place. The work of draping the building has gone on steadily, and one sees emblems of mourning everywhere. Mayor Thomas has issued a proclamation closing the business houses during the funeral. Senator Logan telegraphed that he would be here and act as pall-bearer. The complete list of pall-bearers have not yet been made out.

Among the scores of telegrams received are the following:

NEW YORK, June 26, 1886.

As your father's attached friend, I mourn his death deeply. ROSCOE CONKLING.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 26, 1886.

I sincerely condole with you and the family. A. H. GARLAND.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 26, 1886.

The country's loss is great. Your husband was a man of great ability and honesty of purpose. He was a patriot in the truest sense of the term. All who knew him will mourn his loss.

JOHN A. LOGAN.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 26, 1886.

Please convey to all of Judge Davis' family my sincere sympathy in a loss which affects me closely. I will be at the funeral. ROBERT T. LINCOLN.

PEQUOT HOUSE, NEW LONDON, CONN., June 27, 1886.

I am deeply distressed at the sad intelligence of the death of Judge Davis. Pray accept my sincere sympathy in your great affliction. I have lost a devoted friend to whom I was greatly attached. I would attend the funeral on Tuesday if I were well enough. CHESTER A. ARTHUR.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 27, 1886.

Please convey to the widow and family of Senator Davis the profound sympathy of my fellow-Senators and myself. We respected and honored him while living, and greatly deplore his death. The Senate was not in session yesterday.

JOHN SHERMAN.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 26, 1886.

All our family offer you and all of Judge Davis' family our sincerest sympathy and condolence. GEO. F. EDMUNDS.

COUNT DE MONTEBELLO, French Minister at Brussels, will succeed Count Foucher de Careil as French Ambassador at Vienna. M. Legrand, at present French Minister to Holland, will succeed Count de Montebello at Brussels.

—A French geologist has called attention to the effect gravitation has in heaping up sea waters upon the land. The continents are thus all situated at the tops of hills of water; and in crossing the Atlantic the ship has first to go down hill, then to cross a valley, and finally to climb another hill. The calculation has been made that in mid-ocean the surface may be more than half a mile (one thousand meters) below the level it would have if the continents exerted no attraction.—Christian Union.

—Howard S. Free, living near Attica, O., who went upon the Baltimore & Ohio railroad track on the night of the terrible tornado and flagged a fast train, preventing it from running into a large barn which had been blown on the track, has been rewarded by the railway company. They offer him his choice between five hundred dollars in cash or a life pass over the road.—Cleveland Leader.

—Recently a steamer, the British Queen, sailed from these shores for Liverpool with the first shipment of chemically preserved beef ever sent to England.

FRENCH PRETENDERS.

Departure of the Orleans and Bonaparte Princes from Paris in Accordance with a Decree Published by the French Government—Resignation of Ambassadors.

PARIS, June 24.—The French Government issued yesterday an edict expelling the French Princes from France. Prince Victor and fifteen of his most prominent adherents, including the Marquis of Valette and Baron Hausman, started for Brussels. The train bearing the party left the station amid cries of "Vive l'Empereur!" "Au revoir!" and shouts of "Vive la Republique!" There was some hissing. Several persons were arrested. At a reception before starting for Brussels Prince Victor said:

"Do not expect a vain protest from me. A people sometimes takes it upon itself to open its doors to an exile. I remain a representative of the Empire as the Napoleons constituted it. I favor firm authority, equality of all citizens and respect for all creeds. Be assured that whatever call duty may make I shall not be found wanting in the fulfillment of what I owe to the democracy and to my name. Au revoir."

Prince Victor attracted very little attention on his arrival in Brussels.

Prince Jerome Napoleon started for Geneva last evening. He was accompanied by a number of friends to the railway station. The station was closed to the public, but a dense crowd, estimated at 5,000 people, gathered outside. There were counter cries of "Vive l'Empereur!" and "Vive la Republique!" M. Ornano, a Royalist, tried to rally a party in order to make a demonstration, but the police hustled the crowd roughly. Police Secretary Lozé visited Prince Napoleon and Prince Victor prior to their departure and stated that the Government was disposed to allow them time in which to arrange their affairs. Both the Princes declined to avail themselves of the offer.

The Count of Paris, his son and suite will embark for England to-day, and will arrive at Tunbridge Wells on Friday, where they will take up their residence. The Count will issue a manifesto protesting against his expulsion and outlining the monarchical programme. A thousand persons called at the chateau yesterday and inscribed their names in a special book. The Count shook hands with each one and briefly expressed his thanks. The gates of the chateau will be opened at eleven o'clock this morning to admit the townspeople of Eu and Treport who desire the Count to receive an expression of their sympathy. M. Hendle, prefect of the Seine Inferieure, bluntly declined to notify the Comte de Paris of his expulsion.

Count Foucher de Careil, Ambassador to the Austrian Court, has resigned in protest against the action of his Government in expelling the French Princes.

It is believed that M. Waddington, French Ambassador to the Court of St. James, will resign in consequence of the expulsion of the Princes. His resignation is momentarily expected.

The Royalist press pronounces the passage of the Expulsion bill the forerunner of the downfall of the Republic. The moderate Republican papers generally criticise the measure as unjust. The Opportunist journals urge the Government to disregard the demands of the Irreconcilables and radicals, and demand a firmer Republican policy.

The male representatives of the Bonaparte and Orleanist families who are affected by the act of expulsion are Prince Napoleon (nicknamed Plon-Plon) and his sons, one of whom is Prince Victor, the Count of Paris and his son Louis Philippe, and the Duc D'Aumale.

[The members of the House of Orleans that would come under the application of the measure are: Count de Paris, Countess de Paris, and their infants with them at Cannes; also their son, Duke d'Orleans, in the College Stanislas, and their daughter, the Princess Helene, who, a year or so ago, entered society at a fete given by one of the Rothschilds; Duke de Chartres and Duchess de Chartres and their children, Princess Marie, Prince Robert, Prince Henri, Princess Marguerite and Prince Jean; Duke de Nemours, General of Division, living in Paris, and his children: 1. Duke d'Alencon, Captain of Artillery, in garrison at Vincennes, his wife and two children, Louise and Emmanuel; 2, Princess Blanche; Prince de Joinville, Vice-Admiral, and the Princess his wife, both living in the Rue de Barri, a few doors from the American chapel, with their children, Duke de Penthievre, a Lieutenant in the navy, and Princess Francoise, wife of Duke de Chartres already mentioned; Duke d'Aumale, the senior Division General in the French army, one of the forty immortels of the French Academy, a splendid gentleman, who lives at Chantilly.

Of the Bourbons the elder branch finds its male representative in the person of Count de Chambord, son of the assassinated Duc de Berri, grandson of Charles X and sometimes designated by his friends Henry V.

Of the thirteen children born to Charles and Letitia Bonaparte during the eighteen years of their wedded life five sons have attained maturity and played conspicuous parts in the history of Europe. These were Joseph, Lucien, Napoleon, Louis and Jerome. Prince Charles Jules, son of Lucien by his first wife, had no fewer than twelve children by his cousin, the Princess Zenaide, of whom two survive—viz: Prince Lucien Louis Joseph, one of the Cardinals at Rome, and Prince Napoleon Charles, who is the actual head of the Bonaparte family.

The Prince, born in 1839, entered the French army during the reign of his cousin, Napoleon III., fought through the Algerian and Mexican campaigns, and took part as a Captain of infantry in the late Franco-Prussian war. He was taken prisoner by the Germans, and, having refused to give his parole not to serve against the enemy if set at liberty, was imprisoned at Brunswick until peace was declared. When only twenty-one years old he married Princess Marie of Ruspoli, by whom he has had two daughters, Marie and Eugenie de Bonaparte, the latter being born as recently as 1872. The lines of Napoleon I. and of Louis, third and fourth sons respectively of M. and Mme. Bonaparte, are extinct by the deaths of the ex-King of Rome (Duke de Reichstadt) in 1832 and the Prince Imperial the 2d of June, 1879. Thus there only remains for consideration the line of Jerome, formerly King of Westphalia, the thirteenth and last child of Letitia Bonaparte born four months before his father's death. Early in the present century this Jerome Bonaparte married Miss Patterson, of Baltimore, who died in 1879, and by her he had issue. Their oldest son married Miss Susan May in 1830, and this marriage resulted in the birth of two sons, the oldest of whom, Colonel Jerome Bonaparte, came over from the United States in the early days of the Second Empire to serve in the army of his imperial cousin. The original Jerome Bonaparte's marriage with Miss Patterson was annulled in a highly arbitrary and unjustifiable manner by Napoleon I., who compelled his younger brother to marry Princess Frederica of Wurtemburg. They had two sons and a daughter—Prince Jerome, Count of Montfort, who died at Florence in 1847 without issue, and Prince Napoleon Joseph Charles Paul, who, on his brother's death assumed the name of Jerome, and is the "Plon-Plon" who has created so much excitement in France.]

Presidential Vetoes.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Messages vetoing seven private pension bills were received from the President and read in the Senate yesterday, and laid on the table.

[The total number of Presidential vetoes from the foundation of the Government to the close of the administration of President Arthur was 109. Lincoln vetoed but 1 bill, Johnson 17, Grant 29, Hayes 12 and Arthur 4. Cleveland has vetoed 37 private pension bills and the following other bills: The bill to reinstate Lieutenant McBlair in the army; the bill relating to the title to the Des Moines river lands; the bill in the interest of science which it was claimed would permit the desecration of graves in the District of Columbia; the bill to extend the Immediate Transportation act to Omaha; the bill making Springfield, Mass., a port of delivery; the bills making appropriations for public buildings at Zanesville, O., and at Sioux City, Ia.]

Strikers in Deep Distress.

NEW YORK, June 24.—The 800 idle men remaining of the 1,300 strikers on the Third avenue road made an humble appeal yesterday to President Lyon, begging him to take back his old employes and save their families from starvation. Mr. Lyon said that he could not treat with the men so long as the boycott remained on the road. The strikers answered that the boycott had been levied by the Central Labor Union and other organizations, and that they (the strikers) had no power to lift it. Mr. Lyon told the men that as soon as organized labor quit conspiring to ruin his business he would talk to his ex-employes about taking them back.

YALE HONORS.

A Degree Conferred Upon a Woman,

But it Went Against the Grain—Degrees for the Lords of Creation, With Special Honors.

NEW HAVEN, CT., June 28.—At a meeting of the Corporation of Yale College to-day it was voted to confer the degree of LL. B. on Miss Alice R. Jordan, who entered the law school under the clause in the catalogue admitting attorneys at law of any State to the Senior Class. The Corporation, however, decided that a note be inserted in the next catalogue that the courses of instruction are only open to the male sex. The degree of LL.B. was conferred upon the following members of the graduating class of the Law School: Clement Stevens Bissell, Charleston, S. C.; Charles Francis Davies, Topeka, Kas.; Ralph James Blucker, N. Y.; Raymond Hoagland, Brooklyn, N. Y.; John McKean, jr., Providence, R. I.; Frank Dunlap Pavey, Washington Courthouse, O.; Henry Ray Gardner, Philadelphia; Benjamin Streeter Warren, Detroit, Mich.; James Clark Work, Uniontown, Pa. President Porter made the following announcements this morning of special honors for distinction in the studies of senior and junior years: In Philosophy—John C. Schwab, New York. In Political Science, History and Law—W. L. Cannon, jr., Dover, Del.; Wm. M. Cameron, Albany, N. Y.; F. W. Moore, New London, Ct.; Chas. W. Parson, Florida, N. Y. In Ancient Languages—W. A. Parks, Clinton, Ct.; E. C. Stiles, Hartford, Ct. In English—Geo. E. Elliot, jr., Clinton, Ct.; Arthur Goebel, Covington, N. Y.; C. W. Goodrick, New York City. In Mathematics—W. W. Crebore, Cleveland, O.; Geo. L. Kingsley, Rome, N. Y.; W. L. Kingsley, Roma, N. Y.

A SINGULAR SUIT.

Chiming Church Bells Which Prevent a Sick Woman's Recovery.

LOGANSPORT, IND., June 28.—A novel suit against the German Lutheran Church has been filed in the circuit court. Mrs. Mine Bachman asking that the pastor and trustees be enjoined from ringing the chime of bells. She complains that her daughter who has been an invalid for years, suffers a severe and dangerous relapse at each ringing of the said bells. The Bachman residence is within a square of the church. The family is one of the foremost of the city, and the case will be vigorously prosecuted. One thousand dollars damages are demanded with the injunction.

Awoke in Her Coffin to Commit Suicide.

WILKESBARRE, PA., June 28.—A horrible tragedy came to light here this morning. Nellie Pierson, a colored girl, died, as it was supposed, three days ago. The physician pronounced her dead, and her family made preparations for the funeral. Last evening she raised up in her coffin, and immediately the room was cleared of very badly frightened colored people. The girl awoke from a trance, and informed her mother that she had been dreaming all the time. This morning Miss Pierson was found dead in bed. She had committed suicide some time during the night.

The Fisheries Again.

TORONTO, ONT., June 28.—The Mail's Ottawa correspondent denies, on the highest authority, the statements recently published that the Dominion Government, at the instance of the imperial authorities, have relaxed their measures for the protection of the Canadian fisheries. On the contrary, there has been no interference of any kind on the part of the home government, and the Dominion Government are determined in the future, as in the past, to strictly enforce the law against U. S. fishing vessels violating it.

A Professor Shot by Burglars.

BELOIT, WIS., June 28.—Prof. Chas. W. Merriman, principal of the Beloit High School, awoke last night and found two burglars in his room. He sprang from his bed and closed the door, hoping to imprison the intruders until help arrived. But the robbers forced the door open and shot the professor, the ball lodging in his neck. He is in a critical condition. The burglars escaped. The tragedy causes great excitement at Beloit.

Fearfully Disastrous Hail-Storm.

GRAFTON, DAK., June 28.—A strip of country twenty miles long by two miles wide around Inkster was pounded bare of crops by a terrible hail-storm Saturday. The Norwegian Church at New Grafton was blown to kindling wood. The damage to crops is estimated at $500,000.

Chinchbugs in the Corn.

VANDALIA, ILL., June 28.—In parts of Fayette County the chinchbugs are destroying the corn, field after field having been given up to the pests. With a view of exterminating the chinchbugs, the farmers have agreed not to sow any wheat for three successive seasons.

Horribly Disfigured.

MATTOON, ILL., June 28.—A four-year-old daughter of Frank Seiover, of Windsor, accidentally struck a can of concentrated lye with her bonnet, upsetting the contents into her face and eyes. Her sight was entirely destroyed and her face is horribly disfigured for life.

Sentenced to Be Hanged August 6.

ST. LOUIS, June 28.—Adam Kuehner, who murdered his wife in this city on May 30, 1885, and whose case was recently decided adversely by the Supreme Court, was sentenced to be hanged on the 6th of August.

Hard Work to Get a Jury.

CHICAGO, June 28.—In the Anarchist cases to-day no additional jurors were obtained. Seventy-five men were called and excused for cause, or peremptorily challenged.

Lake Shore Trains Moving.

CHICAGO, June 28.—The Lake Shore railroad moved its trains here to-day, protected by a large force of detectives and police, heavily armed.

Turkey Withdraws Her Troops.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 28.—The Porte has ordered the withdrawal of 40,000 Turkish troops from the Greek frontier.

—There is a trotting horse in North Chatham, N. Y., that catches rats. The other day his owner saw a dead rat in the manger, and when he fed his horse again he kept watch and soon saw a rat slowly making his way to the manger. As soon as he began to eat his meal the horse laid back his ears and made a dive for the rat, caught him in his teeth, gave him one pinch and a shake, let him drop, and kept on eating.—Troy Times.

—Italian bees are sold at five dollars a colony in parts of Georgia. They increase at the rate of one hundred per cent. per annum. One bee keeper reports having taken one thousand two hundred pounds of honey from forty colonies this spring. The honey, extracted from the comb, sells at ten cents a pound.

—The employes about the Erie depot at Elmira, N. Y., are kept well supplied with cigars by a young man who comes forth each month with a new suit of clothes and parades about in patent-leather toothpick shoes, and is, in fact, what is properly styled a dude.—Buffalo Express.

THE COMMONWEALTH.

Louisville Leaf Tobacco Market.

The market has been active and for the most part steady to firm for dark and heavy tobaccos, though medium and regie leaf has been somewhat irregular and slightly lower. Common dark tobaccos have been quiet, but prices have ruled about even, while good or fine leaf is firm. Burley tobaccos have had an unsatisfactory week. Good lugs and medium to good leaf were undoubtedly lower, good lugs and common leaf by 25c, and medium to good 50c to $1 50 per 100 pounds. The Burley market has generally relapsed to the lowest prices of the year. The breaks have presented a considerable quantity of useful tobaccos but good to fine leaf, except light cutters, has not appeared. We quote 1884 tobaccos as follows for full weight packages:

	Dark and Heavy	Burley.
Trash	$1 75@ 2 25	$2 75@ 3 75
Common lugs	2 50@ 3 50	4 50@ 4 75

THE farmers of Christian, the largest wheat growing county in the State, have almost finished cutting one of the largest crops ever raised. Its condition is excellent, notwithstanding protracted showers.

HENRY B. HILL, Dublin, Graves County, and John Frasier, Fishburg, Kenton County, have been appointed postmasters.

QUITE an interesting controversy is brewing between the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company and Hardin County in regard to county taxes, and is attracting considerable attention. It is said that the affair grew out of the discovery on the part of the company that it could not be taxed for pauper purposes, and when Sheriff Lee called for the taxes a day or two ago he was informed that the road owed the county nothing, but on the other hand that the county owed the road $7,000. The company claims that it has paid that sum in taxes that were illegal, and therefore entitled to a return of the money. As Sheriff Lee has no discretion in the matter, he will have to levy on the road's property, which will take the controversy to the courts.

A STORY comes from Clinton that George D. Daniels, aged eighty, died and was placed in his coffin preparatory to burial. At midnight the watchers were frightened by a series of groans from the supposed corpse, and all of them ran away, except one, who opened the coffin, when Daniels sat up, gasped and spoke. He is still living and says that he was conscious of everything transpiring about him while he was supposed to be dead.

COVINGTON complains of being overrun with thieves, thugs and cut-throats.

PETE KING, employed at Kelley's ax-handle factory, Louisville, was hit in the head and knocked down the other day by a piece of iron that broke from a fly-wheel in motion. He was unconscious when picked up, and bled profusely from a gash three inches long.

THE farmers of Hardin County are hurrying in their wheat crop. Charles Greenwell, of Glendale, ran his machine till 11 o'clock on a Saturday night, and the unusual spectacle of threading the binder needle by lamplight was presented.

CONSIDERABLE apprehension on account of the wheat crop is felt in the vicinity of Georgetown by reason of the continued wet weather, and there is cause for anxiety. There is already some complaint of rust.

THE Republicans of Campbell County, nominated the following ticket recently: county judge, Hon. Edward Reilly; sheriff, John Trapp; county clerk, Thomas Jones; circuit court clerk; W. F. VIRGIL GRIFFIN, a young farmer, who was found near Henderson, with his head crushed by a bludgeon, died on the 22d. Lee Griffin, his brother, is reported to have confessed the killing. They had quarreled about a watch. There was much excitement and rumors of a lynching.

THE family of John Hoerz, of Louisville, five in number, were poisoned by eating cheese, purchased from a country peddler. Medical assistance was called and with great difficulty the patients were relieved.

JENNIE GREEN, (colored) 100 years old, died near Anchorage, a few days ago.

A POST-OFFICE has been established at Tradewater, Crittenden County, and J. E. Crowell commissioned postmaster.

RICHARD FORMAN, the slayer of Jerry Cravens January 1, 1885, was given bail in the circuit court at Mt. Sterling in the sum of $15,000, the case being continued in his behalf until next term on account of the absence of the material witnesses.

A LOUISVILLE woman says that milliners are the sharpest dealers on earth, and suit their prices to their customers' pocket-books. She knows, for, after trying vainly to buy a bonnet for less than the $25 asked, she went home and described the bonnet to her servant, who went to the shop and bought it for $12.

TWO JUST TRIBUTES.

Words from the Lips and Hearts of Judge A. B. Tappan and Charles A. Dana, of New York, on the Goodness and Greatness of the Late John Kelly.

To fully do justice to his memory would be to pronounce a panegyric upon American institutions. Mr. Kelly was a grand type of that self-creation which is the result of the social and political system that is at once our pride and hope. Whatever conflicting judgments may have been pronounced upon his political action, there is but one opinion of his honor, his virtue and worth. There may be some who will deny that he was a great man, but none will deny that he was a good man. From his sides the shafts of malice fall harmless to the ground. His bitterest foes have confessed his ability. He met the severest criticism as the leader of Tammany Hall, and it is as such that he is most thought of in Tammany Hall.

The thought of our loss recalls the fact that there is none left who can take his place. He held his place by a combination of rare qualities. His courage and his honesty were alike elements of his success. He was not a "boss," but rather a counsellor, a guide, and a friend. His friends were steadfast to him when State conventions closed their doors to him, because his following was one of love, of affection, of confidence. He reigned not by the hope of reward nor by the fear of punishment, but he reigned in the hearts of his friends.

His word was never doubted and never broken. Although he opposed the nomination of Mr. Tilden for the Presidency, he worked faithfully and loyally for the election of Mr. Tilden, and did his utmost to secure for him the electoral vote of this State. So too he labored, fought and worked for the candidate, not of his choice, who was last elected to the Presidency. He died in a faith that robbed death of its sting and the grave of its victory; in a faith that his Redeemer lived. He suffered the tortures of his painful sickness with fortitude, for the portals of death were to him the gateway of immortality. The concurrent judgment of humanity will be that his goodness made him great. His most endearing monument will be in the memory of his fellow citizens.—Judge Tappan, at Tammany Hall Memorial Services.

While he lived the public always regarded him with interest, and now that he is dead they all speak of him not only with respect, but with affection. It is surprising what unanimity there is among men of every party in the opinion they now hold—that Mr. Kelly was both a good and great man. For myself, I do not dwell so very emphatically on that quality of honesty which is commonly put foremost among his gifts. Honesty, thank God, is not such a rare thing among the conspicuous public men of this town. The exception is rather of those who are not honest. But, while Mr. Kelly possessed this elementary and ample virtue, and never departed from it, he possessed also the grander and higher characteristics of disinterestedness, of intelligence, of wisdom and of Democracy. With him the last of these was the great thing. He was a Democrat not only in his thoughts, but in his blood and bones. He was a Democrat, noon, and night, and all the time. He believed in the rule of the people, for the people, and by the people, and he had no sympathy with any device of theorists to check and stifle the popular power. He approved of one road to office, and one only, and that was the road of popular elections.

It is said that Mr. Kelly never received that evidence of the people's approval which consists in being elected Governor or President, or in getting a place in the Cabinet. This is true; but he needed no such stamp of popular approbation. He was content to do his duty in that place to which circumstances and the mandate of patriotism assigned him. He was long the chief of this ancient organization, and here he wielded an authority and exercised a control over public affairs which Cabinet Ministers or diplomatists might well regard with envy. He never sought to elevate himself. Enough for him that he was beloved and understood by the people of this city and by the members of the Tammany Society. No man was ever esteemed more justly or trusted more entirely than John Kelly by the men of Tammany Hall. Thus his public career was a career of constant success, and our grief at his premature departure from among us is well consoled by our admiration of his character and our envy of the heartfelt love with which in life he was surrounded by so many thousands of his fellow-citizens, as in death he is now honored.—Mr. Dana, at the same meeting.

A Democratic Victory.

A State which elected a Republican Governor by 1,400 majority four years ago, and which gave Mr. Blaine a plurality of 2,256 two years ago, now elects a Democratic Governor by 2,000 majority, and enough other officials of the same party to place the full control of the State institutions in Democratic hands for the next four years. The reason for this change is plainly seen, and, for a wonder, frankly stated, by so thoroughly dyed a party organ as the Philadelphia Press. "The Oregon Republicans lost," it says, "because the people could not approve of their course. Their candidates aroused no enthusiasm, and a fair platform could not compensate for the profound dissatisfaction caused by the party's record. The people were more willing to trust the government of the State temporarily to incompetent hands than to indorse by their votes the control into which the Republican organization had fallen then." The cool assumption that only Republicans are really fit to govern, and that Democrats must necessarily be incompetent, is in the true organ tone; but the fact is recognized that Oregon was lost because a portion of the voters, who are usually Republican, would not sustain ring rule or support unfit candidates — in other words, constituted themselves Mugwumps for this occasion. The fact is attested by the election of a Republican Congressman, and of those State candidates against whom these objections did not lie.—Boston Herald.

——The animus of Ingalls' attack on the Pension Commissioner was plainly evident, even on the surface of his remarks. Ingalls himself reported favorably on General Black's application for a pension, but that was before General Black took a conspicuous part in Illinois politics as a Democrat and long before he showed the prostitution of the Pension Office by the Republican boss, Dudley.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

BLAINE'S CANDIDATE.

A Fortune Made by Him During the War by Selling a Remarkable List of Names to Towns Which Wished to Escape the Draft.

The use by Blaine of the Republican machine to crush out a soldier candidate in favor of a wealthy contractor whose money may be useful in a Presidential canvass has revived the story of Maine's paper credit frauds, in which Blaine's henchmen were conspicuous actors.

The story dates back to 1864, when the cry had gone up for more men to come to the front and recruit the decimated armies of the Union. At that time, according to a report made five years later by the Maine Equalization Commission, "In that crisis of the war and of the national life, when the replenishing of the army was a simple question of life and death with the Government, an individual made his appearance at the State capital, claiming to have come from Washington, and bringing in his pocket a long list of names, many of them quaint and unpronounceable by an American tongue, and others so very common as to be remarkable, all of which he asserted to be the names of men who had enlisted in the service of the United States at some time since the commencement of the war, and who had not been credited with the quota of any State or municipality. These names were offered to the officers and recruiting agencies of municipalities who were looking for men to fill their quotas and reinforce the depleted army, and offering large bounties for such men. Before quotas could be cancelled by the use of these names the approval of the proper United States officials must be secured. The office of A. A. Provost Marshal-General for Maine was then filled by an honorable gentleman of Maine and an officer of the regular army. To him this remarkable roll was shown and his approval of it solicited. That approval was denied, and probably with some expressions of honest indignation. Not very long afterwards this officer was ordered to another field of duty and his place supplied by an officer from a Western State. Then again at the State capital appeared the man with the once rejected list of names. And henceforth it seems there was no official veto upon the filling of quotas of cities and towns with these names."

The same commissioners in their report point out that the man who procured the list of names was Blaine's present manager in Maine, the same who manipulated the Republican convention in his interest. They intimated very plainly that this man and his associates got names of soldiers and sailors already in the service and sold them to towns who were willing to pay for being cleared of the draft. They also declare that Blaine's henchman sold 121 of these men for $47,000, and that if he sold the others at the same rate he must have received more than $100,000.

It is not at all surprising that the Maine Republican soldiers resent the appearance of a man with this kind of a record as the dictator of party nominations in the interest of Blaine. Nor will it be at all surprising if they show their resentment by defeating Blaine's candidate and depriving Blaine of the prestige he hopes to win for the Presidential fight.—Detroit Free Press.

BOBBING UP SERENELY.

The One Vessel, the Corner-Stone of the Republican Navy, Described as a "Marine Crazy-Quilt."

One would have thought that enough had been said about John Roach's notorious contract vessel, the Dolphin. But that frisky craft turns up again as lively and saucy as ever. The Senate, in a spare moment from its pension hobby, thought it would be a good thing to waste more time over this wearisome subject of the Dolphin. Secretary Whitney, in compliance with a Senate resolution, has laid before that body a mass of information concerning the vessel, which the Republicans, last fall, vainly endeavored to utilize for political capital. The boasts of the New York Tribune that the vessel succeeded in weathering a storm on her last trial cruise are considerably qualified by the report of Captain Meade on that trip, who designates her as a marine crazy-quilt, the general plan of the ship and machinery being unsatisfactory and wholly unsuited to the needs of a navy. The report of the civilian experts was still more damaging, declaring that the Dolphin is not fit to contend with bad weather such as is usually encountered by our coasting steamers. She was strained by the seas she encountered on her trip to Fortress Monroe, and her crew were not inclined to risk their lives on board of her again.

It will be seen, therefore, that the Republican Senators have very poor material for political capital in the Dolphin. Their brethren in New York made notable efforts, last fall, to persuade the people that the only objection to this notorious craft was on the part of the Secretary of the Navy, who was resolved to sacrifice that liberal Republican contractor, and contributor to campaign funds, John Roach. But the contractor made a very sorry martyr, and not even a ghost of an issue could be made out of him or his marine crazy-quilt. The wonderful change which has taken place in a year in the management of the Navy Department has removed every trace of Chandlerism and jobbery, and when Congress sees fit to strengthen the hands of Secretary Whitney by a thorough reorganization of the system under which the department is conducted, there will be no delay in carrying out, in the fullest and most satisfactory manner, the great work of creating a navy worthy of the Nation. The era of knavery and peculation in the department has been succeeded by wise, business-like management, and the taxpayers may now expect a proper return for their money, which was out of the question when Robeson, Roach and Chandler ruled the department.—Albany Argus.

——There is a rumor in the uncultivated West to the effect that Whitelaw Reid, of the Tribune, will be a candidate for United States Senator for New York in place of Warner Miller. If any thing of that sort should happen there would be more Republicans in this State fishing on election day than was ever before known in the history of politics.—Buffalo Times.

——Oregon seems to have opened the political ball in a fitting manner. As we have heretofore remarked, this is a Democratic vest.—Concord People and Patriot.

THE board of directors of the West Virginia penitentiary recently contracted with a Wellsburg tobacco manufacturer to let him have the labor of a number of convicts for the manufacture of cheap cigars. There was a vigorous protest against the contract, and Governor Wilson interested himself in the matter, and the contract was annulled, the board of directors pledging themselves to make no more such agreements. West Virginia working men are elated over their victory, as are also the business men of Wheeling. This compromise was made without the intervention of the militia, something which would have been impracticable in this State.

THE conduct of the delegates of which the recent Lebanon convention was composed is severely criticised throughout the State. It is just such conduct as that of which the Lebanon convention was guilty, that is calculated to disrupt a party and rob it of the respect of the public. No matter what the strength of the dominant party is, it can not always survive as disreputable proceedings as those with which the Lebanon convention is charged. In political proceedings as well as in other things, honesty should predominate. Does it always do it? Anybody can answer that question.

◆

POLITICS, pure and simple, may be found in the rural districts; but in the large cities where the festive street bummer is found, corruption in politics abounds, and it is often transferred to the country convention, from which point its effects permeate an entire district and nearly disrupts the party, examples of which we now have in this State.

STATE NEWS.

Real estate in Lexington gives evidence of an upward tendency.

A great deal of last year's crop of tobacco in Marion county remains unsold.

J. W. Poe, of Woodford county, sold his crop of wheat of about 2,500 bushels at 70 cents per bushel.

In Garrard county, John Padgett shot and killed Joshua Lamb in a quarrel over the ownership of a brass kettle.

Judge William S. Pryor, of New Castle, has a field of 8 or 10 acres of wheat, which he confidently claims will yield 40 bushels to the acre.

The grain harvest commenced last week in Owen, and the prospects for a good yield are the best we have had for years.—Democrat.

Joe Coxton, as agent for Martin, of Bourbon, has purchased in Clark county, 17 head of first-class mare mule colts at prices ranging from $55 to $75.

The wheat harvest commenced in this neighborhood on Thursday, June 17. The crop will be much heavier than that of last year.—Trimble Free Press.

H. C. Williams & Co. bought 4,000 of old wheat at 85 to 90 cents. Some of it was two years old, and the owners had refused $1 25 for it.—Harrodsburg Democrat.

One of the farmers of Hunter's Bottom, in Carroll county, we learn, was engaged Sunday cutting his wheat. It was a work of necessity, to save the "staff of life."—Milton Free Press.

In Gallatin county the tobacco growers, says the Independent, are greatly discouraged over the prospects for the coming crop, because of the many obstacles they are now meeting in its cultivation.

We learn from the Sheriff, Robt. Green, and Mr. John Ransdell, that many of the tobacco plants are rotting in the ground, owing to the late heavy rains and continued wet weather.—Owen Democrat.

Kentucky distillers have nearly all shut down. The movement was begun about May 15, and now nearly all are closed. The total out put for the year, from June 30, 1885, to June 30, 1886, has been 16,000,000 gallons of Bourbon, which is 6,000,000 more than the manufacture of last year. This whisky will, of course, not come on the market for three years. When it does come it will about meet the demand. There is hardly a possibility of an over supply.—Courier-Journal.

State Politics.

Congressman James B. McCreary is formally announced for reelection in the eighth district.

Judge Owsley, of Garrard, will be a candidate for Judge of the Court of Appeals to succeed Judge W. S. Pryor.

In the eleventh district there are including Gen. Wolford, nine candidates for Congress, and there are others spoken of who are likely to announce themselves before the book is closed.

The Carter county Democracy passed a resolution favoring Hon. K. F. Pritchard, of Boyd county, for Representative in Congress from the ninth district. That district is now represented by Wadsworth, a Republican.

Conventions are growing more and more unpopular every year in Kentucky. If the convention system is not abolished the Democratic party will be. Let us have primary elections and none but legal voters counted.—Owensboro Messenger.

The Republican State Committee has resolved that it is of the opinion that Republican candidates should be placed in the field in every Congressional district in the State and invites the Republicans to take immediate action to carry out this policy.

Gen. Buckner, who wants to succeed Gov. Knott as Governor, endorses the latter's administration. If the General means by this that he is satisfied with the administration endorsed, and will attempt to do no better, then he will not have as many supporters in his canvass as otherwise. The next administration of State affairs must be a decided improvement on the past several years, or Kentucky will be sent by lightning express to the damnation bow-wows, or some bankrupted seaport.—Paducah News

The Carrollton Democrat of last week says:

"The Bellevue Base Ball Club arrived here Sunday afternoon on the Fleetwood and played the Carrollton Furniture nine Monday afternoon. It was the finest game of ball ever played in this place, but one score being made after the fourth inning, the Bellevue club making this in the eighth inning. The playing of the left-fielder of the visiting club was simply grand, and he has to his credit 3 or 4 fine running catches and a home run. The home club became somewhat "rattled" in the first two innings, thus allowing their opponents to make eight runs, in the first and four in the second. They then straightened up and played a fine fielding game, but could not do much with the bat. Score 9 to 3.

Whose garden brought forth the first roasting ears is the momentous question which has plunged Burlington into the vortex of doubt. J. S. Crisler reported Tuesday morning before breakfast that he had the delicious roasting-ear in his garden, and in about an hour afterwards, H. P. Stephens came rushing down the street under a full head of steam, proclaiming that he had the same toothsome vegetable in his truck patch. The question is respectfully referred to the committee on claims, which will decide in favor of the one that presents it with the first twelve roasting-ears.

OF GENERAL INTEREST.

—The Philadelphia North American advises New Yorkers to lock up their aldermen as soon as elected hereafter.

—A club has been formed at New York which will admit to membership only those who claim Canadian citizenship.

—Based on the names in the last city directory, St. Louis claims a population of four hundred and twenty thousand.

—An old resident of Cromwell, near Middletown, Conn., has taken one hundred and eleven bodies of drowned persons from the Connecticut river in that vicinity.

—Manitoba, according to Dominion statistics, is the most criminal of the provinces. There is one indictable offense for each six hundred and sixty of the population.

—Twelve varieties of fish may be caught in the waters of Lake Superior. They are the whitefish, herring, pickerel, pike, sturgeon, red and common siskewet, small and large brook trout, suckers and perch.

—It is said that if a person whose clothes are on fire will lie down in a horizontal position the fire will be unable to do any immediate damage, giving the victim plenty of time to divest himself of his clothing.

—A Connecticut justice has created a precedent by giving a drunkard his choice between enlistment in the regular army and going to jail. The man chose the former alternative, and was enlisted at Fort Schuyler.—Hartford Courant.

—Many persons return from Australia to England by way of San Francisco, as the trip by the Red Sea and Suez canal, although shorter, is considered very dangerous on account of the extreme heat. No less than eight persons died on a recent voyage.

—The Guion steamer Wyoming collided with a monster whale on its last trip across the ocean. A sharp, short shock was felt when the collision occurred, but no injury was done the boat. The whale, however, was nearly cut in two, and died in a few moments. —N. Y. Mail.

—The menus of a recent Philadelphia dinner were very unique. They consisted of handsomely-engraved cards, each of which was concealed in the bottom of an imitation chicken-coop, containing on a surface of moss a couple of small chickens and a nest with eggs.—Philadelphia Press.

—A Chinese version of "The Pilgrim's Progress" has been brought out in Canton. The volume is illustrated with pictures drawn and engraved by Chinese artists. In these Christian appears in Chinese costume, the House Beautiful as a Chinese pagoda, and throughout the book the scenes and incidents are depicted in a garb familiar to the people for whom the book is intended.

—The fourteen miles of street railway in Glasgow, Scotland, are owned by the city, and bring to the treasury a rental of seventy-six thousand dollars annually. There is no uniform rate of fare, but a penny a mile is charged, with reduced rates morning and evening, when the working people travel. The original purpose of the tramway, in fact, was to enable workingmen to inhabit the suburbs.

—A Buffalo hotel clerk has invented a very excellent check system for valuable parcels. He takes a blank card and writes the name of the owner on it. Then whipping out a pair of shears he saws through the card and the name and hands over half to the agent, pinning the other on the package. The matching of the card is conclusive proof, and the clerk claims that it is a check with which there can be no monkeying.—Buffalo Express.

—One of the most remarkable lapses of memory on record is reported by a Paris journal. A man who is now enjoying the social eminence of a dock laborer is discovered to be heir to a vast fortune in England. His mother visited the continent when he was but an infant, and left him with a nurse while she went shopping. The excitement of the moment caused her to forget all about her baby, and she never once thought of him again.

—A Williamsport (Pa.) fisherman has solved the problem of trout-catching. The secret lay in the bait he used —potato bugs. He had used several kinds of bait, but was unsuccessful in landing the trout. Finally he noticed a potato-bug travelling around in search of his favorite vegetable and he impaled him on the hook, and dropped them into the water. He had more trout than he could carry when he reeled in his line.—Pittsburgh Post.

—A favorite jest of the Washington Senatorial or Congressional loafer is to stuff paper under the hat-band of some consequential Senator accused of having the disease known as the "swelled head." The victim is then approached by his tormentors, who with grave solicitude ask after his health, warn him against apoplexy, and advise him to seek a doctor. His heads suddenly feels larger than usual, and he finds out the joke when he sees his doctor. —Washington Post.

—The Congressional Directory puts Iowa Congressman Tim Campbell as a Scotch-Irishman, but he sent a dispatch last week which proved him a genuine son of the ould dart. He wired to a friend whom he wanted to see: "I want to meet you in New York. If you are not there please telegraph me and I will not go over."—Washington Hatchet.

OUR WAR BALLAD.

How Francis Scott Key Wrote "The Star-Spangled Banner."

The tragic death of Mrs. George H. Pendleton, wife of the American Minister at Berlin, and daughter of Francis Scott Key, author of "The Star Spangled Banner," adds to the story of that famous national war song, and to a movement to erect a monument to its author, a fresh and vivid, if melancholy interest. The origin of the song, though partially related in a family letter of Chief Justice Taney, Mrs. Pendleton's distinguished uncle, and in a paper read several years ago before the Pennsylvania Historical Society by Colonel John L. Warner, has not heretofore been fully told. Forty years ago and more, the writer lived in the historic house from which Key was captured just before he wrote the ballad that has immortalized his name. This and other circumstances give me peculiar advantages for learning much of the author and his work. The house was the residence of Dr. William Beanes, an opulent planter at Upper Marlboro, Md., about sixteen miles from Washington. Here Madison and Taney, Hopkinson and Key, Marshall and Webster often enjoyed the princely hospitality of the doctor, finding relief from the work and worry of State affairs in this rural retreat. The immediate inspiration of the "Star-Spangled Banner" was the high-strung feelings produced all over the country by the war of 1812. Strangely enough, Key was an ardent Federalist and the war was strenuously opposed by his party from the first. That Key was more bard than politician, is conclusively shown by the remark of a contemporary that his ballad was worth 40,000 men to the Democrats—the war party. Of his quality as an artist "The Star-Spangled Banner" is all-sufficient testimony. In selecting the solemn, soul-swelling melody of "Anacreon in Heaven," and fitting to it his patriotic verse, he evinced musical taste, cultivation and judgment of the rarest sort. Not inaptly has his genius been likened to that of Mozart. At Dr. Beane's dinner-table Joseph Hopkinson, the author of "Hail Columbia," then at the height of his popularity, first met Francis Scott Key, when the latter was a rising young barrister of Georgetown; and it was at the Beanes plantation that an adventure occurred which, through a romantic chain of circumstances led up to the composition of "The Star-Spangled Banner." Mr. Key was born at Frederick, Md., Aug. 1, 1779, and died at Baltimore, Jan. 11, 1843. He was educated at St. John's College, Annapolis, practiced law at Frederick, then went to live at Georgetown and finally became District-Attorney of Washington. A good lawyer, a brilliant wit and a man of poetic genius, it is yet true that a comparatively trifling circumstance, his presence at the bombardment of Fort McHenry, afforded the single opportunity of his life to render his name famous for all time. A volume of his poems was published at Baltimore about thirty years ago, and some mention of him is to be found in McCarty's "National Songs" and in more recent publications; but his one great song overshadowed all else in his career.

In the summer of 1814 the tide of war brought Admiral Cockburn to the Republican capital, and the torch was ruthlessly applied by the British under Cockburn and Ross. When the British army reached Marlboro in the march on Washington, Cockburn, Ross and their staff officers made their headquarters at Dr. Beanes' residence. The best that the house afforded was laid before them. Pleased with his reception, General Ross placed guards around the grounds and outhouses to prevent depredations by the troops. The subsequent movements of Ross and Cockburn are written in the full blaze of history, and never were the English arms stained with fouler disgrace than by these two leaders. The so-called American army of some six thousand farmers and mechanics, hastily rallied to the capital by General Winder, with 850 regular soldiers and 700 sailors and marines under the gallant Commodore Barney, made a show of resistance when the British reached Bladensburg. But what hope was there for raw levies against veterans who had seen service under Wellington?

The capitol, President's house, public buildings, a house built by General Washington on Capitol Hill, the navy-yard, arsenal, public stores and newspaper offices were all set on fire and burned to the ground by the soldiers of George the Third. Then came the counter-panic and the adventure above alluded to. A hurricane passed over the city one afternoon and so demoralized the red-coats that they fled terror-stricken from the smouldering ruins of Washington. Gleig, in his "Narrative" tells of this absurd flight of Ross and Cockburn before the imaginary spectres of the skies. The conquerors were conquered by a gust of wind, and in their swift race back to the Patuxent, the doughty host furnished another illustration of the truism that there is but a step from the sublime to the ridiculous.

Dr. Beanes was sitting in his parlor with several neighbors on the 26th of August when a negro rushed in and exclaimed: "Massa, de red-coats are flyin'; dey done got whipped, shoa." There they were, on the outskirts of the village, in full retreat to their ships. Was it any wonder that Dr. Beanes and his neighbors became jubilant? Any wonder that they should have retired to a neighboring dell where a delightful spring bubbled up out of the cool earth, and here made a bowl of punch to celebrate the American victory which they confidently believed had been won? The flowing bowl had been filled again and again, and the doctor and his friends were becoming rather hilarious, when three British stragglers came to the spring to get a drink of water. The red-coats claimed the victory for their side and the Americans for theirs. From words they fell to blows, and the Englishmen were overpowered and carried off prisoners of war to the court-house by the doctor and his friends. But Cockburn heard of it, and that night he sent back a troop of horse to liberate his men and bring in Dr. Beanes. The poor doctor was dragged from his couch, carried off and imprisoned in the hen-coop [illegible] the ships where he was treated with the utmost harshness. Key [illegible] to release his friend at all hazards. President Madison heartily seconded his efforts and ordered that the vessel used as a cartel should be placed at his service. The President directed Mr. John S. Skinner, agent for the exchange of prisoners and well known to the British, to accompany Mr. Key. They came up with the enemy's fleet at the mouth of the Potomac and were escorted courteously to Admiral Cochrane. But on making known the object of his mission Mr. Key was referred to Admiral Cockburn, who [illegible]. In spite of being refused [illegible] and the [illegible] Dr. Beanes should be hung at the yardarm of the ship. They reported [illegible] and handed [illegible] letters from English prisoners who had been wounded and left behind after the battle of Bladensburg. They spoke in grateful terms of the kind treatment of the Americans. Ross was naturally a humane man and was moved at this agreeable news. Seizing his advantage Key again made an earnest plea for the release of Dr. Beanes, and this time General Ross consented that the doctor should be returned to his friends, but added that the whole party would have to be detained pending the attack on Baltimore, then about to take place. Key and Skinner were transferred to the frigate Surprise, but Beanes was still confined on the flagship among the sailors and soldiers, who treated him with rudeness. No officer spoke to him; he was not allowed a change of clothing, and the vindictive Cockburn requited the doctor's former hospitality by ordering him to be held as a culprit rather than a prisoner of war. Again the story reaches a memorable historic scene, the attack on Baltimore, the battle of North Point and the bombardment of Fort McHenry. Ross landed and led his army to the sack of Baltimore; Cochrane moved up the Patapsco, transferred his flag to the Surprise, of lighter draught than the flagship, and when all was in readiness the bombardment of the fort began, while the roar of battle from the shore told that America and England were once more locked in the tug of war. Meantime Key, Skinner and Beanes had been transferred to their own vessel under guard of British sailors to prevent their escape during the conflict. The American vessel occupied a position from which the flag at Fort Henry was distinctly seen. Night fell and the darkness was made visible by the glare of shot and shell playing all night long on the devoted fort. It was a grand spectacle, and Key and his friends paced the deck through the night as the rockets whizzed and shells exploded. But the fort had not fallen, for the bombardment continued. Suddenly, just before dawn, the firing ceased, but nothing could be seen, and the Americans were unable to tell on which side victory had fallen. Mr. Key often afterwards spoke of that moment as the most trying of his life. He consulted his watch and counted the moments before dawn. At last a gray twilight spread over the face of the deep, and our watchers eagerly peered through their glasses to find whether the enemy's flag or their own floated over the beleaguered fort. At length the light came, and they saw that our flag was still there! When Mr. Key beheld the flag of his country above the frowning battlements his ecstasy found expression in the first and second stanzas of the "Star-Spangled Banner," and his full heart overflowed in the second chorus.

"What is that which the breeze o'er the towering steep,
As it fitfully blows, half conceals, half discloses?
Now it catches the gleam of the morning's first beam
In full glory reflected now shines on the stream—

'Tis the Star-Spangled Banner, Oh! long may it wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave."

He had not to wait long before he saw the retreating to the ships and the body of an officer of distinction solemnly borne on board. It was General Ross, who had been killed by an American sharp-shooter. Bladensburg was avenged, and the vandalism at Washington had met with a bloody reprisal at North Point. The defeated enemy set sail and Key and his friends returned to Baltimore. The poet began to write his verses on the back of a letter he found in his pocket in the fervor of the moment when he saw the American flag floating over the fort and the land forces retreating to their ships. He finished the poem while still on the vessel and while he was on his way to the shore. In order to remember some of the lines, as his paper was scant, he made notes instead of writing them out in full. On his arrival at Baltimore he immediately went to a hotel and wrote out the song as it now stands from the rough draft he had made on the boat. A friend to whom he showed the song the next morning was delighted with it. Mr. Key then gave it to a printer to strike off some copies in hand-bill form to distribute among the citizens. This was Captain Benjamin Eades, of the Twenty-seventh Baltimore Regiment, who had taken part in the fight at North Point. His printing office was at the corner of Baltimore and Gay streets. Eades was enthusiastic over the song, and seizing a copy fresh from the press he hastened to the famous tavern of Colonel McConkey, next door to the Holliday Street Theater, where actors and lookers-on were in the habit of gathering to see the citizen-defenders go through their daily drill in Gay street. It was a quaint, old, one-story frame house, formerly kept by the Widow Berling. Major Frailey and Captains Long and Warner, of the Thirty-ninth Regiment, also accompanied Captain Eades to the hostelry to hear Mr. Key's poem read. It was early in the morning of the 15th of September, 1814, the defenders had assembled for drill, and joy beamed in every face over the victory. Mr. Key had directed Eades to print the words "Air—Anacreon in Heaven" at the top of the poem. All gathered to listen as the verses were read by the printer, and that they struck the popular heart was no longer a question of doubt. But who shall sing the song? "Ferdinand Durang," cried one; "Ferdinand Durang," exclaimed a hundred voices. Mr. Durang was a clever vocalist, and being thus appealed to he mounted an old-fashioned rush-bottom chair and sang "The Star-Spangled Banner" for the first time in the United States. All present joined in singing the grand chorus. The effect was like a flash of electricity. Soon the whole town, the whole State and the whole Union was singing the song. There was a clever actor then playing at the Holliday Street Theater named Paddy McFarland. The managers, Messrs. Warren & Wood, advertised that Paddy and the whole company would sing "The Star-Spangled Banner" every night after the play, and the theater was not large enough to hold the crowds that came. Mr. Key, like Byron, woke next morning to find himself famous.—J. Fairfax McLaughlin, in N. Y. World.

Yearning For Intermission.

HOME AND FARM

—Remember your horses can not tell you of their ills and pains. It is your duty to watch for them.

—It is an easier matter to keep the stables clean and orderly than it is supposed by those who have not tried it. If you are one of these, make a beginning at once and see if it is not true.—[illegible]

—A cow should never be allowed to skip a milking, as the retention of so large a volume of milk in the udder will inflame it and injure the quality of the milk, and perhaps the udder also.—[illegible]

—Foot-rot in sheep, distemper in horses and cattle, cough in pigs and a score of other ailments arise from filthy barnyards in winter and spring. Prevention is better than cure in these cases.—N. A. Farmer.

—A Nice Pudding: One cupful of molasses, one cupful of boiling water, one tablespoonful of melted butter, one teaspoonful of soda, two teaspoonfuls of spice, four cupfuls of flour, some dried or fresh fruit. Steam two hours. Use with sauce.—Toledo Blade.

—It has been found by experiment that meal will pass through the digestive organs quicker than hay, and that if the meal is fed to an animal with an empty stomach, it passes away before it is fully digested, but if fed after hay it becomes mingled with it, and more benefit is derived.—Albany Journal.

—Bread Cake: Two cupfuls of light dough, one and a half cupfuls of sugar, one half cupful of butter, three tablespoonfuls of sour milk, one-half teaspoonful of soda, one nutmeg, one teaspoonful of cinnamon or cloves, one cupful of raisins, one-half cupful of currants. Will keep nice a long time. Before using, slice and put in the stove a few minutes.—Exchange.

—Boiled Indian Pudding: This is improved for some people if suet is added to give it richness. Chop a quarter of a pound of beef suet very fine, add an equal quantity of sugar, one teaspoonful of ginger, half a teaspoonful of salt, enough sweet milk to moisten the meal, and a teaspoonful of baking powder, or about a cup of sour milk and a teaspoonful of soda. This should boil in a bag for at least three hours, and be served hot with wine sauce.—Boston Budget.

—If you have soiled white Spanish or cachemire lace do not throw it aside as worthless, for it may be colored with some of the dyes now to be found in small packages. The lace may be used in a great many ways. One way is to trim the edge of tidies made of strips of ribbon and lace, or of ribbon and velvet, or of those novelties for the backs of chairs made of a strip of plain silk placed on each side of a very elegant strip of crazy patchwork.—The Household.

—Corned String Beans: Drain off the liquor, and covering them with very cold water, slightly salted, leave them for an hour. Drain and cook twenty minutes in boiling water, salted. Pour off this and shake the beans in a colander. Then stir quickly through them a tablespoonful of butter mixed with pepper, salt, a very little made mustard and a tablespoonful of vinegar; put back over the fire, toss the beans lightly with a fork until they are hot, and dish them.—Boston Globe.

USES OF PAPER.

How a Room Can Be Ornamented at the Expense of a Few Cents.

Take a sheet of stiff white paper, such as can be bought at any stationer's for three cents. Cut off enough for a hair-receiver of any size wished. Fold it in the proper shape and fasten neatly with mucilage. Over the joining, place a bow of bright-colored ribbon, in such a manner as to entirely conceal it. Satin ribbon of the proper width may be obtained for from eight to fifteen cents a yard. Pass half a yard of narrow ribbon through a small hole at the top of the hair-receiver, and hang it at the side of the looking-glass. In doing so, dispose the ribbon in such a manner as to make a pretty bow and ends. The ribbon should be of a color to harmonize with the tints of the wall-paper. If you have any of the pretty and natural-looking paper flowers now so much in vogue, a bunch of them arranged over the joining of the hair-receiver might take the place of the ribbon bow. A sheet of the paper mentioned will make four hair-receivers, so that they can be renewed when soiled, and the same ribbon will keep fresh for all four. The narrow ribbon may be bought for eight cents a yard. Thus four hair-receivers may be obtained at an expense of from eleven to fifteen cents. If the walls of the room be white, cover the hair-receiver with tissue paper of any color that may be desired. This can be bought at the stationer's for from one to three cents a sheet. The ribbon, of course, should accord with the color of the tissue paper. The making of one of the hair-receivers occupies only a few minutes, and when finished it is more effective than any one would imagine. It brightens up a room otherwise destitute of ornament, charmingly, as we can testify from experience.

An ornamental but simple splasher can be made by covering a piece of the white paper with tissue of any desirable color. If you are willing to bestow a little more time and trouble on it, a very pretty effect may be produced by laying the tissue paper in small pleats and fastening lightly at either end with a needle and thread.

Little earthen jars, like those in which extract of meat is sold, may, when emptied of their contents, be made at the same time useful and ornamental by covering them with glazed paper of any color desired, and then cutting very small pictures or separate figures out of illustrated papers and pasting them on. The glazed paper can be bought for five cents a sheet. The jars will be useful to hold tapers, burnt matches, etc. In summer they are very nice for little bouquets.

Small tin cases may be ornamented and used in the same manner.

The glazed paper is very nice as a covering for shelves and the inside of boxes. If the outside of a small box be unsightly the paper may be pasted over it with very good effect, and little prints added, if desired, as in the case of the jars.—Christian at Work.

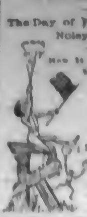
TRAPPING MOTHS.

A Simple Method For Keeping the House Clear of These Destructive Insects.

The household moth always flies at night, and, being readily attracted by a lamp, they may be trapped in the following manner: Place the lamp in a tub (or even a large wash basin) partially filled with water. Let the blaze be bright, and the tiny millers will soon flock around it, and when they fall into the water they can not escape. A lady who has practiced this for several years says she begins as soon as the warm weather sets in and for some time none may be caught. Then on some nights a large number will be taken and in the close of the summer when these insects again appear she repeats this practice, and in this manner keeps her house clear of them. Some may think this is a good deal of trouble, but she thinks it pays. The carpet bug has evidently come to stay, but it can be fought by the use of oil of cedar placed around the edges, and there are other preventives of equal efficiency.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

FOURTH OF JULY.

The Day of Patriotic, Boisterous, Noisy Merriment.



How It Is Celebrated by Old and Young, Male and Female—A Never-Dying Sentiment.

[Original.]

Rip, tap, bang, tsang, swang, piff, poof, rattle, boom! tan, ra, from street to street and alley to alley, and awoke the echoes until at last it aroused the sluggards and every old citizen who rolled uneasily at this sudden concatenation of noises, and in his agony kicked his heels through the clothes had strength enough left to exclaim: "Well, I declare, I forgot! why, it must be Fourth of July!" And in half an hour the whole town has joined in the uproar, and there is more concerted noise to the cubic inch than was ever known before on this auspicious day.

The ebullition of patriotic sentiment that finds its outlet in exploding torpedoes, fire-crackers and toy pistol shooting, as associated with the incoming, continuance and departure of Independence Day, was born long ago, for there has always been something exhilirating in proclaiming oneself an American patriot by resorting to either fiery oratory or burning gunpowder.

The day is one of boisterous, noisy merriment and of much gaseous emanations. It is the day of the year for the young ragamuffins, the Fourth of July orators and the actors, either with ball or buskin. It is no man's land in this country from the dawn that announces the approach of the greater light until in the earth's revolution, the gray light of the dawning shall be seen again. It is the Nation's birthday, and therefore the birthday of every body within the Union, so that an occasion arises for mutual pledging of every body's good health. Some of the "thee-thou" good old feather-breeched citizens who celebrated the first anniversary of this glorious day are probably still joining in the recurring celebration of their triumph each and every year, for patriotic sentiment, love of country and desire to celebrate its natal day never die a mere physical death, nor reach a state of innocuous desuetude, whatever becomes of the body. Standing and silently the entire Nation drinks to the ever-cherished, honored memory of the patriots who, in the agony and travail of their souls, and with their blood, gave birth to our great Independence Day, whether it be from out a skull or the drinking horn of the ancient warrior, or from the silver, gold-lined tankard of to-day. For we should all remember the men that gave us the chance—the excuse for—and set us the example of firing off, kicking, jumping, rattling crackers and indulging in fire-works and a general hullabaloo!

The Fourth of July is a red-letter day for the lads and lasses. Look at them as they are on the way and at picnics, and about the green swards of the commons or parks. The young man sports a clean collar and a colored neck-tie, shaven face, waxed mustache, and in his Sunday-go-to-meeting clothes, he walks erect and looks with smiling face and open, candid eyes at the fair young lassie who, dressed in modest white calico, which sets off a pretty figure not yet warped and disfigured by hard labor, and wearing a natty hat made and remade by her own nimble fingers, smiles and laughs in return. And as they walk on and on, gay and festive on this great holiday, they are full of fun and elastic spirits, for the oxygen of the air is inspiring, and they laugh and chat and joke and romp, and have a good time generally.

But all the racing, tearing, shouting, hallooing, swinging and walking is not confined to young couples, sweeter as between themselves than molasses on bread buttered on both sides, but is being joined in by all the pleasure-seeking men, women, boys and girls that long for the excitement of music and dance, and roundabouts and swings and "mineral waters" so profusely provided at picnics and parks, especially on such heated and extraordinary days as the great national holiday which sets free all the working people and their cousins.

Of course the day has its great distractions, but after breakfast and the discussion of coffee, and while the children, and the neighboring children, and the neighboring neighboring children, are firing off torpedoes or fire-crackers or toy-pistols, and making all the noise and distraction possible, the "old man" lights his cigar, goes to his office or store, reads his mails and hands them over to be attended to by human moles, while his wife dresses up in her best silks, and wears a lovely imported bonnet upon which is mounted a beautiful bird that evidently was stuffed before it died, and after criticising the dress of the minister's wife listens to her favorite preacher, who delivers a discourse upon the significance of the day.

A separation of the family follows in the afternoon in the celebration of the Fourth of July, in a good many cases, for as usual there is great excitement over a running race or that celebrated base-ball match, to take place on the village common or in a picketed field, between the Invincibles and the Insurmountables, and it is always a toss-up how the struggle between the two teams can end except in a draw, although the record shows that on different occasions the Invincibles had defeated the Insurmountables, and vice versa. But no one but an expert can understand a base-ball record, and probably in each case the decision was the fault of the referee. The ladies are glad to be rid of their lords in the terrific heat of the afternoon of the Fourth of July, with the mercury in the shade hugging one hundred degrees of Fahrenheit, for in their elegant loose wrappers and the demi-deshabille permitted in the privacy of the home they are able to read the latest novel [illegible] generally, and when the latter [illegible].

But the glorious Fourth of July is chiefly enjoyed to the fullest extent among the rising generation, the boys and girls. [illegible] and [illegible] indeed is the boy who at the end of the bombardment of the day has got off without a powder burn on a shot finger or even his biggest [illegible]. Probably the greatest hero is the boy who not only has, with his toy pistol, carelessly and adroitly winged another boy, but also, in the noise, has also been able to do what is by no means a rare feat, wound himself with his own weapon, for many a grown-up man has foolishly looked down the muzzle of a gun and the generous spirit of the boys is shown by the greater number of times in which they shoot themselves instead of others. The boys and girls who get up with the lark, and are on a lark all the day, and keep up the lark until the night shades are falling, what a glorious time they will have! It is the capping climax, the kernel of the nut of delight, the greatest of the great joys of the Fourth of July. The squares and streets become alive with burning fires of all the colors of the rainbow, lighted by the smoldering fuse held by every boy and girl, while, rising higher and higher the sky-rocket cleaves the dark heavens and fills the sky with more radiant and varied colored stars and comets than can ever be seen even on a clear starlight night. The incessant rattle of musketry coming from the burning, crackling bunches of exploding fire-crackers, with the heavy flash of light sparks as the sky-rocket flies from its prison, the exquisite pleasures of the wildly revolving spinning-wheels, and the noise as of a clap of thunder, which makes the boys and girls tremble, clinging to each other or their mothers, and hiding their faces in their dresses, as an immense pot of powder shoots up into the dark night air, displaying its lovely bouquet of flowers, while every face radiates with joy in the suddenly and beautifully illuminated night darkness, add to the fascinations of the glorious sight.

And then, how, down in the great public halls, the roofs are raised with the shouts of applause led and sustained by the thunder of a brass band, as some silver-tongued orator discourses of the glorious deeds of the heroes that fought for the creation of a freeman's government, and of those that shed their blood for its preservation. Then as the proceedings close the flags of the various delegations, who have marched in their regalia through the thronged streets, are waved aloft amid the vast waves of song-harmony that sweep up the vast audience in its power with the soul-stirring national hymn "America."

Glory and honor, then, to the boy George Washington and his little hatchet. In how many thousands of thousands of parlors in this country from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the forty-ninth parallel to the Gulf, have the pictures come to mind of the hero of the cherry tree, the creator of the glorious "Fourth of July," and of the sweet, admirable woman who was then a little girl and became the first of the first ladies of the land in the new-born empire of the West! And not only in parlors, but in the cabins, huts and little rooms where old couples and the poor veterans are passing their lives away, are found these portraits, and twigs of evergreen trees are trimmed every Fourth of July about the fac-similes of the man and woman, testifying the general, never-dying gratitude of a patriotic people for the patriotism and will-power celebrated on this Nation's natal day, and which, but for them and their co-patriots, might never have been known; and the noisy musketry of the fire-cracker, the glow of the patriotic orator, the loves and laughter of the picnic, and the genial hail-fellow and hullabaloo might not have moved a nation to such universal enthusiasm on every recurring glorious Fourth of July.

XLIXTH CONGRESS.

First Session.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—SENATE.—A bill to place Commander Quackenbush on the retired list of the navy was passed by a vote of [illegible], after [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] had been [illegible] for [illegible]. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] from [illegible] in the Department [illegible] until 5 o'clock. The discussion on the repeal of the timber culture, pre-emption land and desert land was continued until the [illegible] when the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE.—Nine vetoes of private pension bills were received. After [illegible] from committee Mr. Morrison announced that he would not call up the tariff bill to-day. He called up a proposed change in the rules to allow a clause providing for an income tax to be added to revenue bills. This was debated until 5 o'clock when the House adjourned.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—SENATE.—A bill was passed providing for the payment of expenses of steamboat inspectors in accordance with the recommendation of the President in his message written after signing the [illegible] ship bill, and resolutions were submitted and referred directing the Judiciary Committee to report a bill for the repeal of all laws declared unconstitutional by the U. S. Supreme Court and providing for a digest or index of the statutes of the United States, including those of the present Congress. The Hoar motion was then taken up to reconsider the vote on the bill prohibiting members of Congress from acting as attorneys of railroads aided by the Government. Mr. Beck opposed reconsideration, and speeches were made by Frye, Edmunds, Mitchell and Call in favor. The motion to reconsider was then carried—yeas 31, nays 21. Mr. Hawley then moved to refer the bill to the Judiciary Committee, which was agreed to, 31 to 18. The bill was referred and Mr. Edmunds promised to report it back within six days. Several veto messages were received and read. The bill to repeal the pre-emption and timber culture laws were placed before the Senate, and it was agreed that a vote should be taken to-morrow. At 5 p. m. the Senate went into executive session, and at 6 p. m., adjourned.

HOUSE.—Conferees were appointed on the consular and diplomatic appropriation bill. Mr. Morrison called up the report of the Committee on Rules, upon which the debate occurred yesterday. Mr. Reed raised the question of consideration. On the standing vote the House refused to consider the report, but on a yea and nay vote this determination was changed, and then, on a motion to reconsider, and then to adjourn the Republicans refrained from voting. The filibustering continued throughout the day, with numerous roll-calls and calls of the House. At 4:30 proceedings under the call were dispensed with; the motion to adjourn to Saturday was voted down, and another roll-call consumed the time up to 5 o'clock, when the House adjourned.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—SENATE.—A bill was passed providing for the appointment of a U. S. District Judge for the Southern District of Alabama. It was first amended by fixing all District Judges' salaries at $5,000 a year, and prohibiting the appointment by Judges of relatives to office. The bill repealing the pre-emption and timber culture laws was passed. The Fitz John Porter bill was taken up, and Mr. Sewell spoke in favor of its passage. Mr. Logan took the floor to reply, when the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE.—The morning hour was dispensed with, and the sundry civil bill taken up. An amendment was incorporated, requiring the Secretary of the Treasury to issue certificates of the denominations of one, two and five dollars on all surplus silver dollars in the Treasury in payment of appropriations made in this bill, and for other expenditures of the Government. Mr. Ryan, of Kansas, criticised the bill, and Mr. Herbert, of Alabama, spoke on coast survey features until adjournment.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—SENATE.—After routine business, the Fitz John Porter bill was taken up. Mr. Logan objected to the bill on the constitutional point that it increased the retired list, provided the President made the appointment. Mr. Teller moved to amend the bill by adding the name of General Alfred Pleasonton, but Mr. Sewell objected. Mr. Plumb followed, after which the bill was passed, 30 to 17. The bill for the adjustment of railroad land grants in Kansas was placed before the Senate, and at 6 p. m. the Senate adjourned until Monday.

HOUSE.—Thirty veto messages on private pension bills were read and referred. A conference committee was appointed on the agricultural appropriation bill. The sundry civil bill was taken up and considered until 5 p. m., when the House took a recess until 8 p. m., the night session being for consideration of pension business.

WASHINGTON, June 26.—SENATE.—Not in session.

HOUSE.—The House spent the day on the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill. Several amendments were offered and rejected.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—SENATE.—The political disabilities of two Virginians were removed by the necessary two-thirds vote. The legislative appropriation bill was reported with amendments. The river and harbor bill was also reported back from committee with amendments. The pension appropriation bill was agreed to. A bill was introduced authorizing the President to appoint and retire Alfred Pleasonton as major general. Mr. Hoar gave notice that he would on Wednesday next ask the Senate to take up the resolution for open executive sessions. A bill was passed granting a pension of $100 to Emily Stannard, the widow of General Stannard, of Vermont. The conference report on the post-office appropriation bill was debated, and the committee being unable to agree on the subsidy clause, a motion that the Senate insist on its amendment was agreed to—yeas, 33; nays, 12. The President's veto of the bill to quiet titles on the DesMoines river lands was taken up. Mr. Allison moved to pass it over the veto. After his speech, the subject went over until to-morrow. Mr. Blair reported a bill to give claimants for pensions the right of trial by jury. At 5:50 p. m. the Senate went into executive session, and shortly afterward adjourned.

HOUSE.—In the House, under the call of States, a number of bills and resolutions were introduced and referred, including Randall's tariff bill. The sundry civil bill was taken up and considered until 5 o'clock, when the House adjourned.

Foreign Notes.

FIFTY-ONE persons in all were killed in the Chilian election riots.

PRINCE LUITPOLD, took the oath as Regent of Bavaria on the 28th. The Chamber of Deputies, after a long debate, unanimously approved of Prince Luitpold's continuing in the regency.

THE Rev. Henry Ward Beecher and wife arrived in Liverpool on the 26th.

THE King of the Belgians has offered to the Count of Paris for a residence the Royal chateau at Ciergnon. The offer was declined, but the Count promises to pay a prolonged visit to Brussels in the autumn.

THE Dublin Methodist Conference, by a vote of 137 to 23, has resolved not to interfere in politics.

THE King of Portugal will go to England in August to visit his sister and Queen Victoria. He will afterward go to Sweden.

THE Radical press of France demands, as a reply to the manifesto of the Count of Paris, the immediate expulsion of all the Orleanist Princes and the seizure of their property.

THE French flag is not hoisted officially over the New Hebrides Islands. It is simply displayed over a French store house on one of the islands. A British flag floats over another store house near by.

Increasing the Suspense.

A murderer under sentence of death had a number of influential friends who were exerting themselves to secure a respite from the Governor. The sheriff believed in capital punishment, but he was a charitably disposed man, and had been doing a good deal of running around for his doomed guest. One morning he returned from such a trip and went to the prisoner.

"Well," said the man eagerly, "well, what did the Governor say?"

"My dear sir, he hasn't said anything yet. He wants time to think."

"Good heavens, man! This suspense is terrible," exclaimed the criminal, dramatically.

"Don't mention it," responded the sheriff, in a cheerful tone; "it ain't anything to what it will be if the Governor doesn't interfere."—Washington Critic.

Facts About Deaf Mutes.

The law formerly classed deaf and dumb persons with idiots and madmen, and would not permit them to form a contract. This was because no mode of teaching them was formerly known. It is not strange that these unfortunates should seem to be slow of intellect, since the absence of hearing cuts them off wholly from a most important avenue of knowledge. But the discovery of methods of instructing them has shown that the imperfect mental power of this class is not due to natural incapacity, but to undeveloped abilities, and now many most intelligent persons are found in the ranks of deaf-mutes. Persons who have become deaf in later life, having had the advantage of hearing in youth, and learned to read and speak, are not injured in mind thereby. Beethoven, the great musical composer, became deaf when about forty years old, and subsequently wrote some of his finest works.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

PLEASANT WORK

Why the Washington Fish Reservoir is Cleaned with Unusual Thoroughness.

Immediately in front of the Capitol, on the west side, is a large fish reservoir. It is probably sixty feet long by thirty-five feet wide on the average, and is probably eighteen feet deep at the upper end and fourteen feet deep at the lower end. It is shaped like an egg, is built of stone, and catches the surplus water from the springs beneath the capital which supply the inhabitants with drinking water. An iron spout pours the surplus water into the reservoir in a constant stream. There is a large variety of fish in the reservoir, and leaning against the rails which surround it may be seen, at nearly all times of the day, a crowd of spectators, for the water is so transparent that the fish may be seen at any depth. During the past week a body of laborers were engaged for two or three days cleaning out this reservoir. The water was turned off and the fish taken out and placed in vats. The bottom of the reservoir is covered with stone and cement, but on top of that was found a mucous, a slime of mud, moss and leaves, probably three inches deep. The architect of the hospital said that during the process of cleaning the reservoir, although the work was very heavy and unpleasant, none of the duties about the hospital were performed with greater zeal and pleasure by the workmen. The reason of this was, he said, that the man who cleaned out the filth often found a great deal of valuable treasure in it. Senators and Representatives are often seen to throw dimes and nickles and fancy buttons and scarf pins into the pool to see the fish dart after them. The reservoir is cleaned out about every three months and there is found deposited at the bottom of it almost a peck of these little trinkets which are thrown into it, and occasionally the workmen receive very valuable "tips" for their extraordinary labors. On one occasion, it is said, a diamond ring and three or four five-dollar gold pieces were found among the valuables. They had evidently been cast into the pool by mistake.—Washington Cor. Chicago Herald.

BOLD ORIGINALITY.

Contrasted With the Tiresome Monopoly of Commonplace Persons.

It is an old story that genius and madness are nearly allied. Assuredly they do not often occur side by side, or in succession, in the same families. The son or brother of a person who committed suicide, or was otherwise disordered mentally, may be a genius. It is no exaggeration to say that there is hardly ever a man of genius who has not insanity or nervous disorder of some form in his family. In order to go mad or to be a genius the person must be original—that is to say, must have a constitutional dissatisfaction with things as they are, and an urgent impulse to get off the beaten tracks of thought and feeling of which ninety-nine persons out of a hundred go contentedly all their lives. It is surprising, when we take notice of it, what pure automata most persons are. They say, think, feel and do the same things by the same way day after day, like so many parrots, or just as if they were so many organic machines. Were any one to amuse himself by taking train from London in different directions, and alighting at so many towns or villages fifty or a hundred miles from it, about the same hour of the day, what would he observe? He would observe the cocks and hens going through the same sort of cacklings, and crowings, and scratchings; the dogs performing the same kind of sniffings, and prowlings, and barkings, in exactly the same way; the children crawling and squalling, running, playing and quarrelling in the same way, and making exactly the same sort of cries and ejaculations; the men and women lounging, sauntering and gossiping, and doing or saying, inside or outside their houses, the same things in the same way. He would observe the acts of animal and human life, although more varied, to be almost as mechanically constant as those of so many machines, and might, perhaps, conclude that man does himself more than justice, or does such little creatures as ants and bees less than justice, when he exalts his reason so much above their instincts.—Fortnightly Review.

—The English court for crown cases reserved has just decided a curious point in criminal law. One man aimed a blow at another, but missing him struck and wounded a woman. He was tried for striking the woman and found guilty by the jury. It was admitted that he did not intend to strike her, and that the blow was purely accidental. The court sustained the conviction. Lord Coleridge explained that the prisoner "intended to do an unlawful act, and in doing it he inflicted the injury. The intent to injure a particular person is not required." That is, the offense is made out if the assailant purposely and maliciously strikes at one person but hits another.

—There are three kisses in the world of miscellaneous kisses which may be counted true—the kiss the mother lightly lays upon her baby's dewy lips, the kiss the mother gives her boy as he goes forth into the world, and the kiss we press upon the still, pale lips of the dead. All the rest are like the strawberries in the bottom of the basket—to be taken on suspicion.—Chicago Journal.

—Madness in cattle was once supposed to arise from a distemper in the internal substance of their horns, and furious or mad cattle had their horns bound with straw.

The old proverb is certainly true in the case of Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets," which are little, sugar-wrapped parcels, scarcely larger than mustard seeds, containing as much cathartic power as is done up in the biggest, most repulsive-looking pill. Unlike the big pills, however, they are mild and pleasant in their operation—do not produce griping pains, nor render the bowels costive after using.

POWDER EXPLOSION.

Ten Men Suddenly Sent Into Eternity

A Number of Others Injured—The Bodies of the Unfortunate Victims Scattered Over an Area of 500 Feet.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., July 3.—A terrible explosion took place this morning at 7:30 o'clock at the Atlantic Giant Powder Works, situated between McCainsville and Drakesville, N. J., resulting in the loss of ten lives and injury to ten or twelve others. The explosion took place in the mixing house. The loss is not known at present, but will be very heavy. The concussion was felt distinctly for twenty miles around, and glass in houses five miles away was shattered. The cause of the explosion will probably be never known. A double force of men began work at 7 a. m. to-day so that operations could be suspended from Saturday until Tuesday morning. The explosion occurred in the mixing room. The building was blown into splinters, and fragments of the bodies of the workmen were picked up five hundred feet from the scene. Some pieces were taken from the branches of a tree many yards away. The largest portion of a body yet found will not weigh fifteen pounds. An immense excavation was made where the building stood, and devastation is apparent for five hundred feet in every direction. The following are the names of those killed: Charles Jackson, Joseph N. Kinner, George Ammerman, George Hanbill, Theodore Bryan, Chas. Milburn, Geo. King, John Smith and two brothers named Laubach.

Warring Factions to the Front.

MOREHEAD, KY., July 2.—A difficulty occurred here to-day between two old enemies, Craig Tolliver and Matt Cary. Tolliver got the drop on Cary, who begged for his life, and Tolliver granted it, and permitted him to get out of danger. Cary then hied him to his friends and sounded the tocsin of war. He summoned Howard Logan, Cook Humphrey and others and moved into town, taking up quarters at the Logan House. The Tolliver faction soon gathered, and assembled at the Raine House, at the other end of the town, near where the troops were quartered last year. They are now gathering in men and arms, and as there are plenty of both, a serious conflict is hourly expected. These are the factions that were at war last year, and who made a patched-up peace under the influence of the Governor and the military.

Boy Murderers.

NEW ORLEANS, July 2.—Joseph Ellis and Sephine Ferguson, while playing marbles, became involved in a fight. The latter drew a knife and stabbed Ellis, causing death in a few minutes. The youthful murderer is under eleven years of age. About the same time a boy named Felix Alvarez and a girl named Josephine Acosta, were playing in a house on Conti street, when Alvarez became angry with the girl. Seizing a pair of scissors, he attacked her, the scissors cutting her carotid artery and causing death in half an hour. Alvarez is just thirteen years old.

A Home for Mexican Veterans.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—A bill which is attracting a good deal of interest here was introduced in the House a few days ago by Congressman Willis. It appropriates $150,000 for a home for disabled soldiers of the Mexican War. The Kentucky Legislature granted a charter to an association of Mexican veterans recently, whose object is to establish a home for the Mexican war veterans who are unable to take care of themselves. There is a strong feeling in favor of this measure, especially as it seems scarcely probable now that the bill granting them all pensions will pass—at least not this session.

Boycotters Sentenced.

NEW YORK, July 2.—The convicted boycotters of Theiss, the proprietor of a concert garden, were arraigned in court to-day for sentence. The judge sentenced Paul Wilzig and Henry Holderf to two years and ten months at hard labor; Michael Stroh and Julius Rosenberg to one year and six months' imprisonment. Daniel Dennehauser, the most violent of any of the boycotters, got three years and eight months in State prison.

New York City's Population.

NEW YORK, July 2.—Next week the one hundredth issue of the New York City Directory will be made. This year's Directory will contain over 314,000 names. From this is estimated that the population of the city is is about 1,500,000. The greatest increase in population during the past year is noticeable on the east and west sides of Central Park and above the Harlem river, in the annex district, due to the development of rapid transit.

Prince Edward's Island Elections.

OTTAWA, ONT., July 2.—Returns from the Prince Edward's Island elections show that the Conservative Government has been sustained by the election of nineteen of its supporters to eleven Secessionists or Liberals. As compared with the old Legislature the Government has gained two members.

Instantly Killing Three.

RUSSELLVILLE, ARK., July 2.—The boiler of T. R. Adams' saw mill, three miles west of Atkins, Ark., exploded yesterday, instantly killing T. R. Adams, John Wilson, Nelson Clark, and mortally wounding James Anderson and John Wells. Clark's body was blown 150 feet in the air.

For the Parnell Fund.

DETROIT, MICH., July 2.—Eighty-five thousand dollars has been sent from America within a week for the Parnell fund.

Bad Men Removed.

LOUISVILLE, KY., July 2.—Simeons and Turkison, two Elliott County (Ky.) moonshiners, who burned a church and the dwellings of four citizens, and poisoned a large number of cattle, were pursued by the four citizens, shot down and buried.

Hanlan Defeats Ross.

ST. JOHN, QUEBEC, July 2.—Hanlan defeated Ross to-day in a three mile sculling race. Time 20:30.

The Best for Years.

NASHVILLE, TENN., July 2.—Tennessee crops are the best reported in years.

Juvenile Horse Thief.

WABASH, IND., July 2.—Will Schnell, nine-year-old youth, two or three days ago stole a valuable horse from the pasture of a farmer nine miles from Peru, and was overtaken after a hard chase of five miles, brought to Peru and locked up. To-day he was arraigned in Court, and pleading guilty was sentenced to a year in the Indiana Reformatory. The boy is of a very ugly disposition and has often been guilty of larceny, but always escaped punishment.

Gallow's Fruit.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., July 2.—Frank Gaston, colored, was hanged to-day at Salisbury in the presence of a large crowd, for rape upon a white woman some weeks ago.

Whole Family Killed by a Train.

BOSTON, July 2.—John Measures and his wife and two children, aged seven and ten years, of Stoneham, driving in a buggy, were instantly killed at the Albion street crossing of the Boston & Maine railroad at 8:50 to-night being struck by an express train. The vehicle was smashed into a hundred pieces. The body of Measures was carried on the pilot of the locomotive a third of a mile before the train came to a standstill.

Smallpox on Board.

NEW YORK, July 2.—An Italian steamship, with 117 passengers and a bad case of smallpox, reached this port to-day. The steerage passengers had been exposed to the disease.

MORE RASCALITY.

President of the Abington, Mass. National Bank $100,000 Short in Accounts.

BOSTON, MASS., July 1.—Richmond J. Lane, President of the Abington National Bank, who was arrested in Portland late last night, was arraigned before the U. S. Commissioners' Court in this city this morning. Bank Examiner Gatchell testified that the examination of the bank's affairs had not been completed, but that the funds fraudulently obtained would probably amount to $100,000. Of this sum $60,000 is represented by notes in different names to cover drafts on the redemption agent of the bank, and about $40,000 represents overdrafts. Counsel for Lane explained that his client had gone to Portland on business of the bank. The district attorney said the Government claimed that Lane had got large sums on notes on which the names, other than Lane's, were "straw" names. He asked that bail be fixed at $75,000. Commissioner Hallett fixed the bail at $50,000, and the case was continued to July 12. The bank stopped payment this morning.

National Law and Order League.

ST. LOUIS, July 1.—A Law and Order League, with its present nucleus in this city is said to be reaching out as a National organization, having spread in Missouri, Illinois and Iowa, and reached Minnesota, Michigan, New York and Maryland. Legion of Honor men, Masons and Knights of Labor are reported to be taking an interest in the movement. The present membership is given at seventeen thousand. The prevention of labor riots and other unlawful outbreaks is said to be the prime object of the League.

Approved by the President.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—The President has approved the act to reduce the fee on domestic money orders for sums not exceeding five dollars; the act making allowances for clerk hire to postmasters of the first and second class post-offices; the military appropriation bill; the post-office appropriation bill; the agricultural appropriation bill; the army appropriation bill; the act granting leave of absence to employes in the Government Printing Office.

The Democrats of Iowa.

DES MOINES, IA., July 1.—The Democratic State Convention to-day nominated Cato Sells for Secretary of State, by acclamation, and Paul Gulick for Auditor. The platform favors the repeal of the prohibitory law and the enactment of a local option law extending to cities and counties, the license adopted to be not less than $500. The State Greenback Convention also in session favored a fusion with the Democrats.

Saved by a Dog.

CHICAGO, July 1.—Early this morning a large hound which was kept in rear of August Liudt's residence on Milwaukee avenue, raised a great uproar. The family were aroused by the noise, and on getting up discovered that the back buildings were in flames and the fire had communicated to the residence. They barely escaped with their lives.

Threw Himself to Death.

PITTSBURGH, PA., July 1.—Henry Schafer, an inmate of the Allegheny County Home, committed suicide this afternoon by throwing himself from a second-story window of the institution. He was thirty-five years of age and a partial imbecile, and for some time had been threatening to end his life.

The Yankee Solons Go Home.

BOSTON, July 1.—The Legislature was prorogued last evening, having completed the longest session since the beginning of government in Massachusetts, with the single exception of the Butler Legislature of 1883 and the session of 1874. The Governor has signed the bill increasing each member's salary $100.

Another Fishing Schooner Seized.

HALIFAX, N. S., July 1.—Last evening the American fishing schooner City Point put into Shelburne Harbor for water and repairs, and was seized, and is still held by the Dominion cruiser Terror, pending instructions from Ottawa. It is understood her offense was taking water on board before being reported to the custom-house.

Rabbi Sonneschin Not Deposed.

ST. LOUIS, July 1.—At a meeting of the Shaare-Emith congregation last night the trustees' recommendation that Rabbi Sonneschin be deposed because of his advanced views upon certain doctrinal points was defeated by a large majority.

To Entertain the President.

BOSTON, July 1.—In accordance with the wish of Governor Robinson the Legislature yesterday afternoon passed a bill appropriating $20,000 for entertaining President Cleveland if he should visit this State this summer.

A Strike of Waterworks Employes.

KANSAS CITY, MO., July 1.—Forty-five men employed at the waterworks in this city struck this afternoon for an advance in wages. No interruption to business occurred from the strike.

Sensational Charges.

ST. LOUIS, July 1.—The St. Louis Post-Dispatch publishes sensational charges against fourteen members of the House of Delegates, which, if substantiated, will result in their removal.

President Dwight Installed at Yale.

NEW HAVEN, CONN., July 1.—Prof. Timothy Dwight was to-day inaugurated as President of Yale College, to succeed Dr. Porter.

A Young Embezzler.

ANNA, ILL., July 1.—Henry Richardson is arrested charged with embezzlement of a large sum of money from the Willard Bank. Richardson is only eighteen years of age.

The English Elections.

LONDON, July 1.—John Bright has been re-elected as member of the House for the Central Division of Birmingham, and Joseph Chamberlain for the West Division. Neither was opposed. Up to 3 o'clock this afternoon sixteen Tory candidates, seven Unionists, eight Liberals and two Parnellites have been elected to the new House of Commons in uncontested districts.

Six Months' Business Failures.

NEW YORK, July 1.—The business failures in the United States for the first six months of 1886 amount in number to 5,156, as against 6,004 for the first six months of 1885.

Why Gold is Going to Europe.

NEW YORK, July 1.—The firm which is shipping the largest amount of gold to the continent says that just now there is a greater demand for gold and it is worth more in Berlin, where Russian securities are negotiated to the best advantage than in any other city in Europe.

Jury Disagreed.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., July 1.—The jury in in the boycotting case disagreed and the defendant was discharged.

Town Destroyed by Fire.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 1.—Independence, Cal., was almost wholly destroyed by fire. Loss $200,000.

Grant Memorial Fund.

NEW YORK, July 1.—The executive committee of the Grant Monument Association are preparing to make another appeal to the public for subscriptions to their fund. They are anxious to obtain the full amount required this year, and have the contract for the construction of the monument arranged early in 1887.

A Woman Sentenced to Death.

UTICA, N. Y., July 1.—The general term decision in the case of Mrs. Roxanna Druse, who was convicted of the murder of her husband in Herkimer County, is adverse to her appeal, and she will be resentenced to death.

ENGLISH ELECTIONS.

Very Discouraging to the Gladstone Party.

The Returns Showing Steady Gains for the Opposition.

LONDON, July 5.—The issue is becoming definite. The position to-night presages a crushing defeat for Mr. Gladstone unless he obtains a larger county vote than in November. The burghs are declaring against home rule. Most ominous is the revolt of the Glasgow Radicals. Of the seven contests in Glasgow, the Unionists carried four. Of twenty-one London polls declared to-night, the Unionists secured 13 and Gladstonians 8. The polling was close. The Conservative candidate won Central Finsbury by only five majority. Mr. Saunders, Gladstonian, is defeated in East Hull by 87 majority. Among the eminent Gladstonians defeated are Solicitor-General Davey, Advocate-General Mellor, Mr. Hibbert, Secretary to the Admiralty, and Prof. Thorold Rogers. The London Labor candidates, Cremer and Howell, retain their seats by fair majorities. Sir John Lubbock's re-election is assured by a poll of 400 ahead of Mr. Harrison. Sir Thomas Brassey has been nominated as the Gladstonian candidate for the St. Andrews District. The Pall Mall Gazette admits that the polls are decisive. It says: "The Democracy in the burghs has responded with an emphatic 'No' to Mr. Gladstone's appeal to settle the Irish question on the basis of home rule." Up to midnight 207 Unionists and 105 Gladstonians had been returned. To-day the Tories gained Central Glasgow, Bromwich, Central Finsbury, East Hull, Chelsea and Bermondsey. The Unionists gained the St. Rollox division of Glasgow, and the Gladstonians gained East Finsbury and the Blackfriars division of Glasgow. The Unionists have made a net gain of fourteen seats.

Another American Vessel Seized.

SHELBURNE, N. S., July 5.—The Portland schooner City Point and the schooners Cushing and Harrington, seized by Captain Quigley, of the Dominion cruiser Terror, have been formally handed over to Collector of Customs Atwood. The latter has placed a constable in charge of each, and the City Point and Harrington have been docked below the town, while the Cushing rides at another close alongside the Terror. It is now stated that none of the three is charged with violating the fishing treaty, but the charge is commiting an infraction of the Canadian custom laws.

CANSO, N. S., July 5.—The Deputy Collector of Customs has seized the American schooner Herewood for the alleged shipment of a Canso man. Captain McDonald denies the charge and is waiting to hear from Consul-General Phelan.

Rioting at Dublin.

DUBLIN, July 5.—MIDNIGHT.—Shortly before midnight a party of roughs attacked the house of the Conservative Club, smashing the windows with stones. The members of the club replied by throwing bottles and firing pistols and guns from the windows, killing one of the attacking party and wounding twenty. The mob then tried to set fire to the house by applying a blazing mat saturated with parafine to the door, but the police arrived in time to save the building. The mob was dispersed and the inmates of the club-house arrested for firing arms with deadly effect and intent.

Chief Poundmaker Dead.

WINNIPEG, July 5.—A dispatch from Gleichen, headquarters of the Blackfeet Indians, says Chief Poundmaker, died suddenly at Crowfoot Camp yesterday from the bursting of a blood vessel. The old chief has languished since his release from the penitentiary, where he was confined for nearly a year for his connection with the Riel rebellion.

The Fourth in Mexico.

CITY OF MEXICO, July 4.—The American colony here celebrated the Fourth of July by a ball on Saturday night which was largely attended by resident and visiting Americans. Many distinguished Mexicans were in attendance. The national standard of Mexico is displayed on the Mexican Government buildings in honor of the day.

A New Cattle Disease in Arkansas.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., July 5.—On the cattle ranges of Lonoke and Prairie Counties a deadly disease has developed there among the cattle, which are dying by scores. The exact nature of the disease has not yet been ascertained by the veterinary surgeons, but it resembles somewhat the Texas fever, which has now become epidemic, carrying off the cattle by scores.

Anarchists Found Guilty.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., July 5.—Last night, after having been out twenty-three hours, the jury in the trial of the anarchist leaders, Frank Hirth, Carl Simon and Anton Palm, found them guilty of conspiracy to burn the courthouse and destroying the records and of inciting mobs to riot.

Cholera in Italy.

VIENNA, July 5.—Cholera has appeared at Fiume, and the people of Croatia are panic-stricken. In the last twenty-four hours there have been ten new cases of cholera and ten deaths at Brindisi, and in the remainder of the province 296 new cases and seventy-one deaths.

$70,000 Sky-Rocket.

CHICAGO, ILL., July 5.—Eckert & Swain's flouring mills, on Canal street, were to-day damaged by fire and the contents by water to the amount of $70,000. The blaze was caused by sparks from a sky-rocket, which fell on the roof Sunday night. Insured for $65,000.

The Rowan County Troubles.

MOREHEAD, KY., July 5.—The old troubles in Rowan County have broken out again. Sheriff Rainey has been killed, two men seriously wounded and Governor Knott has been called upon for troops.

Starved to Death in the Woods.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., July 5.—Hugo Michnel, a farmer's son, ran away from his home near Appleton, lost his way in the woods of Taylor County and starved to death. His body was found yesterday.

Death by Fire.

CHICAGO, July 5.—Two attaches of a dime museum were burned to death and four firemen injured at a restaurant fire to-day.

—A correspondent tells a story of Congressmen gathering around a pond in front of the capitol and throwing dimes and nickels into the water to see the fish dive after them. The thing is preposterous. If the correspondent had told us that the fish stood around the pond and threw dimes and nickels into the water to see the Congressmen dive after them we might have believed it. —Cincinnati Enquirer.

—Madame was recounting that her husband was ill the night before, and it was necessary to send for a doctor at three o'clock in the morning. "But I thought you had a doctor in the house, your eldest son?" said a neighbor. "True, but we only let him doctor the servants."—From the French.

—A druggist in Philadelphia who supplied medicine for the poor-house, has been detected in putting up colored water and bread pills for the paupers. Along with this is the strange fact that the patients improve under his treatment.—Philadelphia Press.

DANGEROUS LUNATIC.

Arrest of a Crank Who Traveled From Pittsburgh to Washington to Kill the French Minister.

PITTSBURGH, PA., July 1.—Intelligence was received here to-day of the arrest in Washington City of Peter Zingerie, a crank, who left here on Tuesday for the avowed purpose of killing the French Minister, Louie Theodore Roustan. Zingerie is a Frenchman and for some time past has imagined that Minister Roustan has wronged him. The Washington authorities were notified to be on the lookout for Zingerie, and last evening he was discovered lurking about the Minister's residence with a loaded revolver in his possession. He was arrested and is now in jail at Washington.

Merchants Celebrating Better Times.

TROY, N. Y., July 1.—The tradesmen of Troy are having a grand procession, picnic and barbecue to-day. Upwards of fifteen thousand free tickets to the picnic have been distributed by the merchants and the city is in holiday attire. The procession, mostly composed of gaily-decorated teams and riders, was over three miles in length. This gala day is supposed to signify the glad tidings that the merchants of Troy believe that a revival of the business interests has now set in.

For Relief of Jeannette Survivors.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—The bill passed by the House some time ago for the relief of the survivors of the steamer Jeannette and the widows and children of those who perished in the retreat from the wreck of that vessel in the Arctic seas, was reported favorably to the Senate to-day from the Committee on Naval Affairs. The Senate committee amended the bill so as to provide that the twelve months' pay of Henry D. Warren, of the crew, shall be paid to his child and not to his widow.

Revenue Deficiency.

BERLIN, July 1.—The imperial revenue for the fiscal year 1885-86, will, it is calculated, fall 17,000,000 marks below the estimate. The deficiency is attributed to a decrease amounting to 20,000,000 marks in the revenue derived from the sugar tax. The taxes on salt, beer and spirits show an increase in their yields to the Treasury. The new sugar tax law will, it is thought, produce an addition of 16,000,000 marks to the revenue.

Wife Murder.

WILKESBARRE, PA., July 1.—During a jealous quarrel between Edwin Bellows and wife at Nanticoke at an early hour this morning, in which hot words passed between the two, Bellows in a fit of frenzy drew a revolver and shot his wife twice. Her wounds are pronounced fatal. The murderer was arrested and brought to this city this morning and loged in jail.

A Chance for Mexico's Credit.

BOSTON, July 1.—A Mexico dispatch to the Herald says: The next fiscal year will show from 10 to 15 per cent. gain, which will amount to nearly $3,000,000 addition to the Federal revenues. President Diaz feels encouraged at the outlook and at the prospect of the re-establishment of national credit.

Fitz John Porter Bill Signed.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—The President has signed the Fitz John Porter bill, and he is now reinstated with the rank he held at the second Bull Run battle. He will be placed on the retired list.

Cleveland and Wife to Visit Michigan.

TOLEDO, O., July 1.—President Cleveland this morning informed representatives that he would attend the Michigan fair at Jackson, with Mrs. Cleveland. The latter has relatives in that city.

THE FESTIVE OYSTER.

Some of Their Strangely Interesting and Wonderful Peculiarities.

Now that oysters are off—that is, away on a vacation—some instances of the peculiarities of the insects may be proper to relate.

It is a fact that they are lazy and shell-fish. They make their beds where the pure waters will lave them, and never leave these till forcibly assisted therefrom.

As they are apt to grow more shell-fish while dozing in their beds, so they become quite crab-bed, and acquire a crusty nature.

When taken from their seaside resorts, among associations of refined gentlemen and delicate ladies they exhibit a propensity to get into broils and stews, which causes these persons to run them down severely.

The shuckers are foes to the peace of the oysters. After a tussle with these the bivalves frequently find themselves in a pickle. It is war to the knife between them. Individual and family ties are ruthlessly sundered.

Oysters R—well no—no, not in summer.—Boston Transcript.

XLIXTH CONGRESS.

First Session.

WASHINGTON, June 29.—SENATE.—Mr. Beck introduced a bill authorizing the Postmaster General to appoint and remove third-class postmasters, now appointed and removed by the President. Mr. Camden made a personal explanation denying a recent publication connecting him in connection with the Paine bribery case. The bill to quiet the titles of settlers on the Des Moines river lands was passed over the President's veto—34 to 15. The legislative appropriation bill was taken up and considered. Pending action conference reports on the pension and army appropriation bills were agreed to, and at 6 p. m. the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE.—The conference report on the pension appropriation bill was agreed to. The general deficiency bill was appropriated, and then, in committee of the whole, the sundry civil bill was taken up. The conference report on the post-office appropriation bill was agreed to, the Senate receding from the subsidy amendment. Conference reports on the army and agricultural appropriation bills were also agreed to.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—SENATE.—The consideration of the resolution for open executive sessions was proceeded with. A speech prepared by Mr. Morrill was read by Mr. Manderson. Mr. Hoar also spoke in opposition. A bill was introduced by Mr. Edmunds to vest in the President the sole power of appointing a large number of officers now appointed by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Two vetoes of pension bills were read and referred. The consular and diplomatic conference report was agreed to. A joint resolution extending the appropriations ten days was objected to by Mr. Edmunds for reasons to be given to-morrow. The Senate then proceeded to the consideration of the legislative appropriation bill. The conference report on the District of Columbia bill was agreed to. After disposing of forty-six pages of the legislative bill a recess was taken until 8 p. m.

HOUSE.—Bills were reported to establish a commission to examine and report upon Indian depredation claims, and to amend the steamboat inspection laws. Three reports from the Pan-Electric Investigation Committee were submitted. A bill was reported from the Ways and Means Committee to regulate the manufacture of vinegar made from grain. The Sundry civil bill was then taken up and considered. Pending action on the last page the consular and diplomatic conference report was agreed to, and at 6 p. m. the House adjourned. A joint resolution extending appropriations ten days was passed during the day.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—SENATE.—The bill taxing oleomargarine was reported back without amendment. The House bill for the relief of the survivors of the Jeannette was placed on the calendar. Mr. Riddleberger offered a bill to reduce twenty-five per cent. the salaries of Cabinet officers, Senators and members. The joint resolution for a ten days' extension of appropriations was amended to fifteen days, and passed. The paragraph for the office work connected with the publication of the rebellion records was retained, with a proviso restricting the publications to cotemporaneous ends of the war, and another directing the publication of the evidence in the Fitz John Porter case and the report thereon by Judge Advocate General Holt. The bill was reported back to the Senate, to be passed to-morrow. At 7 p. m. the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE.—The President's veto of the Des Moines River bill, with the passage of the bill by the Senate over the veto, was considered. The necessary two-thirds vote was not obtained—yeas, 161; nays, 92. Adverse reports were made from the Military Committee on bills for the retirement of Generals Getty and Ingalls. The Sundry Civil bill was considered. The Legislative Appropriation bill was then taken up. It was finally passed, and at 5:45 p. m. the House adjourned.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—SENATE.—The legislative appropriation bill was taken up and passed. The river and harbor bill was reached. Eulogies on the late Representative Hahn, of Louisiana, were delivered. At 5 p. m. the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE.—A bill forfeiting lands granted to certain roads in the Southern States was reported, and the Senate amendment agreed to excepting the Gulf and Ship Island railroad. The House concurred in the Senate amendments to the bill repealing the pre-emption law. The general deficiency bill was taken up, and half finished at five o'clock, when the House took a recess until eight o'clock, the night session being for the consideration of pension bills.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—SENATE.—No session.

HOUSE.—After a few unimportant resolutions were offered and referred, the House went into committee of the whole on the general deficiency appropriation bill. A long, and at times acrimonious, discussion arose over an amendment offered by Mr. Cannon (Ill.), appropriating $22,000 to refund taxes illegally collected from certain railroad companies on account of alien bond and stockholders. The amendment was adopted. The clause ratifying and confirming the readjustments of the salaries of postmasters heretofore made by the Postmaster General pursuant to the act of the 3d of March, 1883, was ruled out on a point of order, and an amendment offered by Mr. Burnes (Mo.), striking out the entire appropriation for readjustments ($382,394), was adopted. After concluding the consideration of all but ten pages of the bill, the committee rose and the House at 5 p. m. adjourned.

THE COMMONWEALTH.

Louisville Leaf Tobacco Market.

Burley tobaccos have not varied a great deal, but the market has been sustained by holding back tobaccos of that type and putting on the breaks the other types which have been more generally wanted. The sales have been spiritless at the very low prices previously established, and the only quotable changes are 25c in medium lugs and leaf. Other grades are quotably unchanged. Fine leaf was not offered. While the changes of prices are slight and most grades are well sustained, indifference has been more extensively manifested by buyers than in several weeks. Crop advices have been favorable. Ground has been secured for the storage warehouse which is to be erected to accommodate the growing wants of the market, and it is probable that building will soon begin. It is estimated to be a matter of experience both in the cost of the investment and in operating the storage machinery, that money can be saved by height as opposed to extent of surface, and the building will be probably nine stories high. There are now probably 27,000 hogsheads of tobacco here in care of the warehouses, besides about 5,000 probably in the hands of dealers—a total of 32,000 hogsheads. This is the largest stock ever held, as it would be, if it were 6,000 or 7,000 hogsheads less. We quote 1884 tobaccos as follows for full weight packages:

	Dark and Heavy	Burley
Trash	$1 75@2 25	$2 75@3 75
Common lugs	2 50@3 25	4 50@4 75

The petition denies the right of a county judge to borrow the railroad fund, or using the fund of the county collected for railroad purposes in building a new county jail. The county has a railroad fund in Deposit Bank of $30,000, and the County Court decided to borrow $17,000 to build a jail, levying a tax to pay the sum. IT YET RANKLES.

The Outrage of 1876 by Which Fraud Triumphed—General Hancock's Manly, Patriotic, Statesmanlike Attitude.

At a recent meeting of the Military Service Institution, held to honor the memory of Winfield Scott Hancock, there were read or spoken a great many interesting letters and addresses from persons of weight and eminence in civil and military life. But none of these tributes bears such impressive and enduring witness to the virtues of the dead, or establishes so strong a title to the national respect and gratitude, as a letter sent by Hancock himself to General Sherman in December, 1876. Here the writer sets forth modestly but firmly, his conception of the duty of the army, and especially of officers intrusted with high command, in the event of grave commotions being excited by a failure of the Senate and House of Representatives to agree in declaring the result of the Presidential election. In Hancock the country lost a soldier who was first of all a patriot, a soldier who would have let no fiction of deference to military orders supersede his fundamental oath to obey the constitution, and who, in such a conflict of technical and real obligations, would have stood forth a bulwark, and not a betrayer, of our liberties.

What were the rights and duties of the House of Representatives in the event of the Senate's refusing to concur in pronouncing Mr. Tilden the choice of a majority for President, is now plain enough to all men of sound brains and honest hearts. By General Hancock they were recognized with unerring exactitude in December, 1876, and in his letter to Sherman they are incidentally defined with rare simplicity and cogency. "If," he writes, "the Senate and House, on the occasion of the count, do not unite in declaring some person legally elected by the people, there is a lawful machinery already provided to meet the contingency and to decide the question peacefully. It has not been recently used, no occasion presenting, but our forefathers provided it. It has been exercised, and has been recognized as lawful on every hand. That machinery would probably elect Mr. Tilden President and Mr. Wheeler Vice-President."

General Hancock proceeds to make more unmistakable, his meaning, which is that, should the House of Representatives, as he plainly thinks it ought to do, pronounce it irreconcilable with its conscience to bestow on Mr. Hayes the electoral votes of the three States of South Carolina, Florida and Louisiana, or the votes of any one of them, then there would be no election by the people, no candidate having a majority of the Electoral College, and the right to choose a President would by the constitution devolve upon the House. "Some tribunal," says Hancock, "must decide whether the people have duly elected a President. I presume, of course, that it is the joint affirmative action of the Senate and House, or why are they present to witness the count, if not to see that it is fair and just? If a failure to agree arises between the two bodies, there can be no lawful affirmative decision that the people have elected a President, and the House must then proceed to act, not the Senate. The Senate elects Vice-Presidents, not Presidents."

No wonder that Secretary Bayard, who had read these imperishable words, should have commented upon them in a letter read before the Military Service Institution in terms that reflect honor at once upon Hancock and himself. "I take leave here to say," writes Mr. Bayard, "that no wiser, abler or more patriotic deliverance, no sounder conception of constitutional duty and function, or solution based more solidly upon law and justice, can be found in the history of that period than is contained in the letter of General Hancock to General Sherman."

But there is something else deducible from the frank and pregnant text of Hancock's communication. From his conception of the powers and obligations of the House of Representatives in the crisis then at hand there were for him, as being an officer in high command, certain practical corollaries of the utmost gravity and moment. From these Hancock did not flinch. Whom was he, Hancock, to obey in the event of the nonagreement of the Senate and House, and a consequent miscarriage of the election by the people? From whom was he to take orders on March 4, 1877, providing the House of Representatives had not yet discharged its function of naming an occupant for the Presidential office? He bluntly tells General Sherman that in his judgment General Grant's term of office would cease with the expiration of March 3, and it followed that not for an hour afterward would Hancock have taken orders from Grant in the capacity of President and Commander-in-Chief. He did not doubt that General Sherman's authority, such as it was, would continue, and he acknowledged that the President of the Senate would be on March 4 "the legitimate person to exercise Presidential authority for the time being, until the appearance of a lawful President."

These admissions are qualified by the firm notification that neither in the President of the Senate nor the General of the army would Hancock recognize a right of influencing in any degree by military measures the selection of a President, and that any orders apparently directed to that end would be construed and treated by him (Hancock) in the light of reason and of conscience. "Should," he says, "the military authorities be invoked, it is necessary in such great crises for the superior officers of the army, and especially for those near the head of it, to dare to determine for themselves what is lawful and what is not lawful under our system."

Would that words so righteous and courageous as those of Hancock could have wakened echoes in the hearts of the pusillanimous majority of the House of Represenatives! We should not then have seen the sacrifice of a paramount and vital constitutional right to the bugbear of coercion by the military arm. We should then have been spared the spectacle of fraud triumphant in the chair of the American Executive.—N. Y. Sun.

JOHN KELLY.

A Curious Letter that He Wrote to [illegible] Just Before His Speech in Lowville.

When our townsman, Mr. George J. Mager, was a resident of Lowville and treasurer of the Lewis County Agricultural Society in 1883, he secured a promise from the late Hon. John Kelly and Hon. Thomas F. Grady to speak at the annual fair of the society. Shortly before the date fixed for the fair he wrote to Mr. Kelly for a few facts in his history and Mr. Grady's for publication in the Lowville papers. In reply he received the following letter, marked "confidential," and which he still has in his possession. Mr. Kelly's death having removed the injunction of secrecy, Mr. Mager has consented to let us publish the letter:

[Confidential.]

GRAND UNION HOTEL, SARATOGA,
August 18, 1883.

MY DEAR SIR: Yours of the 15th is at hand and contents noted. Mr. Grady and myself will leave here for New York on the 18th prox. for Lowville, arriving the same evening, barring accidents.

Hon. Thomas F. Grady was born in New York, served four years in the State Assembly, and is at present in the Senate. He is of Irish parentage. I consider him one of the ablest young men of his age in public life. As a speaker he is very superior in argument and style to most of his colleagues in the Senate. He is about twenty-nine years of age, height five feet seven inches, square shouldered, and weighs one hundred and seventy pounds. He has a thorough command of his temper. His analysis of difficult subjects is natural.

John Kelly is sixty years of age, and was born in New York, of Irish parents. He served two years in the Board of Aldermen, four years in Congress, six years as sheriff of the County of New York, and four years as city comptroller. He is five feet nine inches and a half in height and weighs two hundred and thirty-six pounds.

I have given you Grady's history and my own, and you will probably laugh at the description, but as you requested me in your letter to state our pedigrees, I might add that we are clinker built and coppered and fastened, sound in wind, and well up on our pedestrian joints. Grady is good for a long race, and is well broken to double and single harness and trots well under the saddle, stands without tying, and is not afraid of locomotives or other vehicles of doubtful structure.

For myself I am nothing to brag of and have passed the meridian; too old for a speedy gallop and fair for a long race; not easily scared and very docile under trying and difficult circumstances. When the driver is tyrannical, usually take the bit and kick clear of traces. Usually halt when there appears to be a willingness to give and administer fair treatment, but will lead by halter only for short distance. Will drive with a curb bit long enough to breathe stentoriously.

Yours truly, JOHN KELLY.

To G. J. MAGER, Esq., Treasurer and Secretary.

DEMOCRATIC DROPS.

——Mr. Halstead wants to know if Mr. Tilden is not eligible to the Presidency. The Republicans didn't seem to think so when he was elected.—Chicago Herald.

——The New York Tribune suggests that "may be the President would think better of a scheme to pension those patriots who sent substitutes to the front." If the Tribune wants Blaine pensioned why not come out squarely and say so?—Detroit Free Press.

——The Omaha Bee is not the only great newspaper that finds in Senator Van Wyck, of Nebraska, constant food for complimentary discourse. The New York Herald is the other admirer. Bounded on the west by the Omaha Bee and on the east by the New York Hearald, the pestiferous little gadfly of the United States Senate has reason indeed to fancy that he is the power that makes the wheel of American politics go round.—Chicago News.

——The Detroit Journal quotes Jay A. Hubbell as saying: "Blaine can be nominated if he wants it, but the party can not afford to go into another defensive campaign. I told his managers two years ago that they must ignore all charges and make an offensive campaign, but they knew better." Mr. Hubbell is guilty of his first mistake. The campaign was one of the most offensive to admirers of honesty ever conducted in this country.—Chicago News.

——Mr. Cleveland is a good enough President for us. We believe thoroughly in his patriotism and incorruptible honesty; we believe he has the best good of the country at heart, and aims to execute the laws as he finds them. Further, we believe that no President since Lincoln has sympathized more earnestly than Mr. Cleveland with the hopes and the aspirations of his colored fellow citizens. We say this after having seen and talked with Mr. Cleveland, after reading his public utterances on questions affecting us, and in weighing the measure of official recognition he has given the race.—N. Y. Freeman.

——I did not vote for Grover Cleveland, but I am free to say he is making a splendid record and doing a noble work for the country. He is a man of downright honesty, principle and independence, as his refusal to expel faithful officials for party favoritism and his correction of extravagance, national and social, shows. I am in thorough accord and hearty sympathy with President Cleveland, and last summer, when I was in England, John Bright said to me: "Your new President seems to be doing grand work, for all the Americans whom I see over here tell me so," and I answered that in my opinion they had only told him the truth. —Rev. Dr. T. L. Cuyler.

Ought to Blister the Tongue.

There is a rumor in Washington—the source is not official, however—that Attorney-General Garland is likely to resign within the next thirty days and that the office will be tendered to Randolph Tucker, of Virginia, a representative in the House, one of the best and most brilliant lawyers in the country. It would be a burning shame to see an honest and able man like Garland forced to resign to appease the venomous press, bought and owned by the Bell Telephone Company. There is not a reputable citizen in the country who does not know that no act of Garland's has been prompted by the fact that he is a stockholder in the Pan Electric Company. At the time Garland bought the stock he was a Senator. President Cleveland had not been spoken of for Chief Magistrate and there was nothing the company could appeal to Congress for. To say that this sturdy honest man, who is as poor to-day as the first hour he entered the Senate, sold himself for the worthless stock is to utter a despicable falsehood which ought to blister the tongue that repeats it. No matter what may be said of Southern Congressmen no pitch clings to their skirts and no scandal-monger dare accuse them of selling their votes or influence. It is the duty of the Administration to stand by Garland, for this attempt to drive him out is prompted by malice and is pushed only for the purpose of stabbing the President and his Cabinet. The time to stand by an honest man is when he is unjustly accused by the jackals of society.—Buffalo Times.

THE glorious fourth this year was in the fork of the celebration.

In Robertson county farmers are promising the candidates their votes that will work a day for them in the harvest field.

IT seems that the result of the next election in Kenton county is very uncertain as to result. The political atmosphere over there is considerably agitated.

WE have the proceedings of the first Congressional convention to see, in which the administration is censured. The Republicanconventions are excepted of course.

IT was Senator Ingalls who opposed the confirmation of Matthews as Recorder of Deeds in the District of Columbia on the ground that "no negro has the right to be a Democrat."

HAYES! that name sounds like we have heard it before. Oh, yes; we remember now, that it was in 1876. The gentleman now objects to the President vetoing the private pension jobs.

AT Bowling Green last Saturday a reunion of the Eleventh Kentucky Federal Infantry was held, there being three thousand strangers present, including five hundred soldiers. The Declaration of Independence was read and speeches made.

THIS week we present the name of Edgar Cropper as a candidate for County Commissioners. Mr. Cropper is a good business man, and should he be chosen as one of the three Commissioners, the interest of the county will be closely watched on his part.

SOME of the Congressmen are getting restless, and want to get home to commence looking after their fences, which some of them fear have been knocked out of plumb by the handy and free use of the President's veto messages in the pension business.

IN this issue we announce Esq. Thos. H. Sutton, of Bellevue, as a candidate for County Commissioner. He has served some time as a Justice of the Peace in his district, which has familiarized him with the business of the county, and, no doubt, he will make a good commissioner if elected.

THERE is evidently a smaller acreage of tobacco in this county than was cultivated last year, and at present the crop can not be considered promising. Tobacco is a crop which a few weeks favorable weather at the close of the season will make a wonderful change in, and the very poor and unpromising plants soon develop into a giant growth.

IT is believed that the Hon. John W. Stevenson, of Covington, will accept the Democratic nomination for Governor, if the party will tender it to him, which would be quite out of the usual line of political procedure in Kentucky. The party could not do a more creditable act, though, than to depart from the usual methods, and nominate Mr. Stevenson without his asking it.

IN every convention where there are Louisville delegates there is always [illegible]. There is [illegible] who make the [illegible] by getting themselves [illegible] delegates at conventions and then sell their votes to the highest bidder. The prices range from [illegible] sometimes being higher according to the necessities of the [illegible]. There is no [illegible] about this. It is a historical fact that has been repeated year after year for a long time. There is need [illegible] of politics in Louisville.—[illegible] Messenger.

HON. JOHN G. CARLISLE writes Prof. Thos. A. Vance of Covington in regard to the report that he is opposed to the Blair Educational Bill as follows:

"I am incorrectly reported as being opposed to the Blair Educational Bill, and, in my opinion, the objections to it are so palpable that when the people come to have it fully explained very few will favor it. * * * When I return home in the fall, if the people desire to hear my views upon this question and the reasons for them, I shall cheerfully comply."

THE State Auditor says concerning the new revenue law:

"There seems to be a misapprehension of the new revenue law by many persons in the State. It does not go into effect until next September, and the State taxes for this year will be collected under the old law, the rate being 51 cents on the $100 valuation, instead of 52½ cents as levied for the past two years. The rate under the new law will be 47 cents, which, notwithstanding the two assessments this year, will almost leave the burden of taxation about the same as it is now, and also enable the State to pay claims promptly as received, instead of waiting six or eight months for money in the treasury, as at present, and compelling needy claimants to resort to brokers to whom they will sell at a discount."

Some time ago Marshal Gross received a letter from some one up in the mountains, requesting that no deputies be sent up there to execute processes until after the election as it might endanger Democratic success. In response he wrote:

"SIR—Your letter of June 21 is received and contents noted. Your request is a very peculiar one. While I am a Democrat and will do all I can honorably to advance the interest of my party and its candidates, I am also a sworn officer of the law, and as such I shall endeavor to do my whole duty. Therefore, should a process be placed in my hands for service in your county, community or district, it will be properly executed. If the enforcement of the law and the arrest of the law-breakers will endanger the success of the Democratic candidates of your county or district, I have no hesitancy in expressing the opinion that they ought to be defeated. Success based upon cringing to the lawless classes will in the end prove more disastrous to the party than defeat."

THE harvesting of wheat has been concluded in Tennessee, Kentucky and Missouri. In the former two States continuous wet weather delayed the gathering of the grain in some sections, and caused some damage, both before reaping and while in shock. In Fayette and Jessamine counties, in Kentucky, whole fields are reported to have been ruined by black rust, and in Fayette the reports indicate that fully one-half of the crop was ruined. The average yield in both States is reported at from 15 to 25 bushels to the acre, where no injury from rust has occurred. The reports indicate that in nearly every portion of Missouri farmers were unusually successful in harvesting wheat. The average yield is placed as high as 17 to 22 bushels to the acre in St. Clair, Pike, Cariton and Scott counties. The indications are that the entire average for the State will be unusually high. Harvesting is still progressing in Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio, under fairly favorable conditions, though scattering reports of rain and rust are made, but not such as to indicate any widespread damage. Rains prevailed over large areas of Dakota, improving the general outlook for spring wheat greatly, and apparently insuring an average yield. The reports still indicate that the general average throughout the Territory of both wheat and oats was reduced 10 to 15 per cent. before the drouth was broken. In Stutsman county the report this week indicates that not to exceed one-half a wheat crop is promised, while in Coddington and several adjoining counties the reports show that the crop was shortened 15 to 20 per cent. The situation in Minnesota has not materially improved. In Dodge, Filmore, Nicollet and Winona the reports state that fully one-fourth to one-half of the entire spring wheat and oat crops have been ruined by the drouth, and to the fact that the rains came too late. The need of rain in Iowa and Nebraska is reported in Cass, Carroll, Franklin, Howard, Iowa, Keokuk, Marion and Van Buren counties. In Iowa the necessity for rain has been very pressing, and the prospects [illegible] wheat and oats have already been lowered 11 to 20 per cent. The corn prospects continue very promising in both the northwest and southwest States.—Farm [illegible] Review.

STATE NEWS.

Eighteen [illegible] of new Kentucky wheat sold in St. Louis at [illegible] per bushel.

The crop of tobacco in Nicholas county is much smaller, and of a more inferior quality than is usual.

Oats, corn and grass promise fine. Tobacco all set, with considerable below the usual acreage.—Milton Free Press.

R. H. Vance says the wire worms are eating up Willis Ford's corn crop. They bore into the centre of the stalk and kill the corn.—Owen News.

The farmers of Spencer county have finished harvesting their wheat crop, which promises to be an extra good one both in yield and quantity.

A contract to build nine miles of railroad from Cave City to the Mammoth Cave has been let to James Coyne, of Jeffersonville, Indiana, for $75,000.

A farmer in Scott county has 22 acres of broom corn. He says that he will realize about 2,000 pounds to the acre, and expects to get 12 or 15 cents per pound for it. This beats tobacco culture by long odds.

Shelby county has a local option law that forces physicians to write on prescriptions the name of the patient, the quantity of the liquor, and the purpose for which it is to be used, as well as the disease it is expected to cure.

One of the largest sales of real estate ever made in this State has recently been closed by a syndicate of Chicago capitalists in Carter county. The land is valuable in coal, iron and timber, and the consideration is $1,450,000.

An extra wheat crop harvested, but injuring in the stack from protracted wet weather. Corn on low land is beyond redemption; some fields of corn on the hills five feet high, very tender and has never been cultivated a particle.—Owen News.

Some parties at Mt. Sterling went to law several months ago over a little quantity of sausage. Only a small quantity was involved in the suit, but the costs of the case now foot up about four hundred dollars, and the matter isn't yet settled. One thing is apparent, and that is, both parties are paying a pretty high price for that sausage.—Maysville Bulletin.

Oats will be a good crop, though some few are down. Wheat has mostly been harvested and will average about twenty bushels to the acre. Hay has been thickened by the late rains and will be a fair crop. Favorable rye crop is reported. A larger acreage of tobacco is planted than last year, and while the plants are doing well, the weeds are in abundance in the patches. Corn is growing finely.—Eminence Constitutionalist.

State Politics.

At Millersburg wheat is selling at 65 cents a bushel.

Judge Hazlerigg has withdrawn from the race in the Winchester Common Pleas district.

The Prohibitionists are thinking of putting Gen. Green Clay Smith against Hon. James B. McCreary in the race for Congress.

The Owensboro Inquirer says of Gen. Buckner's endorsement of Gov. Knott's administration, "he should not have announced the fact until after the election."

Carlisle's Presidential boom may be a little early, but if the boom is anything like the speaker it will grow to be a boom that is a boom.—Lexington Press.

Col Breckinridge will be a candidate for reelection to Congress, and will likely go back, but there are a number of good men in the district who are hankering for the office.

While the Covington Commonwealth is making an infantile effort to defeat Mr. Carlisle for Congress, many leading papers of the country are indorsing him for the Presidential nomination.—Louisville Commercial.

We want Kentucky's new constitution to provide for the appointment of Judges by the Governor. A judge should be above suspicion of fraud, under obligations to no set of politicians, absolutely free, and by the present elective system such a judge cannot be placed upon the bench. The recent history of the Lebanon convention will bear us out in our opinion.—Midway Clipper.

ON the 10th, (next Saturday) the county conventions will be held to appoint delegates to the district convention to be held on the 16th inst., to nominate a candidate in this district for Judge of the Superior Court. Judge J. Q. Ward is the only candidate.

PROFITABLE HORSES

The Demand for Heavy, Strong Horses Steadily Increasing.

I am satisfied that farmers make a great mistake when they slight advantages to be derived from keeping good horses and from rearing two or three colts every year. Aside from the first cost, a three-year-old colt can be reared about as cheaply as a cow of the same age, but while the ordinary price for a good three-year-old cow is thirty or forty dollars, a good sound well bred colt is worth $100 to $200 at the same age.

When the farmer used to trudge along all day after a ten-inch plow to turn two acres or less of land, a pair of nimble little plugs was good enough for him, but with the introduction of the sixteen and eighteen inch plow that will easily roll over three to five acres a day, with a spring seat on it for him to ride on, there has come an urgent demand for heavier and stronger horses to draw it. In adopting the improved agricultural implements the farmer must do one of two things: use strong and heavier horses or a larger number. Experience proves that the heavier animals are the more economical in the end.

The shortest and cheapest way for the farmer to obtain such horses is by the use of thoroughbred stallions of a strong, heavy breed on good, sound common mares. By the proper selection of mares and the use of suitable stallions he may, in a few years, have horses that can draw the improved farming implements more easily than the little plugs drew the ten-inch plow.

As somebody has said, the thoroughbred blood is like the fine steel that enters into a machine; it gives strength, firmness, durability and vigor. The bone is made harder and more solid, the sinews stronger and more elastic, the muscles are firmer and have greater tension, the lungs are more capacious, while mere useless bulk is supplanted by shapely form and muscular strength. The "clod hopper" with his little ten-inch plow can get along with almost any sort of plugs, but the intelligent and progressive farmer wants horses that are adapted to the new condition of things—horses that can draw the improved implements easily and rapidly, and at the same time not "eat him out of house and home."

In some localities, owing to the nature of the ground, the improved large implements can not be used, and in such places it is probable that small light horses can be employed to greater advantage than those of heavier build, but on the broad prairies and in the level valleys, where neither stones, stumps, gullies nor steep hill-sides interfere, heavy and powerful horses, capable of drawing the largest farming implements easily, are what the farmer needs, and what he should strive to obtain by judicious breeding. The demand for such horses for both farm and city use is steadily increasing, and the supply will not equal the demand for years to come.

A team of first-class three-year-olds, sound and of shapely form, are worth from $350 to $500. And when such teams can be reared as cheaply as scrubs worth less than half that sum, it is plain that farmers would advance their own interests by breeding them exclusively.—Cor. N. Y. Examiner.

FEMALE DRESS.

Consistency Sacrificed to the Baubles and Vanities of the World.

The mania for beaded garnitures is fast working its course to an abrupt termination. Pearls, jets, garnets and other decorations of the kind are essentially handsome and rich, and form a very beautiful and effective finish when properly applied; and when confined to elegant toilets no possible fault could very well be found with a limited and tasteful use of them. Unfortunately, however, like the adoption of lace trimmings, they have struck the fancy of the million, and, presto! every feminine throat gleams with ruby, bronze, jet or pearl beads, as the case may be, and so also do they break out on every other feminine article of dress one sees, from shoe-tip to the very topmost towering height of the bobbing aigrette of my lady's bonnet. Pearls and parties agree somehow. Pearls and tennis do not. A wine satin dress decorated with costly ruby bead garnitures looks, in spite of its undeniable value, very garish and gaudy in a street car, the wearer heralding her entrance therein by a tintinnabulation of clashing beads. Ruby sounds like reception and not like railroad; lace is also suggestive of marble halls, banquet rooms, the sound of sweet music and the swish of silken gowns, but not at all of glaring sunshine, crowded pavements, cotton attire and noisy streets. And yet lace, once within the exclusive reach of Queens and Princesses, is, by the rapid whirling wheel of fashion, driven by the tireless hand of artist and inventor, dragged from its high estate and trailed in the dust! Among all the costly accessories which in these days go to make up the complete and wondrous furnishing of a lady's dressing room, one little priceless gem is omitted in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred. Pearls there be, and gold, and silken raiment, and purple and fine linen, but the rare jewel, consistency, is overlooked, and never once regarded or missed among the baubles and vanities which there crowd each other so closely. As one ponders upon these things one can only conclude that to the nineteenth century all things are possible, and that the exhibition of surprise is as bad form as the evidence of any other emotion. Indeed, surprises come so fast in these latter days that the majority have become calloused and accept the situation, either social, political, fashionable or æsthetical, and give no sign.—N. Y. Evening Post.

The County Superintendent of Schools, H. J. Foster, is attending the Teachers' State Association at Louisville this week.

Clarence Hoover, of Florence, and Miss Abanathy, of Covington, were married last week, Elder Keen performing the ceremony.

H. F. Blases, 544 Madison avenue, Covington, is the place to go to get a good suit of clothes made to order, and don't you forget it.

A little son of Dill Tilley, of Petersburg, died last Sunday of lock-jaw, the result of sticking a thorn in his foot about a week before.

This year furnished two days on which to celebrate the fourth—quite liberal with its time, or very patriotic, we are not certain which.

Samuel Cantwell, who was lodged in jail during last Circuit Court to serve out a $150 fine for giving liquor to minors was released last week.

We are requested to announce that R. A. Wilholt will deliver a temperance lecture in the Court-house at this place at 8 o'clock p. m., July 25, 1886.

Some of the farmers have finished plowing their corn, while others have acres of it not yet out of the clods. The crop is very irregular and indifferent.

Monday the Master Commissioner sold to O. F. Glackin, the Allen Wilholt farm of 150¼ acres on the Lexington pike near Richwood for $71 50 per acre.

Persons needing old saddles repaired or new ones made, will find it to their interest to call on A. M. Acra. He has a first-class saddler and will warrant all work.

Norris & Grant's trotter, Grafton, has won four out of five trots in which he has started this season. This is a good record and it is hoped that he will continue the good work.

Persons wanting a new pump or an old pump, or an old stove repaired, or any tin work done, can have same promptly attended to by W. H. & J. M. McClung, of Covington, by leaving orders at this office.

Several days since a silver napkin ring was stolen from the residence of Thomas Cowen, and one day last week Tom found it in his garden, wrapped in a piece of paper and placed where he could not help discovering it.

In locating the natural wonders in this county there was evidently a misfit, for what a magnificent resort the Middle creek cliffs would be were the Big Bone springs located there. The scenery about them would be grand in the extreme.

[illegible] Thursday morning [illegible] we started to Verona by way of Walton.

The morning [illegible] Walton, where the [illegible]

[illegible] Walton is a great point for the dry goods business and there are three stores, McHatton & Hinton, [illegible] Percival & Son, and T. F. Curley, each of which carries a large stock and sells a large amount of goods during the year, although Thursday trade was very dull. T. F. Curley has the post office, and through his efforts, it has been made a money order office, and by this time it is fully equipped and ready for business.

While at Walton we learned of the very serious sickness of Robert Cleek, one of the most estimable citizens of that part of the county.

Here we parted company with the Sheriff, who mounted his steed and took in the business "for revenue only," while we boarded the train for Verona, where we arrived on schedule time. Many of the farmers were in town giving it quite an animated appearance, and the merchants, Dickerson and Sleet, were doing a good business. It seems that a "salt war" is on in that place, and the prices are ranging below "rock-bottom." W. E. Sleet is the postmaster, and is the authorized agent for the RECORDER.

B. Q. Roberts, who was badly hurt by discharging a defective musket several days since, will lose the sight of his right eye, but, otherwise, will soon recover from the wound.

Powers & Beutler, the village Smiths, who are generally busy, were having an off day in their "profession," while Myer's saw-mill was shut down for the time only.

An improvement that will be of a most substantial benefit to the town, the macadamizing of the street leading to the depot, is being done. For several months in the year that street has been a lake of mud, almost impassable, and it is strange that it has been neglected so long; but the business men have at last realized that its improvement will redound to their interest.

Verona numbers among her citizens Mr. Stephenson, the patentee of a clothes rack, which the inventor believes will prove a great blessing to the lady who is so fortunate as to preside over a family, and manipulates the wash board in bad weather. It is a good invention.

Eight hundred thousand pounds is about the amount of tobacco annually rehandled in Verona in a year by the two firms, Kennedy, Hume & Whitson, and C. C. Roberts. The first named handles about 600,000 pounds, and has shipped 60 hhds. since the 15th of last month. Both firms, we believe, handle a large amount of live stock, and are, consequently, valuable men to that part of the county.

One of the most accommodating men to be found in that section is Jno. O'Neal, railroad agent and telegraph operator. While he neglects no interest of the road, he is always looking to the comfort of the patrons of the L. & N.

A mad-dog excitement was prevailing in the town and neighborhood, and several canines had turned up their toes, being suspicioned of having been bitten by the rabbid animal which made a tour of that country about a week before.

About 6.15 we left for Walton, at which place our companion we found in waiting, and after partaking of a hearty meal at the popular hostelry kept by Mrs. King, we commenced our return home.

The crops along the route traveled are backward, the corn and tobacco being small, but the farmers are not discouraged, but determined to make the best out of a bad season.

Answer to the Rabbit Hash and Bellevue Calls.

Gentlemen, your call in the RECORDER has been noted; and, in reply, would say that I feel highly complimented by seeing so many men of noted influence and wide-spread reputation, soliciting me to be a candidate for the office of County Commissioner. I am aware of the grave responsibilities that will rest upon your Commissioners for their careful, honest and faithful discharge of their various duties. And the most important of all is to guard well the treasury.

Gentlemen, I accept your call, and should I be elected by the voters of Boone county, you will find me faithful to my trust.

Respectfully,

T. H. SUTTON.

The fourth and last quarterly meeting of this conference year will be held at Mt. Zion church, Boone county, on the second Saturday and Sunday in July, the 10th and 11th. The presiding elder of the district, Rev. Chas. Taylor, and the preacher in charge, Rev. B. F. Bristow, will conduct the services, which will be followed by a bountiful basket dinner on Sunday. By special invitation Prof. Bristow will have charge of the music, and everybody is invited to attend and enjoy this old-time basket and quarterly meeting.

One night last week G. T. Gaines and a Mr. Jones thinking dogs were among the sheep, got up and went to the pasture to see, and found nothing wrong, but on their return to the house in passing the chicken coop they came upon a fellow who was attempting to steal chickens. The thief took to his heels and made good his escape.

At Hamilton last week a boy named Wilson, aged about 13 years, had his brains kicked out by a horse. He was struck squarely on the top of the head. The kick was received about one p. m. He survived until ten o'clock that night.

[illegible] in Burlington.

[illegible]

It was [illegible] Mr. Cowen commenced an investigation, and upon going into the grocery room, discovered that his desk had been ransacked, and a money drawer in which there had been [illegible] small change [illegible]

A [illegible] Miss Nellie Blythe awoke and discovered that there was a light in an unoccupied room. She [illegible] her brother Harry was in the room [illegible] the family was soon up, and upon investigation it was found that some one had been in the house and had visited many of the departments, having been in the room occupied by Harry and his wife, and left by way of a front window. Nothing was disturbed except a quart of cream which was missing, although some valuables were easily to be had.

The writer's house was also entered and pretty thoroughly searched, but nothing was taken, although a set of silver spoons, his wife's jewelry and a small amount of money were within their reach. The house was entered by the way of the kitchen window. In the kitchen the thief lighted a lamp removed the lower half of a window sash between the kitchen and dining room, after which it was no trouble to pass from room to room. The writer finding his pants and vest out in the hall Friday morning was the first hint that anything had been molested, and the investigation that followed soon settled the matter. In the pants pocket there was about a dollar in small change, but it was unmolested. Our wife's neice heard someone coming up stairs that night, but paid no attention to it, thinking it was one of the family. It is our opinion that so soon as the thief discovered that he was in a country editor's domicile, he knew it would be poor picking and skipped out.

The lamp was left burning in the kitchen as was also the one lighted at Mr. Cowen's.

A tramp was in town that evening and as is natural some think he was the man that entered the houses. He was seen early next morning by Dr. Furnish about 1½ miles out on the Bellevue pike.

It was a very bold attempt at robbery to be such a decided failure.

Local Option.

The Boone County Central Local Option Committee met at the Court-house, Monday the 5th inst., pursuant to adjournment.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

The following district committees were reported: Union, M. C. Norman, chairman; N. Talbott, H. Bannister, J. Q. Estun and Lee Utz, Florence, Ben Stephens, chairman, J. H. Walton, Dr. Sayre, F. A. Utz and Wm. H. Rice.

Walton, W. L. Norman, chairman, Dr. Bagby, Warren Lermond, R. O. Hughes and T. F. Curley.

Burlington, H. P. Stephens, chairm., Owen Conner, J. A. Gaines, J. O. Huey, Joseph Hodge, Lewis Conner, Robert Sandford, Silas Rouse and Jas. Cloud.

Hamilton, Dr. Adams, ch'm'n, Chas. Reib, Lace Baker, Add. Miller, O. M. Huey, Lee Utz.

Jo. C. Revill was appointed treasurer of this committee.

The communication from the Hamilton district committee was received and approved.

Lectures will be delivered at the following named places.

By Elder Fallilove at Union, July 12th; Beaver, July 13th; Verona, July 14th; Walton, July 16th, 1886, at eight o'clock p. m., at each place.

By Elder Keller at Petersburg, July 12th; Bellevue, July 13th; East Bend, July 14th; Burlington, July 17th, at 3 o'clock p. m.

By Ed. Froh at Hughes' chapel, July 19th; Big Bone, July 20th; East Bend, July 21st; Petersburg, July 22d; Constance, July 23rd.

The various District Committees will please arrange for the place of meeting and the hours for the delivery of the lectures of Elders Keller and Froh in their respective districts, and give as full publicity as possible of the same, and notify the lecturers of the hour and place of meeting.

All persons are invited to attend these lectures, especially those who are working in the interest of whisky, and against local option, and by themselves and their chosen advocates to defend their cause, and the time at each lecture will courteously be divided with them, if they desire it, in which to defend their cause.

Adjourned to meet at the Court-house, in Burlington, July 17th, 1886, at 2 o'clock p. m. A full attendence of all the district committees is requested, at that time and place.

OSCAR GAINES, Ch'rm.

G. G. Hughes, Sect'y.

Wm. Carpenter, an old citizen who lived near the first toll-gate on the Lexington pike above Florence, died Sunday, in the 54 year of his age. Rev. Keller, of the Lutheran church preached the funeral at the residence, after which the remains were placed in the Hopeful vault to await final interment.

An old fashioned burgoo was indulged in down on Gunpowder last Saturday. Quite a large crowd was present, and the bill of fare was composed of the numerous articles it takes to make such occasions a success. Fish, chickens and sheep were fried and souped in abundance, and everybody had as much as they could eat and all the fun they wanted.

Personal Mentions.

[illegible]

W. J. [illegible] visited his uncle [illegible] Rabbit Hash last week.

[illegible]

Geo. A. Yates, of Covington, was in town last Thursday and Friday.

Miss Lottie Yates, of Covington, is the guest of [illegible]

William Walton, the [illegible] candidate [illegible], was in town Friday.

Mrs. Reuben Conner was in town Monday [illegible] with her constituents.

Mrs. Kate Conrad has been spending several days with her relatives in Covington.

Thos. Rouse and J. T. McClure, of Grant county, were in Burlington one day last week.

Mason [illegible] and wife, of Lawrenceburg, were visiting their relatives in this place last Wednesday.

Mrs. Chamberlin and daughter, of Kansas City, Mo., were the guests of Mr. P. Rucker and wife the first of the week.

RICHWOOD, KY., July 5th, 1886.

Editor of the Recorder.

I saw in the Recorder an article in regard to the earliest roasting ears of your citizens. Will I be entitled to mention that we had fine roasting ears raised in our own garden, on Friday the 25th of June, a few days earlier than the gentlemen mentioned in Burlington?

MRS. REUBEN CONNER.

The above is conclusive evidence that while Mr. Conner was in Frankfort making laws, his good wife was at home making garden.

The fourth of July was duly celebrated in Burlington Monday night by an elaborate display of fire-works, and a general hurrah on the part of the small boys. Fire arms were dangerously conspicuous, but fortunately no one was injured by powder and ball. The entire population was on the streets till about ten o'clock.

W. A. Crigler has sent his stable, composed of the following fine animals, to Latonia, where they will be driven by James Bailey: Crigler's Almont; Prince Hambletonian; Maud, 3-years old; Gen. Jackson, 2-years old; Goldey, 3-year old filly. Rex Denmark will remain at home and his season continued.

Joe Reed is preparing new scenery for the entertainment which he will give in the near future. The first scene prepared represents a light-house, and was the work of Charles McKim, being his first attempt in scene painting, and demonstrates that the artist is possessed of a rare talent.

We understand that the Harvest Home organization has rented William Craven's woods at the Lutheran Parsonage for a term of five years with the privilege of ten. The grounds will be properly improved for the holding of the Harvest Home Picnic.

Remember that Geo. Huschart & Co. of Lawrenceburg, Indiana, can always give satisfaction both as to price and style of work, so when you want to buy a tombstone or a monument go to their yard or call on John Beall, of Hebron, agent.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

MCVILLE.

Croquet is the most flourishing thing of the season.

One the night of the 5th the young folks of the town enjoyed themselves tripping the light fantastic. Miss Belle Kleinhans, of Cincinnati, was among the belles of the evening. The McVille string band made the music.

About two hundred people witnessed the game of base ball played here last Monday between the home team and the Carrollton team. It was an interesting game, the home boys winning it in a score of 12 to 9.

Mrs. Willie Bonson, a resident of this place will remove her family to Cedar Bluff, Kansas, this fall.

Mrs. Dr. Taylor, formerly Miss Page Grubbs, of Lisbon, Dakota, has returned to her old home to spend the summer months.

Our town is improving considerably this summer. There is now being erected five 2-story brick buildings on Main Cross Street, that will be used as business houses.

Morgan Helm and Owen Anderson have the contract and are now erecting one of the finest and largest buildings in Fern Bank, O., for Fritz Thornton, of Cincinnati.

C. W. McFee, of Funnesville, passed through town enroute for Parlor Grove Wednesday and Thursday. Picnics have a peculiar fascination for Charlie.

Bluford Berry has purchased the Whitlock homestead and will move in soon. He is now painting the house. The only interruption he experiences is the boys throwing apples at him while at work.

The proprietors of Parlor Grove have had an artesian well driven near the dining hall 235 feet deep. Snowden Humphrey was the contractor, and it is rumored that he received $500 for the work, which took two weeks.

Friends of Wm. B. Grubbs, jr., will be pleased to learn that he has graduated in the law school of Covington, Ky., and will begin practicing in that city in September. He is a man that will succeed. Will, we wish you success.

While visiting friends on the Ohio river last week, we visited Mr. Claud Williams and were entertained magnificently by the entire family, especially Verlun and Suffinda. The young ladies have the trouble of entertaining at least three gents each every Sunday evening.

MY FIRST PATIENT.

Summoned by a Madman to Treat his Martyr Wife.

"* * * And may I beg you to visit us in your private rather than in your professional capacity? Since my dear wife has been failing thus sadly, she has evinced a great dread of medical men, and were she to guess you other than an ordinary guest I tremble for the consequences. The carriage will meet you at Blackburne Station at whatever hour you name.

Yours very truly,

ARTHUR CRAWFORD."

This is an extract from a letter that I received on the 10th of June, 1870, and being but a young fellow of twenty-six, I was very much elated thereby. The great drawback to being what is called a specialist is that the generality of people—for what reason I have never been able to discover—are afraid to employ you until you are well on in years, and consequently this Mrs. Crawford for whom my services had been enlisted was my first private patient. My specialty was madness; and tiring equally of hospital-work and of idling in my own rooms, I was heartily thankful for the good luck that had befallen me. In a previous letter, Mr. Crawford had given a detailed account of his wife's symptoms; and now all arrangements were completed, and I was due at his Berkshire home on the following day.

When the train steamed into the little country station, I found a carriage and pair ready to meet me. Evidently, to judge by the general get-up of the whole thing, the Crawfords were wealthy folk; and this impression was confirmed when we reached the house, which was standing in the midst of a lovely park. In true country fashion, the hall-doors were standing open, and my host met me on the threshold with outstretched hands.

"This is exceedingly kind of you," he said genially, "for I know you have come at your very earliest convenience.—Journey from town pleasant?—Yes? That is right.—James, take Mr. Lennox's things to his room. Lunch in the morning-room, hey?—Come along, my dear sir; you must be half famished." So saying, he preceded me down a long corridor, whence I caught distant glimpses of a beautiful garden at the back of the house, and into a snug little room where luncheon was laid. While I discussed a cold chicken, Mr. Crawford went on chatting; and ere I went to my room for a wash and brush up before presenting myself to his wife, we were excellent friends. I do not think I ever met a man who so much charmed me at first; nay, he more than charmed, he captivated me. He was about thirty, and exceedingly handsome, with fair curly hair, and bright blue eyes. He had a bronzed complexion, and a hearty laugh, and was altogether a most attractive specimen of a young Englishman. When I had finished luncheon, his manner changed abruptly as he began speaking of his young wife.

"I did not like to enter upon the subject before you were rested," he began courteously; "but I am intensely anxious you should see her. For some months past she has been suffering from intense melancholia, and lately she has taken a deep distrust of those around, more particularly of me." He stopped abruptly and bit his lip. "Doctor, I simply worship her," he went on passionately. "When I married her five years ago, she was the blithest, merriest girl in all the shire; and now, to see her like this—why, it breaks my heart!" and he dropped into a chair and buried his face in his hands.

There was an awkward pause, for in those days I was too inexperienced to be much of a hand at consolation, and then I stepped nearer to him and laid my hand upon his shoulder. "Come, come," I said cheerily, "there is no need to despair like this. We must hope for the best. How does she show her distrust of you?"

He raised his head to answer me: "By keeping the boy from me, for one thing. She will hardly let me touch him."

"The boy? A son of yours?"

"Our only child," he answered—"a dear little fellow of nearly four; and she betrays a terrible fear whenever I have him with me."

"Does she eat well?"

"Hardly at all."

"Sleep at night?"

He shook his head; and then followed a string of various professional questions. Our conversation at an end, I requested to be shown to my room, promising to be in the drawing-room for five o'clock tea, when I should be introduced to Mrs. Crawford.

"As Mr. Lennox, if you please," suggested her husband as we crossed the hall. "You remember that I asked you to drop the doctor, and seem an ordinary visitor?"

Of course I agreed; and then he told me he had spoken to her of me as an old college friend; and finally he left me to myself.

When I descended to the drawing-room, I found both Crawford and his wife waiting for me. He was standing by the open window playing with the climbing roses that were nodding by its sill; he was talking merrily as I entered, and looked the personification of life and good spirits. A girl was standing by the mantel-piece with her back toward me, and I had barely time to admire the slight figure and graceful pose, before Crawford's voice rang out in hearty cordiality.

"Ah! there you are at last! Let me introduce you to my wife Beatrice, this is Mr. John Lennox."

She had half turned when he began speaking, but as he said my name she gave a sudden gasp and confronted me with [illegible] I have [illegible] and those of a [illegible] a look of [illegible] fear as deadly in her face. [illegible] It was in the first flush of her womanhood, and her [illegible] blue eyes and [illegible] of [illegible] would alone have sufficed to stamp her as a beautiful woman, had it not been that the curious expression of her face outweighed every other feature. She gave me the impression of being literally consumed by a terrible dread, to the nature of which I of course as yet held no clew; and with this dread an equally strong desire to suppress all outward indication of it. Add to this the fact that her face was entirely colorless, and that the hand she gave me, in spite of the warm June sunshine, was cold as ice, and it will be seen that my first case promised to be full of interest.

She poured out the tea silently, while her husband and I went on chatting, and she did not speak again until he proposed to ring the nursery bell.

"We have not seen Bertie all day," he added, "and I know you would like to show him off to Lennox."

"He is having his tea," she rejoined quickly. "Show him off in the morning, Arthur. I don't think we want him now."

"Oh! there is an unkind mamma! I wonder what Bertie would say to you? He can finish his tea here, dear; I'll fetch him."

"No, no; I'll go." She ran out of the room as she spoke; and Crawford turned to me with a weary-looking smile.

"You see, Lennox, I generally give way; but I am afraid it is growing upon her. He is such a splendid fellow!" As he spoke his wife returned with the boy in her arms.

"I met him in the hall," she explained; "he was just coming in from his walk. No, Arthur; don't take him; he is not at all heavy." This last to her husband who had advanced with outstretched hands. "Look here, Bertie, darling. Who likes cake?" She seated herself on a low chair, still keeping a jealous arm around the child, and went on talking, this time to me. "Arthur and I quarrel over this small boy." She laughed a little, but it sounded very mirthless. "The last cause of dissention is his health. I think he is growing delicate and wants change, and papa doesn't agree. Does he, my beauty?"

The boy laughed as she held him yet more closely to her; and looking at his rosy cheeks and bright eyes, it seemed to me that there could not be a healthier youngster.

"I am afraid I must take papa's side," I said. "You must not alarm yourself unnecessarily, dear Mrs. Crawford, for I think—" I stopped abruptly, alarmed by the expression on her face. I was new at my work, be it remembered: but I think that older men than I would have been frightened. Bertie had rebelled against the retaining arm; and sliding on the floor, had run to his father and climbed into his arms.

A fine game of romps now ensued, and the mother sat and watched them. Sitting there facing her, I, too, was watching. In my student days, I had kept a tame lizard, and by whistling to it, had been able to direct its movements at will, and now I was reminded of my whilom pet by watching Beatrice Crawford's eyes. Every motion of her husband's, as he ran round the room tossing the laughing boy in his arms, appeared to hold a fascination for her, and her gaze never left him but once. That once was when she walked swiftly to a further table and possessed herself of a paper-knife, which she handed to me, commenting on its curious make. It was of steel and sharply pointed; and I handed it back again with the remark, that it would make a nasty weapon if needed. She took it without glancing at me again; but her husband had caught her words, and now came up to us breathless and laughing, with Bertie clinging around his neck.

"Don't hold that thing, my darling," he said, tenderly. "I hate to see such an ugly knife in your dear little hands."

"Give it to Bertie, mamma," cried the child, stretching dimpled hands for the coveted treasure; and his father, with an injunction to be careful, was taking it from her to give to him, when, with a muffled cry, she snatched the knife back and dashed it through the open window into the garden beyond.

"You shan't have it!—you shan't have it!" she cried, excitedly, while a bright red spot burned on either cheek. "You would ——" With marvelous self-control, she stopped dead short; and after an almost imperceptible pause, she added, in her usual quiet tones: "Pray, forgive me, Arthur; I am so afraid of Bertie hurting himself. Go up to the nursery, dear. Mamma will come to you."

Awe-struck at her late passion, the child went gently out of the room, and his mother following him, I was left alone with Crawford. It went to my heart to see the pained, drawn look on his face; but the scene had at all events put one thing beyond a doubt: Mrs. Crawford was not merely failing in brain-power—she was mad.

A couple of days went by, and I became fairly puzzled. All the ordinary verbal tests when applied to my patient proved complete failures. Her memory was excellent, and indeed in this respect she was far better than her husband, who was constantly forgetting things. As to her judgment, it struck me as above the average, for she was a widely read woman, and we had a stiff argument one night as to the merits of our favorite authors. She managed her own housekeeping, and capitally she did it too; and, in fact—not to exhaust the reader's patience by entering into details—the only visible outcome of her mental aberration was this extreme terror in which she lived, and for which I could find no reason. (I may remark parenthetically that the mad undoubtedly have rules of their own by which they are influenced. Experience thus teaching me that Mrs. Crawford had some reason for this, to us, inexplicable dread—even though it might be but a fear of her own shadow—it became my business to solve this reason.) What baffled me most was the fact that while it was Crawford himself who primarily excited this terror, she was undeniably fond of him. Indeed, the word "fond" is hardly suitable, for she simply adored him. I never heard him express the slightest wish as to the household arrangements but it was instantly fulfilled; while every whim—and he was the most whimsical of men—was implicitly obeyed. In fact, at the end of a week I was precisely in the same state as when I first entered the house. But that my amour propre was piqued, and I felt angry at my non-success, I should have been paying a very enjoyable visit. Arthur Crawford made a capital host; and although, as I have already said, he was a very whimsical man, and was subject to unaccountable fits of depression, he and I got on excellently together.

At the end of the week something happened which had the double effect of lowering me several inches in my own estimation, and of placing matters in a totally different light. It was an exceedingly hot night; and after we had all gone to bed I was tempted to leave my room, and seating myself by the open window in the corridor, to indulge in an extra cigar. [illegible] a fine moonlight night, and that while the corridor window boasted a lovely view that of my own room looked into the stables, amply justified my choice of a seat. I had been there for perhaps an hour, when I heard the Crawfords talking in their room, which was on a level with my own. The tones were excited and angry, and fearing that Mrs. Crawford might be lashing herself into a fury, and that her husband might be ignorantly increasing it, I stole down to their door and stood listening.

"Arthur, dear, give it to me. You don't want it to-night. Why not wait until the morning?"

These were the first words that I caught spoken in Mrs. Crawford's usually gentle tones.

"Give it to you? No, not I! I know a trick worth two of that. Ah, you think I don't know that you and that confounded mealy-mouthed doctor are in league against me."

Crawford's voice, shrill and mocking, but undoubtedly his. Good heavens! was the man drunk? There was a moment's pause, and then he began again, this time more gently.

"Come, come, Beatrice. Drop this stupid joking. I only want to have a little cut at Bertie, just a little cut, and look! the knife is so bright and sharp, it can not hurt him much."

The wall seemed to reel around me as I leaned against it for support. In a flash of revelation that nearly blinded me, as I realized the full horror of the situation, I understood for the first time how matters actually stood. Crawford himself was the madman, and the devoted wife, whom I had been taught to look upon as insane, had known the truth all this time, and knowing it, for some inscrutable woman's reason, had shielded him, perhaps at the cost of her very life. In a moment the meaning of his many whims, his loss of memory, his fits of depression, were made clear to me; and as I thought of the [illegible] through which his girl-wife had passed, I cursed myself for the readiness with which I had been duped.

While these thoughts were rushing through my brain, I had noiselessly opened the outer door, and now stood in the dressing-room, peering into the bed-room beyond. The door between the two was standing open; but a heavy curtain hung in the aperture, and by making a little slit in it by means of my penknife, I was enabled to command a view of the interior. At the farther end of the apartment lay Bertie asleep in his cot. Standing before him, clad in a long white wrapper, and with her auburn hair flowing over her shoulder, was the young mother herself; while at some paces from her stood Crawford, still in evening dress, and balancing in his fingers a long, glittering dagger, that I recognized as one that usually hung in the library below. By this time he had dropped his angry tones, and was speaking in his accustomed pleasant fashion. "You know, dear," he was saying, "it really is necessary that we both drink some. Half a glassful of young and innocent blood, and we both shall keep young and happy forever."

"Won't my blood do?" asked the girl, desperately. She stretched her bare arms toward him and forced a smile to her poor, quivering lips. "You are much fonder of me, aren't you, dear? I shall do much better."

He laughed softly. "No, no, my darling; not you. I wouldn't hurt you for all the gold of all the Indies." He stopped suddenly, as if struck by his own words. "Gold?" he repeated. "Ah! yes, of course, I must have gold. Where did I put it now?"

He retreated a few steps, looking uneasily from side to side.

"Perhaps you left it in the library. Ring for James. Or go to Mr. Lennox, Arthur; he will help you to find it."

He laughed again—a low, monotonous laugh, to which my hospital work had but too well accustomed me, and then he moved nearer her, still balancing the dagger in his long nervous fingers. That terrible knife! If he had only put it down for a moment, I could have rushed in and secured it before turning to him; but as matters were, cruel experience taught me that the instant he caught sight of me, he would rush to the child to carry his dreadful purpose into effect, and that the mother in all probability would fall the victim. On the other hand, I dared not quit my post to summon assistance, and so leave Beatrice entirely at his mercy. I glanced round the dressing-room, and the window-cord caught my eye. It was new and strong. I cut it as high as I could reach, and crept back to my hole at the curtain. Crawford was growing rapidly angry.

"Give me that boy!" he cried, roughly. "Get out of the way, Beatrice, and let me have him;" and he caught her by the arm and dragged her from the cot.

"Arthur, Arthur! husband, sweetheart!" She clasped both arms around his neck, and raised imploring eyes to his; but the sight of the thin white face only moved him to greater wrath.

"It is all your fault I have not made you strong long ago," he exclaimed, irritably. "You never laugh now, and you cant sing, and you won't dance."

"Dance? O yes, I can. Look, Arthur!" She drew rapidly back towards the cot, speaking in her ordinary quiet voice. "You shall do what you like with Bertie; I was only joking. Only we must have our dance first, you know."

With a sudden movement she stooped and lifted the sleeping child from the bed, talking all the time in an arch, merry voice, that still retained its power over the poor madman. He nodded approvingly as she began rocking to and fro with the boy in her arms, and he moved a chair or two to give her more space.

"Dance, Beatrice!" and he began whistling a then fashionable valse, beating time to the air with the dagger, of which he never relinquished his hold.

"Very well," she responded cheerily. "Stand by the mantel-piece and give us plenty of room. Now, then, my baby boy; one, two, and off we go."

My life has shown me instances of self-devotion in plenty; I have seen proofs of ready wit, and more of indomitable pluck; but I have never seen them so marvelously combined as on that terrible June night. Instinct taught me what she meant to do. She had persuaded her husband to stand at the end of the room farthest from the curtain that hid her one means of escape, and now she intended to hazard her only chance, dash through it, lock the door on the other side, and then go for help. Backwards and forwards, round and round, she circled, a weird enough figure in her white draperies. The little white feet were bare, and it taxed her utmost strength to hold the heavy boy in her arms; but with a sublime heroism of which I should never have believed her capable, she never once paused for breath. A miracle alone kept the child asleep; but when I saw the poor mother's lips move dumbly between the snatches of the gay valse she was humming, I felt that she was praying God he might not waken. Nearer and nearer the curtain she came; but, to my horror, I perceived that Crawford was growing uneasy and advancing slowly in the rear.

"Mrs Crawford! Quick!"

There was not a moment to be lost. I tore the curtain aside and she rushed toward me; but ere I could fasten the heavy door her husband was upon us. With a yell of baffled rage, he was tearing after her through the opened doorway, and in another moment would have reached her with uplifted knife, when I tripped him up, and he fell headlong to the floor. He was stunned by his fall; and while I fastened his hands and feet by means of the window-cord, his wife went back to the inner room and rang loudly for assistance.

Ere he came to himself Arthur Crawford was safely secured in my own room. Leaving him there under charge of the [illegible] servants, I went back to see Mrs. Crawford. She was lying on the bedroom floor with her nervous fingers [illegible], and by her side sat her little son, warm and rosy from his bed. He was kissing the pallid lips as I came hastily into the room, and now held up a warning finger as I knelt beside them.

"Poor mamma is fast asleep," he whispered. "And she is so cold!"

She was not dead. The long and frightful mental strain through which she had passed brought on brain fever, and for some days we despaired of her life; but she came through it bravely, and ere the summer waned I had the satisfaction of installing both mother and son in a seaside cottage far enough away from her Berkshire home.

Crawford, poor fellow, only lived a few months, for a dangerous fall in the asylum grounds put a merciful termination to his confinement. During those few months, I visited him occasionally, and he always spoke most tenderly of his wife, whom he imagined to be dead.

When he died, I went to break the news to his young widow; and while staying in her pretty Devonshire cottage, I solved much that had puzzled me. Her terror at my first introduction to her had been occasioned by the fact that she had at once recognized me as Lennox the mad doctor. I had been pointed out to her in the park the season before. She dreaded Arthur's incipient madness being known to any one, for she had a blind terror of a lunatic asylum in connection with her beloved husband, and hoped that a quiet country life, free from trouble and contradiction, might in time restore him. But had he never broken out before? I asked, for it seemed to me incomprehensible that so slight a frame should be capable of such courage. Once, she said, only once, and then he had been bent on killing himself. In struggling with him for the possession of the knife, he had accidentally cut her wrist, and so occasioned the ugly scar that disfigured it. As for Bertie's presence on that fatal night, she told me he had always been accustomed to sleep in their room; and as I had refused to second her theory that the child wanted change of air, and so aid in sending him out of the house, she could devise no other means of getting rid of him.

And then I took my leave; and I have never seen Mrs. Crawford from that day to this; but still, in spite of a certain pair of sweet brown eyes which make the sunshine of my home, I am forced to admit that there is no woman on earth for which I have such a boundless admiration as for that unfortunate lady of whom I at one time thought as my First Patient.—Chamber's Journal.

LEOPOLD VON RANKE.

Sketch of the Career of the Recently Deceased German Historian.

The late Dr. Leopold Von Ranke was Germany's greatest historian. His life was devoted to study, and his works evidence vast research and mastery of materials. He had planned for the great work of his life a history of the world, which was to be in nine volumes, but had completed but six volumes at the time of his death.

Leopold Von Ranke was born at Wiehe, in Thuringia, on December 21, 1795, and completed his sixtieth year as professor in the University of Berlin on March 31, 1885. He began life as a student, his position being that of tutor at the college of Frankfort-on-the-Oder. His first work was published in 1824. Four years after he was sent officially to examine the public archives accessible to him in Vienna, Venice, Florence and Rome, an occupation extending over four years. During this period he obtained the materials for the books which successively appeared.

The book which first gave him European reputation was entitled "The Popes of Rome." This great work appeared in 1834. Lord Macaulay's review of it in the Edinburgh Review is a master-piece. It made Ranke's name familiar to English and American readers. In 1841 Von Ranke was appointed Royal Historiographer. It was in 1865 that he was made president of the Historical Commission of Munich, and at the same time entitled to prefix Von to his name.

Von Ranke married an Irish lady, Miss Graves, a very superior woman, but of retiring disposition, and who never shared his literary work. He had a son and two daughters.

He held command of his surprising power of mental concentration up to within a short time of his death. Last January the writer of fifty learned books conversed with firmness, fluency and continuity, convincing his visitors that he was as skilful with his tongue as with his pen. Weather permitting, the veteran of more than ninety years old walked two hours a day in the open air, and wrote or dictated eight hours of the twenty-four. He lived among his books, thirty thousand of which lined the walls of his study.

He was a great favorite with the Emperor William, who presented him with a full-sized portrait of himself on his last birthday. On the mantel-piece of his study stood a full-length photograph of the Crown Prince in his Cuirassier uniform, also a gift from the original.—Springfield Republican.

IN A ROW-BOAT.

A Maine Doctor Who Believes That the Atlantic Can Be Crossed in a Dory.

Dr. R. D. Bibber, of Bath, is the gentleman who equiped John Traynor for his proposed voyage across the Atlantic in a row-boat. Traynor started on the 26th of last September, and no tidings of him have been received. Dr. Bibber thinks his little boat must have been cut in two by some big ocean traveler, but is confident a row-boat can cross the Atlantic, and is bound to have another attempt to do it made. Said the doctor to me the other day: "I know that a row-boat can cross the western ocean. A dory can live where a ship can if the right man is in the dory. Traynor was not exactly the right kind of a man. I'm going to build another dory and send a man across the Atlantic in her if I can find the man, and I guess I can. I have received a letter from a Cape Cod fisherman, who wants to try it. I have in mind a perfect life-boat. Traynor's boat was a perfect life-boat, but there will be some changes in my next. I have a design in mind for a surf-boat for live-saving stations, to be operated by machinery, which can go where it is impossible to put a boat with oars. There is a great demand for such a boat. The boat that I propose to send across the Atlantic will be about twelve and one-half feet long, and will be propelled wholly with oars. Talk about risk! A man takes no more chances when he starts on a summer voyage across the Atlantic in a dory than he takes when he ships for a winter trip on our coast in a schooner. Traynor's boat could not have been sunk unless she had been cut in two. It is a little too late to talk of trying the adventure this summer. I propose to start another dory across next year in May. A man ought to row across in sixty days. I honestly believe that a dory can make the trip safely, and the achievement will make the fortune of the men engaged in it." Dr. Bibber's dory scheme seems to be rather a matter of enthusiasm than one of speculation.—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

COLONIAL RELICS

Two Ancient Documents Picked Up in Old Virginia During the War.

Oscar F. Richards, of Albion, Erie County, N. Y., was a member of the One Hundredth regiment New York Volunteers, and had an arm [illegible] a musket ball at the battle of Fair Oaks, for which he was discharged. He has left with the Times correspondent two curious and interesting relics of a time when the principal battle-ground of the South was indeed old Virginia. They came to him in much the same way that hundreds of such documents were picked up as waifs and estrays during the war.

These papers are writs issued out of the county court to the sheriff of Prince George County, which county embraces a part of the present city of Petersburg. Each is about the size of a half page of cap paper, about half written and half printed form, the ink is black and as bright as if written yesterday. The date of the older of the two will just fit me in transcribing it verbatim:

George the Second, by the Grace of God of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, &c.

To the Sheriff of Prince George County, Greeting. We command you that you take Elizabeth Mallory, if she be found in your bailiwick, and her safely keep, so that you have her body before the Justices of our said County Court, at the Court House of the said county, on the second Tuesday in April next to satisfy Thomas Hyam the sum of three pounds eight shillings and four pence, current money, and seventy one pounds of nett tobacco, & seven shillings and six pence for an Attorney's Fee, which the said Thomas Hyam lately obtained at our said Court recovered against her for debt, and for his costs about this suit in this behalf expended, whereof the said Elizabeth Mallory is convict, as appears to us, of Record. And have then there this writ.

Witness William Hamlin, Clerk of our said Court, at the said Court house, the thirteenth day of March, 1745, & in the Nineteenth year of our Reign.

WM. HAMLIN.

The sheriff's return, written on the back of the writ, shows that the unfortunate lady was arrested and held to satisfy the same; but whether the unchivalrous Thomas Hyam ever obtained his money and tobacco from her does not appear.

The other writ is an execution against the property of one Thomas Lovesay, Jr., to the sheriff of the same county, on which he returns that he has "levied on a pewter spoon." The date is May 6, 1774. Both of these relics are in excellent preservation. Except some fractures in the creases of the stiff paper where folded, they may be said to be "as good as new."

A brief reference to a few contemporary events will make us better understand the great age of a document which is dated in March, 1745. Benjamin Franklin was then less than forty years old. George Washington was a boy of thirteen, meditating nothing more than the destruction of cherry trees. The battle of Culloden, which assured the title of "George II., by the grace of God, etc," to the throne, and which forever crushed the hopes of Stuart, was not fought until a year later. And the great Napoleon did not see the light until twenty-four years after. The Declaration of Independence came thirty-one years after, and we read that the document has become well nigh illegible; but here is the writ from Prince George's county, one hundred and forty years old, carrying us far back into the and as plainly to be read, both print and writing, as the types that place it before the reader.—Lockport (N. Y.) Cor. N. Y. Times.

WORK IN CREWEL.

The Rise and Fall of Fine Needle-Work in England.

The religious houses had always been famous for needle-work; even the monks occasionally plied the needle. Gifford, writing to Cromwell of the suppression of a monastery at Woolsthorpe, Lincolnshire, says: "There is not one religious person there but what can and doth use embrotheryng wryting bookes with a fayre hand, making garments, karvynge," etc. With the change in religion the embroiderer, like the illuminator, was starved out. It is astonishing how soon the art died out. Queen Catharine had been a notable needlewoman, solacing her loneliness by practicing the art she had learned from her mother, "who always made her husband's shirts." Mary, Spanish in all her tastes, spent her weary vigils for Philip, who never came, in working "Spanish stitch, black and gold." There is a good deal of Elizabeth's handicraft still extant, but the taste in her day was getting depraved. Elizabethan needle-work is perfect in workmanship, but wholly wanting in naturalness and beauty. In the next reign even the workmanship deteriorated. Nothing shows more clearly how the good old English traditions had died out than the Mompesson business. We used to be famous for our gold thread. It was so much purer than the Spanish or Italian, but when Villiers, Duke of Buckingham, got the monopoly and employed the Frenchmen Mompesson and Michael to get his thread made it was soon so scandalously debased as to corrode the workmen's hands, and even the flesh of the wearers. The Villiers-Mompesson patent empowered the monopolists to punish any one whom they found making a better or cheaper article; for they made the public pay exorbitantly for this scandalous stuff. Thus it was that, in James' day, needlework degenerated into simple crewel, a style popular since the old Assyrian times. And here, where we might have been helped by hints and patterns from India, we were cut off by that foolish legislation which even then was beginning to destroy the Indian manufactures, in the supposed interest of the British workman. The East India Company was founded in Elizabeth's reign; and, though at first other Indian manufactures were admitted, the broiderers—whom Elizabeth had just formed into a company—had sufficient influence to keep out Indian embroidery from the very first.—All the Year Round.

Right and Ennobling Aims.

With all our boasted education, we have yet to utilize those lessons of self-knowledge and self-respect which should inspire each young boy and girl not to look forward with greedy eye to the possibility of becoming a great statesman or leader of fashion or star, but to search diligently for his or her capability, and to develop it, whatever it may be, in all earnestness, faithfulness and loyalty. Both in home life and in school life our influence over the young should always be in this direction. Such an aim is ennobling and full of the brightest hope. It is the only path to happiness, for no one is ever so happy as when he is successfully engaged in doing that which he can do well.—N. Y. Ledger.

Preservation of Wood.

The prevention of decay in wood is said to be effectively accomplished by exhausting the air from the pores and filling them with a gutta percha solution, a substance which preserves the wood alike from moisture, water, and the action of the sun. The solution is made by mixing two-thirds of gutta percha to one-third paraffine, this mixture being then heated to liquefy the gutta percha, when it is readily introduced into the pores of the wood, the effect of the gutta percha being, when it becomes cool, to harden the pores.—Scientific American.

HOME AND FARM

—A small piece of glue dissolved in skim milk and water is said to be very effective in restoring old crape.

—Experiments are now in progress to make an artificial crossing between wheat and rye, so as to obtain a new and standard cereal for bread-stuffs.

—When putting down a new carpet be sure you save the ravellings. They will furnish just the darning thread you will need when the carpet "begins to go."

—A good rule for baking potatoes is to wash and boil them in the usual way till nearly done and then finish by baking. They are whiter and more mealy than when baked the old way.—The Caterer.

—Kerosene oil will take rust off from iron if time enough is given; but for quick work a few drops of sulphuric acid dropped on the rust is preferable. But the iron must be well scoured and a little oil poured on as soon as the rust is removed. The acid will eat into the iron and form more rust unless this precaution is attended to.—Chicago Journal.

—A mess of feed given to a cow while she is being milked draws her attention, and she will not hold up the milk as cows are apt to do when the calf is taken from them. The milking can be done more thoroughly, as well as quicker, when the cow is quietly eating. And if fed turnips or cabbage at this time the odor will not affect the milk.—Troy Times.

—Boiled Cheese: Put four ounces of cheese, sliced as thin as possible, two tablespoonfuls of cream, a piece of butter the size of two walnuts, into a saucepan and boil, stirring it gently all the time till it becomes thick and smooth, then add a raw egg and a little cayenne pepper. Put the saucepan again on the fire, stirring as before till the whole is quite hot. Serve on small squares of dry toast. The above is enough for four people.—Boston Budget.

—Flax Seed Syrup: This excellent remedy for a cough is made thus: Boil one ounce of flax seed in a quart of water for half an hour; strain and add to the liquid the juice of two lemons and half a pound of rock candy. If the cough is accompanied by weakness and a loss of appetite add half an ounce of gum arabic. Set this to simmer for half an hour, stirring it occasionally. Take a wine glass full when the cough is troublesome.—Boston Globe.

Chocolate Custard: Boil half a pound of chocolate in two quarts of new milk, with half a pound of white sugar and one-third of a vanilla bean for half an hour, then add four eggs, or the yolks of eight (which will make it richer) beaten smooth, and stir with the egg-beater until it begins to thicken, add half a teaspoonful of salt. If extract of vanilla be used instead of the bean, add two teaspoonfuls after the custard is taken from the fire. Pour into cups.—The Caterer.

TAKING OFF HIDES.

How to Do It Without Injuring the Value of the Hide or Skin.

In taking off a hide or calf-skin, never cut the throat crosswise in the least. Slit the skin from the brisket to the tail, and from the brisket to the jaw; then cut around each leg to the hoof. Slit the hind leg from the hoof up directly over the gambrel, and the forward legs in the front, directly over the knee, to the top of the brisket bone. This leaves the hide or skin then in the proper shape for finishing.

Skin the head and legs carefully to avoid cutting them; then, commencing at the head, draw or fist off the skin without any further use of the knife, thereby avoiding the holes and cuts that almost spoil so many calf-skins. Some farmers use a windlass to draw off the dairy skins, and others use a horse; but one or two men can do it a great deal more quickly and easily.

When taken off, lay the hide or skin flat on the floor in a cool place, where the sun can not shine upon it, and cover it with salt—rather fine salt being better than too coarse salt. Do not roll it up, but let it remain in the salt until you take off another; then place that one upon the other, salting freely as before, and so on until you get enough to make quite a pile; then commence another pile in the same manner. Do not be afraid to use salt freely; what the skins do not require will shake off, and can be used again.

If you prefer to dry out your skins before selling them, be sure that they are thoroughly cured with salt before drying them, and then that they are thoroughly dried before being baled up for shipment.

Never dry out a skin without having it salted as described to preserve it from moths and other injuries on the hair side, which are liable to occur if the skins are not properly salted before being dried out.

If your skins remain on hand very long after being dried out before delivery to the tanner, even if salted, watch them carefully to detect any indications of moths or worms on the hair side, and if any are discovered, have the skins vigorously whipped with a stick so often that they shall be wholly eradicated from the entire lot of skins, as they often work serious injury in a very short time.—Chicago Shoe and Leather Review.

CHICKEN CHOLERA.

A Disease Usually Due to the Filthy Condition of the Poultry Yard.

Why does the cholera break out in those yards where the birds seem apparently well when the disease is least expected? The question may be answered in one word—filth. Suppose a dairyman should keep his herd of cows in a dirty stable, with foul odors ever present, damp floors and the manure removed from the stalls only occasionally, with water to drink from mud puddles, into which the soluble substances of the manure had been washed, would such cows exist long? We think not. And we may also ask if it would not be even worse for them should the food of the cows be thrown on the droppings of the yard, to be mixed with the filth and manure, if the consequences would not be fatal? Yet such is the way the hens are sometimes treated. The droppings remain in the poultry house for indefinite periods, they have but little fresh water and often none at all, and the yards in which they run contain the accumulations of years. The cholera can not be avoided under such conditions. It attacks every bird in the flock, and holds high carnival over the bodies of its victims. What is the remedy? Not doctoring the birds, for that is useless under the circumstances, but remove the cause. Thoroughly clean out the poultry house and disinfect the roosts, nests and walls by the free use of carbolic acid and whitewash, and spade up the yards, then sprinkling them with Douglas mixture, which is composed of a pound of copperas, a gill of sulphuric acid and two gallons of water. If the premises are kept clean there is but little danger of cholera, but care must be taken that no portion of the premises be overlooked upon which any of the germs may remain. The cholera may be known by the sick birds being very thirsty, and having an anxious, nervous appearance, the droppings being green and watery. The remedy most available is to give a spoonful of a solution of boracic acid to each fowl.—Farm, Field and Stockman.

Keep the mouth closed and breathe through the nose, especially in cold weather. There are two good reasons for this. Air drawn through the nasal passages is slightly warmed on its way. It is [illegible] through the [illegible] it [illegible]. It is also said and it looks reasonable, that the fine hairs lining the nostrils keep out dust and disease germs which would find free passage to the throat and lungs if one breathed through the mouth. BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOLUME XI. BURLINGTON, KY., WEDNESDAY, JULY 14, 1886. NUMBER 36.

ONE HUNDRED AND NINE

The Unionists Majority so far Over Gladstone

Scotland and Wales Stand by the Old Man Eloquent.

LONDON, July 9.—At midnight the total number of Unionists returned was 316 and of Gladstonians 210. The Tories have won Chippenham, Wiltshire and Maldon, Essex, from the Liberals, Lord Henry Bruce defeating Bannister Fletcher (Gladstonian) in the former, and C. W. Gray beating R. B. Barnard (Gladstonian) in the latter. These two accessions make the total Unionists gains 68. The Tories are to-day carrying the English counties by sweeping majorities. The Unionists to-day succeeded in returning Inverness Burgs, re-electing Robert Bannatyne Finlay; Forfarshire, where they re-elected James William Barclay; Falkirk Burghs, electing W. P. Sinclair; and Hartlepool, where they re-elected Thomas Richardson. M. Conway (Parnellite) has been re-elected for North Leitrim, and T. M. Gill (Parnellite) for South Louth. Dr. J. E. Kenny (Parnellite) has been re-elected for South Cork. Mr. McDonald (Parnellite) has been elected for the Ossory Division of Queen's County. Mr. A. Commins (Parnellite) has been re-elected for South Roscommon, and W. J. Corbett (Parnellite) for East Wicklow. Mr. Corbett was again opposed by Colonel A. Tottenham, who obtained but 984 votes to 3,101 secured by Mr. Corbett, whose total, however, was 284 less than at the last election, while Tottenham's was 16 less. The Tories have gained the Middleton Division of Southeast Lancashire from the Unionists. The total Unionist poll up to 11 p. m. to-day was 1,018,181, and the total Gladstonian poll 949,502. Mr. Gladstone telegraphs with reference to the Irish question: "Wales and Scotland have seen their duty quickly. England will have to learn hers, but slowly and painfully."

ETHER'S RIVAL.

Strange and Interesting Experiments With a New Anæsthetic.

PORTLAND, ME., July 9.—At Underwood Springs yesterday Professor O. Brunter, of Germany, in a series of scientific experiments transformed German water gas into snow, and then into a mass of beautiful white crystals, resembling ice, but in reality a local anæsthetic, so powerful that a single touch completely benumbs the member, arrests the flow of blood and enables the subject to endure any operation without suffering or any considerable loss of blood. One individual was given a too prolonged touch on the back of the hand, when he found that the hand was devoid of all feeling. For four hours needles inserted caused no pain, and yet the hand was not powerless. No blood followed the puncturing. It is claimed that this gas will completely take the place of ether. No ill effect, except for possibility of blistering, follows its administration.

Release of the Schooner Adams.

DIGBY, N. S., July 9.—The fishing schooner Adams, seized some days ago by the collector at this port, upon demand of Secretary Bayard, has been released. Suit will be entered soon for damages to the amount of $12,000 for the seizure of the vessel. This is practically a suit against the Canadian Government.

Two Children Struck by Cars.

ALTOONA, PA., July 9.—Late this evening two children, aged respectively two and three years, named Chamberlein, were struck and terribly mangled by a stone train at the railroad crossing, this city. Both will die.

Fierce Forest Fires.

ALBION, PA., July 9.—Extensive forest fires are raging near this city. The burning tract comprises one thousand acres and contains five large saw mills. Nothing has been heard from the lumbermen for two days.

Dakota Drouth Ended.

MANDAN, DAK., July 9.—Early yesterday morning a good rain fell very generally on the Upper Missouri river Valley. A good deal of the wheat will make an average crop. Corn all over is looking well.

A Week's Failures.

NEW YORK, July 9.—The business failures during the last seven days, reported by telegraph, number for the United States 159, for Canada 20, a total of 179, which is above the average of the last few weeks.

A Rush of Business.

CHICAGO, July 9.—At the Rock Island shops, near this city, the twelve hundred employes have been ordered on ten hours a day, with proportionate increase of wages. Rush of business the cause.

The Bell Telephone Patents.

CHICAGO, July 9.—Judge Blodgett, of this city, has rendered a decision in favor of the Bell Telephone patents of March 7, 1876, and January 30, 1877, holding them valid against any infringement.

Man and Money Missing.

JACKSON, MICH., July 9.—Lieutenant Alex. Brown, of Company D, of this city, was given $1,000 on the 7th to pay the bills incurred by the celebration of July 3, and has not been seen since.

The Wisconsin Forest Fires Put Out.

MILWAUKEE, July 9.—It rained this morning here and at other places in the State, and there are hopes that the drought is ended. The forest fires are extinguished.

He Wanted His Misery Noticed.

PARIS, July 9.—In the Chamber of Deputies to-day a man who is supposed to be insane fired a shot from a revolver. The bullet passed close to the head of the President of the Chamber. The man was arrested. When questioned as to his motive he said he wanted to attract the attention of the public to his misery.

Anarchist Plot in Milwaukee.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., July 9.—Arrests have been made in this city of persons involved in a conspiracy to assassinate court officers engaged in the Anarchist trials.

Tramp Killed by Nitro-Glycerine.

BRADFORD, PA., July 9.—Two tramps, halting at a brook near here, concluded to wash their clothes. Finding some empty nitro-glycerine cans they proceeded to melt off the tops in a fire, to utilize the cans for water pails. One of the cans contained a few drops of nitro-glycerine, which exploded, killing one of the men.

A Cuban Executed.

NEW YORK, July 9.—Miguel Chacon, the young Cuban negro who killed his paramour while attempting to shoot her husband, was hanged at 7:40 o'clock this morning in the yard of the Tombs prison.

Killed by a Premature Explosion.

WEBB CITY, MO., July 9.—Richard Oaks, while ramming giant powder into a drilled hole in the Spencer & McConey mine, with an iron rod, became a little impatient and jammed the powder forcibly, causing an explosion, from the effect of which he died in a few hours.

A Madstone Failed to Save Him.

KANSAS CITY, July 9.—Milton Evans, a farm laborer from Southern Missouri, died in great agony from hydrophobia at the police station in this city this afternoon. A madstone was applied last night and apparently took effect, but its owner said the patient had come too late.

ERUPTION OF A VOLCANO.

One of the Awfulest Scenes in the World's History—A 100 Square Miles a Mass of Flame and Hot Soil.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 11.—The steamer Alameda which arrived to-day from Australia brings particulars of the fearful volcanic eruption in New Zealand last month, and which is among the most destructive in the world's history. The first report of the volcanic disturbance came from Tauranga in Auckland Lake district. The natives of that village were sharply awakened from sleep at 2 in the morning by repeated vivid flashes of lightning which continued at rapid intervals up to 4 a. m., when a tremendous earthquake occurred, followed quickly by others. The shocks were so violent that people jumped from their beds and fled for their lives in their night clothes, making no effort to save or take anything with them except their children. The earthquakes continued to follow one another in quick succession up to 7 a. m., when a leaden-colored cloud was observed advancing from the south, ascending not until it covered the sky. While still moving it burst with a sound of thunder, and shortly afterward showers of fine dust began falling. Accounts from other points state that Mount Tarawera was the first volcano to break forth, and hardly were the flames seen issuing from its crater than the entire Paeroa range of mountains belched forth in sympathy, hurling flame, burning lava and stones over the surrounding country. For the first time in tradition the extinct volcano of Ruapehu was awakened into activity. The entire country, an extent of one hundred and twenty miles long by twenty in breadth, was nothing but a mass of flame and hot crumbling soil, which in places rose to a height of four thousand feet, capped at the highest point by the Tekopha Geyser, said to have been the grandest in the world. During all this time showers of dust continued to fall until it became so dense as to make the day as dark as night, and not until the second day did the dust cease falling. It was noticed that the dust emitted a strong sulphurous smell. Numerous small native villages were totally destroyed. Wairoa was covered to a depth of ten feet with dust and ashes. Rahiomahaha was completely engulfed, as were also some other small villages. One hundred and twenty persons are known to have lost their lives, among whom were several English residents. The loss of cattle starved to death from destruction of pastures by dust is very great, and great distress exists throughout all the Auckland Lake district. One old man, chief at Ratorua, was dug out alive after having been buried in ashes for 104 hours. Every effort was made to save the lives of the others, but in most cases where bodies were found they were dead. At the date of the departure of the steamer Alameda from Auckland the volcanoes were still very active and the temperature of the hot lakes were increasing.

Graham's Grit.

BUFFALO, July 11.—C. D. Graham, a cooper by trade, of Philadelphia, went through the Niagara whirlpool bound up in a cask, to-day, and was picked up at Lewiston, five miles from the starting point. Graham crawled out of the barrel with only a slight bruise on his arm. He remarked: "When I struck the eddies it was one continued round of jerks, but I am not hurt a bit." The cask is seven feet long, thirty-three inches in diameter at the widest portion, twenty-three inches at the top, and eighteen inches at the bottom. It is bound around with iron hoops which weigh 250 pounds. The ballast which was attached to the cask to keep it in position weighs 240 pounds.

An Old Saying Verified.

EATONTON, GA., July 11.—Ramoth Church, ten miles from this place, was celebrating its semi-centennial to-day. But one of the original members of fifty years ago was present—Uncle Ben Clarke. During all that time his devotion to the church was so strong that it passed into a common saying among them that "Ben Clarke would die in Ramoth Church yet." While services were in progress to-day Clarke stepped out to see about his horse, which was hitched to a tree which he had used for half a century. As he reached the animal he fell dead at its feet, and the old saying was verified.

Important Postal Concessions.

WASHINGTON, July 11.—The Postmaster-General has, in compliance with petitions signed by large numbers of business men in numerous cities, amended the postal laws so as to permit the transmission through mails within the United States and Territories of liquids, not liable to explosion or spontaneous combustion or ignition by shock or jar and not inflammable; soft soap, pastes or confections, ointments, salves and articles of similar consistency, under certain conditions insuring safety to other mail matter in transmission.

A Laundry Girl's Fearful Experience.

CHICAGO, July 11.—Mary Maloney, a young woman employed in the West End Laundry, in some unaccountable manner got her hair caught by a revolving shaft which was wound around it until she was lifted from the floor. She would undoubtedly have been killed had not the strain been so great as to break her scalp, which was torn from her head. The unfortunate girl suffered greatly, and became crazy. The scalp was sewed in place again, and may grow fast, but physicians fear the girl may not recover her reason.

Tragedy at a Camp-Meeting.

LOUISVILLE, July 11.—A Courier-Journal special gives meager details of a tragedy at Flatwood's camp-meeting grounds, Butler County, Ky. Will Hazelip asked to be Miss Mary Lacefield's escort. He was refused, and, seeking her to-day during the progress of the meeting, fatally stabbed her, and then cut his own throat, and will die.

Children Dying in New York.

NEW YORK, July 11.—There were 221 deaths in this city during the twenty-four hours ending at noon Friday. Seventy-five per cent. were of children under five years of age. This fearful mortality among children is attributed to the tenement-house system and the hot weather.

Died Because of a Son's Death.

BALTIMORE, July 11.—Mrs. Eleanora Cole, mother of the late Congressman Wm. H. Cole, who was buried this afternoon, died shortly before the funeral of her son from the shock occasioned by his death. She was sixty-nine years of age and had been in feeble health for some time.

Fatal Carelessness.

BUCYRUS, O., July 11.—About 2 o'clock this afternoon, Sammy Ruhl, aged seventeen, was accidentally shot in the neck by Fred Flockon, and died in less than two hours. The boys were fooling with a revolver they believed to be unloaded.

Mutinous Convicts Killed.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., July 11.—Particulars of the killing of three convicts by their guards, near Pine Bluff, yesterday afternoon, have reached this city. A gang of about eighty convicts were working in a brickyard a few miles from town, and the entire number made a sudden break for liberty. The guards immediately leveled their rifles and fired, killing three of the ringleaders and mortally wounding a fourth. None escaped.

Chinamen Sentenced to Death.

ST. LOUIS, July 11.—Chyo Goom and Chigo Chiegck, Chinamen, were sentenced to death for murder.

Lightning's Work.

BONNIEVILLE, KY., July 11.—James Kellam, a farmer, living two miles north of here, was struck by lightning during the storm yesterday morning. He was making a fire to get breakfast when it struck a tree and ran down into his house, prostrating him and killing his dog. His condition is very precarious. John Hodges, who lives two miles northwest of here, was also struck. He was unconscious for an hour. He has recovered from the shock.

Mother and Son Killed by Lightning.

WAKEFIELD, ILL., July 11.—Mrs. Regina Deisser and her twelve-year-old son were killed by lightning.

THE STORM-KING

Cuts a Swath Several Miles Wide Through Growing Crops.

Luxuriant Corn Fields Cut Close to the Ground by Hail—One Dollar a Big Price for the Remains of Last Season's Work.

KANKAKEE, ILL., July 12.—Ruin and desolation mark the course of Friday's storm through the section of country ten miles southwest of here. Hail was the principal agent of destruction. Commencing at a point one mile west of Chebanse and extending two or three miles northward, thence almost retracing its course toward the southeast, to a point between Clifton and Ashkum, the storm mowed a swath three to four miles wide destroying every species of vegetation in its path. Luxuriant fields of corn, six feet high, were cut close to the ground. Timothy and oats were mowed down as though the harvester had passed through them, and to-day scores of farmers were taking up these crops, which have never felt the touch of a sickle. Not only are these crops cut to pieces by hail, but they are in many instances fairly pounded into the ground. On many farms one dollar would be a big price for the remnants of last season's labors. Every window on the north side of the buildings in the track of the storm is riddled. Houses and barns were unroofed and stock killed. Adam Fritz, in Pilot Township, was struck by lightning and killed. In the town of Essex Miss Kate Shannon was prostrated by a bolt. She is seriously injured.

DIXON, ILL., July 12.—An electrical storm of a very destructive nature, accompanied by hail and rain, passed through this section last night. Great damage has been done to the crops of all kinds, especially the fruit crop, which will be a complete failure.

A HORRIBLE REVENGE.

Pouring Vitriol on a Rival, Shooting Himself, and Falling Down a Cliff 300 Feet High.

PITTSBURGH, PA., July 12.—Some time ago the wife of John Duvall, living in the suburban town of Mount Washington, obtained a divorce, and on the same day married Jacob H. Jones. Duvall made no objection to the marriage. This evening Duvall went to Jones and decoyed him, on the pretense of a friendly visit, to his house, which stands near the brow of the hill. In a stroll about the premises Duvall led Jones back of the barn, which stands near by, and when safe from observation and beyond hearing, he seized a can of vitriol which he had concealed before for the purpose, and threw the liquid into the face of his victim, who, totally disarmed by the apparent friendship of Duvall, was unprepared for such a murderous onslaught. Jones fell to the ground writhing in agony, while his assailant stood by and gloated over his horrible work. After watching the sufferings of Jones until satisfied, Duvall went to the edge of the cliff, where there is a sheer descent of 300 feet, and shooting himself through the head fell to the bottom. He was picked up and carried to a house near by, where he is still lying insensible, with no hope of recovery. Jones is in a very serious condition, and if he recovers he will be badly disfigured and blind.

Off for the North Pole.

NEW YORK, July 12.—The whaling schooner Era will sail from New London, Conn., next Tuesday, for Cumberland inlet, in Baffin's Bay, and Okoleer, in Hudson's Straits. She will have as passengers Mr. W. H. Gilder and Mr. W. R. Griffith, who will be landed at Cumberland inlet. From there they will attempt to reach the North Pole, traveling with dogs and sledges, as the Esquimaux travel. It is Mr. Gilder's intention to make use, as far as possible, of the skill and experience of the natives in traveling in their own country. And so he confines his party of white people to two members.

Republicans Turning Prohibitionists.

BOSTON, July 12.—About 200 active Republicans from all parts of Massachusetts met here to-day and adopted resolutions asserting that the Republican party in Massachusetts should declare its uncompromising antagonism to the liquor saloon, and that the question of constitutional prohibition should be submitted to the people, and inviting men of all parties to co-operate. An Executive Committee of fifteen was appointed.

Jubilant Over a Coal Discovery.

SALEM, ILL., July 12.—The men who are employed sinking the coal shaft here struck a five-foot vein at 9 o'clock this morning. A large amount of money has been spent, the work having been commenced May 6, 1885. The depth of the shaft is 878 feet. The people are joyful over the event, and have spent the day in firing cannon and otherwise manifesting their joy.

Death After Fasting Fifty-three Days.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., July 12.—Mrs. Caroline Benedict, aged sixty years, died at her home in Mottville, this county, on Wednesday night, after a fast of fifty-three consecutive days, during which time she did not take a morsel of food nor any water. Nearly every day she took a part of a cup of weak tea, and a few teaspoonfuls of whisky.

The Cholera in Europe.

VIENNA, July 12.—In Trieste during the past twenty-four hours two deaths occurred from cholera and eight new cases were reported.

ROME, July 12.—The cholera returns for to-day are: Brandis, 56 new cases, 35 deaths; Latiano, 14 new cases, 10 deaths; Fontana, 22 new cases, 16 deaths; Venice, 10 new cases, 4 deaths.

Going to Sweden for a Patent.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Dr. Lucien Rose, an electrician, unable to obtain a patent on his telephone in this country, is going to Sweden with it. He claims that it operates easily and satisfactorily through twenty-five hundred miles of wire.

Trouble Anticipated.

CHICAGO, July 12.—One thousand foreign miners have been on a strike sixteen months at Grape Creek, Ill. Their families are starving. The company has imported negroes to take their places. Serious trouble is imminent.

A Big Wheat Crop in California.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 12.—The latest returns confirm the previous estimates that the wheat crop in California this year will be the largest ever harvested.

—A tramp has confided to an Omaha reporter that in order that his hands may be calloused like those of a working-man he carries a hickory stick which he grasps and twists as he walks, thus keeping his hands in a condition to deceive any justice before whom he may be arraigned as a vagrant.

—A young attorney-at-law in Philadelphia, who had gone for years without a single case, at last got into practice by suing his washerwoman for retaining his clothes because he owed her an old bill.—Philadelphia Press.

—Eastern miss—"My ma is in Europe and my pa is in New York, and they do all their corresponding by cable." Chicago miss—"Pooh! that's nothing. Why, we do all our marketing by cable."—Chicago News.

—A blind man who was taunted in San Francisco recently pitched into the crowd headlong and thrashed alike the innocent and the guilty.

—A Polish couple in Jersey City asked a justice of the peace to marry them for two years.—N. Y. Sun.

WHAT CAUSED IT?

A Withering Simoom Sears Everything Before It in the Far Northwest.

ST. PAUL, July 8.—People in Dakota thought the world was coming to an end the day before yesterday. The wind was like a simoom. Birds, horses and cattle apparently became crazy with fright, anticipating some catastrophe. At four o'clock in the morning people were awakened by a roaring blast as hot as if from a furnace. Fearing a cyclone they took refuge in cellars. The hot wind lasted an hour. The temperature was 110 degrees. At midnight it had been 101 degrees. People feared death from the hot air, and had it lasted much longer, the fear would doubtless have been realized. Fortunately it soon abated, and comparative comfort was found in a temperature of about 100 degrees which had prevailed for several days previously. During this terrible night there were strange barometric disturbances throughout that region. Passengers who came through on Northern Pacific trains say that it was like passing through a furnace. Trainmen had their faces and hands blistered by the heat. Trees and other crops are badly damaged.

What Natural Gas Has Done.

PITTSBURGH, July 8.—The use of natural gas in the manufactories in this city has done away with the consumption of 150,000 bushels of coal a day. In 300 working days, which is considered a year by manufacturers, the whole amount of coal displaced would run up to 47,450,000 bushels. Calculating 100 bushels to be an average day's output for a coal miner, it would take 1,500 coal miners to dig this coal, but altogether the use of natural gas has thrown about 5,000 men out of employment in this region. It required the use of 650 railroad cars to transport the black diamonds. Each of these thirty feet in length would make a string 18,990 feet, or a distance of more than three miles long.

Another Fool With a Gun.

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 8.—Jeremiah Donovan, aged sixteen years, is in charge of the cigar store of Gus Brideson, on South Michigan street. Last evening about 9:30 o'clock a number of small boys were playing around the store, and were ordered to leave by Donovan. The boys paid no attention to him, and Donovan picked up a double-barreled shotgun and shot Eddie O'Kay, aged seven, through the breast, killing him instantly. Donovan surrendered, and is prostrated with grief. He says he did not know the gun was loaded.

Six Boilers Explode.

WILKESBARRE, PA., July 8.—A nest of six boilers, at No. 3 Colliery, of the Delaware and Hudson Coal Company, at Plymouth, exploded this afternoon with great violence. The boiler-house was blown to atoms, and many buildings in the neighborhood were badly damaged by the flying debris. Edward Scott, fireman, was fatally scalded, and Michael Gilligan, engineer, was seriously injured. The cause of the explosion is a mystery.

Riot at Cardiff.

LONDON, July 8.—Rioting broke out this afternoon in Cardiff, Wales. The police charged the crowd and wounded over one hundred persons. Twenty of the injured were seriously hurt and were conveyed to the hospital. Owing to the excitement that prevails the Mayor of Cardiff has prohibited a meeting which was to have been held to-night to celebrate the return of Sir E. J. Reed, Gladstonian, to Parliament. The police will be prosecuted for using undue violence.

A New Way to Suicide.

NEW YORK, July 8.—Julius Hofflacker last night ended his woes by blowing his brains out with water. After loading a double-barreled fowling-piece with a heavy charge of powder, he rammed in a cork and then filled both barrels with water. Placing the muzzle of the gun in his mouth, he pulled the trigger with his foot, blowing out the whole left side of his head.

Sentenced at His Own Request.

NEW YORK, July 8.—Ex-Alderman Waite, at his own request, has been committed to the House of Detention as a witness against the indicted boodle Aldermen. He stated as his reason that he has been followed about by persons who seek information from him and bother him. He spent last night at the House of Detention.

Cholera Spreading in Italy.

ROME, July 8.—The cholera returns to date are as follows: Venice, 2 new cases, 1 death; Brindisi, 189 new cases, 71 deaths; Latiano, 70 new cases, 26 deaths; San Vito, 32 new cases, 4 deaths; Fontana, 76 new cases, 34 deaths.

Now It's Blackleg.

CLINTON, ILL., July 8.—Cattle herds throughout this county have suffered greatly of late through a disease called "blackleg," which has recently made its appearance among the younger class of stock. It invariably proves fatal. Most of the calves that have died have been very high grades.

Fatality Attached to the Hotel.

PITTSBURGH, PA., July 8.—The third tragedy within two weeks occurred at the Parker House in Latrobe, Pa., last night. During a quarrel a well-known character named Palmer was shot and instantly killed by a person in the crowd. No arrests.

Boycotters Discharged.

NEW YORK, July 8.—A number of defendants brought up in a New York court on the charge of boycotting Mrs. Landgraf, a baker, were discharged. There are other defendants who will be tried on the charge of conspiracy.

"Irish-American Conspiracy."

LONDON, July 9.—The Times, in an article summing up the results of the elections, says: "Mr. Gladstone's appeals to the country at this time have been fruitless. The Irish-American conspiracy has failed."

A Dear Strike.

ST. LOUIS, July 8.—It is estimated that the cost of the strike against the Gould railroads was $100,000 to the Knights of Labor Order, $1,000,000 in wages to the strikers, and $3,500,000 to the railroad company.

Mormon Converts.

NEW YORK, July 8.—The Guion Line steamer Nevada, which arrived yesterday brought 715 steerage passengers. Among them were 426 new converts to the Mormon faith.

An Eighth Juror Secured.

CHICAGO, July 8.—An eighth juror was obtained in the Anarchist cases to-day.

Wisconsin Forest Fires Very Destructive.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., July 8.—A special from Stevens Point, states that the woods along the line of the Wisconsin Central road are on fire for miles. The damage to timber is very great. Immediate rain is all that will save many settlers from ruin. The cranberry marshes west of Stevens Point are on fire and a large force of men are battling with the destroyer.

A Town Down With Typhoid Fever.

MILWAUKEE, July 8.—The village of Waterford, in Racine County, is terribly stricken with typhoid fever. Fifty people are down with the disease. One family of eleven persons and another of nine are all in their beds.

Ross Became Infuriated.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Duncan C. Ross and Sergeant Walsh, of the U. S. Artillery, fought with swords for the mounted championship, in this city, to-day. In the eighth bout Walsh wounded Ross, who became infuriated and refused to quit fighting until arrested by the police.

Lockjaw Cured.

NEW YORK, July 8.—Dr. Robert Taylor, formerly associated with Dr. A. L. Sayre, of this city, reports the cure of a case of traumatic tetanus, or lockjaw, resultant from a wound, which is, it is said, the only instance in which a fatal conclusion to such an attack has been averted.

XLIXTH CONGRESS.

First Session.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—SENATE.—A large number of petitions were presented from the Knights of Labor praying for the forfeiture of railroad land grants. A bill was passed appropriating $[illegible] for the Cherokee Freedmen, this being their proportion of certain proceeds of lands purchased from the Cherokee Nation. The river and harbor bill was taken up. At [illegible] p. m. the Senate went into executive session, and soon afterward adjourned.

HOUSE.—Petitions from labor organizations were presented in favor of legislation to promote the interests of laboring men. One of the vetoed pension bills was called up, but consideration was postponed until Friday next. The general deficiency bill was then taken up and items relative to the State Department was considered. The bill was reported to the House. The first vote was taken on the amendment for the payment of the Old Colony and Pacific Mail Steamship Companies for transportation of marines in 1865. It was agreed to—yeas 111, nays 90. Pending further action the House adjourned at 5:10 p. m.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—SENATE.—The Senate spent the day on the river and harbor bill. Reports were made on the Weil and La Abra claims, showing the fraudulent character of the demands.

HOUSE.—The House spent to-day mainly in filibustering, the Republicans trying to compel the Democrats to allow an explanation of a private pension bill which the President had vetoed. The contest will be resumed to-day.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—SENATE.—The calendar was taken up. The joint resolution proposing a constitutional amendment to confer the right of suffrage upon women went over on the ground that it could not be considered under the five minute rule. The Pacific Railroad bill also went over to await the action of the House on a similar measure. A bill was passed to pay Wm. H. Crook $4,000 for services as secretary to the President in signing land warrants from 1879 to 1882, inclusive. The bill for the relief of the sufferers by the loss of the Tallapoosa to purchase outfits in the place of those lost, was passed. The resolution for open executive sessions was made the special order for December 8. The bill to establish agricultural stations was postponed until to-morrow. Five pages of the calendar were considered. The Senate then resumed consideration of the river and harbor bill. Pending action on the Hennepin Canal amendment, the Senate went into executive session, and at 5:20 p. m. adjourned, the death of Representative Cole being first announced.

HOUSE.—The death of Representative Cole, of Maryland, was announced, and resolutions of regret were submitted. As a mark of respect the House adjourned at 11:10 a. m.

WASHINGTON, July 9.—SENATE.—Mr. Riddleberger's resolution offered yesterday, to have the executive session of to-day held with open doors, was ruled out of order on the point that it proposed a change of rules. The bill to establish agricultural experiment stations was laid over on an objection to its consideration under the five-minute rule. Mr. Hoar's Federal election bill and the Eades ship railway bill were also objected to. Resolutions relating to the seizure of American vessels in Canada and concerning American citizens imprisoned in Mexico also went over. At 12:45 the Senate went into executive session and at 6:10 p. m. adjourned, having rejected the nomination of Solicitor General Goode, of the Department of Justice.

HOUSE.—The reference of the President's veto messages on pension bills to the Invalid Pension Committee occupied most of the day. A number of lively speeches were made by members interested in certain cases. Reports on two vetoed pension bills were presented and ordered printed. Unanimous consent was asked to take up and pass the Blair pension bill, but the Democrats objected. The general deficiency bill was taken up and the amendment granting one month's extra pay to Senate and House employes agreed to. The House at 5 p. m. took a recess until 8 p. m. for pension bills.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—SENATE.—Mr. Blair's report on pensions, recently given to the press, was recommitted to the Pension Committee, on the ground that it had never passed the committee. The river and harbor bill occupied most of the day. There was a continued scene with Mr. Riddleberger, who insulted the Senate, the Chair, and several individual members, and defied all efforts to make him observe the rules. He openly charged that the vote yesterday against the confirmation of Solicitor General Goode was obtained by Bell Telephone stock. He went on in this style, in spite of all rulings against him, till he saw fit to stop.

HOUSE.—Most of the day was given to the Deficiency bill, which was finally passed. Tuesday, the 13th, was fixed for Morrison bill relating to the Treasury surplus.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—SENATE.—A bill was introduced to stop all payments of public money to James B. Eads, his associates or assigns, for works at the mouth of the Mississippi, until further ordered by Congress. A bill was passed to prevent obstructions to navigation in the harbor of New York City by dumping or otherwise. The Committee on Privileges and Elections got permission to sit during sessions of the Senate, presumably on the Payne case. The Mexican war pension bill was passed with Senate amendments. A number of bills on the calendar were objected to. The Judiciary Committee reported back Beck's bill to prohibit members of Congress from acting as attorneys for railroads aided by the Government. Substitutes were also reported. The river and harbor bill was taken up. The Hennepin Canal amendment was agreed to after a long debate—yeas 31, nays 22. Mr. McMillen gave notice he would ask the Senate to dispose of the bill to-morrow. The sundry civil bill was reported back, with amendments, and ordered printed, and at 7:30 p. m. the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE.—The veto of the bill for a public building at Asheville, N. C., was referred. Under the call of States a number of bills were introduced, one by Anderson, of Ohio, providing for holding terms of the U. S. Circuit Court at Dayton. Business relative to the District of Columbia was postponed until Thursday next, and the legislative appropriation bill was taken up to consider Senate amendments in committee of the whole. When all the amendments had been considered the House adjourned at 5:30 p. m.

THE COMMONWEALTH

Louisville Leaf Tobacco Market.

Medium Burley leaf has been slightly irregular and the average of values has been hardly sustained in full, but there were no quotable changes in prices. As heretofore low grades of Burley have been relatively firm, and low grades of dark and heavy styles relatively dull, while other grades offered have about held their own and no more. Fine grades of both types have not offered. A large preponderance of offerings was again of the dark type. Crop advices have been somewhat unsatisfactory on account of excessive rain, but the weather has recently changed for the better. We advance Burley lugs [illegible]. We quote 1885 tobaccos as follows for full weight packages:

CHARLES D. JACOB, U. S. Minister to United States of Colombia, was publicly received by Louisville board of trade the other night.

JACOB FISHER, young grocer, Louisville, squared his business and disappeared with $100, threatening suicide. His wife thinks he's dead; the police do not.

SENATORS BECK and Blackburn were successful in inducing the Senate to restore the appropriation in the river and harbor bill for the Kentucky river to $250,000. The committee had cut it down to $100,000. Both Senators made clear and vigorous speeches and carried their point.

THE Republicans of the Twelfth Judicial District met at Newport and nominated General John W. Finnell for Circuit Judge, Orlando P. Schmidt for Chancellor, and Judge Demming for Commonwealth's Attorney.

A FIRE at Buford, was discovered the other evening in a store just opened by Pate & Co., and the flames were not checked until the house and its contents were totally destroyed. Loss, $20,000; insurance, $5,000. The cause of the fire is unknown.

THERE has been an increase in the registration of voters in Louisville, just completed, over that of 1884-5. The total for 1884 was 19,841; for 1885, 15,448; 1886, 23,985.

THE Jessamine County officials and the manufacturers of whisky have locked horns. The distillers have refused to give in their lists to the assessors, and the sheriff and county attorney, whose duty it is to list property when not listed by the assessor, have notified the distillers that they will bring suit for the taxes due. The distillers refused to give the amount of goods on hand, and T. S. Bronston, the United States Revenue Collector for that district, when called upon by the county attorney for the information, refused to grant it, stating that he had express orders from the Internal Revenue Commissioner to the contrary.

LITTLE John O. Price, the only son of John O. Price, was killed at the depot in Nicholasville, while attempting to couple freight cars. He, in company with several other boys were playing about the depot, and their presence between the cars was unknown to the train men. He died in a few minutes after his body was pulled from between the cars. He was but eleven years old, the only child of a widower father.

WM. DATHRON, a farmer living two miles from Owensboro, was on a spree for a week, and was arrested and fined a few days ago. He had his little son with him, and after being released started home on the railroad track. Becoming weary they lay down on the track, and were run over by the train, killing both instantly. Dathron was torn in shreds, while the little boy was decapitated.

THE other day a party of twenty-seven persons traversed Mammoth Cave, taking the "long route," nine miles in and nine miles out. While the passengers were traveling through the winding passages beyond Echo river, nine of them, who were in the rear, became separated from the main body. The only guide was at the head of the line, and the absence of the rear guard was not noticed. The unfortunates were lost for five hours in the intricate underground mazes of the mighty cavern. From 4 p. m. till 9 o'clock at night they wandered about aimlessly, vainly endeavoring to find the main party, but constantly getting further and further away from the main track. The lost wanderers finally adopted the plan of leaving small articles of clothing in the path as they walked along, and by these means they were finally found sitting on the banks of Echo river, by the main body of excursionists, to which they had finally arrived. The ladies in the party suffered greatly from nervous excitement, but fortunately no more serious effect resulted from the escapade.

ALL was quiet at Morehead, in Rowan County on the 6th. Business houses are open. The parties who fired upon the sheriff and his deputy were still at large, making their headquarters at Logan's house. The wounded sheriffs will both recover. They were removed to their homes, about five miles from Morehead. More trouble is expected when the Logan party is arrested, and perhaps before then. Nothing had been done relative to sending troops to Rowan County by Governor Knott.

EDWARD PELTON, conductor of a freight train on the Cincinnati Southern, was murdered by a desperado named King at Pine Knot.

AT Eminence Thos. Horan was thrown from the top of an omnibus by a wheel coming off, breaking both his wrists.

MRS. CATHERINE WAGGNER, aged 111, and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Rebecca Waggner, aged 109 years, live within sight of each other near Barterville. They have never seen a railroad, and each has had for fifty years a silk dress laid away in which to be buried.

MED JOHNSON, aged nineteen, brakeman on the Shelbyville branch of the Louisville and Nashville, attempted to get on the train as it pulled out from Beckley's Station, fell under the cars and was killed.

P. J. CRUGER was killed near Mt. Vernon by supposed ku-klux.

LESSONS FROM ENGLAND.

Secretary Whitney Avoiding the Blunders of Great Britain and His Republican Predecessors in Administering His Department Affairs.

The Roach, Robeson and Chandler system, which succeeded so admirably in making our navy the scoff of the world and in squandering millions of the people's money without giving any equivalent, seems to have been adopted in England. A storm is brewing over the heads of the admiralty on account of recent disclosures that the boasted British navy is not all it is represented to be and has an undue proportion of leaking ships and bursting guns. Some of the fast cruisers, says the Saturday Review, have proved to be craft which will go very fast over the measured mile and then, when they have been kept at work for a voyage or two, become strained, lose their shape, more or less, and become proverbially leaky and certainly comparatively slow. Perhaps such vessels must needs have some weakness which renders them little fit for prolonged hard work. The description seems to fit the Dolphin, or some of the other notorious craft turned out under the auspices of Mr. Whitney's predecessors. The present hard working, painstaking and conscientious head of the Navy Department is sparing no pains to rehabilitate the navy and is making the best use of the means placed at his disposal.

It will be well to profit by the disclosures which are being made in reference to the British navy, the leaky Calypso, the bursting gun on the Collingwood and the serious defects of the Phæton. Those vessels were of the most improved and modern types, and the guns were pronounced by the Ordnance Department the best of their class. A searching inquiry is called for, and it is feared that the "invincible" British navy will be found to be in the same unprepared state as was the French army at the outbreak of the war of 1870. It is decidedly scientific work to make a vessel which will be both swift and strong, or a gun which will fire a very heavy shot by a very powerful charge of powder without bursting. Mr. Whitney is determined to secure those necessary elements in the building up of the navy. He is hampered by the cumbersome system which governs the department, and needs a thorough reorganization. It should be the first step taken by Congress to bring around the reconstruction of the navy. The department can take advantage of the experience of England in avoiding the blunders which have wrought such mischief in her navy and robbed some of her most vaunted ships of their prestige. The Secretary of the Navy has made the initiatory move to adopt a scheme which has proved of inestimable value to the British admiralty, to have a list and description of merchant steamers prepared for the department, to be regarded as available in case of emergency, to serve as auxilliary cruisers or transports. It is a plan that is in operation with the great Powers of Europe, and must work to advantage in case of war. If Congress will only do its duty toward the Navy Department, there will be no delay in repairing the blunders and rascalities of former years.—Albany Argus.

THE PLOT EXPOSED.

A Republican Scheme to Injure His Department Thwarted by Postmaster-General Vilas.

The conspiracy in the railway postal service, which has just been exposed and punished, was about what might have been expected. For a quarter of a century it was taught, and by many people believed in this country, that only one party had the requisite intelligence to administer the Government and fill the offices. Propositions to take by the heels some of the men who had held place for a generation and throw them out have been looked upon as verging on treason, and it is not surprising, all things considered, that among the office-holding class an impudent contempt of authority should have manifested itself. More especially was this to be expected when, a new party coming into power, it proceeded to return good for evil by continuing the great majority of the subordinate office-holders in their places. Had it turned them out by the hundred and thousand, as probably some of them should have been turned out, such of them as were left would have been more interested in attending to the public business in such a way as to meet approval than they would have been in any scheme to embarrass their superiors.

Since the inauguration of Mr. Cleveland there have been frequent rumors of insubordination on the part of the railway mail clerks. At one time they have been threatening to strike in a body, and at another they have been "organizing" to resist any changes which the Postmaster-General, in his discretion, might make. These conspiracies recently culminated in a well-defined movement in the West to bring about a complete paralysis of the postal service at any moment when the "union," taking exception to orders from the Government, should proclaim a strike. In this performance the railway clerks manifested that spirit of political intolerance which under Republican rule made the civil-service of the country a great party machine and denied to one-half of the people representation therein, as completely as if they had been aliens.—Chicago Herald.

Sample Republican Reform.

The record of General Black and that of his predecessor in the Pension Office are matters of comparison and contrast, on which no judicious Republican organ will needlessly concentrate public attention. General Black went into office as head of the Pension Bureau March 17, 1885. His record as a Union soldier is too well-known to need rehearsal here. His appointment was everywhere recognized as one eminently fit to be made. Entering upon his duties, what was the state of affairs which he found as to the officeholders under him? The office had been in Republican hands for twenty years. For more than half that time the Republican party had been pledged publicly in all its conventions, State and national, to the great principal of "divorcing patronage from politics."

On the 11th of March, 1885, the day General Black went into office, there were 148 special examiners in the Pension Department, and not one of the entire twelve dozen and four was a Democrat. There were 229 clerks detailed to assist in special examination work and of the entire nineteen dozen and one there were just 2 (two) Democrats. Adding all the other employes of the Pension Office to these and the total number of persons borne upon its salary roll was [illegible]. And out of that there were just seventeen Democrats. Seventeen in nearly 1,700! That is just one per cent. And this was the genuine Civil Service reform which as administered by General Dudley, was sanctioned by every Republican Administration.—Boston Globe.

PRESIDENTIAL VETOES.

The Foolish, Careless and Injurious Legislation Which the Sturdy Chief Executive is Stopping Before It Eats Into the U. S. Treasury.

The President has sent another batch of vetoes to the Senate. One of them stopped a bill which was almost a grotesque illustration of the carelessness with which Congress passes these measures. It directed the name of a soldier's widow to be placed on the pension roll, subject to the pension laws. It turns out now that her name is on the pension roll under the law already, and has been there since February of this year, her pension dating from November of last year; so that the bill seems to have been drafted and passed in sheer ignorance of the facts of the widow's case. To send up such a bill for the President's signature is, of course, to say the least, disrespectful.

Another of these bills puts on the pension roll the widow of a Commodore in the navy who died of heart-disease ten years after the war, and her application had already been rejected by the Pension Bureau because of her failure to show that the disease of which her husband died had any connection with the war. Another gives a soldier already in receipt of a pension, $9,000 of back pension, for a period of fifteen years, during which he had made no claim on account of incapacity on account of disease, and removes the limit of time fixed by the law of 1879, or in other words repeals it for the benefit of this one man. Another gives a widow a pension on account of the death of her husband from inflammation of the stomach ten years after the war, and disregards the fact that her application is pending before the bureau. Another provides for the erection of United States buildings at a cost of $100,000, at Sioux City, Ia., not because the business of the Government at that point calls for them, but because the population is growing rapidly, and there is already a considerable number of other buildings in the town. Another orders a "substantial and commodious public building, with fire-proof vaults," at a cost of $100,000, with an open space around it to protect it from adjacent fires, which is to provide accommodation for the post-office, and internal revenue office and pension office, at Zanesville, O., though the only Federal office in the place is the post-office.

What gives these bills importance is not so much the amount of money they vote away, as the careless, reckless spirit in which they are concocted and passed. On this point the President, in vetoing one of them, observes very forcibly:

> "In speaking of the promiscuous and ill-advised grants of pensions which have lately been presented to me for approval, I have spoken of their 'apparent Congressional sanction' in recognition of the fact that a large proportion of these bills have never been submitted to a majority of either branch of Congress, but are the results of nominal sessions held for the express purpose of their consideration and attended by a small minority of the members of the respective houses of the legislative branch of Government.
>
> "Thus, in considering these bills, I have not felt that I was aided by the deliberate judgment of the Congress; and when I have deemed it my duty to disapprove many of the bills presented, I have hardly regarded my action as a dissent from the conclusions of the people's representatives."

In other words, a large body of men, who are paid high salaries for attending to the public business at Washington, but who have not during the past session furnished the country with a single piece of useful legislation, or one instructive debate, allow schemers of all sorts to get their formal sanction for appropriations of the public money without their knowing it. The most charitable conclusion one can reach about these bills is that a considerable proportion of the members of both houses are too idle and lazy to watch the business which passes through their hands under their own rules of procedure.

This, considered as a state of mind, is bad enough; but there is another aspect of the case, equally serious, which the President also touches on when he says in vetoing the widow De Kraft's pension bill:

> "Every relaxation of principle in the granting of pensions invites applications without merit and encourages those who for gain urge honest men to become dishonest. This is the demoralizing lesson taught the people, that as against the public treasury the most questionable expedients are allowable."

That is to say, not one such pension can be granted without diffusing through a considerable portion of the community the feeling that there is plenty of money in the treasury for almost any purpose, and that almost any mode of getting it out is allowable. What Congressmen think so lightly of, their constituents do not long continue to regard as very serious, and from getting money to which you have no claim, out of the treasury, under the forms of law, to downright fraud on the treasury is a very short step. In fact, the poison of corruption lurks in the whole business, and President Cleveland has done the country no greater service than reprobating it in hard words.—N. Y. Post.

——The announcement that the Committee on Commerce of the Republican Senate is making large additions to the River and Harbor bill passed by the Democratic House, and that it is likely to call for two or three millions more when the upper branch gets through with it, is an unfortunate response to the Republican platforms recently adopted in Maine and Vermont condemning the Democrats for their extravagant appropriations.—N. Y. Post.

——The President gives the Senate and House a reminder nearly every day that they are losing sight of the laws. This lesson which occasional vetoes give must have a beneficial effect upon legislation after awhile. For the first time in years there is a judicial mind in the White House which calls a halt to even Senators who have prided themselves on their legal knowledge while voting for unconstitutional bills.—Buffalo Times

——The task of defeating the ingenuity of pension wolves is doubtless an onerous one, but the President is coming out of it with a reputation for quiet humor that, when yoked to strong common sense and honesty of purpose, is thoroughly appreciated by the American people.—Chicago News.

IN the future President Cleveland will be known as the veto President.

WE hear it said that Lewis Rice, of Richwood, is a candidate for County Commissioner.

THE candidates nominated for State offices by the Alabama Republicans will not accept the nominations.

THE wheat crop will replenish the farmers exchequer considerably this season—more extensively than for many years.

GOV. KNOTT is in Washington. Wonder if he will take a look at the Kentucky Durham which is quartered in that city.

THE hot weather has no effect on the veto business in Washington, and the President continues to send in the veto messages right along.

ALL of the Kentucky delegation in Congress wants to be returned, but some of them will have to make a very lively effort or they will be left at home.

THE Senate has at last passed a Mexican Soldier Pension Bill, allowing them $8 a month from its passage—but no back pay. They should have been pensioned long before this.

THE latest in local politics is the mention of the name of S. P. Brady as a candidate for Justice of the Peace in this district. Mr. Brady would make a good officer if the people elect him.

IT is reported that the office of Attorney-General of the United States is shortly to be vacated by the present incumbent, and that the President has tendered the position to Hon. Allen G. Thurman, of Ohio, but he declines it.

THE veteran minister, Thomas P. Dudley, died in Lexington last Saturday in the afternoon. He was in his 95th year, and claimed to be the oldest preacher in the world. He belonged to the Particular Baptist, and was well known all over the State.

THE convention to nominate a Democratic candidate for Judge of the Superior Court from this district meets in Lexington on next Saturday. Hon. J. Q. Ward is the only candidate, and the probability is the attendance at the convention will be very small.

THE militia has been sent to Rowan county to preserve the peace while a term of court can be held to prosecute the offenders who have been raising sheol up there recently. Rowan county is a pretty expensive district, and the best thing the State can do with it is to trade it off for a dog and then kill the dog.

LAST week the Commonwealth took a view of the political field in the twelfth judical district and found it in such a condition that is was necessary to turn in an alarm, believing that if something is not done to heal the troubles in the party, and to reduce the number of Democratic candidates for Circuit Judge, that defeat is sure to result at the August election.

The law [illegible] in Rowan county [illegible]

[illegible]

The Louisville Times thinks there is more good Democratic campaign literature in the pension veto messages of the President than in all the ten volumes of the Congressional Record of this session, and adds that Tom Robertson and Phil Thompson ought to consider this matter and order an immense edition of the vetoes.

"JOE BLACKBURN is an honest man if he does hate to talk. Any man who can serve as long in Congress as he has, and remain pure and honest deserves a harp. He owns no railroads, telephone, nor counties in the great west, and was not a salary grabber. He went to Congress poor and is still poor.—Lexington Drummer.

IT has been discovered that in nearly every ward in the city of Louisville political clubs have been organized for the purpose of selling their votes. The candidate who bids highest gets the entire club, and where there are as many offices to fill as in Louisville, considerable money can be realized by the time a candidate for each office has made his purchase.

THE department of Agriculture estimates the area of the corn crop to be three and one-half per cent. greater than that of last year.

The oats crop area is reported at 23,780,000 acres against 22,782,630 acres last year. The condition is 89, which indicates a smaller yield than the 1885 crop.

The cotton crop is conditioned 10 per cent. lower than last year.

THE Covington Hawkeye was soon punched out, but while it lasted it labored hard to make itself felt in political circles, but only succeeded in making itself ridiculous. It was the product of one of the disappointed Government officeseekers, a man into whose mouth the Democratic party has been putting bread for several years. He is a very grateful cuss, surely.

JUDGE ARTHUR and Mr. Desah, candidates for Circuit Judge in the twelfth district, have commenced making propositions one to the other, looking to the adjustment of their differences as to which is the nominee of the party. They know that they can not afford to involve the party in defeat, and are seemingly willing to have the disputed question settled in a manner that will preclude the possibility of a Republican victory at the polls in August.

THE State Teachers Association held in Louisville last week was well attended, teachers from all parts of the State being present. A successful meeting was the result, and many subjects of vital importance to both teachers and the public were considered in a manner calculated to be of a material benefit to the cause of education. The annual meeting of the association is infusing new life into a cause that has been almost criminally neglected, and already are its good results materializing.

The continued rains have done the wheat but little damage in the county, and the most conservative farmer must admit that the yield is more than any season since 1875 or even '53. Mr. Joe Rhodes near Burgin says that the shocks were so close together that he had to move them to get the machine out of the field. Some farmers say that the stalk did not head out as well as expected and this will show itself at threshing time. Every crop promises to be a bountiful one, and both farmers and merchants may look for better times —Harrodsburg Democrat.

A FEW weeks since an application was filed before Judge Jackson, of Louisville, for a writ of habeas corpus in the matter of two convicts named Hale, who, after being confined in the penitentiary at Frankfort for a portion of the two years for which they were sentenced to hard labor, were leased out and put to work in a coal mine in Pulaski county. The application was based on the grounds that they could not be taken out of the penitentiary and thus worked, but Judge Jackson takes the opposite view of the matter and denied the writ. The Judge takes the position that the word "penitentiary" does not mean the buildings at Frankfort only, but it means any point at which the State sees proper to work the convicts.

Union	120,290
Wayne	92,109
Woodford	107,853

Union county, containing the richest and best land in the State, and with a new railroad to give increased stimulus to trade and to agriculture, makes the worse showing of all the counties, and nearly $1,000,000 decrease in valuation.

Among the conspicuous increases are:

Ballard	$ 72,310
Boyd	68,762
Breathitt	88,621
Bullitt	48,549
Calloway	63,590
Daviess	315,737

Jefferson	147,063
Jessamine	85,180
Kenton	583,634
Lawrence	59,930
Meade	76,030
Pulaski	180,843

The increase in Jefferson proportionately is very small, Kenton has the greatest aggregate increase; Fayette, Graves and Daviess next. A member of the Board of Equalization, classifying the counties and establishing a cash basis for the equalization, said in reference to the decrease of the assessment:

"The elective system for assessors is altogether wrong. You can't get them to perform their work satisfactorily, although they take an oath 'to assess at a fair cash valuation,' because they are seeking favors at the hands of the people whose property they are required to assess. Now, the real cause of this remarkable falling off is traceable to the action of the legislature. The question of the continuance of the State Board was agitated, and the repeal actually passed one House just at a time when the assessment was in progress. Naturally the assessors took it for granted that it would pass both Houses of the Assembly, and leave them free to fix their own figures without a power to supervise or change the valuation set by them. It is simply ridiculous to say that there has been an actual decline in valuation in Kentucky. Everybody knows that last year was an unusually good year for tobacco, grain and crops generally, besides in building improvements and railroads, all of which is an augmentation of the State's wealth. The Board can now bring about a more equitable adjustment of the taxation, but the law does not authorize it to raise the aggregate assessment of the State. If it had not been for the unsettled condition of the Board's position before the legislature, I believe the increase this year would have been between ten and fifteen million, or about the same it was the superinducing agency in effecting last year."

STATE NEWS.

In Bourbon county the corn and tobacco crops are looking very fine.

Gen. P. W. Hardin, of Frankfort, had a fine Jersey cow, Gilt-edged Beauty, to die from milk fever. He valued her at $350.

Twenty or thirty cows have died of what was supposed to be hydrophobia, in Ballard county, and many more are dying.

The latest "scheme" reported is one to pipe natural gas from Warfield, in Eastern Kentucky, down the Ohio River to Cincinnati.

John McCord says that he has an imported Holstein cow, Konigan van Freisland, 5 years old, that is giving 8½ gallons of milk per day.

The wheat crop has been saved in good condition; oat harvest is now beginning, and the crop will be a very fine one.—Lebanon Standard.

There is a strong general demand for hogs and it is confidently predicted that by September 1st, they will be worth five dollars.—Paris News.

A Montgomery county farmer averaged 1,500 pounds of tobacco to the acre last year and sold his crop at 10 cents per pound. The year before he raised 1,800 pounds to the acre.

The wheat crop along the Kentucky Central between Summit and Johnson Junction is certainly one of the finest ever grown. Most of it is in the shock and thrashing has already commenced.—Maysville Bulletin.

We'll bet even money that there is not another town in the United States the size of Warsaw, population, wealth and surroundings considered, but has a good school-house —a blessing that does not adorn this place. A county seat, a town a century old, and not a schoolhouse in the place.'—Independent.

One of the largest wheat growers in Christian county estimates the wheat crop at 650,000 bushels, and says on many farms it has begun to sprout in the shocks. In same county J. R. Candle grows five varieties of wheat, and as the varieties ripen at different times, he is able to run his reapers as the crops mature without being rushed."

Some trouble has arisen between Judge Pat Major, brother of the late Col. Sam Major, and Mrs. John Scott, over possession of young Sam Major, the nine-year old son of the deceased. The question is over the possession of the child, which his grandmother's family and his uncle both claim. The matter is under advisement before Judge Thomas, who will render a verdict next week.—Capital.

The Circuit Court has been in session this week. Owing to the recent death of Judge P. U. Major's brother, Col. S. I. M. Major, he declined to sit, and Hon. Warren Montfort was elected special judge by the bar. From the way he has been dispatching business it is fair to presume that when he comes on the bench as regular judge at the next term we will have an efficient officer.—Frankfort Roundabout.

The wheat is about all harvested in this section and in much better condition than would have been thought, considering the rainy spell that set in about the time harvest commenced. In some cases the fields looked as if the yield would be heavy, but turned out more straw than grain, but the average is much larger than usual. The prospects for remunerative prices for it is, however, far from good.—Stanford Journal.

Billy Harber was in town this week with a horse that was struck by lightning a few weeks ago, and the hole in his head was looked at with much wonder. It is located in the center of the forehead, just below the line of the eyes, and is as large as a hen egg. The bone is scooped out as clean as if done by a chisel. When first done the hole extended to both nostrils and he breathed through the hole, but now it is only opened to the left nostril. The morning after it was done the left nostril appeared burned or scorched, as if the current of electricity had gone through the head and passed down and out of the nostril.—Mt. Olivet Democrat.

State Politics.

P. W. Hardin is a candidate for reelection as Attorney-General.

The Nelson Record does not think Barbour should be held responsible for the manner in which he was nominated by the Lebanon convention.

Every race for a judicial officer in Kentucky in which there has been a disgraceful fight increases Kentucky's shame, but it brings the hope that we shall some day be driven back to our former custom of separating judicial offices from the control of politics.—Owensboro Inquirer.

Hon. W. E. Arthur has so far made a considerable canvass in the district, and everywhere he has been received as is fitting the regular nominee of the Democratic party—all giving assurance of victory. The district will be highly honored with Judge Arthur on the bench.—Newport Journal.

It is all idle clatter to talk about retiring such a bracing and deserving man as Beck—the Democratic voters of Kentucky will not tolerate the idea. Neither Carlisle, nor Lindsay, nor any other favorite of the State can over-shadow the greatness and the brilliant career of James B. Beck.—Henderson News.

For further information address, associate principals, L. M. WHITEHEAD, or J. C. MACK, Burlington, Kentucky.

ADVANTAGES.—1. Burlington is a quiet, healthy town of 400 inhabitants, away from the railroad, and its consequent vices.
2. The society is of the best class.
3. The town holds forth no inducements to young men to learn to drink and gamble, with which other well known institutions in this part of the State are surrounded.
4. The school curriculum will be equal to that of any like school in the State.
5. The Baptist, Presbyterian and Universalist churches each have regular services, while other denominations have occasional services.

THE COMBINATION
FENCE.

A fence that is wanted, and in time will be used by every one that wants a fence, either around the House, Garden or Farm, as it is cheap, durable and serviceable, to keep in check horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, chickens, etc., and restrain wolves, dogs, and rabbits, etc.

Having all the advantages of a picket fence in restraining animals from jumping, and not so liable to decay, and at much less cost, and no barbs to injure valuable stock, thus placing it far in advance of any other fence now in use, hence it must be the fence of the future; all who have it want more.

It is portable and can be removed from field to field by drawing staples from posts, taking out the splice, lath and rebundling it. We offer this fence for sale in bundles of five and six rod at Burlington.

Business dull.

Farmers very busy.

Cool wave yesterday morning.

But few country people come to town.

Hay and oat harvest are now in full blast.

The camp-meeting season is near at hand.

The hot weather has made the cows fall in milk.

James Rogers, of Bellevue, was in town yesterday.

Has a teacher been employed for the common school at this place?

The weather was too hot last week for the favorite game, foot ball.

Business around the county offices has been very dull for some time.

The foot-ball collapsed Monday evening, greatly to the sorrow of the kickers.

We hear it said that the Baptist will hold a protracted meeting at this place in August.

Silver Grove is growing very popular. Don't forget the picnic there on the 31st of July.

A potato that has to be sliced in order to get it out of the hill, is what we call a p-o-t-a-t-o.

Lee Rogers, a colored man in the Bellevue neighborhood, is trying to get Uncle Sam to grant him a pension.

Jonas Delph says that hissing adders and copperhead snakes are becoming uncomfortably numerous on his farm.

It is seldom that this part of the country is favored with two consecutive oat crops, such as those of '85 and '86.

The rain that visited this section Friday night was very beneficial to vegetation which was needing a good shower.

The cemetery at this place is badly in need of attention. It has the appearance of a sadly neglected resting place for the dead.

Orlando Snyder, of Petersburg, was in town last Saturday, but he forgot to tell anybody that he is a candidate for County Commissioner.

The labor of plowing corn is about through for this season, but much of the corn is too small to turn off without more cultivation.

The voice of the steam threshing machine is now heard in the country. It is heard early and late, and at all hours through the day.

Scott Underhill and wife rejoice over the advent of a fine ten pound boy at their house. The young man put in his appearance last Sunday.

There is a terrible strain on the potato hills in the gardens in this town. Some are talking of having iron hoops put on them to keep them from bursting.

Dr. Robert Grant, brother of Dr. J. M. Grant, of this place, located at Crittenden, Grant county, this spring. We are glad to learn that he has quite a good practice.

Big cut in prices of ready-made clothing and clothes made to order at H. F. Blase's, 540 Madison Ave., Covington, where there is an enormous stock to select from.

On the 24th of this month Abram Clore will give an all-day picnic at La Grange Grove, on the pike between Hebron and Bullittsville. Let everybody attend and take a basket.

J. M Conner and Geo E. Rouse spent several days last week in Madison, Clark and Fayette counties in search of a fine cow which would suit their fancy. They searched in vain.

Geo. Hughes saved his pole and line when fishing on Gunpowder the other day, a fish getting away with his hook, but not until George pursued it to where the water reached his arm-pits.

Mr. W. A. Gaines made our sanctum a brief call last Saturday. Mr. Gaines and his father invested in a twine binder this season, and are well pleased with the manner in which it does its work.

The stock men report the lamb crop which they are now putting on the market as very indifferent, owing to the wet weather early in the spring, which is known to be deleterious to young lambs.

Those who attended the picnic in Walton's woods last Saturday had a fine day's enjoyment. The crowd was very small until afternoon, when the gallantry and beauty of the surrounding country turned out in force.

Early Tuesday morning Geo. Sable and James Deer were before Esquire Gaines, the former being charged with assault and battery upon the person of the latter, who is only a chunk of a boy, while the former is a grown man. The court being advised fined Sable $1 and the trimmings, for using a hitch rein on the boy.

The Woman's [illegible] Society [illegible] Burlington [illegible]

[illegible] Hubbard & [illegible] are receiving [illegible] John Bodie, [illegible] Hebron agent.

The [illegible] of [illegible] to which we referred the [illegible] question has decided that [illegible] was the first garden in town to have that vegetable in his garden this season, and thank him for a lot of the [illegible] sample of his product.

The Presbyterian church was occupied last Sunday for the first time since the work of repairing it was commenced. The interior of the building presents quite a handsome appearance, and especially is the new pulpit a great improvement over the old one.

The little child of Mrs. D. Taylor, of Dakota, who is visiting her father, W. B. Grubbs, of Taylorport, was buried in the cemetery at this place one day last week. Mrs. Taylor has a large circle of friends in this county who tender their sympathy to her in her grief.

Joe Reed has converted his carriage shop into an art hall, and he is very busy remodelling some ancient paintings. Yellow clay, reduced to a proper consistency by a liberal supply of anilder, is used as his favorite mixture to give the work proper and delicate tints.

Two of the candidates for County Commissioner were in town last Saturday, and were seen about the bank; but as they are men who do business on the most exalted principles, no suspicion of any preparation, on their part to "boodle" the voters of Boone, can be attached.

Probably the best piece of wheat in this part of the county is that of Mr. A. G. Winston near town. It was produced on land not adapted to small grain, but a very liberal quantity of bone dust sown with the wheat last fall was the means of bringing forth a very fine crop.

Mr. J. W. Calvert has had erected at the head of the grave of Miss Clara B. Jones, who was buried in the cemetery at this place several years since, a nice stone. Miss Mary Thompson has had erected at the head of the graves of her father and mother, a handsome monument.

The gentlemen selling the patent churn power have sold considerable territory to citizens of the Petersburg district. The following named persons have invested: Rev. Froh. Elijah Parker, Wib, Pink and Ed Rice and Ira Wingate. They will begin the canvass in the territory bought, at once.

At a meeting of the croquetists held not long since, a resolution was adopted thanking the Petersburg brethren for the implements donated, and pledged themselves to use all honorable means in their power to overcome "pnuching," which is objectionable to Petersburgers, and to hereafter knuckle and shoot fair.

The Plattsburg and Gainesville neighborhoods were treated to an elopement sensation last Saturday night about 2 o'clock, the parties being Jas. Hensley, son of John Hensley, and Miss Story, daughter of Charles Story. They went from James Tolin's to Lawrenceburg, where they were married, after which they returned to Thos. Hyne's, of Gainesville, to await the relenting of obdurate parents.

The night after the burglars raided Burlington, they paid their respects to Dr. Scott, of Florence. They entered his house and were heard by the doctor, but succeeded in making their exit before he could ascertain who they were. The same night some one attempted to enter the residence of Isaac Bailey, toll-gate keeper near Florence, but only succeeded in opening the window blinds, the sash being held in place by patent fastenings.

Last Thursday in the absence of the County Clerk and his deputy, Mr. Ed Collins and Miss Arnold came to town to be united in the holy bonds of wedlock, and it devolved upon Judge Dills to issue the license to avoid a temporary delay in the nuptials. The license being obtained it occurred to them that the Judge might as well complete the job and adjust the nuptial knot, which he did in the brief and impressive ceremony peculiar only to County Judges, launching them safely and legally on the turbulent sea of matrimony. They say the Judge forgot to kiss the bride, though.

At a Democratic convention held in Burlington last Saturday afternoon to appoint and instruct delegates to the district convention to be held in Lexington on the 16th inst. to nominate a Democratic candidate for Judge of the Superior Court from this judical district, F. Riddell was chosen chairman and W. L. Riddell, secretary.

On motion of J. Frank Grant, of Petersburg, any Democrat or Democrats of this county who attend the district convention at Lexington on the 16th inst., were instructed to cast the vote of Boone county in said convention, as a unit, for J. Q. Ward as the Democratic candidate for Judge of the Superior Court from this district.

On motion and second the chairman of the Harrison county delegation in said district convention was appointed Boone's proxy to cast her vote in the district convention for J. Q. Ward, in the event no delegate or delegates from Boone attends said convention, and the secretary was directed to forward to said proxy a copy of the proceedings of this meeting.

On motion and second the convention adjourned.

F. Riddell, Chairman.
W. L. Riddell, Secretary.

The [illegible] County Infirmary [illegible]

Mr. Hall, [illegible] superintendent [illegible]

[illegible] the superintendent [illegible] garden [illegible] large quantity of vegetables, although the season has not been so favorable [illegible]

Under the suggestion of Mr. Hall a good [illegible] house [illegible] have been built, and these should be followed by a good cellar in which to store vegetables for winter use. A cellar could be built at a small cost, and would be a great benefit to keeping winter supplies.

The entire building needs a coat of paint, which, if put on now would last for several years, while another year's delay will necessitate two or more coats, and add much to the cost of painting. "A stitch in time saves nine."

The farm now consists of [illegible] acres of land, the county recently having purchased of W. A. Gaines, four acres that are immediately in front of the house, which seems an outlet to the pike.

There are about 35 inmates, 13 of which are colored people, and the most of them are in a very pitiful condition. Among the white inmates are two or three men, who are hardly able to get around, while the rest consist of women, children, and of these are Noble, the man who was so badly burned by falling in a log heap, in the spring, his wife and five little children, one or two of which are blind while the others have fits.

Mr. Hall makes a splendid superintendent, and having made the business his study, he now has everything about the place moving systematically, and in the best of order. A visit to the Infirmary, a few days since, revealed everything in much better condition than we thought it possible to be kept.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

BULLITTSVILLE.

Farmers are busy harvesting.

Mr. Winston Coffman is the guest of G. W. Gaines.

Uncle George Gaines' finger is almost well again.

Jeff Snyder, our former druggist, was in our midst a few days since.

R. L. Stephens, of Independence, was prospecting in this vicinity for a school.

Why does Jim Riley stand out in the middle of the pike on Sunday evenings, and look anxiously in the direction of Temp Graves'? Temp goes the other way, Jim.

Our little city is getting to be quite a seat of fine arts. Miss Willis teaches music and Miss Pauline Kirtley is teaching a class in painting. Girls, hat marks are as nice as ever.

Dick Stephens, Miss Pearl Gaines, Grandpa Walton, Miss Mary Cropper, and Lee Cropper, spent the fourth at Joe Cleveland's. Dick vows and declares that from Kreylich's hill you can see Cincinnati and the river both, and see them distinctly; but no one will believe Dick.

RABBIT HASH.

Mrs. Jessie Wilson is convalescing.

Uncle J. Q. A. Stephens is quite poorly.

A great many apples are being shipped from here.

L. S. Pope, of Waterloo, was in town Friday and purchased him a new mowing machine.

Rain needed very badly, but the dry weather has favored the farmers with their harvest.

Billie Grant and family, of Bellevue, were visiting M. F. Morrison and family Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Mamie Gleason returned home Thursday from a week's visit in Lawrenceburg with her father-in-law.

We expect those who want to be candidates for precinct offices to announce themselves as such Saturday.

Mr. Latty and wife returned to their home in Lockland, O., after several days visit with G. H. Wilson and wife.

Misses Jessie and Bertha Batchelor, of Lockland, O., cousins of Mrs. G. H. Wilson, arrived at her house Friday eve for a two weeks' visit.

Rabbit Hash can boast of a self propelling street car. Mr. Editor, come down and take a ride. All necessary accommodations attached for the comfort of passengers. Jerome Wilson, manager, C. O. Riddell, conductor.

VERONA.

John Tom Roberts is erecting a new barn on his farm.

Miss N. E. Hamilton is having her school-house reshingled.

Dr. Finnell's new buggy and double team is a daisy, and he has plenty of time to use it.

Miss Laura Mansfield, of Sadieville, has been visiting at this place for the last two weeks.

Miss Lizzie Roberts will move to Glencoe soon, and will teach school there the next term.

Orrin Curtis thinks of moving to Owenton, Ky., soon, or at least, he has his Ei(ta) over that way.

D. B. Roberts goes to Beaver every Sunday, rain or shine; but you don't No(el) his business though.

The farmers' hearts are light this morning—had a nice rain last night. Prospects fine for a good crop.

The turnpike is progressing slowly, but we will have it from Sleet's store to the depot if we have to build it by gas.

B. Q. Roberts is able to be out again, but suffers the loss of his right eye. Moral: "Don't shoot any more cats on Friday."

Money is being raised by the trustees for the purpose of enlarging the public school building, an improvement badly needed.

Personal Mentions.

Mrs. Nancy Platt of Knightstown, Indiana, is visiting her sister Mrs. [illegible] Palmer, at this place.

Miss Jennie Marshall, a Florence [illegible], has been the guest of [illegible] D. Kirk and wife for several days.

Miss Maud Kirkpatrick left yesterday morning for Indianapolis on a visit to her relatives there.

Miss Laura Hosbell and sister, of Hebron, were visiting Miss Mary Thompson, one evening last week.

J. P. Walton and wife of Gainesville attended services at the Presbyterian church Sunday night.

Prof. [illegible] was in town Monday. He is trying to locate some of his Bowling Green friends in the school business in this county.

W. C. [illegible] who has been living at Sparta, Gallatin county, for the last two years, has returned to Boone to live. Will looks as natural as of days of yore.

DEATHS.

James Thomas, an old citizen of the Woolper neighborhood, died last Saturday morning. He had been in feeble health for a long time.

Stephen Waite, a citizen of the Walton neighborhood died last week. He was interred in the cemetery at Benj. Stephens', near Florence.

Mrs. Platt, relict of the late Abraham Platt, died at the residence of her son Jacob, opposite Lawrenceburg, last Thursday morning. The remains were interred in the family burying ground Saturday at 10 o'clock.

A CARD.

As a good many of my friends in the Taylorport precinct voted for me at the primary election in April, with the view of bringing me out as a candidate at the August election for Magistrate, I have considered the matter and concluded some time since not to be a candidate. However we have two good men that will accept the office if elected, and I hope they will be.

John W. Crigler.

Local Option.

By error it was published in last week's issue of the Recorder that Elder Fullilove would lecture at Walton, July 16th. His appointment for that place is July 15th '86, and his appointment at Florence was omitted entirely at which place he will lecture, July 16.

Elder Bush (col.) will lecture at the Sand Run church, Sunday afternoon, July 18th, at 3 p. m.; at Petersburg, July 19th, at 7½ p. m.; at Bellevue, July 20th, at 7½ p. m.; at Burlington, July 21st, at 7½ p. m.; at Florence, July 22d, at 7½ p. m., and at Walton, July 23d, at 7½ p. m.

Elder Howe will lecture at Bullittsville church, July 26th, at 2½ p. m.; at Bellevue, July 27th, at 7½ p. m.; at Big Bone Springs, July 28th; at 3 p. m., at Sunday-school picnic, in Craven's woods, near Union, July 29th, at 2½ p. m.; at Walton, July 30th, at 7½ p. m.; and at Florence, July 31st, 1886, at 7½ p. m.

H. P. Stephens will lecture at Gunpowder, July 22d, at 7½ p. m.; at Union July 23d, at 7½ p. m.; at Sand Run church, July 24th, at 3 p. m., and at Constance, July 30th, 1886, at 7½ p. m.

Those who oppose local option are invited to attend each lecture, and time will be divided with them if they desire to defend their cause.

The local committees of each district will please arrange the place of meeting for each lecturer in their respective districts.

Oscar Gaines, chrm'n.
G. G. Hughes, Sect'y.

NOTICE.

Office of County Superintendent.

The Board of Examiners will hold a session in Burlington on the second Saturday in this month, (July) for examination of applicants, who have completed the prescribed course of study in any Common School. See section 10, art. 1, Common School Law.

The regular examination of Teachers will be held at Burlington, on the 3rd and 4th Saturdays in July and August. Second class certificates issued during the year 1884, and all fourth-class, issued in 1885, expired June 30, '86.

The Boone County Teachers' Institute will be held at this place, commencing August 17th, and continue four days. The programmes will be ready and sent to the teachers in a few days.

EMBALMING INVENTIONS.

[illegible]

[illegible] to make the undertaking business a profession [illegible] We are becoming more scientific in our business [illegible] every day and wonderful improvements have been made in the art [illegible] last few years. Why, most people think that we can't embalm a body without [illegible] it. But we can, [illegible] embalming properly done and with a proper subject [illegible] at the present day. To do the work properly the operation should be begun between two and six hours after death, and in a proper subject only one treatment is really necessary. This is a full distribution of certain liquids in the veins by means of a force pump. But we have cases sometimes we can't get along with as easily as this. Not long ago I had a case of a Southerner who died at one of the big hotels here, who weighed between two hundred and three hundred pounds. I had to put him on ice the first thing, then thawed him out, and thus got the arteries and veins soft so as to easily send the embalming liquid through them. The case was a decided success. It was sent to [illegible] and reached there all right and in excellent condition.

"What is there new in embalming apparatus?"

"A number of things, and all important. Several of these are my own invention. One is a portable embalming table, which can be so folded up that one man can carry it easily, and yet when in shape it can hold five hundred pounds weight, if necessary. It is so made that the body can be held in an inclined position, something that is necessary in the process. To go with this, I have invented a head rest and arm rests. These are new and not on the market yet. They are made of brass, nickel-plated, and fasten on to the table by adjustable screws. The whole outfit costs seventy-five dollars. In response to the growing public demand in this matter, we attach a canopy of velvet drapery to cover the embalming table, for there is an evident desire among people to have the body of their friends or relations surrounded by materials pleasing to the eye in every stage of its preparation for burial. The table has a small rod at each corner, and upon cords attached to these the canopy is hung. The drapery extends nearly to the floor from the edge of the table and is black for adults and purple for children, both trimmed with heavy cord and tassels of white corded silk. A notable thing about embalming is that there is a growing desire among people to be embalmed. It is shown in the increased demand for the appliances from all parts of the country, and in another way which may strike you as somewhat odd. This is by persons coming in and arranging to have their bodies embalmed whenever they should die. I have had people come in here a year before they died and make arrangements for their entire funeral. The idea of being put on ice is very repulsive to most people, and as it is known that this is not necessary in embalming, people who can afford it wish to have their bodies embalmed. This is particularly noticeable among people of means. One man, who was about sixty years old and something of an invalid, but who was able to walk, came in and paid cash down in gold for all his funeral arrangements, six months before he died. Not long ago an elderly lady, who was sick, sent her daughter for a price-list of her funeral expenses. Other women have made their funeral arrangements in advance; one, a young woman who had consumption, bravely faced what was coming and prepared fully for it without flinching. From my experience I find that women think more about death than men. The charge for embalming is between fifty and one hundred dollars, according to the time occupied and other circumstances. The process we now follow smoothes out the death contractions of the face and makes it look very natural. Ordinarily embalmed bodies have been found in excellent preservation after three months, when kept in a vault."—N. Y. Mail and Express.

Oh, how the men raved,
Shouted, and cried, and hurrahed! Then they all
Rushed at the work again, lest the back wall
Where I was lying, away from the fire,
Should fall in and bury me.

You've seen Robin now, he's as bright as a dime,
Deep in some mischief, too, most of the time.
Tom, it was, saved him. Now isn't it true,

And there comes Tom, too—
Yes, Tom was our dog.

JOHN CRINOLINE.

The Life-Poem of a Man with a Prosaic Name.

Ten years ago there were two notable things about John Crinoline: first, he was heartily ashamed of his name, and, second, he had read an extraordinary number of French books. I may add that his favorite French author was Chateaubriand. Those whose knowledge of this renowned writer is derived wholly from a familiarity with the toothsome steak bearing his name perhaps have a more agreeable impression of him than his books would give them. But John Crinoline was such an admirer of Chateaubriand that he had come to St. Malo, on the coast of France, that he might see for himself the house in which the philosopher was born and stand on the deserted island where his favorite author found a lonely grave. And the only reason why he now loiters in the Place Chateaubriand, gazing at the antics of a pair of juvenile tight-rope walkers, is that the tide is in, the sea already dashes against the ancient walls of the town, and it is consequently impossible to cross over the submerged sea dike which at ebb tide connects St. Malo with the little island of Grand-Bey, on whose outermost ledge rest the remains of Chateaubriand.

Besides, this is the time of the harvest moon, and John is persuaded that if he would see the grave aright he must view it as Sir Walter recommends his readers to view "fair Melrose." At first he sat after dejeuner smoking a cigarette under the awning outside the Hotel de France and regarding with tranquil eye the graceful woman on the superb black horse. Her long riding habit clings to her, as that "outmost wrappage and overall" that Carlyle speaks of should cling to every perfect form, and the white plume in her plush hat nods with each capriole of the handsome beast. Now and then she dances back and forth attending the movements of two children who are walking wires stretched taut between poles perhaps fifty feet apart and a dozen feet high. John can only see from his distant point of view that one of these children has long yellow hair, and [illegible] dressed in tinsel and tights. Some Frenchmen who sit near him sipping Chartreuse have so many things to say about the horsewoman that presently his curiosity is aroused and he joins the spectators gathered in a circle around the wires.

The boy and girl have ceased to act in concert, but starting out from the opposite end of their wires, are walking toward each other alone. A beetle-browed man paces between, ready to render assistance in case of disaster. The boy, alert and supple, his cheeks aflame with the exercise, trips lightly to the middle of his wire, and there, poising himself for an instant, begins oscillating to and fro.

"Comme-ça, comme-ça!" he cries, in a bantering tone to the little girl, who has traveled her wire more cautiously. She pauses at his call and casts a timid, beseeching glance at the beetle-browed man, who responds to it with a fierce grimace, clenching his fists. It is the episode of an instant and doubtless John Crinoline is the only one who observes it. At any rate the effect it has upon him is surprising. His eyes flash and he elbows his way impetuously to the inner edge of the crowd.

"Annette!" calls the handsome horsewoman in a deep warning tone, drawing rein abreast of the child. The sound of her voice works a sudden change in the girl's attitude. A shiver runs through the shapely little limbs; she darts a trembling glance at the boy who is swinging gaily on his wire, and then, with a piteous attempt at a smile, begins slowly to rock herself. The boy, capering like a monkey, shouts "Plus vite! plus vite!" and the beetle-browed man, taking up the words, repeats them in a menacing tone, looking up savagely into her small, pallid face. It may be that they have unnerved her; perhaps she is blinded by the tears that gather to her bright eyes; at any rate, John Crinoline sees she is falling, and, with a very wicked oath on his lips, springs forward just in time to save her.

"C'est damage," says the horsewoman coldly. "Merci bien, Monsieur."

For answer John Crinoline, still holding the little tinsel form in his arms, glares up at the woman with such fury that she blushes. Then he turns to meet Annette's blue eyes gazing with wonder into his.

"You caught me, didn't you? I'm awful much oblige. I am going to say merci bien to you, but I knew you weren't French soon's I heard you swear."

John smiles and tenderly places her on her feet. Then the beetle browed man, who until now, for reasons best known to himself, has kept aside, approaches cap in hand, and is so profusely thankful to John and so outrageously affectionate toward the little acrobat that what else can John do but adjust his hat before all these people and then modestly slink away from them? Never [illegible], he tells himself as he [illegible] through the great [illegible] that had [illegible] Annette he [illegible] until he had [illegible] that Annette [illegible] in St. Malo [illegible] a stranger in a strange land [illegible] about the [illegible].

[illegible] John Crinoline [illegible] who spoke to you in her [illegible] John [illegible].

[illegible] on the long curving pier [illegible] all [illegible] when he walks on the ramparts watching the [illegible] John thinks of Annette. He [illegible] that it is [illegible] far away over in the West the cloud-continents strange [illegible] in the form of a child with yellow hair and [illegible] the lie direct. [illegible] and remarks to him [illegible] that the thing is very amusing that he doesn't [illegible] to be brow-beaten into making an ass of himself, even by [illegible].

A mild breeze is blowing seaward and the tide is fast ebbing. Stretches of white clean beach lay below him, on which children are at play. Adult Frenchmen, who will never outgrow their boyhood, stand knee-deep in the quiet water of a pond left by the sea, gleefully sailing their miniature ships, and a bevy of girls, chaperoned by their parents, are seeking the shelter of the rocks to decide for a bath. Tardy Blanchisseuses issue from the town with heaping baskets of linen, which they spread upon the beach, and the confused murmur of their voices floats up with the rolling of the surf. A gendarme stands at the western bastion with the terra-cotta tint of the sky in his face, and of him John inquired when it will be possible for him to cross over the dike to Grand Bey. He has still a half-hour to wait before he can stand by the tomb of his favorite French author. It is enough time for another turn around the ramparts.

The day is dying—it is nearly dead, and the silver light of the moon is on the water, when John, having looked everywhere else around him, quite naturally drops his eyes straight down along the great granite blocks of the pier, and is shocked to find them resting upon Annette. Yes, there she is, her lips parted, smiling timidly up at him; one hand against the slimy green seaweed that clings to the wall, and the other swinging a small paper parcel. Of course, she is not clad in her tinsel and tights, only in a shabby blue dress; but the yellow hair is there, and John knows her by it. He can discern a mild appeal in her eyes: she looks as though she would speak to him: she has held her pretty little head in that strained upward position so long—indeed, Heaven only knows how long—that he can see her swallowing back what his heart tells him is a sob—and yet, what does he do?

"Be careful!" he calls to her in a gracious tone: "you may fall in. Those stones look slippery."

And the next instant he is walking rapidly away toward the beach.

When John descends the paved roadway leading from the main gate the last afterglow of sunset has faded from the sky, and the moon is shining full upon the sea. He crosses the sea wall to Grand-Bey. The little island looks rather forbidding as it lies in the shadow, sloping gently up from the still water to where it is crowned by the ragged ruins of the ancient chateau. The path, faintly defined in the grass and stones, leads past these ruins, then down a flight of stone steps, and suddenly before John's eyes the tomb appears, surrounded by its iron railing, through which gleams the waste of sea lighted up by the moon.

He is instantly sure there is nowhere another such grave as this. Perched upon the edge of the island, here lofty and steep, where the salt spray can bathe it when the waves run high, it is so lonely, so simple, so grand. It is only a small cylindrical cross carved from a granite block, and it rests upon the tomb, which is enclosed by a rusted iron fence, the four corner posts being capped by iron pine cones. John at once begins a minute inspection of the grave. He has come to St. Malo for this express purpose, you will remember. So he walks slowly around it, and in so doing his eye has to fall upon the sea, tranquilly surging and silvered over with the light of the moon. When he is presently conscious of this diversion he stubbornly turns to the grave again and tries to find an inscription upon the tablet. There is none visible. He then plucks a dead crisp flower from the mutilated wreath of immortelles that some friend or pilgrim like himself has long ago hung around the shaft of the cross. He places this flower in his notebook and seats himself on the granite rock with his limbs hanging over the edge.

"What," he deliberately says aloud, "is the matter with me?"

What, indeed? John Crinoline is something of a writer. As a versifier he is undoubtedly very clever, and it is mainly due to his belief that the unfortunate name he possesses will always operate against his literary success that he is so sensitive on that point. His friends lament that this scribbling talent of his is not in the humorous line, where his name would really be an aid to him. He has said with a mournful smile: "Fancy an ode on the immortality of the soul by John Crinoline." It has been useless to persuade him to adopt a nom de plume. He has already said: "Suppose my work should succeed in that way—think of the fun there would be when I revealed myself as J. Crinoline."

So he has come here prepared to write, believing the scene should put him in a writing mood. Hence he has had the forethought to bring a candle with him in order that he may have light if necessary to jot down the creations of his fancy. Sitting thus on a desolate island by the picturesque grave of a great man, with the waves softly lapping on the sands below, and the harvest moon above shedding her ghostly light on the sea, certainly such a situation ought to provoke a first-class poem. John is right in his premises. But he can not center his thoughts to-night, not, at least, on Chateaubriand. When he looks up at the moon or down at its radiance in the water, straightway his brain is ungovernable and he must think of Annette. Such is the weakness of human flesh—the pride of intellect. John, striving to lift himself up into the realm of fancy, must tumble back to the common place consideration of an unknown child with yellow hair.

"Hang it!" he says indignantly. "What is the matter with me to-night."

Isn't a dead genius of more consequence to him than a live acrobat? Apparently not. He springs to his feet, thrusts the note-book in his pocket, flings the candle over the cliff, and turns to go, looking wistfully at the tomb. It is so peaceful, lying there with the waves sparkling up at it. He is loth to go, but he acknowledges to the impulse; he feels that the sympathy for the living is stronger upon him to-night than his interest in the dead, even Chateaubriand. The strains of music that are now and then wafted to his ears from the Casino sound very enticing. He is nervous; he wants to be where there is life and dancing. So he turns from the tomb and moves away.

As he does so his eyes rest suddenly on a childish form standing upon the top of the flight of stone steps. The moonlight is full upon her and he sees it is Annette. He is not much surprised; she has been in his thoughts all day, but he is frightful at sight of her. It looks so theatrical for her to appear before him in this fantastic style. He wonders how long she has been standing up there like a ghost, gazing down upon him. Small wonder, however, that his brain was intractable. Before he can act she has tripped down the steps and fearlessly approached him.

"Whose grave is that?" she asks in a low, awe-struck voice.

"Chateaubriand's."

"A man?"

"Yes."

"Did you love him?"

"I never saw him."

"Why do you stay here so long, then?" How can he answer the child? He does not try, but follows the Socratic method.

"Why are you here?"

"Oh," she says, ingenuously, "I didn't know there was a man buried up there. I just followed you."

"Why?"

He asks it so coldly, almost angrily, that her confidence in him and in herself is plainly weakened. She stands upon one foot, twisting her little body uneasily about.

"I thought because you caught me you'd help me."

Her voice trembles, the paper parcel slips from her fingers, he can see her little chin working convulsively, and then she drops on the granite rock and hides her face in her hands.

John is touched. He kneels, and, taking one of her willing hands in his, says, soothingly:

"How could I help you?"

She looks at him very earnestly, as he can see with the moonlight on her face, and eagerly tells him:

"Why, please don't let them get me again."

"Let whom? That ugly man and the woman on horseback?"

"Yes."

"Who are they?"

"Madame de Leonelle et Monsieur Georges Picot—that is what they tell the people they are; but she's my aunt, and I don't know who he is, only I hate him."

John smiles. She looks angelic with the moonbeams playing in her yellow hair; but she can hate.

"Are they very cross to you?"

"Awful. Just look what he did to me to-day for falling off the wire. She bares her left arm that he may see a thick red welt crossing the flesh above the elbow.

"The brute!" cries John angrily. Annette is evidently delighted to hear him say so.

"That's nothing," she boastingly says, "to the cut she gave me with her riding-whip. I ran away then, too, but it was at Jersey, St. Heliers, and I couldn't get off the island; so they caught me."

"Where's your mother, Annette?"

"She's dead."

"Your father?"

"He's dead, too."

"Were they Americans?"

"Mamma wasn't. She used to live at Orleans: but papa painted pictures in Paris, and when he died we were awful poor. Was you ever in Paris? Was you ever in the Rue Mazet? Oh, it was a very funny little street. Papa used to take me and mamma to St. Cloud and the Bois de Boulogne on Sundays. That was the best fun of all. Mamma teased papa about his French and made him say 'eueilleuse' and 'feullet,' and words like that, and then papa teased mamma and made her try to say things in English like 'three hundred and thirty-three thousand chestnuts,' and then she called him a 'Yahn-kee.'"

John, now reclining upon the rock with his head resting in his right hand, looks calmly up at her, quite forgetful of the grave of the great man behind him. There is a faint French accent in Annette's talk that is charming. She sits cross-legged, with her face turned full toward him and sideways to the moon. At times a strain of music floats across the water, and Annette always pauses to listen.

"Then your mother died, too," says John, abruptly.

"Yes," she repeats, in a low tone; "then she died, too."

"And then?"—

"Then my aunt came and took me away to Poissy. It was awful nice at first. I used to go out in a boat on the river all by myself and get on the island and play Paul and Virginia."

"Who played Paul?"

I didn't have any; he wanted to, but I wouldn't let him." She emphasizes the personal pronoun with great disdain.

"Who is 'he?'

"Why, the boy who was walking the other wire—my cousin. I hate him!"

And yet she has silky yellow hair and big blue eyes. But then, John reflects, the poor little thing has lived with very hateful people; it is really no wonder she can hate.

"You then learned to walk the wire?"

"Yes, but it was an awful long time before I could. I was afraid. We walked all the way to Rouen, and there she met him, and after that we had a horse—that one she was on. Then we went to Havre, and Trouville, and Caen, and Granville, and Jersey, and here."

John lies silently gazing at her.

"Now, you tell me all about yourself."

He laughs.

"I haven't had half so many adventures as you. I'm only an idler."

"Don't you ever work?"

"Oh, yes, sometimes. When I'm home in America I write things for newspapers and magazines; but I don't have to."

"You must have loads of money!"

He feels uncomfortable at this remark.

"No, not 'loads.' I have enough to live on."

"I wish I had some."

"What would you do?"

"I'd go to the Conservatoire of Musique. Oh, I love music!"

John lowers his eyes from her face and looks off towards a solitary light on shore. He is quite remarkable in this respect—it takes him so long to make up his mind. Annette, seeing him so thoughtful and silent, is fearful of disturbing him, and quietly listens to the splash of the waves and the bursts of melody that come fitfully from the Casino. John ponders so long, however, that the moon gets directly overhead and Annette begins to feel most lonely and disconsolate. Besides, this grave in front of her is a very cheerless object to stare at. Every time her eye rests upon the granite cross her young flesh creeps, and then the chilly air from the sea pierces her thin clothing and she shivers. Finally Annette can endure it no longer.

"Are you asleep?" she asks.

He starts up suddenly and looks at her—then at the moon, then hastily at his watch. It is now nearer nine than eight o'clock. Perhaps the gendarme was mistaken.

"Come," he says anxiously, "we must go."

"Oh!" she pleads on her knees, "you won't take me back to them, will you?"

"No, no—you shall go with me. Come." He hurries her up the steps, past the ruins of the chateau and down the grassy slope. But before they have gone half-way to the bottom he sees that the gendarme was not mistaken. There is no dike in view. Where it stretched toward the beach there is now only an expanse of white-capped water dancing merrily in the moonlight. Indeed, no beach is visible, either. The waves are leaping up against the rocks, and even the great ramparts of St. Malo.

John is very much disgusted with himself. Why did he lie there dreaming himself and this poor child into such a predicament. He turns to her and says, penitently:

"I'm sorry, Annette, but we'll have to spend the night here. The [illegible] in."

"I don't care, I'm glad."

John does care, but he feels resigned to see her so happy, and hand in hand they retrace their way toward the tomb. Passing the gloomy ruins Annette clings to his arm, and says, with a shudder:

"I thought that you'd gone and I was going to hide in that door, but it was so awful dark it scared me."

There is a bed of soft, dried grass just beyond, and here John halts. He takes off his light overcoat and hands it to her. She draws back, but he casts it on the grass and says in a quiet tone: "I want you to wrap this around you and and lie down. You must try to sleep, Annette, for as soon as the tide goes out again we will leave for England."

She clasps her hands before her, and could cry out from excess of gratitude. But she only smiles joyfully and the moonlight glistens on her white teeth.

"Are you afraid?" he asks.

"You won't go away?"

"No, no."

She submissively loses herself in the arms of the great coat and cuddles upon the grass.

Now he has determined what he shall do, and promised her, he feels relieved. Nevertheless, he realizes how serious the affair is—he is abducting a child, one, too, who is unquestionably of considerable pecuniary value to her relatives. He smiles stubbornly, and lights a cigarette, seating himself under the moon on the top stone step, where he can turn a shoulder and gaze upon Annette, or look straight ahead upon the sea, and let his eyes in passing rest upon the tomb. It may be sacrilegious, but there is now something so absurd to John in the idea of his brooding over the grave of Chateaubriand that he chuckles. Perhaps this powerful harvest moon has turned his head as well as the tide.

At any rate, Chateaubriand has no place in his thoughts now. He is trying to decide whether he had better run the risk of taking the morning's steamer from St. Malo to Jersey, or take the train to Calais direct. The more he thinks about it the more serious the chances of discovery on the Jersey boat appear to him, and the possibility of losing Annette is very unpleasant. Indeed, the mere idea so alarms him that he turns to look at her more than once, and each time his glance encounters a pair of eyes shining up at him from the grass out of the folds of his overcoat. Annette is more anxious than he. Her eyes close quickly when they meet his, and she feigns to sleep, but her yellow head never swerves from the angle at which she has adjusted it to watch him.

So the moon floats on until the grave is in shadow. The tide follows the moon and the waves the tide. John shivers a little, but is wide awake, and he knows the bright blue eyes are peering furtively at him from the grass.

* * * * * * *

This all happened in the summer-time of 1878. It truly happened, for John Crinoline has told it to me. Of course he told it in much fewer words. When he had gone thus far in his story I said to him:

"Well!"

"Well," said he, "I have been trying to answer your question. This is the reason why I sail on the Etruria next Saturday."

"Be plainer."

"I am going over to bring Annette away from school."

"What are you going to do with her?"

He looked me steadily in the face, and I am sure I never gazed on an honester, manlier one than his.

"Do you really think, old fellow," he said, she'll object to my name? "I've a mind to change it."—Melville Phillips, in Philadelphia Press.

SHY CHILDREN.

They Should Be Strengthened to Bear Their Misfortune and to Overcome It.

Pity the sufferings of shy children; stand between these little ones and the people who unthinkingly inflict pain upon these tender souls. Why outrage a child's faith in nature, human and material, if he has such faith, or prevent his acquiring it, by taking advantage of his shyness and want of self-confidence? Why fill him with distrust, with fear, with terror? Why convert the world that should be beautiful to him, into one that is to be dreaded? If the person who does these things is anything short of a brute, he is guilty of a serious offense that no carelessness can excuse.

Courage and confidence should be stimulated in a child who is shy. He should be taught to believe that his extreme disgust is ill-founded, by shewing him the source of his error. A happy life will then be opened to him, where all before was desolate. But to intensify this shyness is an easy matter, and many children have been made to suffer the pangs of a miserable existence through scaring, terrifying and various impositions upon their weakness. If a child is bashed at the presence of a stranger, confidence in himself and the stranger also can be awakened by treating the child with considerate regard for his feelings and by a gentle pressure behind him that shall force him to overcome them. But to expose the infirmity and laugh at it in ridicule, increase the pain and make the cure all the more difficult, so that the sufferer must undergo additional pains when he grows up and must overcome them the best he may in his unavoidable contact with the world.

What a gratifying thing it must be to scare a child—to fill his heart with hobgoblins, to people the darkness with monsters, to manufacture surroundings that incessantly menace harm. This would be amusement to the savage who burns his captives at the stake, but to the person living in this nineteenth century of civilization it should be as repulsive as savagery itself. How pleasing an act it must be to frighten a child to death, as is now and then done, or to scare the little one till he stands transfixed with terror and trembling in agony.

Strengthen shy children to bear their misfortune and to overcome it; do not subject them to ridicule or fear. They can be led out of the manifold unhappiness arising from shyness, by strengthening each cautious step until familiarity makes it permanent; and so, a little at a time, they can be advanced in confidence and courage until they dare to look about them without fear of failure or harm. The impressions of childhood are often almost ineradicable; people should take care, then, that those impressions shall be true, hopeful, giving self-reliance and courage to those who need it. There can be assault and battery against the feelings as well as against the body, and the former offense is more enduring and more painful than the latter. It is just as inalienable a right that one's feelings shall not be outraged as that his bodily liberty shall not be abridged, and the shy child demands immunity and protection from those who outrage this right by making him a victim of his shyness.—Good Housekeeping.

NURSERY FOR BIRDS.

A New Industry Which Has Been Recently Established in New York.

A notice posted in the window of an up-town bird-store recently attracted the attention of a reporter: "Birds Boarded by the Week or Month."

He stepped in to investigate. The person in charge of the establishment explained that a regular branch of the business consisted in caring for song birds and other feathered pets belonging to families who had arranged to pass the summer months out of town. Hundreds of birds of all sizes, colors and species made the place a wilderness of discord as they screamed, chattered, warbled or sung, all in different keys. About fifty of the prisoners were boarders, the others were offered for sale.

"Before July passes by," said the attendant, "we shall have a hundred birds boarding here, for then almost everybody who can afford it will have made arrangements to go the country, if not to Europe. When they go away they leave their dogs in charge of the coachman, except the toy dogs, which are taken along when possible. The cat is left behind to shift for himself, but the song bird is either put out to board or loaned to some friend who will be sure to care for it kindly."

"Are birds expensive boarders?"

"We can make money by boarding canaries and finches at fifteen cents per week if we have a good many customers. We charge fifty cents for mocking birds, which are choice in their food, and the same sum for parrots. Say we have sixty regular customers the season round, and average the pay at thirty cents each, we have eighteen dollars per week coming in, and twelve dollars of this is clear profit. But our customers, who are usually wealthy ladies, often insist on paying tenfold the amount of our bill. The owner of this mocking-bird gave me twenty dollars for caring for it during the next two months."

A carriage had just rolled up to the door, and a young lady in costly garb alighted, attended by a man servant in livery. She bore in her hand a gilded cage. "I have brought you this bad boy again," she said, lightly, "and if any thing goes wrong with him, write me at once to this address." When birds are removed from the richly-furnished boudoirs of their fair owners to a noisy store they become at first moody, and in some instances even decline to take food, but gradually they accept the situation and appear to like the company.—N. Y. Mail and Express.

ANTLERS OF DEER.

Their Annual Growth One of the Most Wonderful Phenomena in Nature.

The antlers of a deer are occasionally; though very erroneously, called horns, from which they differ essentially in every respect except that of growing from the head of the animal which produces them. True horns, as seen on oxen, are never shed; they are formed of horny or animal material capable of being softened by heat, and usually semi-transparent. Antlers, on the contrary, are but temporary; they grow annually, being shed every year. In place of consisting of horn, they are formed of most solid bone, which grows from the forehead. Their rapid growth, which only takes a few weeks in the year, is due to the blood vessels in the velvety skin covering the budding antlers, bringing the bony material and depositing it in the form of an antler. When this is fully formed the velvety skin dries up, and the hard, firm, solid antler, with which the stag can attack others or defend itself, is left, the dried skins coming off in long strips, which may often be seen on the deer in the Zoological Gardens. At the end of the season the base of the antler, where it springs from the bone of the forehead, is absorbed and the antler falls, leaving a raw place, which quickly skins over, and in due time another pair of antlers—larger and with more points than those of the preceding year—take their place. With the exception of the reindeer, the females are destitute of antlers. There are many distinct families of deer. Some, like the red deer, having cylindrical horns, with sharp points, capable of inflicting the most fatal injuries; others, like the fallow deer, have the antlers flattened out into broad plates.

Stags are gregarious, a herd consisting of one male and several females, for whose possession the males fight in the most furious manner. Sometimes in their violent rushes against each other the antlers become so inextricably interlocked that they can not free themselves from one another, in which case a slow and painful death by starvation is the fate of both combatants. There are few museums that do not contain specimens of the skulls of animals that have perished by this singular accident.—London Queen.

THE ROADRUNNERS.

Shrewd Birds Which Destroy Rattlesnakes in a Most Methodical Manner.

These birds have a most remarkable habit, so remarkable that for many years I was extremely skeptical about it, never being able to find any one who had actually seen the performance, but I was fortunate this winter in conversing with two persons who can testify to the truth of the story that is to be found in at least one work on birds. It appears that the roadrunner has a strong and decided antipathy to the rattlesnake, upon what grounds it is difficult to tell—probably the snake preys upon the birds, old and young. However, the birds actually destroy the snake in a most methodical fashion, and in a way that shows that something more than mere instinct has been brought into play.

When a rattler is discovered asleep in the sun the birds are very careful not to disturb it, and proceed with great diligence to collect the detached leaves of the prickly pear, in which their nest is often built. These they place in an irregular circle about the sleeping reptile, piling them up higher and higher, until finally the snake is in the center of a corral of the spine-covered leaves. Now the latter is awakened by a peck from the bird, and strikes and is wounded by the spines. This enrages it, and every move adds to its torture, until finally it is completely impaled by the horrible weapons that cover the leaves and either dies from this cause or falls a ready victim to the powerful bill of the roadrunners. One of my informants stated that he watched the operations of a pair of these birds for several hours, during which time they hauled the heavy leaves a considerable distance to pile them about their enemy. My other informant had never seen the birds at work, but in Arizona had frequently found the prickly pear corrals, in the center of which was the skeleton of the rattlesnake. Instinct prompts the attack upon the snake, but it is intelligence that dictates to the bird that the prickly pear leaves bear spines that will be fatal to the reptile.—Los Angeles Cor. San Francisco Call.

Texas has a new industry. The Clear Creek Crab-Canning Company has been organized in Galveston County, and is doing a big business in catching and canning crabs. The shells are removed entire except the claws, ground in a mill, and shipped to France, where they are manufactured into a dentifrice. The oil that arises on the vats where the crabs are boiled is used in making soap, and is said to be equal to cocoanut oil for this purpose. The crabs themselves are packed in five-gallon cans, and are reckoned good.

HOME AND FARM.

—Corn Oysters: Six ears of boiled corn, cut from the cob and seasoned with salt and pepper, mix with it the yolks of three eggs, well beaten, and one and a half tablespoonfuls of flour, which the whites to a stiff froth and add last, fry in hot butter, one spoonful at a time.—Philadelphia Call.

—Another thing mothers, is saffron tea for baby. It is the very best in fever, bowel trouble or scarlet fever that there can be. It was the dear old grandma's cure, and I think they had better success than most of us nowadays. Too many drugs are used now.—Farm and Fireside.

—Fires resulting from burning oil are inextinguishable with water, but may readily be smothered by throwing flour upon the burning oil. If clothing is set on fire by spilling oil, or by the bursting of a lamp, a handful of flour thrown on immediately may be the means of quenching the flames, and thus saving life.—Montreal Witness.

—A correspondent of the Ohio Farmer recommends half a pint of common table salt for bloat in cattle. Put a round stick in the cow's mouth, throw the salt as far down the throat as you can, and she will swallow it. This farmer says he has cured several cases of clover bloat in a short time in this manner.

—Cheese omelet, a supper or lunch dish: Butter and cut in quarters a sufficient number of slices of bread to line a medium sized pudding dish. Sprinkle over small pieces of stale or dry cheese. Another layer of bread, then cheese, and so on until the dish is full. Make a custard of one pint of milk, two eggs and a little salt. Pour over the bread and cheese. Bake one-half hour in a quick oven.—Good Housekeeping.

—Hominy: Soak a cup of small hominy for two hours in enough cold water to cover it, drain; put over the fire in a farina kettle, with a quart of warm water slightly salted, and cook for half an hour after it reaches the boil. If it has not soaked up all the water, pour it off and supply the place with a cup of warm milk; bring it to a boil and serve. Eat with sugar and cream.—Exchange.

If by letting a horse stand in the stable one day without exercise you injure him, how much more are horses injured which are compelled to stand in narrow stalls for a week at a time without any liberty whatever? Yet there are plenty of farmers who, when they are not using their horses, will keep them imprisoned for days or weeks at a time, and then wonder why they have trouble in keeping them in good condition.—Western Rural.

—An Ohio amateur gooseberry grower succeeds in growing very fine fruit, both in size and quality, on a cool, clay soil, keeping the plants open in the center by pruning. When they start into growth in the spring, he immediately disbuds, to prevent them from becoming too dense, and thus admits a free circulation of air. He mulches heavily during the summer. With this treatment he is little troubled with mildew.—Cleveland Leader.

TENDER STEAK.

Valuable Recipes for Young Housekeepers and Dissatisfied Boarders.

You want to know how to make steak tender, do you, Eulalie? Well, we are full of a ripe, golden experience on steak. If there's any one in all this wide, weeping world who has a full and perfect knowledge of steak, we are that person. We nearly choked to death on steak once, Eulalie. But hearken to the sweet, mellifluous piping of one gentle oboe. If you are keeping house and want to make your steak tender buy a big seven-barreled revolver. Go around to the butcher's and present the executive end of the gun at his head. Then address him in some such honeyed words as these:

"You miserable, swindling, bone chopping scoundrel, if you send me more such steak as that stuff you sent me yesterday morning, I'll blow you into the middle of Jersey City!"

That'll settle him, Eulalie. When he sees that your soft, womanly heart is not to be trifled with, he'll weaken, and send around the porterhouse that you pay for.

But if you are boarding, Eulalie, and want to make the steak tender, you must pursue a very different plan. You can not deal with the butcher, if you are boarding, so you must pay your attentions directly to the steak. When the steak is placed on the table before you, take it up gently on your fork and go up to your room with it. Place it on the plate of your sewing-machine, in the spot where you put your sewing. Then sit down firmly in a chair, Eulalie, and put your feet on the pedals of the machine. When you have done this, begin to operate the pedals. Operate as if the house was on fire. Keep it up for about two hours. See that you have a good stout needle in the machine, otherwise it might break off in the steak.

After you have kept this up for the time mentioned, you will find that you can cut the boarding-house steak quite easily with a steam circular-saw.—Puck.

WONDERS OF AN EGG.

A Question Which, Despite All Scientific Researches, Remains Unsolved.

Mr. Matthieu Williams, in one of his lectures, says: "Every one who eats his matutinal egg eats a sermon and a miracle. Inside of that smooth, symmetrical, beautiful shell lurks a question which has been the Troy town for all the philosophers and scientists since Adam. Armed with the engines of war—the microscope, the scales, the offensive weapons of chemistry and reason—they have probed, and weighed, and experimented, and still the question is unsolved, the citadel unsacked. Prof. Bokorny can tell you that albumen is composed of so many molecules of carbon and nitrogen and hydrogen, and can persuade you of the difference between active and passive albumen, and can show by wonderfully delicate experiments what the aldehydes have to do in the separation of gold from his complicated solutions; but he can't tell who one egg comes a 'little red hen,' and from another a bantam. You leave your little silver spoon an hour in your egg-cup, and it is coated with a compound of sulphur. Why is that sulphur there? Wonderful, that evolution should provide for the bones of the future hen! There is phosphorus also in that little microcism; and the oxygen of the air, passing through the shell, unites with it, and the acid dissolves the shell, thus making good strong bones for the chick, and at the same time thinning the prison walls. Chemists know a good deal now about albumen; and, if they can not tell us why life differentiates itself therein and thereby, they can tell you how not to spoil your breakfast."—Boston Budget.

—At St. John, N. B., one day recently, the rubber covering of an electric-light wire entering a store became worn through, and the wire charged with electricity the front of the store and many articles exposed in the windows. A ham of meat was charged with the current to such an extent that no person dared to move it. The fluid also burned a stick from which goods were suspended and a dog which attempted to enter the store received such a shock and set up such a howl of agony that hundreds of persons were attracted to the spot.

A HARD LESSON.

A Composition Illustrating the Beauties of English Pronunciation.

The following composition of words in common use will afford much entertainment if read aloud by several, as a test of ability to read it correctly. Hardly one in a hundred can get through it successfully without previous study.

Comely Diana had a voice like a calliope, yet, although it was not enervated by laryngitis, she was not a virago. She wore a stomacher set with jewels, that gave an interesting idea of her father's finances. There was no squalor in their vicinage. She sought to inveigle her charity coadjutor into a hymeneal association without tedious delay. She sent him her miniature, a jessamine flower and an invitation to dinner of anchovies. He was a coadjutant in the church. He had a cadaver-like complexion, and in a joust he had been houghed. Taking some almonds as a bridal gift, he mounted a dromedary with the epizootic, and hastened without digression, along Pall Mall. The guests were sitting on a divan, with no evidence of evil. The diocesan was waiting, having finished an ablutionary service. When suddenly, above the clangor of the wedding bells, was heard a maniacal shriek. The groom had pierced his carotid arteries with a carbine on hearing that a deficit in his church collections had been discovered. He was cremated.—Boston Transcript.

Serviceable Rag Door-Mats.

In these days of cheap carpets one often wonders what to do with the old clothes we used to make rag carpets out of. I have found a way to make use of "men's old cassimere clothes." Make a large crochet needle out of green hickory, then cut the cloth in narrow stripes and sew it together as for carpet rags—the light and dark separately. Commence with the dark, knit a chain a quarter of a yard long, throw the cloth over the needle and knit around the chain with a plain stitch widening at each corner until the rug is three-quarters of a yard long. Then join the light cloth, and knit two rows, then two of dark, two of light, and finish with two of the dark. If you will follow these directions you have a very serviceable door mat that will not easily kick up.—Mrs. R. W. Williams, in Rural New Yorker.

—"Please, sir, will you buy a ticket for the Cedar Street Church strawberry festival? They're only twenty-five cents," said a little mite of a girl to a gentleman sitting on the piazza of a Swan street boarding-house yesterday afternoon, tendering him a square of yellow pasteboard as she spoke. "I'm sorry, but I'm going out of town and will not be able to attend," replied the good-natured man, desirous of avoiding a point-blank refusal. "I have some ten-cent tickets for those who can't attend," promptly responded the quick-witted solicitor. She went out of the gate a dime richer.—Buffalo Courier.

We accidently overheard the following dialogue on the street yesterday.

Jones. Smith, why don't you stop that disgusting hawking and spitting?

Smith. How can I? You know I am a martyr to catarrh.

J. Do as I did. I had the disease in its worst form but I am well now.

S. What did you do for it?

J. I used Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It cured me and it will cure you.

S. I've heard of it, and by Jove I'll try it.

J. Do so. You'll find it at all the drug stores in town.

FEVER and AGUE
Or CHILLS and FEVER,
AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of KENT'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient. USE no other pill.

ACCIDENT TO A CIRCUS.

Forepaugh's Train Goes Over an Embankment.

Killing Twenty-five Valuable Horses—Two Attaches Killed and Several Wounded.

PORTLAND, ME., July 16.—Information is received here of a fatal accident to Forepaugh's circus train on the Maine Central Railroad at Vassalboro, some fifty miles north of here. The storm having interfered with the wires, particulars are meager. The train, consisting of some twenty cars, was en route for this city, and was running at a lively rate of speed when the cars jumped the track, due to a defective rail, and plunged down the fifty-foot embankment toward the Kennebec river. Three of the cars contained animals, and there was a passenger caboose containing a number of employes. The cars rolled over and over several times, and were smashed into splinters. Twenty-five valuable trick horses were killed outright and a number of others badly injured, a number of which will have to be killed. The caboose was occupied by ten men, several of whom escaped by jumping when the car left the track, being saved from injury by the soft earth. The others were carried down the bank and were caught in the wreck. Their companions extricated several badly if not fatally injured. Two men, whose names are not given, are buried beneath the wreck in the river, and were doubtless killed instantly. A wrecking train has left for the scene.

A Young Lady Charged With Firing a House While Angered at a Young Man's Marriage.

LAKE BENTON, MINN., July 16.—Last night the houses of W. W. Townsend and his son, L. M. Townsend, were burned. To-day Miss Ida Childs was arrested, charged with having fired the buildings. Miss Childs had been living with the family for years past, and she claims to have been married to young Townsend three years ago, his father, who was a justice, performing the ceremony. The marriage has been kept a secret on account of her holding a claim. Young Townsend was married to Miss Jennie Johnson last Saturday, and the Townsends claim that Miss Childs burned the property for revenge. The barn and granary were also set on fire, but were saved. The examination before Justice McArthur is set for Saturday, when startling disclosures are expected.

Socialists Giving Trouble.

LONDON, July 16.—A revival of the Socialistic troubles in London is threatened. The police have summoned a number of prominent Socialists to answer at trial on Saturday for obstructing the streets last Sunday, and have given warning that future offenders against the peace and quiet of the city will be promptly arrested. The Socialist League issued an address last night which is an inflammatory appeal to the masses, urging them to maintain free speech against the tyranny of the police at all hazards.

Poisoned by the Dozens.

CHARLESTON, ILL., July 16.—Seventy-five leading ladies held a picnic yesterday. The refreshments served were ice-cream, lemon-sherbet and watermelon. In the evening almost every one was taken violently ill, with symptoms of poisoning. Medical skill was put to work, and no fatal consequences are apprehended. There are no means of ascertaining where the hidden poison lay, but it is believed to have been in the lemon-sherbet. Some of the sherbet has been preserved for examination. No blame is attached to any one.

Riddled With Bullets.

GARDEN CITY, KAN., July 16.—One of the murderers of Davis, the man found floating in Arkansas river with a bullet-hole in his head, was riddled with bullets by pursuing party at Frisco, about sixty miles southwest of Garden City, this morning. He had concealed himself in a livery-stable of that town, and was armed with a gun. The posse surrounded the stable and commanded the murderer to surrender. He commenced firing, and was instantly killed by a volley of bullets.

Terrible Accident in a Shaft.

NEW YORK, July 16.—Five men in an iron bucket, being lowered by windlass to their work down one of the shafts of the new aqueduct, this evening, were set on fire by the explosion of the gasoline lamp carried by one of them, and, frantic with pain, they all leaped from the bucket and fell to the foot of the shaft, one hundred feet below, receiving terrible injuries, besides their burns.

Voice from the Grave to Save a Brother.

BOSTON, July 16.—In the trial of Timothy Coffey for manslaughter, in causing the death of John Cullen, the defense to-day introduced a remarkable autograph confession of John Coffey, the deceased brother of the defendant, avowing that the writer had killed Cullen, and that Timothy was wholly innocent. John says that he used his knife in self-defense.

A Murderer Swung Off.

WOODSTOCK, ILL., July 16.—Jas. Dacey, the murderer of Alderman Michael Gaynor, of Chicago, was hanged here at 12:35 to-day. He made no speech and was moderately composed, though during the morning he screamed almost continuously, and had his limbs bound to prevent his making an assault on any of his attendants.

Smallpox.

CHICAGO, July 16.—Fourteen cases of smallpox at Bolan, Ill. The disease was brought there by a German emigrant. There has been one death.

A New Enemy to the Potato.

CHICAGO, July 16.—A special from Freeport, Ill., says: Farmers state that the potatoes are being destroyed by a big black bug that is even more dangerous and destructive than the common striped bug. They are about a quarter of an inch long, and have done considerable damage.

Alleged Embezzling Postmaster.

KANSAS CITY, MO., July 16.—E. N. Wyatt, who for nine months has been postmaster at Austin, Cass County, Mo., was held to await the action of the grand jury to-day by United States Commissioner Perkins on a charge of embezzling $439. Bail in the sum of $1,000 was given.

Two Children Drowned.

BAY CITY, MICH., July 16.—Two boys, Charles Nelty, aged eleven, and James Wells, aged nine, were playing on broomsticks at Eddy's mill last evening. Nelty fell into the river. Wells went to his rescue, and attempting to save his companion was dragged off the broomstick, and both sank together in sixteen feet of water.

Runaway Accident.

GALESBURG, ILL., July 16.—While Mr. and Mrs. Sewall Clay, who live several miles west of here, were out riding, their horses ran away, throwing them out, killing Mr. Clay and seriously injuring his wife.

Murdered for Picking Berries.

SCRANTON, PA., July 16.—Samuel Holcomb and his son-in-law were picking berries on the premises of Judson Tiffany, near Kingsley's. Tiffany ordered them off the place. They started, but thinking they were not going fast enough, Tiffany struck Holcomb twice in the face. The latter turned to defend himself when the former shot him dead. After being disarmed by the son-in-law, Tiffany went home, and soon after became unconscious. His neighbors think he took poison.

Hung Himself.

OLNEY, ILL., July 16.—John Handlay, a prisoner brought from Clay County, charged with murder and arson, hung himself in jail.

TOOK A TUMBLE

A Building Half a Century Old Gives Way, Burying Several Men Beneath the Ruins.

NEW YORK, July 18.—Shortly after 9 o'clock this evening the three-story building, No. [illegible] Tenth street, occupied as a flour store by [illegible], suddenly caved in, causing great excitement in the neighborhood, it being feared that several persons had perished in the ruins. The police of the Fourth Precinct, assisted by a number of citizens, succeeded in extricating from the debris Richard Pugh, aged forty-five, Wm. Evans, aged thirty-two, and Mathias Bansahas, twenty-three. All were severely bruised about the head and body, and were removed to the Chambers Street Hospital. The accident is supposed to have been caused by the overloading of the upper floors of the building with flour. The building was erected fifty years ago.

After Thirty-Two Years.

[illegible], ME., July 18.—A romance in real life culminated in Bingham the past week. Thirty-two years ago Abram O. Savage, a young man, became engaged to Miss Flavilla Chadborne. Savage went to Nevada, neglected writing to his affianced, and she, thinking him lost to her, subsequently married Wm. Bassett. Their wedded life ran smoothly for a time, but at length he went to California. Unpleasant rumors of his conduct reached his wife, and investigation proving their truth, a separation and division of property were agreed upon. Mrs. Bassett returned to Bingham, and a friend of Savage wrote the latter, incidentally mentioning the misfortunes of his old love. Savage, who had become a millionaire, at once started East, saw Mrs. Bassett, renewed his offer of marriage, and after thirty-two years of waiting the early engagement was at once terminated by a quiet wedding.

Trouble in a Post-Office.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., July 18.—Two letter-carriers and three clerks in the Springfield postoffice, walked out yesterday without giving Postmaster Clendennin any notice. The reason for this abrupt action was a refusal on the part of Mr. Clendennin to promise to retain them in their position for a period of six weeks, and allow them two weeks' vacation, which they are entitled to. Their places were promptly filled with Democrats. The superintendent of carriers, whose successor was appointed a few days ago, but whose salary was to run to August 1, refused to instruct his successor, and he was discharged.

Story of the Sea.

SACO, ME., July 18.—The crew of the schooner, Lady Thorne, of Cape Porpoise, Captain G. W. Wakefield, recently picked up off Rockland a bottle containing a ragged slip of paper, which read as follows: "Run into by ocean steamer in mid-Atlantic, March 10. We will sink in a few minutes. Our bark sailed from London 10th February. We have no hope. Please publish this in newspaper." On the other side could be read the words, "Hillevankin, Captain Linsey," and the words, "I am mate." The writing is very poor and bears evidence of great haste and nervousness.

Tea for Europe via America.

OMAHA, July 18.—The first train of eighty car-loads of tea bound from Japan to Europe, passed through Omaha Friday, having made better than passenger time on the run from San Francisco to this city. A contest is taking place to determine whether tea can be shipped from China and Japan to Europe quicker by the American overland route than by the Suez Canal.

Imprisoned for Another's Crime.

COLUMBUS, O., July 18.—A few years ago Alfred Peel, of Franklin County, O., was sent to the penitentiary for the murder of Kate Grimes, a paramour. During his confinement Georgie Lee, a girl whom he had deserted, drowned herself. It has since been ascertained that Georgie Lee confessed the murder, and having testified against Peel to screen herself. Peel has been liberated.

Offered to Marry Victoria.

LONDON, July 18.—James Junior recently wrote an offer of marriage to Queen Victoria. He commenced his letter, "My beloved Victoria," and signed it, "Your loving husband." He sent the epistle to Windsor Castle, and called there to obtain the Queen's answer. He was taken into custody, examined and found mentally wanting, and was yesterday sent to a lunatic asylum.

English Election Resume.

LONDON, July 18.—The returns received up to noon yesterday cover 663 seats, leaving only 7 unreported, exclusive of Speaker Peel. The distribution is as follows: Conservatives, 318; Unionist Liberals, 74; Gladstonites, 187; Nationalists, 83—a Unionist muster of 392 ranked against 270 Home Rulers. Thus far there is a majority of 122 against Mr. Gladstone on his Irish policy.

Excursionists in the Water.

NEW YORK, July 18.—Twenty-five excursionists were thrown into the water from a gang plank in making a landing at Rockaway Beach. They were all rescued. The bravery of a man named John O'Toole is commendable. He rescued no less than seven persons, mostly women and children.

Another Banker Short $68,000.

PEORIA, ILL., July 18.—Harlan P. Tracy, the Elmwood banker who recently made an assignment, was arrested yesterday on a warrant charging him with embezzlement. The warrant was sworn out by some of the creditors of the bank, who have had an expert going over the books, and claim to have discovered a shortage of $68,000.

WHEELING, W. VA., July 18.—At an early hour this morning Benz Ramage a merchant at the Union Coal Works, eleven miles down the river on the Ohio side, was killed and his store blown to atoms by dynamite deposited beneath it. Henry Campbell, a former partner of Ramage, was arrested on suspicion.

Against Prohibition.

VICKSBURG, MISS, July 18.—The election passed off quietly yesterday. The vote in the city shows about 1,200 majority against prohibition, and in the county, including this city, a majority of about 3,000 against.

Fatal Boiler Explosion.

WELLSVILLE, O., July 18.—A boiler in the boiler shop of Joseph Fassett exploded, wrecking the building and instantly killing Clara Driscoll, aged five years, and fatally injuring her sister Mary, aged three, who were playing in the yard adjoining the boiler-house.

The Cholera in Italy.

ROME, July 18.—The following are today's returns from the cholera-infected districts: Brindisi, 7 new cases, 2 deaths; Fontana, 16 new cases, 2 deaths; Latio, 8 new cases, 5 deaths. A few new cases but no deaths are reported from other places.

Prominent Merchant Disappears.

DUBUQUE, IA., July 18.—Charles S. Keller, one of the leading dry-goods merchants of this city, disappeared suddenly and mysteriously yesterday afternoon, and no trace of him can be obtained. He and his wife had made arrangements to start East on their summer vacation. He went to the bank shortly before 3 o'clock, and had a talk with the cashier, and that was the last seen of him. He had given no sign that his mind was unsettled. The cause of his disappearance is completely hidden.

"Ned Buntline" Dead.

NASHVILLE, TENN., July 18.—Edward Z. C. Judson, known as "Ned Buntline," a well-known story writer, is dead.

CHICAGO ANARCHISTS

Being Put Into Tight Places by the Prosecuting Witnesses.

Overt Acts of Murder Toward the Police Repeatedly Testified To.

CHICAGO, July 19.—In the trial of the Anarchists to-day Officer Krueger identified Sam Fielden, one of the defendants as a man who, on the night of the Haymarket massacre drew a revolver and fired at least two shots at the police. Officer John Wessler took the stand. When a halt was ordered the moment after the bomb exploded, Wessler saw a man having long, bushy whiskers slip down from the wagon occupied by the speaker and dodge behind a wheel. Every moment or two this man jumped up and fired a revolver point blank at the police. Wessler saw this man's face. He was sure it was Fielden. Two or three times Fielden got up, and after emptying one chamber of his revolver he would duck his head down again. Wessler, the third or fourth time, got a bead on Fielden, and fired at him. He saw Fielden drop, and knew from that he was wounded. Fielden tumbled under the wagon. Officer John E. Doyle, who was wounded in thirteen places, identified Fielden as the man who said to the mob, "Now's your time." "Please point out Fielden to the jury," said the State's Attorney. The witness feebly turned in his chair and raising his left arm, the right hanging limp by his side, said: "That is the man—that man sitting there." The ordeal was a little too much for Fielden, and he nervously fumbled for a paper with which to busy himself. Officer Spierling testified to having seen Fielden fire a pistol almost simultaneously with the explosion of the bomb.

NEW EXTRADITION ARTICLES.

Four Additional Crimes Will be Made Extraditable, Manslaughter, Embezzlement, Burglary, and the Dynamiters' Crime.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The new extradition articles between this country and Great Britain is now under consideration by the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, and an attempt will be made in executive session to ratify it before the close of the session. The following additional crimes not mentioned in the former extradition treaty are added: Manslaughter, burglary, embezzlement or larceny of the value of $50 or £10 and upwards, malicious injury to property, whereby the life of any person shall be endangered, if such injury constitute a crime according to the laws of both high contracting parties. No surrender will be made for a crime of a political character.

Red Skins in Washington.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—A delegation of thirteen Warm Spring and Chiricahua Apache Indians called upon Secretary Lamar to-day. They were in charge of Captain Darst, of the Fourth Cavalry, and were weirdly picturesque. They think that there is an effort to remove them from Arizona to Nomansland. This they protested against in their interview to-day. The removal will probably be made, although the Indians, whom the delegation represent, have been peaceable since 1883, when they surrendered to General Crook.

Boy Kills His Sister and Becomes Insane.

BANGOR, ME., July 19.—Henry, the fifteen-year-old son of J. A. Bickwell, of this city, shot and instantly killed his sister Mettie, aged thirteen years, yesterday afternoon. The boy picked up a gun, and, not knowing that it was loaded, playfully pointed it at his sister, when it was discharged, the contents striking her in the neck, tearing away the windpipe and arteries. The boy was rendered insane by the terrible affair.

Lightning Played About the Grave.

NYACK, N. Y., July 19.—While the body of a young lady was being interred in Oak Hill Cemetery, Rockland County, yesterday, a large tree standing near the grave was struck by lightning, causing a panic among the mourners, some of whom wept and prayed, while others rushed terror-stricken from the spot. After a while the interment was proceeded with, and the body was placed in the earth amid the terrible war of the elements.

Overland for the North Pole.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Colonel Gilder, whom a vengeful woman prevented from starting last week for the North Pole, has come out of his seclusion again, and it is announced that the trouble over Dolly Adams' bond, which he took and failed to account for, is about to be settled, and that the Colonel will make the start on his cold journey in a very short time.

$4,000,000 Three Per Cents Called.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—A call was issued to-day for the following described three per cents of 1882. $50, original number 133 to original number 135, both inclusive; $100, 1730 to 1812; $500, 757 to 824; $1,000, 5524 to 5963 and 21,738 to 21,747; $10,000, 12,612 to 12,985. Total, $4,000,000. The call matures on September 1.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Twenty-five Mormon proselytes from Iceland and one Englishman landed at Castle Garden yesterday. Eight of the Icelanders are men, six women and eleven children.

Army Officer Suicides.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Captain Gulian Verplanck Weir, commanding battery M, Fifth Artillery, at Fort Hamilton, committed suicide last evening by shooting himself through the head.

Milwaukee Anarchists Sentenced.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., July 19.—The Anarchists, Frank Hirth, Anton Palm and Carl Simon, were sentenced to nine months each in the House of Correction.

Minnesota's Indians.

ST. PAUL, July 19.—Fears are felt that the Leech Lake Indians in Northern Minnesota will cut the reservoirs and flood that portion of the State.

Revolutionists Captured.

MEXICO, July 19.—Gonzalos and Tapia, revolutionary chiefs of Mexico, were entrapped by regular troops, defeated in battle and captured.

Bitten by a Rattlesnake.

CHICAGO, July 19.—At Boulder, Ill., a girl was fatally bitten by a rattlesnake while picking blackberries.

—The Hindoos say that chess is the invention of an astrologer who lived more than 5,000 years ago and was possessed of supernatural knowlege and acuteness. Greek historians assert that the game was invented by Palamedes to beguile the tedium of the siege of Troy. The Arab legend is that it was devised for the instruction of a young despot by his father, a learned Brahmin, to teach the youth that a king, no matter how powerful, was dependent upon his subjects for safety.

—Said a member of a recently-drawn Georgia grand jury: "We can hardly be expected to indict men for carrying concealed weapons when the major part of the jury themselves are ballasted to their seats during their deliberations by the weight of pistols in their hip pockets."—Augusta (Ga.) News.

—Cape May's famous light-house, with its wonderful French lamp, the only one of its kind in this country, was erected as long ago as 1764, and by the changes wrought by the sea it is a mile south of where it originally stood.

ANOTHER BROKEN BANK. 13

A Nebraska President Steals One Hundred Thousand, It is Alleged, and Goes to Canada.

CHICAGO, July 19.—A special from Omaha says: "The Dundy County Bank, of Benkleman, Neb., failed yesterday. Beiser, the president, skipped to Canada, and took with him about $100,000 in funds and securities. Business men and farmers feel the loss greatly, as many have lost the last dollar they had on earth. Several homesteaders had their little all in the bank, and were to prove up to-day. Many will have to abandon their claims. The greatest excitement prevails. Beiser had transferred all his available property to his wife before leaving. Many Eastern banks and firms lose heavily."

Electric Hand Lamp.

NEW YORK, July 14.—An exhibition of an electric hand lamp, brought from Paris by President Purroy, of the Fire Department, took place to-day in Firemen's Hall. The lamp is about the size of an ordinary small lantern, weighs about five pounds, gives a light equal to about seven-candle power, and will burn for two hours. The lamp is so constructed that when it rests on the ground the battery does not work, but when it is raised by the handle the light flashes out brightly. It is claimed that the lamp will burn two hours without a change in the battery. Mr. Purroy thinks that the lamp can be improved by an arrangement to keep it lighted when it rests on the ground. Chief Shay will carry it about to fires for a while and give it a practical test, and if it works well other lamps will be purchased.

A Disappointed Bride.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL., July 15.—A week ago Miss Ida Clark, a comely and estimable young lady, renounced Christianity, and at the Synagogue, in the presence of a large assemblage, embraced the faith of Moses and Aaron. This she did in order that she might marry a Hebrew named Holland. The wedding was set for to-night, but the bride to be was doomed to disappointment. Holland to-day sent her word that he had changed his mind and that the engagement was off. No explanation could be obtained from him, and nothing could alter his determination.

Greek Gypsies Refused Passage.

LIVERPOOL, July 15.—The National Steamship Company declined to accept as passengers a second party of gypsies who squatted in the railway depot. They are in such a filthy condition that the railway officials have been compelled to make a lavish use of disinfectants. A magistrate was applied to for an order for their removal, but he decided that he had no power to act, because the depot was private property.

An Innocent Man's Fate.

JACKSONVILLE, ILL., July 15.—About two years ago the residence of a Mrs. McLaughlin was entered, and Mrs. McLaughlin and her sister were shockingly cut with a knife. A man named Fred. Holter was arrested, and while he was confined in jail at Winchester, a party of masked men entered the jail and shot him dead. It is now stated that the divorced husband of Mrs. McLaughlin, dying a few days ago, confessed that he was the assailant of the woman.

A Hog Cholera Epidemic.

CHICAGO, July 15.—A special from Hillsboro, Ill., says: A violent form of the hog cholera is raging in some localities in this county, many farmers having lost all their swine. The loss in one township will reach $1,000. Various remedies have been tried, but they have so far failed to check the progress of the malady.

Atlanta Prohibition Fight.

ATLANTA, GA., July 15.—The injunction case of Al Bronck vs. The City of Atlanta, seeking to prevent the interference of police authorities with the sale of whisky, wine and beer by the quart by plaintiff, was tried yesterday before Judge Clarke, of the Superior Court. He refused to grant an injunction, and the city will now proceed to prosecute Bronck for violating the prohibition law.

Revolution Threatened in Mexico.

LAREDO, TEX., July 15.—The situation at Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, is growing more serious, and it is feared that a revolution can not be averted. Government troops are on the way from Mexico, but the revolutionists have secured a large number of Winchester rifles and may seize the Custom House before the troops arrive.

Peru Tired of the Silver Standard.

LIMA, July 15.—In consequence of the depreciation and fluctuations of the silver currency in circulation in this Republic, it has been proposed to use the American gold dollar as the basis of all monetary transactions, either fiscal or private, using the silver dollar at a value of 80 cents, gold, for all fractions under a quarter of an eagle.

Made Insane by Bible Reading.

DECATUR, ILL., July 14.—John Ritchie, who became demented by religious excitement, has been adjudged insane by the county court. He first began studying the Bible six weeks ago, and became fascinated with its contents to such an extent that he neglected his occupation and lost his mental balance.

Extradition.

LONDON, July 15.—In spite of denials, it is positively asserted that the draft of the extradition treaty between Great Britain and the United States has been signed by Lord Rosebery and Minister Phelps, and is now in Washington. The prospect of a really effective extradition treaty causes intense gratification here.

Trying the Chicago Anarchists.

CHICAGO, July 15.—The jury to try the eight Anarchists charged with the Haymarket massacre was finally impaneled to-day, and the State's Attorney began his address.

Poles Acquitted of Murder.

DETROIT, MICH., July 15.—An acquittal was to-day found in the cases of Basil and Alexander Lemke and August Steber, accused of killing John Levitzki during the riot attendant at the outbreak in Stalbert's Polish Catholic congregation last winter, when Rev. D. Kalasiuski was deposed.

Texas People Asking for Aid.

WEATHERFORD, TEX., July 15.—A telegram was sent to Congressman Lanham at Washington, yesterday, asking him to secure Government aid for the people of the drought-stricken regions of Texas. Hundreds of families are without the necessities of life.

But It Is Only a Scheme.

NEW YORK, July 15.—Henry George and half a dozen prominent citizens met at the house of Rev. Dr. McGlynn, a well-known clergymen, to-night, and discussed the idea of the abolition of property in land and the payment of rental to the community by the users of it. One prominent railroad man present suggested a scheme for the purchase of the Third-avenue railroad by the levying of tax upon the property along its line, and the opening of it as a free line. This was to be an entering wedge in the property and tax reform wave. The meeting resolved that it was a very good scheme, indeed, and that it should be pushed at once.

Anything but Harmless.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 15.—While an iron dealer of this city was unloading a wagon filled with old artillery material, which he had purchased at Government auction to-day, a nine-inch shell, supposed to be harmless, exploded, killing sixteen persons and wounding many others. Four of those killed were children.

Great Damage to Crops.

NEWARK, N. J., July 15.—The damage done by rain last night and this morning will probably amount to nearly $100,000 in this county. Bridges were carried away, and in many instances growing crops on market gardens were destroyed.

XLIXTH CONGRESS.

First Session.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—SENATE.—The calendar was taken up after resolutions from the Republican editors of Ohio, urging an investigation of the Payne case had been presented and referred. A number of bills of minor importance were passed. Mr. Beck gave notice of a coin certificate substitute he proposes to offer. The river and harbor bill was taken up and considered until late in the evening in order to dispose of it.

HOUSE.—The Mexican Pension bill was referred to the Committee on Pensions. A bill was passed for the erection of a public building at Jacksonville, Fla. Certain Senate amendments to the Legislative Appropriation bill were agreed to, and the bill sent to conference on others. After the passage of five bills from the Ways and Means Committee, Mr. Morrison's resolution to reduce the surplus was reached. This was discussed up to 5 o'clock, when the House adjourned.

WASHINGTON, July 14.—SENATE.—A resolution was offered for the printing of all Presidential vetoes, from the organization of Congress to the present time. The calendar was taken up and several bills passed, fourteen of them being pension bills. Discussion of the River and Harbor bill was resumed. Mr. McMillan, in charge of the measure, moved an order that the bill be recommitted, with instructions to reduce each item, and the aggregate thirty per cent. After a long debate, in which this proposition was severely criticised, Mr. McMillan finally withdrew it. The Senate then proceeded to vote on the various amendments. After agreeing to all the committee amendments the Senate, at 6:10 p. m., adjourned.

HOUSE.—A bill was passed increasing to $250,000 the limit of the public building at Galveston, Tex.; also a bill appropriating $100,000 for a public building at Oshkosh, Wis. Mr. Morrison's resolution for the reduction of the surplus to $100,000,000 was then considered. After an interesting debate, during which speeches were made by Messrs. Morrison, Hewitt, Randall, McKinley, Reed and others, a number of amendments were proposed and rejected. The resolution was finally adopted—yeas, 207; nays, 67. A resolution of inquiry in regard to an alleged falsification of the record on a report in reference to R. D. Lancaster, of St. Louis, was introduced by Lowry, of Indiana. Pending action the House at 5 p. m. adjourned.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—SENATE.—The reports in the Payne bribery case were presented and ordered printed. They went on the calendar, to be called up at any time as a privileged matter. Bills were reported to place General Alfred H. Pleasanton on the retired list as Major and General W. W. Averell as Captain. The conference report on the legislative appropriation bill was submitted, with a disagreement on certain items. Consideration of the river and harbor bill was resumed. A motion to strike out the Muskingum river amendment was lost, 33 to 13. Mr. McMillan made a motion which in effect proposes to cut down all the items in the bill twenty-five per cent., and the rest of the day was consumed in general debate. At 8:30 p. m. the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE.—A joint resolution was passed extending the unfinished appropriation bills to July 31. After a protracted discussion about an alleged interpolation in the record of yesterday's proceedings, District business was taken up in committee of the whole. The Traction Railroad bill was considered by sections, and the day consumed without final action. A resolution setting apart the night session for the Labor Committee and Saturday night for the committee on printing, was adopted. At 5 p. m. the House took a recess until 8 p. m.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—SENATE.—After a number of pension bills had been passed, the river and harbor bill was taken up. A substitute making a reduction on all items of twenty-five per cent. was finally agreed to. The naval appropriation bill was also passed. At 5 p. m. the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE.—The conference report on the legislative appropriation bill was considered, and certain differences between the two houses ordered to further conference. Vetoed pension bills reported from the Committee on Invalid Pensions were taken up. The necessary two-thirds was obtained in only one case, that of Romiser, of Maryland. Three other bills failed to pass. At 5 p. m. the House took a recess until 8 p. m., the night session being for the consideration of pension bills.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—SENATE.—The Senate passed the naval appropriation bill, and spent most of the day on the discussion of the oleomargarine bill.

HOUSE.—The House appointed a second conference on the legislative bill, and began debate on the fortification bill. At the evening session the Printing Committee had the floor.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—SENATE.—Mr. Whitthorne introduced a bill to return the tax on cotton collected by the United States in 1865, '67 and 68, the same to be used for educational purposes. The oleomargarine bill was considered. Amendments to regulate the purity of wines and liquors, and to restrict the provisions of the bill to the District of Columbia, were rejected—yeas, 18; nays, 32. After failing to fix an hour to-morrow for a vote, the Senate adjourned at 6:10 p. m.

HOUSE.—The Fortifications Appropriations bill was considered and passed. A concurrent resolution from the Senate for the printing of twenty-six thousand copies of the third annual report of the Civil Service Commission was agreed to. Night sessions were ordered for to-night and to-morrow. A disagreement was reported from the conference committee on the bill repealing the timber culture and pre-emption laws. The House insisted upon its disagreement and a further conference was ordered. Mr. Morrison offered a concurrent resolution to adjourn July 28. Referred. The House at 5 o'clock took a recess until 8 p. m. The night session being for the consideration of bills from the Post-office Committee.

—The San Antonio Light says that the State of Texas should bestow a handsome pension upon Mr. and Mrs. Jacinto Sanchez, of San Antonio, and grant them exemption from the payment of future taxes. This because Mrs. Sanchez on Sunday presented her husband with fine triplets, two boys and a girl.

—Noah Myers, of Woodland, Cal., lost a valuable ring while fishing at Bartlett Springs last year. He recently heard that a fisherman in the mountains had found a ring inside of a trout. Correspondence followed, and the result was that Mr. Myers got back his ring quite unchanged and the fisherman got a ten-dollar bill.

—It was worth while to invite the historian Ranke to dinner. Once when lunching with the King of the Belgians he made himself so agreeable at table that the party remained seated listening to his talk and forgot all about their dinner. Such a man would be a blessing in disguise to a boarding-house.

THE COMMONWEALTH.

Louisville Leaf Tobacco Market.

Dark and heavy styles have not shown any important variations except in the lower divisions of the grades, especially Spanish types, which have been irregular. We lower quotations 25c for the grades from trash to good leaf. Low grade Burley tobaccos have been reduced according to the late range of sales, and we lower quotations 25@50c for lugs and common to medium leaf. The manufacturing trade is most generally represented to be quiet and dull. The week's weather conditions have been admirably adapted to the wants of the crop. We quote 1885 tobaccos as follows for full weight packages:

Miscellaneous Items.

A SINGULAR and perhaps fatal accident occurred a few mornings ago to a two-year-old child of Thomas M. Brownfield, Louisville. Two older children had been playing with the little one in the yard, and all went to sleep, tired out. The youngest awoke first, and, casting around for amusement, espied a swing attached to one of the trees. The board was out, but the little one climbed in and gave the swing momentum with his feet. In a moment he slipped and his neck caught between the ropes, which twisted about, and he was hanged, the child being unable to make any outcry. His sister awakened about that juncture and discovered him. He was released and medical aid summoned. After long labor respiration was restored, but the little one went into violent convulsions immediately, and all hopes of recovery were given up.

SHERMAN ADKINS, a wealthy farmer living at Greenville, was thrown from his mule, which trampled him, crushing in his breast-bone and injuring him so seriously that he died.

HENRY BEESICKA, a toll-gate keeper on the Bina Lick turnpike, was shot and killed by a fifteen-year-old boy named Richards. The murder was the result of a quarrel about two cents toll.

JOHN C. REYNOLDS was working underneath grain bins near Owingsville, a few days ago, when the flooring gave way and precipitated several hundred bushels of wheat on him, smothering him to death before he could be rescued.

THE strike inaugurated in the Henderson Cooperage Works ended a few days since by the management securing seven coopers from Louisville, and letters from a large number of others, saying they would arrive soon.

THE Central Coal and Iron Company, which has been shut down for several months past, at Central City, commenced operations recently with ten men, and a few days ago had its force increased by about thirty-five, who arrived from Louisville. Of this number, however, about one-half of them flickered and returned to their homes, after learning the state of affairs in that community.

D. D. CONWAY was arrested at Millersburg for selling liquors and tobacco without Government license, and taken to jail at Covington.

W. M. NEWBOLD, superintendent of the Owensboro and Nashville road, was shot at Russellville the other night, by B. F. Stroud, formerly roadmaster of the L. and N. It is not thought that the wound will prove fatal.

THE new Kentucky and Indiana bridge was thoroughly tested a few days ago.

DAVIS MITCHELL, of Glasgow, committed suicide a few days ago.

R. GLOGOWER, dealer in notions, Frankfort, has failed. Liabilities $3,025; assets small.

THE corner-stone of the new school building, Frankfort, was laid on the 17th, with imposing ceremonies.

A LARGE number of chimneys were blown down and several houses were unroofed in Maysville a few days ago by a storm. The growing crop of corn was much injured and blown down. While the storm was raging, lightning struck and killed a fine short-horn bull belonging to Mr. James Mackey. The lightning also struck a stack-yard of wheat on the farm of Wm. Hickey and burned about 500 bushels.

JAMES BIGGER, aged twenty-three, was overcome by heat while threshing wheat, near Gardnersville, and died within half an hour.

CHARLES RILEY, the man who ran off with a twenty-dollar bill, given to him several days ago, by Val Heyl, of Newport, to have changed, has left two of his little children, aged seven and two years, in destitute circumstances, and with no one to care for them but the poor old mother, who is unable to care for herself. An effort will be made to send them to the orphan asylum at Cold Springs.

Two horses were stolen from the Northern Lake Ice Company's stables, Louisville, under peculiar circumstances. One of the animals was sick, and Pat Regan, the superintendent, left the stable to get some medicine. While he was gone one of the hostlers, who was rubbing the sick horse, was called away, and when he returned the animal was gone. Mr. Regan at once put Frank Black, the head stableman, on another horse, and started him out after the missing one. Black shortly returned on foot, with his head beaten up, and said he had been knocked off his horse at Sixteenth and Broadway, and rendered unconscious. When he revived the horse he was riding was gone.

CHARLES and Armster Blackwell, brothers, were killed at Little Cypress, Marshall County, the other night by George and Jesse Loftin, also brothers. George Loftin was also seriously wounded, being shot in two places. The fight was the result of an old feud. All of the parties were attending a moonlight dance. Twenty-one shots were fired into the large crowd present, but strange to say none but the parties named were hurt.

ELTON HOY and Pud. Trumbo, of Little Flat, Bath County, went bathing in the river, and are supposed to have been drowned, as they have not been seen since.

TWENTY-TWO moonshiners were released from the Covington jail a few days ago.

CY. SINGLETON was killed at King's-mountain tunnel, Lincoln County, in a fight with some negro laborers. One of the negroes supposed to be implicated was jailed. Sheriff Menifee received a telegram that others are resisting arrest, and on the 12th started with arms and ammunition to aid the King's-mountain officers.

W. S. DOW, the tramp painter who robbed his employer at Nicholasville, was arrested at Harrodsburg.

AT Newport Val Heyl gave a man a twenty-dollar bill to go the bank and get changed. The man nor the bill has not as yet returned.

WM. BRANNON, of Newport, cut his throat with a razor in four different places, a few nights ago. One of the cuts, it is feared, will end his existence. It is thought he was laboring under a temporary fit of insanity.

CHURCHILL HOWARD, the young son of one of the prominent merchants of Hodgenville, shot himself while fooling with a pistol. The wound, though serious, is not fatal.

BRILLIANT LEGISLATING.

Senator Edmunds' Measure to Reform the Much Abused Civil Service.

Senator Edmunds has brought in a bill for the reform of the civil service. It is a simple measure. It gives the President the appointment of all the minor officials without the advice or consent of the Senate, but makes them irremovable during their term without a trial on charges before a United States judge. One does not need to know much about the United States civil service to know what the result would be. One only needs to know a little of human nature. No man of capacity or business experience would take charge of an office containing a large number of subordinates if he could not get rid of any of them without a formal trial in a law court. Four-fifths at least of the things which make a clerk incompetent are small things, any one of which would seem ridiculous on paper, and absurd to lay before a United States judge. It is the repetition of them which mostly decides that a man is not worth his salary. Nothing in the whole art of administration, whether civil or military, is so well settled as that there can be no proper responsibility in the chief if he have no discretion in the selection of his subordinates. Some capable men might be found ready to take charge of offices under Mr. Edmunds' bill, but if they did so they would probably at once go to work to break it down. They would let inefficiency and disorder have full swing, and refuse to go into court with trumpery stories about A's coming late, and B's drinking, and C's being unmannerly, and D's spelling badly, and blotting his books, until the public offices became public nuisances, and the law was repealed.

Nothing is more wonderful in the history of this whole Civil-Service reform movement than the way in which public men toil and moil and twine and twist in order to avoid having the Government business conducted like other business. Every bank and corporation in the country furnishes a perfect model of the way in which the treasury and post-office should be manned and managed; and yet there is hardly any experiment too queer or fantastic for grave statesmen to attempt with the Government service in order to avoid imitating these old and well-tried private methods. If the stockholders of the Pennsylvania road were to propose that the manager should not be allowed to dismiss any subordinate without filing a bill in equity against him, we should consider them crazy; but when a Senator proposes it about the public offices, we hury our faces in our hands, ponder the plan deeply, and discuss it at great length in the public prints.—N. Y. Post.

Not Ruined by a Party.

We have always held that one good result of the last national election would be the dissipation of the fear that a Democratic Administration would bring some sort of disaster upon the country. Some of our Republican friends in the Presidential campaign indulged in the wildest forebodings about the probable effect on business. Even the Republican candidate for President, well known as a business man, expressed grave apprehensions. Some of our esteemed contemporaries really seemed to suffer anguish on account of their fears.

We have now had a full fiscal year under the Democratic Administration, and the comparative receipts and expenditures are as follows:

RECEIPTS.	1885-6.	1884-5.
Customs	$192,747,822.13	$181,471,939.34
Internal revenue	117,031,523.69	112,498,725.54
Miscellaneous	26,361,945.06	29,720,041.50
Totals	$336,141,290.87	$323,690,796.38
EXPENDITURES.
Ordinary	$130,332,611.84	$152,738,411.15
Pensions	64,702,451.08	56,102,267.49
Interest	50,580,679.46	51,386,256.47
Totals	$245,615,742.38	$260,226,935.11

Truly, there is nothing in these figures to justify the fears of those who prophesied disaster as the inevitable result of Democratic rule. An increase of $12,400,000 in revenue, a decrease of $14,600,000 in expenditures—of which last pensions increase over $8,000,000—a decrease of $21,000,000 in ordinary expenses.

On the whole, we are forced to conclude that Democratic Administration is as safe as Republican and somewhat cheaper, and that the indications of returning prosperity are not unfavorably affected by the political change. This is a great country, with rich resources and enormous advantages, and it will never again be believed that only one party can govern it.—Boston Herald.

Making a Navy.

It is evident from the way in which the Secretary has addressed himself to his duties that he means to inaugurate a naval establishment worthy of the United States. He believes and says, and such is the opinion of all informed and just men, that the naval service should be considered quite apart from the naval administration. The naval service, the personnel of the navy, is in the main composed, to use his own words, "of a body of accomplished men, representing a high, social standard of personal character, who are deservedly respected and honored throughout the world." Continuing his own language: "This, unfortunately, can not be said with equal justice of the Navy Department, and whatever dissatisfaction the country has ever experienced with the naval arm of our Government will be found to have had its origin, not in the naval service, but in the naval administration, and even there dissatisfaction should be limited to certain branches only of the business of the department." The plan of business reorganization which he outlined in his annual report has business principles of directness, economy and practicability on its side. It has commanded the approbation of thoughtful men everywhere. The evils and blunders of the present mal system he laid bare with an unsparing hand; but he was careful to discriminate between the blame due to faulty methods and the consideration to be extended to honorable men who were at the mercy of such methods. The large discretion of power given him under the law is to be used by the Secretary in the direction of a business-like reconstitution of the department itself.—Brooklyn Eagle.

——As Mr. Edmunds compares 1886 with 1884 he must feel a slight depression of spirit, a consciousness of an aching void beyond the consolation of any cocktail. He has had his private diversion and revenge, but at what expense! Now let him promise and swear to support the Republican candidates in 1888 or he is a lost statesman.—N. Y. Sun.

DEMOCRATIC SENSE.

——Peter H. Clark, a Cincinnati colored man of intelligence and the principal of a public school in that city, has been deposed by the Republican board of Education because he is a Democrat. Who are the bulldozers?—N. Y. Graphic.

——President Cleveland does not believe that measles affect the spinal column except in pension cases, nor that diarrhea causes sore eyes; nor that suicides by drowning and morphine poisoning were the result of injuries received in the service. On all these points of practical medicine he takes issue with Dr. John A. Logan.—St. Louis Republican.

——Logan's boom has got a blow right between the eyes. The National Blaine Republican Association at Washington, through J. D. Stockbridge, its president, has sent its hearty congratulations to Fitz John Porter upon the recent assurance that "truth is mighty and will prevail." The assurance that will impress Logan the most is that of the association in tendering its congratulations to the man he still denounces as a traitor.—Detroit Free Press.

——An elderly man in Jamestown, D. T., it appears, has been attracting attention by throwing away money and revealing himself as a cousin of Mr. Rutherford B. Hayes, of Fremont, O. The first piece of evidence naturally threw doubt upon the second, and the prodigal Burchard was committed for lunacy. It appears, however, that he really is a cousin of Mr. Hayes. When there was found among his effects a letter from that statesman offering to pay him his annuity of $200 down if he would take $4, or 2 per cent., off for cash, the people of Jamestown could no longer dispute his claim of kinship, though at his desperate prodigality they marveled greatly.—N. Y. Times.

——The defense made by ex-Postmaster Veazy, of Baltimore, the Democrat who resigned because the duties of the office were distasteful to him knocks in the head all that the silly removals have said about his appointments. He says he found the post-office filled with offensive Republicans who were inattentive and he removed them and appointed men who passed a civil service examination. The new appointees are nearly all Democrats, and notwithstanding they stood the highest in the competitive examination the Republicans are angry. But it is impossible to please the Republican who has ever had a taste of office. Poor Garfield found that out to his sorrow.—Buffalo Times.

——The love of the Republican party for the colored man was most conspicuously exhibited in the rejection of Mr. Matthews by the Republican Senate. Mr. Matthews was nominated by the President to succeed Fred Douglass as recorder of the District of Columbia. He was rejected because he was a Democrat. The Republicans are particularly hostile towards war veterans and colored men who are Democrats. There was not the slightest grounds for the rejection of Mr. Matthews beyond the one fact that he refused to consider the Republican party as the rightful owner of his race. The Democratic party has shown far more practical good will towards the colored man than the hypocrites in the Senate who only seek to utilize him for political purposes.—Albany Argus.

BLAIR VS. THE PRESIDENT.

The Republican Senator's Weak and Dishonest Attempt to Cast Discredit upon the Chief Executive's Efforts to Uphold the Prerogatives of His Office.

Senator Blair's defense of Congress from the imputations of recklessness or dishonesty put upon it by Mr. Cleveland's veto messages is a very weak affair. As a Senator it is his privilege to secure the passage of these vicious bills in spite of the President's objections if he can do so, but he can not criticise the vetoes as he does without placing himself in the attitude toward the President which he thinks it is wrong for the President to assume toward Congress. In spite of the demagogy which Mr. Blair has introduced into his report, and of his attempt to create the impression among ignoramuses that Mr. Cleveland has no right to veto these little jobs, the fact remains that he has such a right, and that it is his sworn duty to exercise it if he regards the measure presented to him as dishonest.

In the case of every one of the sixty or seventy private pension bills which the President has vetoed he has given good and sufficient reasons for his course. He has shown that the great majority of the bills objected to were in the interest of frauds, bounty-jumpers and deserters, and in cases where the hardship was undenied he has shown that the relief proposed was no more properly a pension charge than would be any other instance of destitution occurring without reference to the war. The reasons given for the vetoes have satisfied as well as surprised the country. Pleased with his resolute opposition to the most contemptible form of swindling, the people have been astonished at the extraordinary capacity of the Congress of the United States for such dirty work.

Senator Blair's attempt to shield himself and his money-grabbing associates by casting discredit upon Mr. Cleveland will hardly succeed. He writes like a man who is in the wrong and who knows it. Against his generalities and innuendoes it is all-sufficient to get the facts which the veto messages complained of contain.—Chicago Herald.

An Authoritative Denial.

The esteemed evening Capital thinks the Confederate bonds will never be paid. There is not a question but it believes just what it says. There are very few if any people in this country who believe those bonds will be paid, but there are a great many orators and organs advocating the principles of the Republican party that endeavor to make people believe they will be. Before a Democratic President was elected, the payment of the rebel debt was discussed on the stump and in the organs as one of the misfortunes which were sure to befall the country in case Democracy triumphed. The Capital does well to correct the wrong impressions its party is responsible for, especially when it is known that one of New York's shrewdest and most eloquent lawyers has accepted a retainer of British gold to present the cause of the foreign holders of Confederate bonds, and has actually been before Congress and argued the case in the interests of his clients.—Des Moines Leader.

THE New York Sun's Washington correspondent has absolutely fallen in love with Congressmen Breckinridge and Taulbee, of this State, and is saying many pretty things about them. SINCE the President has vetoed two or three bills appropriating liberal amounts for erecting public buildings in small towns, Newport has withdrawn her application for an appropriation for that purpose, but has not abandoned the hope of getting some of Uncle Sam's surplus and is now modestly soliciting an appropriation to establish a military post at her barracks. Better establish a military post in Rowan.

Wallace McKee, the Louisville correspondent of the Shepherdsville Pioneer, has found a Democrat who "will vote for Yerkes as a rebuke to bossism in politics and fraud and bribery in conventions. McKee adds: "The sentiments expressed by the gentleman above are general throughout the district among the better element of both parties, and unless Barbour puts out a good pile of hard cash on election day he will be defeated."—Louisville Commercial.

Is it to be understood that to save the "better element" Barbour will be compelled to "put out a good pile of hard cash on election day?"

THE yield of wheat for the current year in the United States is estimated by the Cincinnati Price Current at 295,000,000 bushels of spring grown. This estimate is 63,000,000 bushels in excess of last year's crop, and includes 60,000,000 of California wheat. Late reports from the spring wheat region, however, indicate that this portion of the crop will be less by about 30 per cent. than it was last year the weather during June being unfavorable, and many large fields having been completely destroyed by storms.

OUR readers are aware that the assessed value of the property of this county for the year 1886 is much smaller than it was for the year 1885, which naturally suggests the query: From what part of the county does this diminution of values come? By reference to the Assessor's books for the two years, the question is readily answered, as shown by the subjoined table of comparisons:

1885.	Districts.	1886.
$698,585	Taylorport	$698,535
885,041	Florence	911,132
223,124	Bellevue	226,777
376,421	Walton	342,487
239,154	Beaver	244,198
304,231	Verona	283,126
512,810	Union	488,248
514,915	Petersburg	524,422
312,470	Carlton	309,305
271,290	Hamilton	264,210
901,305	Burlington	792,648

The above table shows that Florence, Bellevue and Petersburg districts have increased their wealth, the Burlington district shows a heavy decrease, being largely over half the amount charged to the entire county. This showing for Burlington being investigated revealed the fact that there is a heavy falling off all along the line, the most remarkable being in the number of acres of land, there being 2,944 acres less this year than last, and if any body has moved out of the district, taking his farm with him, we have not heard of it. We don't see on what grounds the property in the Burlington district can defend such a rapid depreciation in values.

Since the above was put in type we have ascertained that 12,000 acres of land that was placed to the credit of the Burlington district last year is assessed in the Taylorsport district for this year, which only increases the area of the Taylorport district 77 acres over the number assessed last year, while Bulington is still short 1,744 acres as appears by the Assessor's book.

Hurrah for Old Boone

To the Editors of the Recorder:

I have learned from the RECORDER that Boone county is soon to vote on the question of allowing or not allowing the retail of liquors in the county. This is a very important question and I hope the intelligence and virtue of the natives of the county will decide with emphasis in favor of local option. I hope this because I love the county in which I was born and brought up; and because I know that intemperance is such a fearful evil. What good qualities and what good things does it not blight? I have resided in several different States, and I have been familiar with the practical effects of free liquor, and also with the working of prohibition.

For a dozen years I lived in the State of Main, during all except one of which we had prohibition. That the effect was good I know. There were some who drank, and some who stealthily sold, but in the village of 500 inhabitants in which I lived, I did not see a drunken man on the streets for two years together, and not a dozen, I should say, in a dozen years. Of course more than that number were drunk in that time, but I did not see them.

Whenever in traveling I passed into States where free liquor was allowed, the difference was marked.

I have lived here in Canton, N. Y., for more than sixteen years; and here I have seen over and over again the difference between prohibition and open bars for the sale of drinks. During these sixteen years we have had local prohibition about half the time, and during the other half there have been open bars legally licensed. Imperfect as has been the enforcement of prohibition here, the contrast between the conditions under it and those under licensed bars has been very striking.

Just now we are having a run of license, and I have seen more men drunk on the streets and on the way to jail, within a week than I saw in Main during the twelve years of my residence there.

Such, Mr. Editor, are the facts of my experience in different towns and States, and covering a period of thirty years. No wonder then that I look on with interest and anxiety as the citizens of Boone county are about to vote on what so greatly concerns the welfare of all.

I recall the days of my boyhood, when friends of temperance in Boone were few and far between. Uncle Jonas Crisler was the first practical so-called temperance man I ever knew, and he encountered much derision from neighbors and acquaintances.

The first regular public effort in behalf of temperance in Boone began, I think, in the fall and winter of 1847-48. In January, 1848, I think, the first lodge of Sons of Temperance was instituted in Petersburg. Dr. Wm. Jenkins, who died about two years later, was the first W. P. I think I was the youngest member of this first lodge. I am told that this lodge still survives, though I have not met with it since the winter of 1860. Most of the original members must now be dead. During that winter and the following spring and summer of '48, numerous public meetings were held in Petersburg, in Burlington and in school-houses in various directions. Sometimes we had able speakers from abroad; but the constant pressing of the cause in the school-houses was done by a few zealous deciples at home. Dr. Henry McGuffey, then residing in Petersburg, did yeoman's service. Jno. Wilks was another of these pioneer workers in the cause, who never flinched. Jas. E. Bruce, James M. Crisler, and the writer were others of the same class. These all went from school-house to school-house in the north part of the county, speaking their most earnest and best words in behalf of temperance. Many other young men and many young women went with us and helped on the cause with stirring temperance songs. We encountered much opposition then. Most of the old and middle aged men sneered at us, and even many of the churches were hostile. But we were young and enthusiastic, and as we were not working for wages, we were able to keep right on.

Years have come and gone since then. The fathers are in their graves; and those young men (such of them as have not crossed over the river,) are now called old men. But the work then began has gone on; and now the whole county is to vote on local option.—May they wisely decide to prohibit. May they advance the good cause in Boone to a position the most sanguine of those young men of long ago never dreamed of.

In love, purity and fidelity, yours fraternally,

A. G. GAINES.

Mr. Gid Dollar one of the best farmers of the great tobacco valley of Caldwell and Lyon counties tells us that the growing crop in that section is not near so promising as it was this time last year. He expects a big crop of low grade tobacco.—Crittenden Press.

—Who has the sweetest voice in England? is what people say of Mrs. Oscar Wilde.

—An Olympia (W. T.) girl threatens to sue her father for breach of promise. The old gentleman had given his consent to her marriage, and then withdrew it. Hence the young lady's ire.

—A Philadelphia gentleman, after being shown about the city by a citizen of the Hub, said to his chaperone: "Boston isn't laid out as well as Philadelphia." "No," replied the latter, "but it will be when it is as dead."—Boston Post.

—Charles Dudley Warner writes: "A dead bird does not help the appearance of an ugly woman, and a pretty woman needs no such adornment. If you can get the women to recognize these two things a great deal will be done for the protection of our song birds."

—Miss Lizzie McKnight, who died in Louisville recently, had been a teacher in the public schools of that city for forty years. Some time ago the school board retired her on half pay, an action without precedent and without authority, but one which met with universal approbation.

—M. Raymond Seillière is the "Coal Oil Johnny" of France. He is a member of a well-known family of bankers and army contractors, and is thirty-nine years of age. For the last twelve years M. Seillière has spent the sum of $300,000 a year, and has besides contracted loans to the amount of $1,000,000. He has just been put under guardianship by the courts.

—On the eve of a visit to Europe the late Hon. John Welsh, ex-United States Minister to England, looked casually over the books of the Episcopal Hospital at Philadelphia and noticed that its debts amounted to eighteen thousand dollars. Two days later when he was on the ocean and beyond the reach of thanks, the managers received his check for the full amount.—Philadelphia Press.

—O. M. Dupree, of Warwick, Ga., is sixty years old, the father of eight children, and eighteen times a grandfather. Three months ago he sent his friend James Hobby out in search of a wife for him. He told him not to pick a young one, for she might be giddy, but to find if possible a nice, chucky woman, "nigh on to twenty years old." Hobby was successful, and Mr. Dupree and Miss Sallie Jones were recently married.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

—The Louisville Courier-Journal says that Father Ryan, the Southern poet-priest, who recently died, was a musician as well as a poet. He would frequently go to the house of one of his parishioners and, telling the servant not to call any one, would take his seat at the piano. With a cigar between his teeth, he would play and improvise for hours, and upon coming back to the things of this world would be surprised to find he had spent four or five hours in perfect ignorance of his surroundings.

—General Fremont has taken a house in Washington for a year, and he and his wife are now hard at work upon his memoirs. Mrs. Fremont is nominally General Fremont's secretary or amanuensis in the work, but the burden of memory, arrangement and composition is rather evenly divided. They found it necessary to go to Washington, where General Fremont could have access to the old papers and reports, and meet his old comrades in scenes that would alone recall many things by association.—N. Y. Tribune.

"A LITTLE NONSENSE."

—As a general thing, when schoolboys go on strike the urbane professor comes in with the last lick.—Springfield (Mo.) Newspaper.

—It costs twenty-eight dollars a week to feed a circus tiger. At that rate what would the monthly board of a catamount to?—Philadelphia Sunday Item.

—Tom—"Say, Jack, where can I get a good two-foot rule?" Jack—"Here." Tom—"Thanks; hand it over." Jack—"Well, don't wear tight shoes."—Texas Figaro.

—A sixteen-year-old girl can see more poetry in a new bonnet with pink trimmings than a man with a head like a fleece of wool could discover in a thunder-gust.—Chicago Ledger.

—A Western man claims that he can raise cyclones at will. So can almost any man, by simply informing his wife that she will have to get along with one bonnet a year.—Burlington Free Press.

—"It's been a coal day when you're left," said the kindling-wood to the cinder. "You're too chip-per," replied the cinder to the kindling-wood. "Go to blazes," said the match, as it dropped in and fired both up.—N. Y. Dispatch.

—At the police court: "You stole the pocket-book, but how is it that you did not appropriate the watch lying by the side of it?" "You don't mean to say I was as daft as that? I couldn't have noticed it. You must excuse me, Judge!"—Tid-Bits.

—"That's a nice stick you're carrying, Johnson. What did it cost you?" "Three pun ten, deah boy." "How much is that in dollars?" "Crush me if I know. I nevaw count in dollaws. They make it too dooced complicated faw any thing."—Town Topics.

—A green sportsman tried to shoot a sparrow with an old Queen Anne musket. When he fired, the bird, with a chirrup or two, flew away unconcerned in the foreground, and the marksman was swiftly and noiselessly laid on his spine in the background. Picking himself up, and shaking his fist at the bird, he exclaimed: "Be jabers! ye wouldn't a-chirruped if you'd been at this ind of the gun."

—A handsome coquette, whose hair was of a bright red color, one day boasted that a gentleman had solicited a lock of it to put in his portmonnaie, as it reminded him so forcibly of pure gold. "Indeed!" sneered a brunette rival, "and did you give it to him?" "Of course not," was the reply. "How fortunate for him that you did not. It would have burnt a hole through his portmonnaie!" was the rival's concluding remark.—N. Y. Ledger.

STATE NEWS.

The timothy crop is light in Fayette county.

The branch penitentiary at Eddyville will accommodate 800 prisoners.

Garrard county has one of the largest wheat crops ever raised in the county.

One thing is beyond question, Lexington has the most efficient and best police force it ever had.—Transcript.

The Murray News, published in Calloway county, of last week presents Col. G. A. C. Holt, as a candidate for Governor.

Louisville's dog tax pays the salaries of the Mayor and City Attorney. What's the matter with a dog tax for Lexington.—Press.

There never has, perhaps, in the history of old Owen been as warm a contest and as many opponents for county offices as now.—News.

According to a local newspaper, nearly all the boys in Paris between sixteen and twenty years of age carry pistols and threaten to shoot on the slightest provocation.

It is reported that there will be no Fair at New Liberty this year; reasons unknown. The colored fair has been moved to Sparta, and Gallatin will be without a fair.—Democrat.

Frank Champ, of Bourbon county, refused an offer of $4.35 per cwt for 24 fat cattle, said to be the finest in the State. They are reds and roans, and average over 1,700 lbs., in weight.

Ed Williams, a blind colored man who lives with J. P. Salyer, has just completed a little wagon, as perfect in all its parts as could be made by a man with a dozen eyes.—Licking Valley Scorcher.

Superintendent Pickett's office is crowded with work. This is an unusually busy season in that department, and very trying on the limited force on whom the extra burden falls.—Capital.

A new Judge and a new Prosecuting Attorney are what is needed in Rowan county. There is no use of keeping the militia there if the court is to be as farcical an exhibition as before, and it promises to be.—Stanford Journal.

A "Mother Hubbard" bathing party was had at Miss Jeanie Harwood's last Saturday night. Of course the affair was exclusive, and from the description we had of it, there must have been lots of fun to the water-sprits.

W. C. Robinson, of the McFee neighborhood, had 12 acres of land in wheat that he put in clover last year, that yielded him 32 bushels to the acre. He thinks it would have reached 40 bushels if the rain and wind hadn't got it badly tangled.—Harrodsburg Democrat.

Two members of the Kentucky Legislature being nobly drunk on a railway train, the conductor remonstrated, when one of them pompously demanded: "Do you know, sir, that I'm a member of the Legislater?" The conductor quietly replied: "You've got the symptoms."—Richmond Herald.

Hon. Charles Jacob, Minister Plenipotentiary and Envoy Extraordinary to the United States of Colombia, is a candidate for Circuit Clerk of Jefferson county, Ky. Loaves and little fishes!—Louisville Times.

Mr. B. Holloway is one of the good old men in this county. He is 88 years old, and his wife, Annie, is 80 years of age. They were married in 1823, have had born to them thirteen children, of whom nine are living. They are well preserved mentally and physically. The old man walks about his farm, attends to his business and votes the Democratic ticket straight.—Spencer Courier.

Oscar Beasley, foreman in Mr. Webb's warehouse, spends his leisure moments coon hunting, at which he has proved very successful as well as of No. 1 pluck, having climbed a tree not long since and held four coons at bay 60 feet from the ground while Charlie Ingram went three miles for cartridges to kill them.—Williamstown Courier.

Mr. W. A. Moreland, three miles West of Milton, has growing on his farm a paw-paw tree which measures 43 inches at the base of the trunk, 34 years old, and has borne fruit over 30 years. He also has another wonder, a fine Heath cling peach from a last year's bud, within an inch of the ground, which bids fair to mature.—Milton Press.

Last week we reported that a field of 15 acres, the property of A. Kulp, Shakertown, would yield 40 bushels to the acre. After the threshing was completed it was ascertained that the yield was 43 bushels to the acre. Mr. Kulp says that the grain was badly tangled, which must have entailed a loss of 10 bushels to the acre. This ground was in tobacco last year.—Harrodsburg Democrat.

The Elizabethtown News names Hon. M. C. Saufly for Lieutenant Governor on the ticket with Gen. Buckner. We see no reason why Mr. Saufly should not head a Gubernatorial ticket. He is certainly as well qualified as Gen. Buckner, and does not think "Gov. Knott's conduct of the office is good enough" as the General does. If Simon Bolivar can't see "things are running in a terrible rut" in Kentucky, he is not the man we want for Governor.—Danville advocate.

THE COMBINATION

FENCE.

A fence that is wanted, and in time will be used by every one that wants a fence, either around the House, Garden or Farm, as it is cheap, durable and servicable, to keep in check horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, chickens, etc., and restrain wolves, dogs, and rabbits, etc.

Having all the advantages of a picket fence in restraining animals from jumping, and not so liable to decay, and at much less cost, and no barbs to injure valuable stock, thus placing it far in advance of any other fence now in use, hence it must be the fence of the future; all who have it want more.

It is portable and can be removed from field to field by drawing staples from posts, taking out the splice lath and rebundling it. We offer this fence for sale in bundles of five and six rod at Burlington.

Warm weather has returned.

Prospects are good for a big kraut crop.

Saturday was rather an Indian Summer day.

A wooden wedding is on the tapis in Burlington.

The days growing shorter and the nights longer.

Don't forget the picnic at La Grare Grove Saturday.

Squire Baker had a very fine cow to die one day last week.

The recent rains greatly augmented the yield of blackberries.

Blackberry excursions from town are becoming quite fashionable.

Last Thursday was cool enough for an increased supply of wearing apparel.

In some localities the wind last Wednesday night, blew the corn down badly.

Dennis Nead, of Florence, has, in the last seven years, lost three stables by fire.

Joseph Cowen's oldest daughter is seriously sick and has been for several weeks.

W. H. Baker has purchased a lot in Florence, and will erect a residence thereon at once.

Mr. and Mrs S. P. Brady had a very large number of kindred dine with them yesterday.

A. W. Smith representing John P. Morton & Co., of Louisville, was in town yesterday.

A delegation of Petersburg belles and beaux took supper at the Boone House Sunday evening.

Mrs. Perry, widow of the late Houston Perry, of Kenton county, died last Saturday morning.

Sunday two big loads of negroes went from this place to the colored association in Covington.

Burlington is not the only county town to which the festive burglar has recently turned his attention.

Kenton county votes on her turnpike tax law again in August. The probability is it will be repealed.

See programme of Sunday-school convention, to be held at Florence, on Friday and Saturday of next week.

Long necked ladies wear about two and a half bolts of ribbon on the back of their head so as to hide the neck.

Perry Stephens was recuperating several days last week in his father's harvest fields in the Richwood country.

It seems that the croquet ground was not properly engineered, and it is not used as much as was at first expected.

As genuine, No. 1 blackberry pickers we can recommend Misses Kittie Riddell, Wesa Kirtley, Nettie Gardner and Pinkie Cowen.

The heated term made its exit last Wednesday night accompanied by rushing winds, vivid lightning and heavy thunder.

For the best goods and most reasonable prices, men should go to H. F. Blase, 540 Madison Avenue, Covington, for their clothing.

The work of erecting a stage for the entertainment to be given in Morgan Academy during the teachers' institute, is now in progress.

MRS. E. GARRISON.

Camp Fritz Zimmer, on John Berkshire's farm, has been in full blast for several days, and a great many berries have been hauled from there.

Candidates for County Commissioner are popping up all over the county, and as the race is made up to date just one half of them is sure to be defeated.

Several pedagogues were on examination last Saturday. Messrs. Foster and Tolin testing their stock of qualifications for instructing the "Young idea how to shoot."

The last legislature chartered a cemetery company at this place; but, as yet, nothing indicates that the company is making an effort to locate and lay out the cemetery.

Mr. S. P. Brady requests us to say that he does not want his name used in connection with the office of Justice of the Peace in this district—that he does not want the office.

The most interesting scene to be witnessed on the avenue now, is one of our popular M. D's in his Buck Board behind his fine stepper, splitting the atmosphere at a 2:10 gait.

Last Tuesday night the lightning struck a barn on the road between Aurora and Rising Sun. The building was burned, and in it one horse and considerable hay and farming implements. No insurance.

A good rain in the next few days will insure an enormous corn crop in the southern part of the county. The crop down there is now at a point in its growth that a drouth would seriously injure it in a few days.

It is said that a distinguished Kenton county temperance orator who resides near the Boone and Kenton line will invade the northwest portion of Boone, and raise his Clarion voice in behalf of the temperance cause.

One day the latter part of last week C. W. McFee, of the Francesville neighborhood, was thrown by a young horse, striking a fence and breaking several ribs, from which he has suffered considerably. At last accounts he was improving.

Remember that Geo. Hoschart & Co. of Lawrenceburg, Indiana, can always give satisfaction both as to price and style of work, so when you want to buy a tombstone or a monument go to their yard or call on John Beall, of Hebron, agent.

The depressed state of the temperature came near being fatal to the business of the ice cream parlor last Wednesday evening. The average citizen, on such days, loses his taste for the delicious congealed lacteal fluid, and cut rates will not restore the appetite.

Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Stephens will welcome their many friends on the 26th inst., at 8 p. m.,
the Fifth anniversary of their marriage.

A Cincinnati party visited Uncle Joel Conner, of Bullittsville, a few days since with a view to buying his fine stallion, Almont, but did not get to see the horse, Jimmie Riddell having taken him the day before to Lawrenceburg, where he is being groomed for the fall circuit of fairs.

Prof. Mack has returned to Burlington after a few weeks rustication in his native village, Rising Sun. He will now turn his attention to making arrangements for the school to be opened in the Morgan Academy the first of September. Give him all the encouragement you can in the way of scholars.

John Howlett, an old and esteemed citizen of near Steel's Creek, died Wednesday, after a long illness from dropsy, in the 75th year of his age. He was born in Boone county. The funeral took place Thursday from the Beaver Lick, Boone county, church, where the remains were interred.—Warsaw Independent.

In this county matrimony has been at low tide for many months, and unless the marriageable portion of this glorious community revives that custom, the popular ink-slinger who indites the necessary papers, will slowly forget how to formulate them in accordance with the Statutes made and provided in such cases.

During the thunder storm last Wednesday night the lightning struck Dennis Nead's barn near Florence, burning the building, its contents of hay and grain, and a fine stallion. The barn and horse were insured. A few years since Mr. Nead had his barn and two horses burned, supposed to have been the work of an incendiary.

John P. Ryle was on examination last Friday and Saturday, with a view to obtaining a certificate to qualify him as a candidate for County Superintendent of schools at the August election. The examination has been certified to the State Board of Examiners, who will pass upon his qualifications, and if they are sufficient they will issue his certificate.

John J. Huey's fine family horse was ruined last Friday by getting one of its hind feet nearly severed by a mowing machine to which it was attached as one of the team. The near horse starting the unfortunate animal was forced in contact with the knife. The wound may heal, but all the tendons being cut, the horse will be worthless. It was a valuable animal.

The Bullittsville Sunday-school will hold its annual School Picnic, on the 29th inst., at J. J. Rucker's Grove, midway between Hebron and Constance. All other Sunday-schools are cordially invited to attend. Swings, hammocks, and croquet will be had in abundance. Wm. J. Howe and others will address the people upon temperance in the afternoon.

We hear it said that Superintendent Pickett has informed Prof. Mack, that the Common School in this district can not be consolidated with the Morgan Academy, unless every patron in the district is willing. That settles it. Who ever heard of a community as large as a Boone county district being unanimous on any proposition? Such things don't occur this side of the millennium.

It seems that Burlington is destined to survive the summer without enjoying the refreshing delicacy of a base-ball organization. The tobacco patch and wheat field have more attraction for the abundance of muscle that is usually spent on base-ball. Let them claim their own and we will try and jog along through time without the hair raising scenes developed by the manly sport.

Mr. Reed, our local dramatic man, is now very busy painting scenery and preparing for a series of entertainments to be given by him in the near future. These entertainments will consist of elementary scenes, comic plays and dramatic readings, all of which have been selected with great care by Mr. Reed, to please the numerous audiences before which he expects to appear. Mr. Reed impersonates more than twenty characters in which he will make some very great changes, each character being well studied. The community can safely anticipate something fine and worth attending, and those who attend these entertainments are sure to enjoy a good, hearty laugh, as the programme is nearly all comical.

Local Option.

At a meeting of the Boone county Central Local Option Committee, held at the Court-house, July 17th, 1886, the following appointments were made:

Elders Howe and Fullilove will lecture at the Sunday-school picnic to be held in John J. Rucker's grove about half way between Hebron and Constance, on the afternoon Thursday, July 29, 1886.

Elder Howe will lecture at Hopeful church July 30, 1886, at 7½ o'clock p. m. instead of at Walton at that time.

Elder Fullilove will lecture at Sand Run church, July 27th at 3 o'clock p. m., and at Taylorsport School-house, July 28, 1886, at 3 o'clock p. m.

Elder Keller will lecture at Petersburg, July 26 at 7½ o'clock p. m.; East Bend, July 27 at 7½ o'clock p. m.; Burlington July 28 at 7½ o'clock p. m., and at Walton July 30, 1886, at 7½ o'clock p. m.

H. P. Stephen's appointment to lecture at Gunpowder July 22, 1886 is withdrawn.

Benjamin Stephens, chairman of the Florence district committee, reports as additional committeeman upon his committee, George Foster, colored, and William Huey, colored.

OSCAR GAINES, Chirman.

G. G. HUGHES, Secretary.

For a couple of years Deputy Sheriff German has been trying to capture one William Masters, of Constance, for whose arrest be has a couple of bench warrants issued on indictments for minor offenses, and early last Thursday morning he and the high Sheriff went to Constance to interrupt William's morning slumber by a surprise in the shape of an arrest. Clutterbuck took his position at the front and German, his at the rear of the house. When the Sheriff entered the house, Masters, unobserved, made his exit through a window, and, like a meteor, shot toward the river. German got a glimpse of the fleeing man, and like a heavily charged sky-rocket, started in pursuit, and instanter they both disappeared over the river bank, but Masters had such a start that he made good his escape in the dense willow growth along the beach. This exciting chase took place while Clutterbuck was seaching the house, and he was, therefore, totally ignorant of the sprinting contest his deputy was having on the outside. The Sheriff, coming out of the house just as his deputy returned, asked, "have you seen any thing of him?" German replied: "See anything of him! Thunder and lightning! You ought to have seen our race from here to the river. He is a runner from away back, and don't you foget it either." It's said that when German was coming up from the river that he was "puffing and snorting" equal to half a dozen tow-boats.

On the 4th inst., Robert Masters, of Constance, imbibed too freely, and while in a state of intoxication, repaired to the Christian church at that place where a Sunday-school was in session. Robert indulged in some very unbecoming behavior directly he entered the house, and the officers seeing he was bent on creating a disturbance dismissed the school, Robert not leaving the house, though, until he was ejected, by which time he was rather boisterous and using some very profane and abusive language. The next day after his escapade, a warrant was sued out and placed in the hands of an officer for his arrest; but he eluded the vigilance of the officers until last Thursday, when Sheriff Clutterbuck and his deputy, German, out flanked and captured him in a blackberry patch, and brought him to Burlington and lodged him in castle Cowen, from whence he was taken Friday afternoon and tried before Esquire Oscar Gaines and a jury, County Attorney Tolin prosecuting and H. J. Foster defending. Quite an array of witnesses were present, but only a few of them were put on the stand, but they made a very strong case against the accused. The defendant addressed the jury in his own behalf, and made a very creditable plea for mercy; but the jury thought that a $50 fine was about the proper extent to which to admonish Robert, and not being able to replevy the fine he will languish in the county jail a period of 25 days from last Friday. No doubt Robert now thinks Sunday-school is no place for an inebriated lamb.

Masters is now in jail under the $50 fine and two bench warrants from the Circuit Court, the bail on one being $50 and on the other $100. The unfortunate fellow is badly in the hole and is to be pitied. By the time Robbert lays in the cooler until court, and then has to serve the other fines out, he will be quite a stranger to the citizens of Constance.

[illegible]

Last Wednesday night [illegible] worthy of commendation. We thank them for their pleasing music.

H. P. Stephens' lecture on temperance here last Friday evening, is looked forward to with much interest. His subject is one that should be of great importance to everybody and it is hoped that every one for or against local option, will be present.

Rev. Fullilove gave an interesting lecture here last week, and Rev. J. W. [illegible] will deliver a sermon on the same subject next Sunday evening.

Miss Annie Anderson is visiting in Corinth, and will attend camp meeting at High Bridge while absent.

Miss Lillie Kennedy, of Covington, is the guest of the Misses Darbey.

Miss Mary Haven, of Covington, is a guest of Miss Therese Lassing.

Miss Lillie Sayblers, of Tennessee, is visiting friends here.

BULLITTSVILLE.

Our young friend Charlie McFee, was dangerously hurt by being thrown from a horse a few days since. He was starting to milk, riding a young horse and carrying his milk bucket. Before he got fairly seated in his saddle the animal started to run and threw him across a fence, breaking a rib, a fragment of which pierced his lung. He is doing quite well at present.

Bullittsville can justly boast of one thing. She has the best hay-stacker in the county. As a builder of fancy, shapely stacks, we are willing to put Temp Graves, against any one. His only standing specimen is the one just above the Christian church.

Mr. Stephen Gaines and wife, who have been visiting friends and relatives here for the past few weeks, have returned to their home near Louisville.

Will Riley, who resides near North Bend, had his arm badly mashed by getting it caught in a self-binder. Nothing serious is anticipated.

Tim Westbay paid us a flying visit last Friday. Tim say that of all the places he has ever seen Bullittsville has the safest store-steps.

Mr. G. B. Porche has been canvassing in this neighborhood for a school.

A. S. Gaines took his second lot of lambs to the city the first of the week.

Geo. Kreylich was down on his semi-monthly visit last Sunday.

Dick Stephens "took in" Florence last Saturday and Sunday.

Charlie Basly has recovered from his recent severe illness.

VERONA.

Rev. J. H. Fullilove delivered a very elegant temperance lecture in the M. E. church on the night of the 14 inst., speaking about one hour and a half upon the subject. Our motto is, "Vote Local Option and save your boys." Verona has had local option for several years, still it has not either killed or driven business from our town, but, on the other hand has increased it. Our merchants do more business since local option was voted here than ever before. Last year there were five new dwellings built and one store house, a thing never known before in the history of Verona.

Threshing wheat and making hay is the order of the day. The wheat crop is better in this section than it has been for several years W. E. Sleet has a lot bought to be shipped next week. We understand he is paying from 65 to 68 cts. per bushel.

The pike to the depot still progresses. Nearly all the rock that have been hauled are broken. Keep the good work going, and gentleman, for the sake of all that's good and bad, don't stop hauling rock until you have reached the Baptist church.

Scott Meyers talks of moving his mill from our midst, much to the regret of the neighborhood. Verona is one of the best business points in the county and if such men as Scott leave us we will soon be graded among the dead towns.

Died—At his residence near Verona, on the 11th inst., S. R. McPherson, in the 81st year of his age. He was perhaps the oldest man in the county who was born, lived and died on the same farm.

Miss Mattie Hudson is visiting relatives at Gallatin, Tenn.

Marshall Whitson is convalescent.

Personal Mentions.

Charles Schramm, of Petersburg, is now in California on a brief visit.

Miss Yettie Davis, of Newport, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Bange, at this place.

L. B. Stephens, of Richwood, has been very sick for several days. Chills and fever.

Miss Jennie Mitchell, who was the guest of Frank Kirk and wife, last week returned home Sunday.

Mr. Edward Tucker, of Cincinnati, was visiting friends in the Florence neighborhood Sunday.

Misses Orie and Irbie Conner, were visiting their grandparents at this place several days last week.

Dr. L. C. Cowen, of Rabbit Hash, was in town Sunday, being on a professional visit to his brother's child.

Mrs. Hulett's step daughter, Miss Hulett, of Lagrange, is quite sick at her house, where she has been visiting for several days.

Yesterday Constable Moody, of Bellevue, lodged Elijah Harrison in jail in default of $50 bail. Harrison is a colored man, and has been working for Mrs. Polly Bolts for some time, and with whom he had a quarrel on Monday, culminating in his being landed in the county cooler.

Mrs. Runyan returned to her home at Covington Tuesday, after a visit of several weeks with her daughter at this place.

Mrs. Dr. Grant has been on the sick list for several days.

ILL FATED THEATERS.

Number of Theaters Destroyed by Fire Since the Year 1[illegible].

A curious return has been laid before the [illegible] Statistical Society by Dr. [illegible] with regard to the number of theaters which have been burnt down since [illegible]. He gives the total at 6[illegible], of which 51 were burnt down in the last half of the eighteenth century, 31 in the first quarter of this century, 100 from 1826 to 1850, 76 from 1851 to 1860, 103 from 1860 to 1870, 169 from 1870 to 1880, and 114 from 1880 to the end of last year; while three theaters at Detroit, Madrid and Orleans have been burnt this year. The number of persons who have perished in the flames varies very much; for, while 1,010 were burnt to death between 1781 and 1800, and 2,144 between 1840 and 1850, the total was only 241 for the ten years from 1850 to 1860. This is due to the fact that now and again some theater is burnt down while full of people, as was the case in 1794, when 1,000 persons perished in the theater at Capo d'Istria; in 1836, when 800 persons were burnt at St. Petersburg; and in 1845, when 1,670 persons perished in a Canton theater. The worst fires of the last few years have been at Vienna, where 450 people perished in the Ring Theater in 1881, and at Nice, where 70 persons were burnt to death in the same year. Altogether 6,573 persons have perished in the last 135 years, or 48 persons in every year, this being a very small percentage of the whole theater-going population.—N. Y. Post.

The young ladies who wear red jackets should be advised in time, and go to the seashore, instead of the country, this summer. Sea-cows don't chase women.—Lowell Citizen.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S
VERMIFUGE
ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country; but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Should a child look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and spasms are most frequently the result of these hidden sappers and miners. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing wholesome diet, tossing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.
Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave when too disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy, therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge.
Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in one sense, and to examine every bottle he buys. The simple name of FAHNESTOCK is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your Vermifuge can not safely be dispensed with in any family. Yours, &c.,

CAMBRIDGE, MD.
Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed.

A STRAWBERRY FARM.

A Description of the Largest One in the World.

Where Mirth and Industry Go Hand in Hand and There Is No Discrimination Between Male and Female Labor.

Did you ever see a strawberry farm? Not a strawberry bed nor a strawberry patch, but a farm of three or four hundred acres, on which nothing is cultivated but strawberries. Not unless you have been to Florida or somewhere along the southern Atlantic coast, and when you get as far up as Norfolk, Va., you can not only see a great number of strawberry farms, but one of 440 acres, which is the largest of its kind in the world, as Norfolk is the greatest strawberry shipping place in the world. Afar off the delicious odor comes wafted, and a little closer—mind, this is strawberry time—the glow, the picturesqueness, the work and fun are unsurpassed. For nearly all the pickers are negroes, and the negro laughs, sings, shouts and dances at his work. It is a fine, clear May day—for the Norfolk strawberries are in their prime about the first week in May—and half a mile from the strawberry fields one can hear the shrill laughter, the wild cries of the laborers, the hoarse shouts of the overseers, the sounds of music and dancing, as, when a strapping young fellow or a comely dusky maiden have got a good handful of parti-colored tickets, they are pretty sure to make a dash for the rude dancing pavilion and engage in a lively breakdown. Coming out of the skirt of brushwood into the field the scene unfolds itself. The hot May sunshine pours down upon hundreds of men, women and children, nearly all black. The field is divided into long rows and what appears to be bedlam is soon found to be really a wonderful system of order. Every thing goes by the watch of the strawberry farmer, who knows to a minute when the gang-plank will be hauled in of the big New York steamer, puffing and steaming in her dock up the river, her dark hull outlined clearly against the wharves and shipping of Norfolk—who calculates to a second how long it will take the stalwart oarsman to pull the heavy lighters, laden with strawberry crates high above their heads, upstream to the steamer. He knows, too, that the instant it is flashed over the wires that the New Jersey berries have touched a certain figure he can not ship another basket, although he may have thousands of them filled with the luscious fruit. So, from the day he begins to ship until the New Jersey berries come in he has every energy under whip and spur to get the berries on the New York steamer. The negro is not like any other laborer on earth. He will not work unless he is amused. As in the old slavery days when harvest time came the masters furnished ice and whisky and had a banjo in the field, and the head man in the long row with swinging scythes was ordered to sing his reaping song loudly, that the others might join in as the glittering blades mowed down the wheat, so the strawberry farmer of to-day has to keep his hands amused or they will not work. He must allow the rough pavilion to be put up; he must let Josh and Yellow Jack and Sam Jubilee bring their rusty old fiddles and their bones and banjos on the shaky bench for the musicians; he must let a booth be erected where lemonade and candy and tobacco can be bought for strawberry tickets; he must allow a venerable darky with a push-cart to shout energetically the beauty and lusciousness of his wares as he trundles his cart around the edge of the field. The merry, brown-faced laborers look ragged and poor, albeit their pockets are stuffed with tickets—the currency of the strawberry field—but the pickers always wear their old clothes in strawberry time. They have flashy silk frocks and glossy broadcloth at home, but down on their knees or sitting squat on the ground would be death to those sacred garments. The men and some of the women wear big, coarse hats, but among the women the antediluvian slat sunbonnet is by no means superseded, for the colored belle is always careful of her complexion. Each has a tray holding six quart-baskets. When this tray is filled up it is then taken to the paying booth, where the paymaster, with quart-boxes full of red and green tickets, receives the baskets and checks them off. Thus, no distinction is made between male and female labor, and the one that picks the most strawberries makes the highest wages. It is the rule on the large farms not to cash any tickets until after the rush of the strawberry season is over, but the ticket is a legal tender for any thing in and about the strawberry farms.

The laborers are divided into gangs, over each of which is placed an overseer, colored, like the pickers themselves. Sometimes these are surly and disagreeable. But the African being naturally a good tempered creature, they are oftener very jolly fellows. Nothing is more amusing than one darky's assumption of authority over another darky. If a picker is alert and spry, and particularly if she belongs to the gentler sex, the overseer is patronizingly encouraging.

"Ah, sisters" (all are brethren and sisters in the gospel, a negro that isn't a zealous church member being an anomaly), "you'se a makin dem berries fly into de basket. Keep dat up and you'll hab to hire a kyart to haul yo' tickets home."

Mary Jane or Eliza Jane or Belinda Jane shows all her teeth at this, and, with a coquettish toss of her head, "reckons" she won't be turned out of church this year for not paying her dues. Next to the lively Belinda Jane a great hulking fellow is sprawled all over the plants, while he slowly picks half a dozen berries at a time. The overseer bawls out: "Git up dar, you lazy black nigger. Yo' legs' too long and yo' feet's too broad fur dis heah strawberry field. You'se mashin' a peck fur every quart you picks. Yander is de fiddlers scrapin'. Dat foot kin dance quicker'n dat han' kin pick."

The owner of the foot bestirs himself, if he has not been affronted by being called a nigger—a term of reproach common among the negroes, but strictly interdicted among the best class of white people at the South, where the word is never heard. A [illegible] youngster, with [illegible] on [illegible] of [illegible] next under the overseer's eye.

"What you doin' in de heah field, boy? You ought to have a broadcloth coat on yo' back and a beaver hat on yo' head, an' set in de shade in a [illegible] chair. You don't know how to pick strawberries. You is a gentleman, you is. I bet your mammy will have [illegible] with you to make you mind yo' business."

Thus adjured, the youngster slyly exhibits a ragged pocket and shows a bundle of strawberry tickets, and, sticking his tongue out saucily, returns leisurely to his work. Presently, in the midst of his exhortation he comes upon a row half picked. Then he launches out and a perfect hurricane of profanity rages. An elderly sister, who is the president of the Daughters of Rebekah or the Order of the Galilean Fisherman, remonstrates earnestly.

"Bro' Samson, how kin you talk so, an' you a professin' Christian?"

"Sis' Lisbeth, I ain't professin' nothin' in strawberry time. I'se a backslider from de day I see de fust strawberry crate. Now, step 'long lively an' lemme see you clean up after dem good fur nothin' black niggers."

Just then a half dozen pickers came out into the narrow path, with their trays balanced on their heads. Bro' Sampson stops every one, and taking a basket at random, empties it into another basket. This is to see if any are picking green or decayed berries. If they are all right the pickers march off to the paying booth, where the busy tally-keeper checks them off. If not, a volley ensues from Sampson, interspersed with numerous charges of being a "black nigger," which is always sullenly resented. If the berries are not up to the standard they are ruthlessly poured out on the ground, and if one or two of these corrections are not enough the worthless picker is driven out of the field. Meanwhile those that have gone off to the paying booth are making various dispositions of their tickets. Some go for pies, for beer although the negro is not much of a beer drinker—and, if the picker is young and light of heel, with no fear of the "church," to the dancing pavilion. Old time jigs and breakdowns prevail, the negro musicians playing with a wild abandon which generates a catching enthusiasm. Many of the couples are strangers to each other, as strawberry time brings a great influx of negroes from as far as North Carolina, but the steps of acquaintanceship are easy and progressive. A couple paired in the dance are sometimes paired for life. When the engagement is announced they may be seen picking in company and putting all their tickets into a common fund.

As fast as the baskets come in they are put in crates ready to be moved on the big lighters or flat-bottomed boats that lie in the river. All day long the scene is busy, but when the last half-hour comes every thing is accelerated. At a given signal every picker is to stop, as not a moment is to be lost if the lighters are to reach the steamers on time. Already the roar and rumble of the trucks on the wharves can be heard like distant thunder. Probably several loads have already been lightered down, but every load is valuable, and it is highly important not to miss a single one. The capacity of the immense steamers seems limitless, as, although the bulk of the strawberry crates is considerable, their weight is trifling, and they are stowed all over the ship, wherever they can find a lodging-place. Samson is fairly boiling over by five o'clock. He rushes to the dancing pavilion and by dint of coaxing, storming and imploring, breaks up the festivities and gets the dancers down on their knees picking for dear life. Even the musicians are induced at this stage of the proceedings to help. The pie man is warned off the field until the last load is being headed for town. The owner, on horseback or in a light buggy, is giving orders and hurrying things up. The overseers are flying hither and thither, and no longer make jokes or bandy witticisms with the pickers. At last a long blast from the steamer's whistle is heard—that means perhaps that they have a half hour only to get the crates on board. Then every thing is trundled down to the shore, in five minutes the flat-bottomed boats are out in mid-stream meeting other flat-bottomed boats, and taking their place in line when they reach the pier. A great great force of truckmen—all black—are hurrying the heavily-loaded trucks into the steamer's open hold. They have to rush, for sometimes the line of boats extends half across the Elizabeth river, and when the bell rings the gang plank must be pulled in, although it may break the captain's heart to leave so much valuable freight behind, but railroad connections must be made, and no matter how long he might wait the string of boats would only become longer. At last, however, the whistle is heard, and, almost as the plank is hauled in, a few more crates are rushed aboard, and then the big ocean-going vessel pulls out and heads away. Those who have not been able to get their crates on board the fast passenger steamer must now take their chances on the slower freight steamer, which is somewhat risky. Nevertheless it is done with the hope which springs eternal in the human breast of better luck next time. The large shippers do not calculate to sell more than two-thirds and sometimes only one-half of their crops, as with such vast quantities as they raise they must allow a large margin for loss. It is necessary to the health of the plants, though, that every berry shall be picked off of them, so after shipping has ceased and the strawberries keep blushing out among the leaves a second picking takes place, out of which the owner makes nothing, as the strawberries are freely given to the pickers for the labor of getting them out of the way. But some of the same supervision exists lest the plants be trampled to death by careless feet, and some sort of tally is kept to see what the actual bearing qualities of each variety is. This is the strawberry time for Norfolk, for as long as the berries command a high price in New York and Northern cities they are not sold cheap in Norfolk. But when the second picking comes—a week or two after stripping has ceased—then a beggar might live on strawberries. Five cents a quart is a high price when they are cried about the streets—and often the very best can be had for two cents a quart at one's door, which is the usual price for picking. As a quart, however, can be picked easily without moving from one spot in those luxuriant fields, two cents is a very good price for such unskilled agricultural labor, fifty quarts a day not being an unusual figure. As the negro commonly works only that he may enjoy a spell of idleness, it naturally follows after strawberry times, when they are all in funds, that labor is hard to get. The laborers can make enough in the three or four weeks to keep them in a delicious and coveted idleness for as many more. Every employer around about holds his employes by a spider's web in the picking time.—Chicago News.

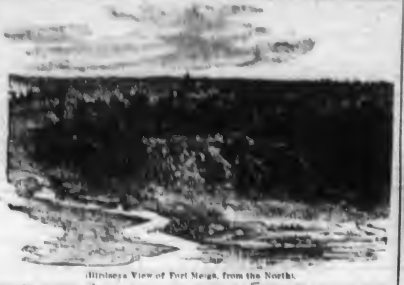
OLD FORT MEIGS.

Present Appearance and Interesting Surroundings of the Historic Spot.

The Present Outlook From the Old Fort.

By [illegible]

Fort Meigs occupies a very pleasing location on the southeast bank of the Maumee river, just above the [illegible] and [illegible] Perrysburg. Standing on its breezy height the visitor [illegible] a sweep of over twenty miles up and down the valley. The location was undoubtedly [illegible] selected as a site for the Fort on account of its expansive outlook, as well as its strong natural defenses, for certainly there is no spot in the State, or in the territory for many miles west and northwest, that will favorably compare with it as a point of extensive observation and scenic beauty. From above for many miles the silvery waters are seen, sparkling and flashing in their rapid flow over their rocky bed, winding among the pretty green islands and past the rich bottom lands covered with ripening grain.



(Birdseye View of Fort Meigs, from the North).

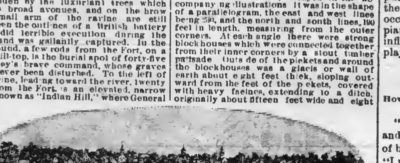
At the foot of the Fort the rapids end and the head of steam navigation commences. The river continues its winding way among the islands and bottom lands, but widens perceptibly after leaving the Fort. The banks are lined with groups of native forest trees, thrifty orchards and vineyards and pretty residences. Ten miles below, over a low lying headland, the church spires and many of the lofty buildings, in the growing city of Toledo come into view.

(Across the Fort, and down the Valley, from the West Angle).

As one stands upon the old fort and drinks in this beautiful vision, he is overcome with sympathizing pity for the savage natives who named the river the "Mother of Waters" and to whom it was so fondly endeared that many brave lives were sacrificed in struggling to retain it from the grasp of the white man.

The outlook from Fort Meigs embraces many miles in extent and every foot of the soil within range of the vision has been made sacred by deeds of heroism in the history of the country. A broad ravine, leading from the fort on the right, affords a glimpse of the pretty town of Perrysburg, half hidden by the luxuriant trees which line its broad avenues, and on the brow of a small arm of the ravine are still to be seen the outlines of a British battery which did terrible execution during the siege, and was gallantly captured. In the foreground, a few rods from the Fort, on a green hill-top, is the burial spot of forty-five of Dudley's brave command, whose graves have never been disturbed. To the left of this ravine, leading toward the river, twenty rods from the Fort, is an elevated, narrow point known as "Indian Hill," where General Harrison located an advance picket guard; it was the site of an extensive Indian cemetery, which fact gave it its name.

(Down the Ravine toward Perrysburg, from the North Angle, looking East; Dudley burial ground on the right, marked by a dead walnut tree).



(Across the river from the Fort, where the main British batteries were planted).

One mile down the river on the opposite side, is the village of Miami—the site of Fort Miami, occupied by the British General Proctor during the siege. Across the river, opposite Fort Meigs, is the town of Maumee, famous in historic lore; occupying a prominent position on a bluff bank, in the lower part of town, were located the British mortar batteries during the unpleasantness, and the outlines are still distinctly visible; on the site of the Presbyterian and M. E. churches were planted the main British gun batteries which did such terrible execution, and were captured by Colonel Dudley's gallant command. About two miles above Maumee is Presque Isle Hill, the scene of the "Battle of Fallen Timber."

PRESENT APPEARANCE OF FORT MEIGS.

Many of the heroes who defended Fort Meigs in 1813 have visited the spot in late years, and have expressed their surprise that the original contour of the Fort has been so well preserved. This is accounted for by the fact that a luxuriant and tenacious sod has preserved the embankments from the effects of storm and rain, and the proprietor of the domain and the patriotic citizens of the community have prevented the sacred soil from being disturbed.

The Fort proper covers a space of about fourteen acres. As one stands upon the ground, the most prominent feature is the grand traverse, extending nearly parallel with the river, from the northeast extremity of the Fort, a distance of 1,100 feet, to the main entrenchments at the opposite point. It was originally built twenty feet wide and twelve feet high; it has since settled about three feet but otherwise still retains its original shape and proportions, and is covered with green sod. This huge embankment was built as a place of retreat, in the event of any of the outer works being taken by storm, and shorter traverses were also erected at right angles with it from the brow of the hill and on the opposite side, extending southward, as a protection from a flank movement of the enemy. Four openings are to be seen in the grand traverse (three of them about twelve feet in width), which were originally covered with massive timber gates, through which the artillery passed; the one nearest the northeast end was larger than the others, having double gates opening directly onto the military road leading from the Fort to Lower Sandusky (now Fremont).

Outside of the grand traverse toward the river bank, about five rods distant from this double gateway, the well which supplied the garrison with water was located. It has long since been almost entirely filled up, still it, however, leaving a deep depression. The spot is marked by a white oak post extending about eight feet out of the ground. This is the end of a stick of timber sixty feet long, brought from Swanton two weeks prior to the great celebration of 1840 as a contribution from the patriotic citizens of that community toward the erection of a log cabin on the Fort in honor of the hero of the hour, General Harrison, who was then the Whig candidate for President. During the night after its arrival, some mischievous young men of Democratic proclivities in the neighborhood upended the stick and dropped it to the bottom of the wall, defiantly planting a hickory bush in the top of it; there the timber has since remained.

At the east angle of the Fort (fronting the large ravine where the British three-gun battery was planted), and extending along the north line of the Fort [illegible] facing the British batteries across the river, the most formidable earthworks were constructed and the [illegible] with their [illegible] although [illegible] their original proportions. The outworks [illegible] blockhouses and batteries [illegible]. A heavy timber stockade [illegible] extended around the [illegible] in the north and east lines, where the [illegible] were erected [illegible] just below the brow of the hill and the tops of the pickets projected outward at an angle of about forty-five degrees in the shape of a chevaux-de-frise. [illegible] along the brow of the bank to the right of the east angle of the Fort there was a double row of these pickets, and the [illegible] from the point to the [illegible] to the right of the east angle, where the single row again commenced.

Outside this stockade 300 sycamore barrels (sections of hollow sycamore trees, cut in lengths of five or six feet and filled with stones and gravel) were held in their places by ropes close to the stockade. The intention was to cut these loose to be hurled down the steep bluff in the event of a storming party attempting to take the fort by assault. There were three outer gates to this stockade for the passage of troops and teams—one at a roadway leading down to the river from about the center of the line running along the brow of the hill, through which the garrison was, for a time, supplied with water; one, to the right of the south angle of the Fort, where the forges and repair shops were located; one, to the right of the east angle, on the military road leading to Lower Sandusky. The line of these stockades can be followed, in many places, distinctly by the depressions in the ground caused by their decay; time, however, has destroyed every vestige of the stockade itself excepting the decayed stumps under the surface.

At the southwest extremity of the Fort was the main defense, constructed after the outer ramparts had all been completed (probably between the first and second sieges). After it was finished the officers' quarters, store-houses and magazine were moved into it from the opposite end of the Fort. The first and second locations of the magazine are marked by mounds, each about three feet high and twenty feet in diameter. The well defined outlines of this main defense are portrayed in the accompanying illustrations. It was in the shape of a parallelogram, the east and west lines being 230, and the north and south lines, 190 feet in length, measuring from the outer corners. At each angle there were strong block houses which were connected together from their inner corners by a stout timber palisade. Outside of the pickets and around the blockhouses was a glacis or wall of earth about eight feet thick, sloping outward from the feet of the pickets, covered with heavy facines, extending to a ditch, originally about fifteen feet wide and eight feet deep. Near the blockhouse at the northeast angle of this stronghold, on the brow of the hill, was the main battery, where Harrison stood watching the movements of Dudley's men over the river.

On the parade ground, about midway between the grand traverse and the outer extremity of the Fort at the brow of the hill, is the officers' burial ground. Lieutenant Walker's grave was surrounded by a neat picket fence and marked by a headstone, erected to his memory by his friends; these, however, have long since disappeared, the latter having been carried off piecemeal by relic-hunters. The small tract in the south part of the Fort, dedicated principally as a burial place for the "Pittsburgh Blues," has been staked off and never disturbed. The field on the river's bank, southwest of the Fort—the burial ground of the garrison—is still enveloped by the green sod which first covered it.

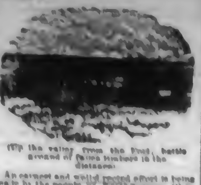
When the Fort was built the timber was cut down on every side for a quarter of a mile or more, in order to prevent surprise from the Indians and also to give unobstructed range to the cannon which defended the Fort. The large, handsome trees growing in the pretty ravine east of the Fort have all grown up since the date of the siege.

Immediately after the close of the war, the town of Orleans of the North (located on the bottom lands, between Fort Meigs and the river) became quite an important frontier point; the town of Perrysburg was laid out by the Government, however, on the elevated banks below, in 1816, and the once pretentious village of Orleans became a thing of the past; it is now known only in history, with nothing to mark the spot where it once existed. The Fort was then garrisoned by forty soldiers, under a Lieutenant; they were withdrawn in May, 1815, and the four heavy cannon, which were there, and the military stores were taken to Detroit by Captain Jacob Wilkinson, in the schooner Black Snake. Since that time Fort Meigs has been left to the sole care of those who owned the estate upon which it is located.

REUNION OF VETERANS OF THE WAR OF 1812 AT FORT MEIGS.

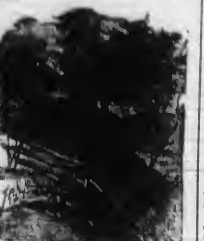
In June, 1870, there was an excursion of veterans of the war of 1812 to Fort Meigs, and quite a number were in attendance. The reception given them by the citizens of Perrysburg was governed by the most unbounded hospitality and reverence for the old heroes, many of whom were then in the neighborhood of eighty years of age. At the head of the column which marched to the Fort was borne an old flag which had waved over the battlements during the siege. It was torn and stained with the smoke of battle and on its lower border was inscribed in gilt letters: "2d Com'd, 1st Squad, 3d Brigade, 1st Div., O. Militia." It was owned by David McCheeney, of Warren County, O., and was in the charge of his father-in-law, Colonel Irvine, during the war. Forty-four of the old heroes were present upon this interesting occasion, among whom were the following: General Leslie Coombs, one of Dudley's men who successfully ran the gauntlet; Peter Navarre, Harrison's celebrated scout; Colonel Charles S. Todd, Harrison's aide-de-camp, and others more or less distinguished.

From these veterans, at the time of their reunion on the old Fort, was obtained much of the information contained in the foregoing description. Unfortunately the only plan of Fort Meigs on file in the War Department at Washington is a sketch made by Joseph H. Larwill, July 10, 1813, the day prior to the opening of the second siege, which is manifestly in part incorrect, although reproduced and adopted by Lossing in his "Field Book of the War of 1812," by [illegible] and by [illegible] Knapp in his history of the Maumee Valley.



(Up the valley from the Fort, battle ground of Fallen Timbers in the distance.)

An earnest and well-directed effort is being made by the people of Northwestern Ohio, and by prominent citizens in every quarter of the State, to locate the proposed Soldiers and Sailors Home upon this spot, which is not only most appropriate, but is in a higher sense and in every other way more eminently adapted to it. On this subject Mrs. Kate B. Sherwood, Past President of the National Relief Corps, in a well written editorial in the Sunday Journal, dated July 6, says:



(Down the small ravine, off the east angle of the Fort).

"Should the Board of Trustees locate the Ohio Soldiers' Home at this spot, the time is coming when they will receive the plaudits, not only of their own people, but of the Union, which holds in this historic spot a double share."

THE PIANO PLAGUE.

A Berlin Electrician's Humane and Invaluable Invention.

It is no secret, says a continental contemporary, that a private scholar is a ruined man if next door to his residence on the same floor a maiden practices on the piano from eight o'clock to twelve in the morning, and in the afternoon again from three to seven, besides giving performances to friends in the evening. Knocking against the wall, whistling, bombarding the wall with boots, is all of no avail against piano-mania. There has, indeed, hitherto been no remedy, and we are still waiting for a piano tax. Lately, however, a Berlin electrician has helped a tortured friend by means of a piano-killer. Miss Else fled to her loved piano on a lovely spring day; her delight at touching the keys could be felt through the wall, when suddenly—oh, heavens!—the whole piano went out of tune and not a single sound was correct. The girl trembled with fear, and the operators next door heard through the wall how she began to weep, which softened the heart of the electrician, who was, however, furiously attacked by his friend when attempting to restore its music to the instrument, the enraged savant swearing that the tortures which he had endured from the piano were not to be atoned for so easily. The case of Else's piano became widely known, chiefly because now and then the old clear music returned to the keys. The greatest musicians and pianist doctors came in flocks to examine the strange case, but no one could solve the riddle, which was finally explained as follows: A large electro-magnet was put into the room of the tortured savant, and its pole was put close to the wall, against which stood the piano in the next house. An electric battery was connected with the electro-magnet. Whenever a strong stream of electricity was turned on its effect could easily be felt through the wall by the horizontal steel springs in the piano, and although the electricity was not very powerfully felt it was quite powerful enough to put the piano out of tune. Whenever the electric stream was stopped, which occurred as often as the victim of the piano plague went out, the mystical influence stopped and Miss Else could play.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A BERRY RACKET.

How It Is Worked on the Economic and Careful House-Wife.

"My dear wife," he said, as he came and found her crying, while three quarts of berries reposed in a pan on the table, "I need not ask the cause of your sorrow. I know it. About an hour ago a huckster came along here shouting:

"'Berries! Berries! Eight cents a quart or three quarts for twenty-five cents!'"

"It was a glorious opportunity, as you thought, to save a cent, and you rushed out and took three quarts. You had scarcely entered the house when you heard something drop. You stood for a moment like one paralyzed. Then you flung yourself down in that chair and began to kick and squall, and the iron still burns your soul. However, my dear, brace up and let it go. You have bought dozens of quarts of berries this year, and on each occasion the man has measured his big thumb with the berries and beaten you out of a cent and a half. He is bound to get ahead of you in some way, and tears are of no avail. Rather set to work and plug up the hole in a quarter and pass it off on him some cloudy day."—Detroit Free Press.

Both Told the Truth.

Two men were engaged in a very hot discussion in front of the post-office the other day. Finally one of them blurted out:

"You're a liar!"

"You're another!" was the prompt reply.

A mutual acquaintance who was standing near came forward and said: "Gentlemen, give me your hands. I agree with both of you."

The final settlement of the dispute was indefinitely postponed.—Merchant Traveler.

—The attention of a policeman of Leith was attracted one night recently by a sizable brook of port wine, which flowed from the gate of a large warehouse into a neighboring sewer. Making sure that it was good wine and worth saving, the policeman aroused the warehouse manager, and it was found that a large vat had burst its hoops, permitting 1,200 gallons of wine to run out upon the floor, which was flooded to the depth of several inches. Assistance was called in, and some 200 gallons were ladled up and saved, but 1,000 gallons ran away.

—"Yes," said the tramp, "folks may talk about charitable institutions. Nowadays, if a man goes to the workhouse and gets a supper and lodging, he's got to do something in the way of work to pay for it. My stars, sir, I don't call that charity."

—In advocating the necessity of feeding a cow surplus foods beyond the other needs of the system a correspondent of the Farmers' Review says: "It is calculated that nearly two-thirds of all a cow eats is needed to sustain her as at rest, and all the profit comes from the food not required for this purpose."

—It is one thing to plant corn, potatoes and other crops that require frequent cultivation, and quite another to care for them. If cultivation be neglected planting may be loss, for profit in the crop depends upon prompt and thorough performance of every part of the work until growth is perfected.—Troy Times.

—Baked Eggs: Break as many eggs as will be needed into a well-buttered dish, large or small, according to the number of eggs; take care that each egg is whole. Sprinkle with pepper and salt and put a bit of butter on each yolk. Bake in the oven until the whites are set. Then serve out on toast or alone. They are much better than fried eggs.—Philadelphia Call.

—For tea, a palatable dish can be fixed of cold meat chopped very fine, hard-boiled eggs chopped with it; over this pour a dressing made of one egg, a small piece of butter, one-half cup of vinegar, a teaspoonful of sugar, all cooked together, and pour over the the meat. When it is well mixed and cold, place spoonfuls of it on small lettuce leaves nicely arranged upon a platter. This, with nice, hot biscuit, some fruit and coffee and bread and butter, is enough for any supper.—Chicago Journal.

—Potato Soup: Boil some potatoes, then rub them through a colander into two quarts of hot milk (skimmed milk will do very well); have some finely chopped parsley and onion, add both with salt and pepper, stew three-fourths of an hour; then stir in a large piece of butter and beat two eggs with a little cold milk, stir in quickly and serve with fried bread. There should be potatoes enough to make the soup creamy. A little meat stock is sometimes added to the soup, but it is hardly necessary to do it as it is so very good without.—Boston Budget.

FASHIONABLE CLOTHES.

The Cost of the Average Metropolitan Society Swell's Wardrobe.

A tailor who makes clothes for fashionable young men—and fashionable old men, too, for that matter—says that a marked change has come over the methods of some of his customers during the last year or two. It used to be the proper thing for rich men to make contracts with their tailors for a year's supply of clothes at so much per year. They got a new suit and wore it as long as it looked fresh; then they would take it back and obtain a new one in its stead, and so they were able to go through the year in a well-dressed way. It was an English custom that the gentlemen imported, and it was considered quite the necessary way for several years, till suddenly somebody began to suspect that it was not quite as economical as some other plan might be. The same thing dawned on lots of other people soon after, and that ended the custom. A rich man's tailor-made wardrobe on this plan used to cost anywhere from $1,000 to $3,000 per year, in exceptional cases, of course, amounting much higher. It was a bonanza for the tailor, whose hot flatirons seldom failed to make a creased suit returned by one customer bright and fresh enough for another.

Now rich men are paying for their clothes as they get them, at so much per suit. The old style, which did not amount to more than a renting of the clothes, and which went under on the score of economy, makes way for a new scheme, which, if the tailors are to be believed, is a good deal more expensive.

"The average swell in New York society," says the writer, "is spending now from $1,500 to $2,000 a year on his tailor if he is cutting any figure at all. Men do not know much about the cost of clothes and the expenses of manufacture. Show a man a coat that costs $20 and another that costs $70, and he will seldom hesitate to pay the $50 difference to get the higher-priced garment."

A physician, who is known up-town as the attendant upon some well-known families, was presented some time ago by an English manufacturer with a piece of cloth for a pair of trousers. He took the cloth to his tailor and ordered it made up. When the pantaloons were sent him a bill came with them for $30. He dropped in to pay the bill, and with a smile that seemed based on the well-grounded belief that his tailor had blundered he pointed out the figures and suggested that somebody had made a mistake. The tailor looked the bill over and said he guessed not; the bill was all right. Trousers of that sort were worth $30.

"But I furnished the cloth," persisted the doctor.

"Oh, the cloth. That is a matter of small consequence," said the tailor. "We never charge for the cloth. Our fit and our reputation are what make pantaloons cost in this establishment."—N. Y. Times.

BLOOD WILL TELL.

Pedigree a Better Guide in the Selection of Animals Than Appearance.

It is remarkable how closely a half-blood steer will sometimes resemble a full-blood. Usually there are marks, especially about the horns, that unmistakably indicate the inferior blood coursing in the veins of the animal. But occasionally one is met that may deceive, by its external appearance, even the sharpest expert. This shows how hard it is to judge an animal on its own individual merit, which is the favorite idea with many. This is all very well, as far as it goes, but unless something is known about pedigree, it is very easy to be grossly deceived. The outcome, if this is the only guide in selecting for breeding purposes, may be very disappointing. The likeliest looking bull or cow may breed the most unlikely calf; and right here comes in another point that is almost as deceptive as judging the animal wholly on its individual merits. The young may not give any sure indication of what they will ultimately develop into. An ungainly, scrawny-looking calf may develop into one of the most beautiful and valuable of animals; while an admirably well-formed and pleasing-looking calf may grow up to be an object of sore disappointment. Instead of preserving its regular proportions, it may fill out in a most unaccountably angular shape. Here apparent individual merit again fails to be a reliable guide. We must know something about the blood in order to reach any thing like a satisfactory conclusion. It is a better guide than individual appearance by itself.—National Live-Stock Journal.

TWO HUNDRED YEARS.

Albany, N. Y., Celebrates Its Two Hundredth Anniversary With a Grand Procession.

President Cleveland and Secretaries Bayard and Whitney Join in the Exercises—Governor Hill Delivers the Oration.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND'S SPEECH.

ALBANY, July 23.—The citizens, visitors and strangers here yesterday gave themselves up to the one task of celebrating the incorporation of the city two hundred years ago. At midnight the announcement of the arrival of the anniversary was begun by the ring of bells, and until daylight men, women and children swarmed the principal streets, blowing horns and singing. Small cannon were fired at frequent intervals, and bon-fires were lighted in many of the wide streets. Thousands of persons remained up all night, and in the morning were as ready to start in on the celebration as though they had had a good night's rest.

The first important event of the morning was the arrival of President Cleveland. The Burgess Corps marched to the West Shore depot and awaited the coming of the train. The train steamed into the depot a few minutes after six o'clock. Mayor Thatcher, on behalf of the city, bade the President welcome. Secretaries Bayard and Whitney and Private Secretary Lamont, like the President himself, looking bright and fresh. The party were immediately escorted to coaches. The Burgess Corps then took up the line of march, and the Presidential party were driven to the Governor's mansion. Governor Hill, on the arrival of the party at the Executive Mansion, received them as his guests. The Governor delivered a lengthy speech. He related the story of Heinrich Hudson's voyage in the "Half Moon," in 1609, and told in detail the events which led up to the present celebration.

After breakfast President Cleveland, accompanied by Colonel Lamont, went to Secretary Manning's residence. The President and Mr. Manning remained in conversation together for an hour and then the former returned to the Governor's mansion. The President, Secretaries Bayard and Whitney and Colonel Lamont, escorted by Mayor Thatcher and the members of the Anniversary Reception Committee, left the Executive Mansion at 10:30 o'clock and entering carriages were driven down to take their places in the procession. Governor Hill, escorted by members of the reception committee, followed a few minutes later.

The order to march was not given until eleven o'clock, although ten o'clock was the hour fixed for the head of the procession to move.

The First Division was under command of General Robert S. Oliver. Troy, Newburgh, Yonkers, Mount Vernon, Kingston, Poughkeepsie, Catskill, Hudson, Whitehall and Schenectady were represented by detachments of troops in this division. The First Regiment, of Philadelphia, also marched in this division.

Major General George S. Treadwell, commanded the Second Division. It comprised a number of G. A. R. posts from various cities of the States. The First Regiment and Tibbett's Veteran Association, of Troy.

The Third Division was commanded by Captain F. W. Cantwell. In it were the Rose Guards, of Philadelphia, the Albany Jackson corps, St. Joseph's Cadets, the Peck Zouaves, of Johnstown, M. J. Severance Cadets, and disabled members of the Albany Republican Artillery, the latter in carriages.

Major E. D. Ronen commanded the Fourth Division. It comprised the Albany Burgess Corps and their veterans, Mayor Thatcher and other city officials, the Bi-Centennial Committee, members of the Legislature and other invited guests.

The procession was the finest ever seen in Albany. President Cleveland rode in the Fourth Division, in an open carriage, with Secretary Whitney. Immediately after the procession the President and party went to the large rink on Lark street, which was already densely packed by an audience.

The exercises at the rink did not begin until 2:15 o'clock, although twelve o'clock was the hour assigned for beginning. The overture from William Tell by the orchestra was followed by a prayer by Bishop Doane. Governor Hill then delivered the oration of the day, after which Mayor Thatcher attempted to announce the next thing on the programme, but his voice was drowned by cries of "Cleveland!" "Cleveland!" "Cleveland!" The President arose, bowed and sat down again in his chair in the center of the platform beside Governor Hill. This did not satisfy the audience and the calls were renewed with added vigor. Finally the President arose, and advancing to the front of the platform said:

CITIZENS OF ALBANY—I come here to-day as an invited guest to a family reunion. I desire to be modest and not mingle too freely in the congratulations and celebrations which belong more properly to you. I do not wish to sound a single note of discord, but I have heard so much of the Dutch and of this being a Dutch city, so much talk of the olden time and of the customs, that when I remember that I dwelt two years among you I wonder whether I am in the right place or not. At the risk of creating discordance, I will say that in my time Dutch was not the language of the town. The people spoke English, and to me the words in English of kindness that I will never forget. I am glad, however, that you have got your charter. When I lived here, it was, I think, under a charter, but according to my remembrance, it was a charter passed by the Legislature of the State in the first year I spent here and approved by me. I must not detain you longer, but I cannot refrain from expressing to you my appreciation of the kindness with which you have received me, and from repeating the homely and old-fashioned wish, may the citizens of Albany and their descendants see many happy returns of the day.

President Cleveland spoke in clear ringing tones and his remarks were received with applause. When he sat down the audience called upon Secretary Bayard for a speech and he said a few words. Secretary Whitney also gracefully yielded to a similar demand.

At the conclusion of the exercises President Cleveland, Secretaries Whitney and Bayard and ex-Mayor Banks, drove to Secretary Manning's residence, where they remained about one hour. They then drove to the Governor's residence where, together with Secretary Manning, Francis Kernan, Lieutenant Governor Jones, Rufus W. Peckham, Colonel Lamont and others, they dined with the Governor.

Apprentice Glassblowers' Convention.

BALTIMORE, July 22.—The annual session of the Apprentice Glassblowers' Association began yesterday with forty delegates present. William Koehler, of Baltimore, is president; G. L. Loveake, of Glassburg, N. J., vice president; William Maddon, of Clayton, N. J., secretary, and John D. Dwyer, of Frankfort, Pa., treasurer. The day was devoted to a discussion of trade matters and the advisability of their joining the Knights of Labor as a body. They finally resolved to become members of that organization. The convention represents five hundred glassblowers. The Eastern division comprises Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Maryland and Canada.

Destitution in Newfoundland.

OTTAWA, Ont., July 23.—Hon. A. Wedell, from St. Johns, N. B., arrived Wednesday evening, to confer with the Government as to some means of relieving the destitute poor on the Newfoundland and Labrador coast. Over 500 families are starving, while in Labrador at least 1,000 families are in the worst state of destitution. One hundred and twenty persons have died so far. The glass, the first of July, stood at zero. A large number of starving fishermen from Indian Harbor have just arrived to implore food from the Government and assistance for friends left behind. No crops can be grown. The chances are that 1,000 people will have died before another month.

LOOKS LIKE WAR.

The Mexicans Are Massing Troops at Paso Del Norte—Uncle Sam May Have to Whip Mexico Again.

EL PASO, TEX., July 23.—The excitement on both sides of the river among the Mexicans as well as the Americans has been so great that both Governments have concluded, for the purpose of allaying it, to conduct further negotiations secretly and without publicity. Meanwhile soldiers continue as thick as blackberries in Paso Del Norte. The sleepy old place wears as martial an air as possible for such a relic of antiquity to assume. In marked contrast to this nervous exhibition of military power in Paso Del Norte and in contrast to the eager and excited interest taken in this international question by the citizens of El Paso, is the supremely calm indifference of Uncle Sam, who is drowsing at Fort Bliss, within a few hundred yards of the hostile hills of Mexico, on the other side of a shallow mountain stream. To look at Fort Bliss, nobody would imagine that within one mile of it a hostile city was bristling with armed men breathing fiery vengeance against the hated Americans. Surreptitiously a train load of troops from Chihuahua, that was massed as was announced last night arrived at Paso Del Norte. The Mexicans are perfect adepts in keeping their intended military movements quiet. Care is taken that whatever of a tangible nature really does transpire in military circles, is immediately brought to the knowledge of the Government at Washington. It is becoming more evident that Mexico is determined not to give Cutting up. Rumors on the streets of Paso Del Norte are to the effect that a train-load of troops with artillery is coming up from Chihuahua. It begins to look in this section like war.

Nearly Frozen to Death in a Refrigerator.

SOUTH NORWALK, CT., July 23.—Yesterday Wilbur Ayers, a provision dealer, went into his large patent meat refrigerator while his clerks were at dinner, and in some way the door slammed behind him, and he was locked in with the temperature at zero. Mr. Ayers weighs 200 pounds, but he soon began to feel sleepy and realized that he was freezing to death. He threw his body violently against the door many times, and succeeded in widening a crack in the inside plank, tore out the layer of charcoal between, and after repeated trials broke the outside plank, crawled out and fell in a heap on the floor, where he was found by one of his customers. His muscles in the right side were severed, and his ribs and arms paralyzed, while his body was one mass of bruises.

Increased Revenue Collections.

WASHINGTON, July 25.—The Commissioner of Internal Revenue makes a report up to June 30, from which it appears that the total collections for the year were $116,902,845. The total collections for the previous fiscal year were $112,421,121, showing an increase of $4,481,724. The increase was made up as follows: $1,581,055 on spirits, $1,500,274 on tobacco, $1,445,949 on fermented liquors. This amount was reduced by a decrease of $25,000 on banks and bankers, and a decrease of $20,554 in miscellaneous receipts.

Fatal Explosion of an Oleomargarine Tank.

CHICAGO, July 25.—In Armour's oleomargarine factory this morning a large tank on Forty-third street and Packers' avenue became overcharged with steam, and exploded with frightful force, sending its boiling contents over five men, while two others at thirty yards distance were injured by flying debris. Thomas Dolan has died from the effects of his injuries and James Bailey is not expected to live. The damage to the building is about $5,000.

A Brave Widow.

LEWISTON, ME., July 25.—Yesterday morning Kate M. Pincin, a war widow, drew her pension money in Augusta. While counting it she saw an ugly-looking man watching her. Passing through a deep wood, on her return from Gardiner to East Monmouth, the same man drove past her, seized the horse by the bridle and demanded her money. Mrs. Pincin coolly leveled a revolver at the man's head, forced him to mount his buggy, turn around and retreat towards Gardiner. Then she whipped up her horse and drove home.

Two Brothers Killed by a Constable.

LOUISVILLE, July 25.—In Graves County, Ky., the two Crittenden boys, under arrest for stabbing Alvin Wheeler, attempted to escape by knocking Constable Milton down. Milton shot and killed one and mortally wounded the other. The Crittendens attacked and cut Wheeler seriously for reporting them for selling liquor without a license.

Killed by Hornets.

OAKLAND, ILL., July 25.—Miss Hattie Johnson, of Brushy Fork, went out to gather blackberries yesterday. While doing so she knocked down a hornet nest. The hornets, enraged, stung her in not less than a hundred places, causing her body to swell to twice its natural size in less than an hour. The doctors say that she can not live.

The Craze to Jump Off the Big Bridge.

NEW YORK, July 25.—Henry J. Sweeny, of No. 118 Baxter street, this city, was prevented from jumping off the Brooklyn bridge to-night. Sweeny is seventeen years old, and when locked up he said his only purpose was to outdo Brodie and possibly make some money.

The Way They Steal in Chicago.

CHICAGO, July 25.—Mrs. C. R. Jaynes had a hand-satchel containing money and diamonds valued at $7,000 forcibly taken from her to-night while passing by the Leland House, in the full glare of the electric light. The thief has not been caught.

The Dime Museum Catches Him.

NEW YORK, July 25.—Stephen Brodie, the man who jumped from the Brooklyn bridge, is out on bail; he will be exhibited in a dime museum.

The Drouth in the Northwest.

CHICAGO, July 25.—The wide-spread and long-continued drouth in the Northwest has seriously injured the crops. The pastures in all the Northwestern States are reported as short, and in large sections ruined. In portions of Wisconsin the cattle are given feed owing to an inability to obtain sustenance in the dried-up pastures.

Absconders Return.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 25.—Charles H. Brown and John Grimsley, two of the absconding township trustees, have returned to Washington, Davies County, Ind. They declare their purpose to remain and face the music.

Poisoned Meat.

ST. PAUL, July 25.—Several persons have died at Hutchinson, Minn., from eating meat supposed to contain poison. The butcher from whom it had been purchased, in order to prove it wholesome, gave some to his two children, who died.

Grain Ruined by a Storm.

PORTLAND, DAK., July 25.—The Pioneer Press says: It is estimated that the grain ruined by yesterday's hail storm in this section will aggregate 750,000 bushels, which at present prices means a loss of $450,000.

Killed for Refusing to Treat.

PITTSBURGH, July 25.—In a fight at a German picnic Henry Hans was instantly killed by having his skull crushed in with a large bowlder. Thomas Illhart and Gus Dollar were seriously but not fatally hurt. The fight was caused by Hans and his friends refusing to give a party of unknown roughs beer, which they demanded without pay. The assailants escaped.

Forty Killed.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 25.—An explosion occurred in the Government magazine near this city to-day, killing forty persons and wounding a large number. The buildings were entirely destroyed.

CANADA

Actively Engaged in Preparing Her Defenses.

Every Port on the Pacific Coast is to be Immediately Fortified.

MONTREAL, QUE., July 23.—Great interest in the work of fortifying the Canadian ports on the Pacific Coast has been aroused. The graving dock at Esquimault on Vancouver Island, has been completed, the contractors having just handed it over to the Government, and it is now proposed to fortify Esquimault. There is an insignificant battery there at present, but it is intended to erect a first-class fortress as a set off to the great Russian fortress of Petropolaupski in the Northern Pacific. Colonel O'Brien and a corps of Imperial engineers from Halifax have passed through Montreal on their way to British Columbia. They will survey Esquimalt and Victoria Harbor with other points covering the Canadian Pacific Railroad Company's part at the Pacific, namely, Vancouver City. Sites for several forts will be selected immediately, and the armaments will be shipped from England at an early day. It will be remembered that the first freight sent over the Canadian Pacific railroad was a train of munitions of war, sent by the Imperial authorities from Halifax to Port Moody, B. C., which occupies only eight days in transit. The British Government having adopted the Canadian Pacific railroad as the military route between England and the East, is deeply interesting in seeing that the railroad harbor on the Pacific is properly protected, and it is believed that millions will be expended almost immediately in that quarter by the Imperial and Canadian Governments jointly. The Canadian Minister of Militia, Sir Adolph Caron, has gone to England, and it is believed his mission has largely to do with the arrangement of the terms on which Canada and England will co-operate in the construction of those important military works. It is said in well informed circles that Canada and England will jointly erect the work, that England will furnish the armament, which will be first-class, and that Canada will supply the garrison in times of peace. It is also understood that in connection with the defenses there will be the most modern torpedo service in the entrance both north and south of Vancouver Island.

DESTRUCTIVE STORM.

Pittsburgh and Adjacent Country Damaged to the Extent of $350,000.

PITTSBURGH, PA., July 26.—Shortly before noon to-day a rain-storm passed over Allegheny and this city. For half an hour rain and hail descended in torrents, doing immense damage, threatening a repetition of the great Butcher's Run flood, whereby thirty-seven lives were lost, and of which to-day is the twelfth anniversary. The lower portion of the two cities suffered the greatest damage. Cellars, first floors of dwellings and store-rooms were flooded; fences and outhouses washed away. Telegraph and telephone wires are down in all directions. A number of streets are impassable, and trains on several railroads have been temporarily abandoned on account of slides and wash-outs. The damage is estimated at nearly $200,000. No loss of life has as yet been reported. The damage by this morning's storm will probably reach $350,000. The storm was the most severe known for many years. From almost every town along the rivers reports are coming in of great damage. Houses were flooded and struck by lightning, crops destroyed and trees and fences washed away. Almost every railroad entering the city suffered from land slides and washouts. Whole fields of wheat and corn have been destroyed, and at one point near Evans City a strip of woodland seventy-five yards wide by three-quarters of a mile long was leveled by a tornado.

A Druggist's Mistake.

CLEVELAND, O., July 26.—Early this morning, Mrs. Andro Bartoli, an Italian woman living on Broadway, near the great Newburg Rolling Mills, sent her son to J. A. Bartlett's drug store, near by, for ten cents worth of cream tartar and the same amount of sugar of milk. Three children were ill and the drugs were for them, the mother also taking of the medicine. Instead of sugar of milk the druggist gave the lad arsenic, and to-night the mother is dead and three children are not expected to recover. The druggist is crazy with grief.

A Crank After Logan.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 26.—Yesterday afternoon a well-dressed, gentlemanly appearing man was found prowling around General Logan's house. He refused to believe the servant's statement that the General was absent from home, and finally, becoming very much excited, drew a revolver and threatened to kill some one. He was arrested and taken to the station house where his language showed him to be a man of education, although evidently insane.

Starving Fishermen.

BOSTON, July 26.—A dispatch from St. Johns, N. F., states that there is dire distress from want of food among the fishermen of Labrador. Out of two hundred persons in Astoria a hundred have died. There is great suffering and mortality in other places, including the northern coast of Newfoundland.

Public Buildings.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—It is not now probable that any more public building bills will be passed this session of Congress. Sixty of these bills are now on the calendar, and about thirty have been passed during the session, some of which have been vetoed, and some of which have not yet passed the Senate.

Anarchist Sympathizers Meet.

CHICAGO, July 26.—A meeting of two thousand sympathizers of the Anarchist prisoners was held to-night. A strong force of police was present, but there was no disturbance.

Another Dynamite Bomb Found.

CHICAGO, July 26.—Another big dynamite bomb, supposed to have been prepared for the Haymarket riot, has been found in this city.

Canada's Population Still Increasing.

BRIMFIELD, ILL., July 26.—J. W. Harrington, of this place, has decamped to Canada, after victimizing his neighbors out of several thousand dollars.

—The military balloon establishment at Meudon, France, has been placed on a permanent footing. Designs, construction and training will be carried on there, while every engineering college will have a balloon department, and a company in each engineer regiment will have ballooning duties assigned it.

—It has been estimated that coca is used by 10,000,000 of the human race, betel nut by 100,000,000, chiccory by 40,000,000, coffee by 100,000,000; 300,000,000 eat or smoke hashish, 400,000,000 use opium, 500,000,000 use tea, and all the known peoples of the earth are addicted to the use of tobacco.

NEWFOUNDLAND

Hundreds of Dying and Starving People Cry for Help.

OTTAWA, ONT., July 23.—Hon. A. Wedell, from St. Johns, N. F., arrived last evening to confer with the Government as to some means of relieving the destitute poor on the Newfoundland and Labrador coasts, along the northern coast of Newfoundland. Over 500 families are starving, while in Labrador at least 1,000 families are in the worst state of destitution. One hundred and twenty persons have died so far. The glass the first of July stood at zero. From Cape Bauld, Newfoundland, to Cape Mugford, on the Labrador coast, there is one solid barrier of ice, and no fishing has been possible. A large number of starving fishermen from Indian Harbor and Sandwich Bay have just arrived to implore food from the Government and assistance for friends left behind. No crops can be grown. The chances are that 1,000 people will have died before another month if help is not afforded.

A STRANGE STORY

Which Seems Strongly Flavored With a Touch from Joe Mulhatton.

COLUMBUS, O., July 22.—A strange story comes from near Bradford Junction concerning Simon Wilcox, a farmer, who blasphemed his Creator for the destruction of crops by a hail-storm. Wilcox had been an enthusiastic church member, but lost his faith when he surveyed the ruin in his field last Tuesday. In the midst of excited cursing he was paralyzed, and could not leave the spot. His neighbors found him, but could not release him. Their reports are probably exaggerated. They say that he was surrounded by an intense heat, and that no one could approach him because of it. A pole was brought to push him out of the heated circle, but the pole was burned off. Toward night he fell unconscious, the heat disappeared, and he was picked up a raving maniac.

Dragged to Death.

WEBB CITY, MO., July 23.—The little ten-year-old stepson of John Brinkley, last evening, was leading a Texas pony of doubtful disposition to water by a long rope halter. The animal became unmanageable, and the little fellow determined to conquer him, wound the rope around his wrist. The horse gave a plunge, throwing the child up in the air, and whirling around a few times, started at full speed over the hill. The mother of the boy was standing in her yard and saw the horse start and her son being dragged over the rocks, while his body was bouncing up and down, and heard his screams and cries for help as he passed near her in his course, but was powerless to help him. The horse was finally stopped by Jim Carr. The lad died in an hour and a half after being taken to his home.

Albany's Bi-Centennial.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 22.—Albany people have given themselves up, body and soul, to-day to the task of celebrating the incorporation of their city by Governor Thomas Dongan, just two hundred years ago. The uproar that broke loose at midnight, when the bells announced the arrival of the anniversary, continued until daylight. Men, boys, and even women, went up and down the principal streets blowing horns and singing until morning came. Men and boys organized themselves into marching bands and went from one part of the city to another, blowing two or three horns together and stopping before hotels and private residences and giving impromptu serenades. Small cannon kept up their salutes and bonfires lighted up the principal streets, and the red fires' glow was reflected from the skies above until they paled in the gray of approaching morning.

A Treasurer Defaults for Half a Million.

BOSTON, July 22.—The directors of the Lowell Bleachery Corporation removed Samuel H. Snelling from the office of treasurer, which he has held for twenty-seven years. A committee to investigate his accounts said he has been guilty of grave irregularities, anywhere from $200,000 to $500,000. The capital stock of the corporation is $550,000, but this is no indication of its wealth, for the assets are far in excess of that figure. It has suspended him pending an investigation.

Michigan Secured It.

DETROIT, MICH., July 21.—Detroit and Michigan are perhaps more directly affected by the new extradition treaty with England than any other city or State, because of the close proximity to the Dominion, which enables criminals to escape there. The suggestions for the treaty were drafted by Edwin F. Connolly, a lawyer of this city, who was then chief of police, assisted by Prosecuting Attorney Robertson. These two gentlemen brought the matter to the attention of Secretary Frelinghuysen.

The Indians Got Away.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—Captain Lawton, with his command, surprised Geronimo's camp on the Youngi river, about 130 miles southwest of Campas Sonora, or nearly 300 miles south of the Mexican boundary line, capturing all the Indian property, including a large quantity of dried meat and nineteen horses. The warriors escaped.

Henry Berg on Inoculation.

NEW YORK, July 23.—Henry Bergh declares that small-pox, cancers, tumors and other forms of disease are resulting from vaccination, the whole principle of which is wrong. He denounces the Pasteur remedy as a humbug.

Too Much Rain.

TOPEKA, KAS., July 22.—Western Kansas and Eastern Colorado are suffering from heavy rains and washouts, the Arkansas river being higher than at any time before in twenty years.

A Mormon Convicted of Perjury.

SALT LAKE CITY, July 22.—Ambrose Greenweld, a Mormon pillar, was convicted to-day of perjury. The case has been a sensational one, and Gentiles are rejoicing over the outcome.

Respite from the Gallows.

ST. LOUIS, July 22.—Governor Marmaduke has granted a respite until August 6 to John Smith, who was sentenced to hang to-morrow with Joe Gump, at Gallatin, Mo., for the murder of Wm. C. Gladson, of Monroe County, Iowa. The Governor granted the respite in order to examine some new evidence in Smith's case. Gump will be hanged to-morrow.

Wages Voluntarily Advanced.

PITTSBURGH, July 22.—The Pennsylvania Tube Works Company, employing several hundred men, have voluntarily advanced the wages of their workmen ten per cent.

Two Boys and a Tin Box.

CHICAGO, July 23.—Herman Jacobs and Ed Kroncke, two boys, found a round tin box while playing in an alley, and attempted to open it by striking it with an axe, when a frightful explosion occurred, mangling the boys in a terrible manner. The box is supposed to have contained dynamite, and was probably a relic of the Anarchist riots.

World's Bicycle Record Beaten.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., July 22.—Wilfred H. Barber to-day beat the world bicycle record by ten seconds, making a mile in three minutes, fifty-one seconds.

Shot by Her Baby Brother.

MARSHALL, ILL., July 22.—At Hazel Dell, a village just over the west line of this county, in the south-east corner of Cumberland, Winnie, the twelve year-old daughter of D. H. Sanford, of that village, was shot by her five-year-old brother, who was playing with a gun. The ball passed through the abdomen, inflicting a fatal wound.

It Was Loaded.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 22.—Wilbur Ryan, nineteen years of age, while fooling with a revolver to-night, shot and killed Fred Kallsmyer, a lad twelve years his junior. He made the fatal mistake of supposing that the pistol was not loaded. The boys were cousins.

XLIXTH CONGRESS.

First Session.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—SENATE.—Memorials of the Evangelical Alliance of the United States and China were presented, setting forth the injurious effect of the outrages on Chinamen. A House bill was reported adversely, proposing to loan tents to veteran associations, the War Department having no tents on hand. A number of veto pension bills were reported back. The Payne bribery case was postponed temporarily for the oleomargarine bill. The rate of tax was reduced from five to two cents. Several other amendments were adopted and the bill finally passed—yeas [illegible], nays [illegible]. The sundry civil bill was called up and temporarily laid aside for the Payne case. After some discussion it was agreed to publish the three reports in the Record. At [illegible] p. m. the Senate took a recess until 8 p. m., the night session being for the consideration of the sundry civil bill.

HOUSE.—Mr. Hatch, Chairman of the Agricultural Committee, denied the assertion of Mr. Ingalls in the Senate to-day that he was personally interested in the oleomargarine bill. Senate bills were passed for the construction of bridges across the Tennessee and Cumberland rivers. The Senate amendments to the naval appropriation bill were non-concurred in and the river and harbor bill was referred to the committee of the whole, and read in detail. A motion to strike out the New York harbor amendment was voted on, 88 to 81. The point of no quorum being made, the committee rose. Mr. Morrison reported back his resolution to adjourn July 28, and pending action the House at 5 p. m. took a recess, the evening session being for the consideration of bridge bills.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—SENATE.—Petitions were presented from Knights of Labor in favor of the Oklahoma bill and land bills. The Payne bribery case was taken up and considered, Messrs. Pugh, Hoar and Logan speaking. Mr. Teller then took the floor, but gave way to a motion to adjourn shortly before 6 p. m.

HOUSE.—The concurrent resolution to adjourn July 28 was agreed to 115 to 36. Thursday and Saturday of this week were set apart for the consideration of the bill to increase the navy. The river and harbor bill was sent to conference with all the Senate's amendments non-concurred in. The inter-State commerce bill was opposed by the Northern Pacific forfeiture, and the former prevailed—yeas 112, nays 89. At 5 p. m. the House took a recess until 8 o'clock, when the inter-State commerce debate was continued.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—SENATE.—A resolution was adopted calling upon the Civil Service Commissioner for all changes in the rules and violations thereof since March 4, 1885. The legislative appropriation bill was reported from conference with certain disagreements which were insisted upon, and returned to conference again. The calendar was taken up and several pension bills passed, together with bills for the erection of public buildings at Clarksburg, W. Va., Springfield, Mo., Lynn, Mass., and Nebraska City, Neb. The naval appropriation bill was reported from conference committee and agreed to. The Payne bribery case was resumed. Messrs. Teller, Sherman, Eustis and Frye speaking. At 6 p. m. the Senate adjourned with the understanding that a vote would be taken at 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon. Mr. Evarts is to be followed by Mr. Hoar.

HOUSE.—The conference report on the bill prohibiting the passage of special laws in the Territories was agreed to. The oleomargarine bill was reported back with Senate amendments. A number of committee reports were made. The inter-State commerce and the navy increase bills were laid aside, and the House went into committee of the whole on revenue bills, in order to reach the oleomargarine bill. A number of measures were laid aside after votes and incidental debates up to 5 p. m., when the House adjourned.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—SENATE.—Mr. Blair rose to a question of personal privilege, and explained his connection with the attempted collection of a $200 fee in a pension case. A resolution on the fisheries question, instructing the Committee on Foreign affairs to make an inquiry, was submitted by Mr. Edmunds. The Payne case was taken up and debated by Messrs. Call, Evarts and Hoar. An investigation was finally refused by a vote of forty-four to seventeen. The sundry civil bill was taken up and considered until 6 p. m., when a recess was taken until 8 p. m. The same order of business was continued.

HOUSE.—A resolution setting apart to-morrow night for public building bills was recommitted, with instructions to amend it for land forfeiture bills—yeas 138, nays 93. The oleomargarine bill was reached, and, after a short debate, passed as it came from the Senate—174 to 75. The Rhode Island contested election case of Page vs. Price was called up. On motion to adjourn the Republicans refused to vote, and the case was withdrawn. The river and harbor bill was reported and returned to conference. A conference report on the naval appropriation bill was agreed to, and at 5 p. m. the House took a recess until 8 o'clock, the night session being for the consideration of pension bills.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—SENATE.—A resolution of Mr. Edmunds' was passed directing the Committee of Foreign Relations to investigate the subject of Canadian seizure of our fishing vessels. The rest of the day and evening were spent mainly on the appropriation bills.

HOUSE.—The new naval ship bill was passed. The evening session was devoted to land grant forfeiture bills.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—SENATE.—A bill was passed directing the Commissioner of Labor to make investigation in regard to convict labor. A joint resolution was placed on the calendar proposing an amendment to the constitution in relation to alcoholic liquors. The resolution discharging the Finance Committee from consideration of the Morrison surplus resolution was laid over on the statement that it would be reported to-morrow. The President was called upon for information in regard to the detention of Editor Cutting by Mexico. The deficiency appropriation bill was considered. The fortifications and naval bills were reported. The Senate went into executive session at 4 o'clock and took a recess at 6 p. m. until 8 o'clock. At the night session there was no quorum and pension bills were considered in open session.

HOUSE—The legislative bill was reported from conference, and the amendment providing for Senators' clerks objected to—yeas 96, nays 121. Further conference was ordered. Under the call of States a number of bills were introduced and referred. The Northern Pacific land grant forfeiture was taken up and debated until 5 p. m., when the House adjourned.

Louisville Leaf Tobacco Market.

All the large manufacturers have been buying, and with more activity than in any recent week. The strongest grades in the Burley category have been medium grades of fillers leaf and in colory lugs. Low and high grades being without new features. Dark and heavy styles have not varied much, if in any degree, since last report. Low grades have been slow as usual, but domestic and foreign styles of leaf above that category have been steady and if possessed of any special quality they have been firm. Crop advices have been highly favorable, and in some of the upper counties topping has begun. The crop is probably in a clean, healthy condition in all quarters. We advance Burleys [illegible] for good lugs and medium to good leaf. We quote 1885 tobaccos as follows for full weight packages:—

Poindexter was sent from Louisville, with a sentence of sixteen years for murder.

GREAT excitement exists in Greensburg over the marriage of old man Bishop, aged seventy years, to Rella Boston, aged seven years four months and seven days, under false pretenses. The child-wife was taken before the grand jury a few days ago. Her testimony was not of any importance, and her answers were entirely childish. Bishop can not be found, but he is thought to be in the neighborhood. Rella Boston, or Bishop as she calls herself, is slightly built, is small even for her age, being forty-five inches high, has red hair and dark eyes, is intelligent looking, and is, in fact, very bright. David Judd, the preacher who solemnized the rites of matrimony, was brought in on a bench warrant, on the 22d. He is a very old man, and very feeble. He says he married them according to law, except filling up the marriage certificate. He will be indicted for marrying a girl under lawful age. The limit of the law is twelve months in jail and $1,000 fine in such cases. An attempt will be made to place the unfortunate little girl in an orphan asylum.

A HORRIBLE story comes from Oregon, Oldham County. Six months ago a man named Watson took charge of the district school there. He appeared educated and gentlemanly and made a favorable impression with parents and scholars. Every thing went smoothly until a few days ago, when it is alleged he detained three of his pupils—little girls seven, eight and nine years of age—after the other scholars left. When the room was cleared he locked the door and deliberately maltreated the three children. He let them go home about dusk and they told their parents. A mob was organized at once to lynch the brute, but he escaped, going to Sulphur Station, five miles distant. News of the outrage had preceded him and a crowd caught him there, stripped him naked, tied him to a tree and gave him 100 lashes. He was then given five minutes to leave the country and made the most of his time, cutting through the woods. The little girls are all in a precarious condition.

A LARGE Maltese cat was seized with hydrophobia the other afternoon, at the residence of Mrs. Stokes, West Market street, Louisville. It attacked a small child of Mrs. Stokes, but before it could inflict any wounds a young man, George Buckle, came to the rescue, and knocked it in the head with a shovel. The cat revived in a moment, and sprang upon Buckle's shoulders, scratching his face and biting his ear. Buckle threw the cat to the floor and killed it with a few more blows from the shovel, but about an hour later was taken violently ill. His mind was erratic late that night, but Dr. Griffiths, who examined the patient, said the bite would not be fatal.

A DIABOLICAL PLOT.

Details of the Anarchist Scheme of Bloodshed and Ruin.

Several of the Followers of the Red Flag Turn Informers—Their Startling Recital—Strong Evidence Against Spies, Fielden and Lingg.

[illegible]

CHICAGO, July 20.—Nine police officers and three private citizens gave evidence yesterday on behalf of the prosecution in the trial of the Anarchists. Two important points were made. First, that Fielden fired on the police with a revolver about the time the bomb was thrown; second, that Spies as early as February, 1885, had been working as an organizer for armed revolution which was to begin with the seizure of Chicago about May 1, 1886, when an attempt to enforce the Eight-Hour law would leave thousands of working men idle and ready to join in a scheme promising rich results in the way of plunder. Spies attempted to get the officers of the Knights of Labor Assembly of Grand Rapids to join the scheme, and the president of that assembly, Luther V. Moulton, was the most important witness on the stand yesterday. The evidence that Fielden fired on the police was abundant and conclusive, and seemed sufficient in itself to put a halter around the neck of that individual. Detective Bonfield testified to arresting Spies and Schwab, and said that in an interview with Spies, after his arrest, on the Haymarket tragedy, he (Spies) stated that he approved of the method used to exterminate the police, but thought it premature—that the time had not arrived to start the revolution. The witness exhibited a number of dynamite cartridges, fuses, revolvers, a dirk made from a file and other things which he found secreted in the office of the Arbeiter Zeitung, Spies' paper, and the organ of the Anarchists.

CHICAGO, July 21.—In yesterday's proceedings in the trial of the Anarchists the evidence tendered by the prosecution was the most important, but at the same time the least sensational yet offered. This, at least, in the opinion of State's Attorney Grinnell. The prosecution occupied most of the forenoon session in proving that the riot at the McCormick works May 3 was instigated by a few Anarchists led by Spies; that Spies, after inciting that riot, wrote and circulated inflammatory and lying accounts of the outbreak, with intent to incite the working-men of the city to further riot; that it was in defiance of the active opposition of the leaders of the strikers that Spies and his gang captured the meeting which immediately preceded the McCormick riot, and incited that meeting to attack the non-union working-men; and, generally, that that riot was directly the work of the Anarchists in the carrying out of their plot to sack and plunder the city, as described in the testimony of the witness Moulton the previous day.

The testimony presented in the afternoon clearly proved that Spies was the writer of the mysterious "Ruhe" notice in the Arbeiter Zeitung, that being the signal for the opening of the revolution by the armed forces of the Anarchists; that Spies and Schwab were directly responsible for the incendiary screeds in the Arbeiter-Zeitung; that Spies was the author of the "Revenge" circular; that Spies, Neebe and Schwab, directly, and the other prisoners, indirectly, were responsible for the circulation of murderous Anarchistic literature, such as Herr Most's "Science of Revolutionary Warfare;" and that, altogether, the Haymarket riot, the McCormick riot, the throwing of the bomb, the publication of the Alarm and Arbeiter-Zeitung, the issuance of incendiary circulars and proclamations, and the manufacture, storage, and distributions of explosives were all an integral part of a general and premeditated plot for the murder or overthrow of the police force and all law-abiding citizens, and the seizure of the city by the Anarchists.

CHICAGO, July 22.—Only two witnesses were examined in the Anarchist trial yesterday—William Seliger and his wife. Seliger lives in a small house on the rear of the lot at No. 442 Sedgwick street, and it was in this house the bombs were manufactured. The afternoon of May 4, the date of the explosion, some forty or fifty bombs were made at Seliger's. The prisoner Lingg who lodged at Seliger's, seems to have been the chief worker, five or six others, of whom Seliger was one, acting as his assistants. Lingg had previously practiced making bombs and casting bomb-shells. For tubular bombs he used sections of metal pipe of an inch to one and a half inches in diameter; for spherical bombs he cast leaden shells in a cup-shaped mold, melting the lead in a ladle on the kitchen stove. Small iron bolts and nuts were imbedded in the dynamite, and each shell sealed with a fulminating cap and fuse attachment. It was unquestionably one of these bombs that was thrown in the Haymarket.

The forty or fifty bombs made that afternoon were packed in a trunk and carried to No. 58 Clybourn avenue about 8 o'clock by Lingg and Seliger. Here they were distributed, the box being left in a rear room where each Anarchist could go in and help himself. Several conspirators equipped themselves with bombs, all of them being at the same time armed with revolvers and the deadly three-sided file-dirks. Lingg and Seliger armed themselves like the rest. The two proceeded to Larrabee street police station. They consulted on whether they should immediately throw bombs at that station or attack Webster avenue station first. Lingg was eager to begin; Seliger was cowardly and held Lingg back. Lingg had been detailed to attack these stations—to make such a "disturbance" on the North side that the police would be prevented from massing at the West side, where the principal disturbances were to be made. The two conspirators tramped between the two stations and eventually saw the Larrabee street patrol-wagon loaded with police starting off to the scene of the Haymarket explosion. Lingg then excitedly prepared to throw a bomb at the patrol-wagon, but by a trick of his more cowardly companion was delayed in his object until the wagon had driven off in safety.

The witness acknowledged he was afraid of his life, and so had written a letter, the substance of which was that Schaack had extorted information from him under threats. He swore that this was untrue; that he had been a voluntary informer, hoping to escape by making a clean breast of all he knew. He had never been promised immunity for making the statement. The cross-examination further showed that Lingg knew beforehand that there would be an explosion at the Haymarket meeting, and was anxiously awaiting tidings at the time it occurred. The witness had been in jail or in hiding almost all the time since, being afraid of an attack by one of his quondam brethren.

Seliger's examination occupied almost five hours, and then his wife took the stand and corroborated the chief facts of his testimony. The only new thing in her evidence was that Lingg tried to make a hiding-place for the bombs within the wall of his room, and that she prevented him. She acknowledged that she hated the whole business, and would have been glad to throw all the bomb-makers into the street that Tuesday afternoon.

CHICAGO, July 23.—Yesterday's evidence at the Anarchists' trial very materially forwarded the case for the State. The prosecution occupied the day in producing proofs of the bloodthirsty mouthings of Spies, Parsons, Schwab and Fielden at the lake-front and other meetings. The fact that the Arbeiter-Zeitung office was the central distributing point of Anarchist supplies, including dynamite, arms and revolutionary literature, was further emphasized by the introduction of the load of dynamite and other explosive materials found there.

The first witness yesterday was M. H. Williamson, a newspaper reporter, who testified to the action of the Anarchists on the occasion of the opening of the new Board of Trade building. Parsons and Fielden, speaking from the windows of the Arbeiter-Zeitung office, had offered to lead an attack with bombs and all other available weapons on the large stores of the city, Marshall Field's and C. P. Kellogg's being mentioned as proper places to begin with. The Board of Trade was also proposed as an object of attack, and Board of Trade men were to be murdered because "they were the scoundrelly robbers of the working-men and had built that edifice from the earnings of the poor." Parsons and Spies showed the witness bombs and dynamite in the Arbeiter-Zeitung office. The witness testified to various meetings where dynamite had been preached by Spies, Fielden, Parsons and Schwab. Parsons explained to the witness the methods of street warfare with bombs and boasted of the strength and perfect organization of the Anarchists of the city.

Several witnesses testified to Anarchist supplies found in the Arbeiter-Zeitung office, and an expert in the use of explosives gave testimony as to experiments he made with the dynamite seized at the office of the paper and showing its powerful character. Officer Walsh, who appeared with a bandaged head, having been shot during the Haymarket riot, detailed the substance of a speech made by Engel one Sunday afternoon last February at an open meeting at No. [illegible] Milwaukee avenue. Engel advised the crowd to save up a small sum, so that each might be armed with a three or four dollar revolver, that kind "being good enough to shoot police with." John J. Ryan testified to speeches made by Spies, Parsons, Schwab and Fielden at various times when rifles, pistols and dynamite had been recommended. Parsons had stated that twenty-five cents' worth of dynamite would demolish the Pullman building, and advised that act. Harry Wilkinson, a reporter, testified to stories told him by Spies as to the use of bombs and dynamite, and the condition and objects of the organization in the city. Joe Gruenhut, of the City Health Department, described as a Socialist and writer of Socialistic literature, had introduced the witness to Spies, and had been present at the principal interview. Spies told what was to be done and Gruenhut fixed the date it would occur—May 1 or within a few days thereafter, when many working-men would be idle through an attempt to enforce the Eight-Hour law.

CHICAGO, July 24.—Yesterday's evidence in the Anarchist trial was largely of a corroborative character. First came a burly saloonkeeper named Hein, whose testimony went to show Neebe's knowledge of and partial responsibility for the famous "Revenge" circular. Gustav Lehman, one of the Anarchists, described the manufacture of the bombs at Lingg's lodgings and his visit to Neff's Hall, where they were distributed. Lingg gave him a small satchel, containing bombs, fuses and caps; also a tin box filled with dynamite. Witness took the articles home and hid them in the woodshed. He became scared during the night, and got out of bed and carried the stuff away out on a prairie where he left it. He afterwards took a detective to the spot and it was recovered. The Carpenter's Union, to which witness belonged, gave a dance last March, and the proceeds were taken by Lingg, with the sanction of the union, and a quantity of dynamite was purchased. Lehman testified to hearing Engel, in a speech, give instructions as to how bombs could be easily and cheaply made.

Several witnesses testified regarding the Socialistic demonstration at the time the new Board of Trade building was dedicated.

State's Attorney Grinnell stated that he would have read the translation of the platform of the International Working-men's Association and Herr Most's book, which had already been placed in evidence. Captain Black objected to the reading. It was finally decided that the documents might be presented, and Assistant State's Attorney Furthman read in a loud, clear voice the platform adopted in Pittsburgh and published in the Arbeiter-Zeitung. The platform begins with a tirade against the capitalists, in which they are denounced as the spoilsman of the laborer. The working-men, it goes on, are forced to commit murder and other crimes through capitalistic oppression. The screed finally gets down to business, and says that the working-men can hope for no arbitration through the ballot or peaceful arbitration. There is but one method—force. It advises organization and preparation for the inevitable conflict between capital and labor, and calls for revolutionary and national activity. It demands the building up of a free society, founded on a communistic organization of production, and an organization of the educational system on an equal basis for both sexes.

Mr. Furthman next began to read Herr Most's book, "Science of Revolutionary Warfare." The translated copy is a large pamphlet of forty-nine pages, and the reading occupied the remainder of the afternoon. The author goes fully into the use of dynamite, and explains the best way to explode it. The whole work is written in that bombastic style for which the arch Anarchist is noted, and advocates the killing of the police by dynamite, gunpowder, the knife or prussic acid, the most deadly of poisons.

A DARING FEAT.

A New York Newsboy, on a Wager of $100, Leaps from the Brooklyn Bridge and Is Unharmed.

NEW YORK, July 24.—Stephen Brodie jumped from the Brooklyn bridge yesterday afternoon into the East river. Shortly after two o'clock a lumber wagon was noticed passing over the bridge with two men riding in it. Something in the air of one of the men attracted the notice of a police officer, and he watched the wagon as it went on. When about one hundred feet east of the New York tower, and near the third lamp-post one of the men stood up and took his coat off. He looked around, and carelessly said to the driver: "Well, here goes for luck." He stepped from the wagon to the rail, and without hesitating a second jumped off. Less than twenty people were near at the time. The man fell down straight to the water, 120 feet below, striking in a bunch, but with his feet first. He sank from sight and reappeared a moment later with both hands at his chest as if in pain. A skiff, which was hovering near with some men in it, rapidly came up and took the man in. The boat was pulled to the foot of Dover street and landed.

In the meantime three police officers of the bridge squad had run around and down to the pier. They arrested the man and took him to the Oak street station. He did not seem to be much injured by his terrible fall and walked along without any assistance, followed by a mob of cheering boys and men. The leap was the result of a $100 wager.

A WHALE STORY.

An Ocean Steamer Strikes a Sleeping Whale and Cuts the Cetacean Monster Half in Two.

NEW YORK, July 24.—The Netherland steamer Waesland, which left Antwerp on the 11th and arrived here Thursday morning, reports that at noon on the second day out, and just after the Waesland left the channel, a whale was seen floating on the water directly in the vessel's course. No attempt was made to avoid it, as the natural impression was that it would get out of the way of its own accord. It declined to move, however, being fast asleep more likely, and the steamer's sharp iron bows struck full and fair about midway of its length. There was a perceptible shock to the vessel and an immediate checking of her progress. Passengers and deck hands ran forward to see what was the cause of the trouble, and found that the whale, which was fully eighty feet long, had been cut half way in two, and lay dead and fast caught on the bows. It was necessary to stop the ship and back off to disengage the carcass, which, when freed, drifted astern. None of the officers of the ship had ever witnessed a similar occurrence, although it is by no means an unheard-of one. Ships have struck sleeping whales before, and on several occasions have suffered damage from the collision.

Sad Accident.

BOSTON, July 24.—The merry party which left here Wednesday on the Grand Army of the Republic special train for San Francisco was shocked by the sudden death of one of its members. When the train was crossing the Hudson river, Thomas J. Carey, of Abraham Lincoln Post, No. 11, stood on the platform. In some manner he missed his footing in the darkness and fell through the trestle into the river, seventy-five or eighty feet below, and was drowned.

THE camp meeting season is now in full blast.

IT now begins to look as if we are going to have the usual amount of summer heat. The dog-days are near at hand, and old Sol is relentless in his efforts to keep things "a bilin'."

EDITOR BELL, of the Georgetown Times, has recently visited the Cumberland falls with a piscatorial excursion, and he gained flesh so rapidly that it kept his valet busy sewing on buttons and enlarging his breeches.

ALL those elected to office next Monday should bear in mind that the law requires them to execute their bond within thirty days after their election. A failure to execute the bond in the prescribed time defeats your election.

THE Switzerland county, Indiana, river townships, will vote on the proposition to subscribe money to assist in building the Ohio River Railroad. Ohio county will follow suit with her river townships on the same propositions.

A PROPOSITION is before the Board of Aldermen of New York, the object of which is uniting into one municipality the cities of New York, Brooklyn, Yonkers, Long Island City and several other adjacent cities and towns.

THE two Houses of Congress have not yet agreed upon pensioning the Mexican soldiers. Each branch of Congress appears to be willing to pass a law for that purpose, but it must be one of its own dictation, consequently nothing can be accomplished.

WE have received the initial number of the Enterprise published at Corinth, Grant county, and edited by J. R. Garrett. It is a well gotten up seven column folio, and if it is kept up to the standard of the first number, it will be a first-class local paper. Success to it.

SOME of the principal streets in Cincinnati have been ripped up for repairs, while the leading daily journals of that city are having a ripping fight over the street improvement matter. When Cincinnati begins to live at peace with herself, the millennium will dawn.

JOHN A. LOGAN and Murat Halstead will probably not speak now when they pass by. Logan's speech in the Senate on the Payne investigation was devoted to Halstead, who has all summer in which to review Logan. The fun has commenced. "Lay, on McDuff," &c.

FROM our exchanges we learn that the wheat crop all over the State is yielding fully up to the expectation before the crop was harvested, while in many localities it exceeds the most extravagant estimates previous to threshing. Verily the staff of life is now abundant in Kentucky.

THE New York Herald's Washington correspondent represents that a conspiracy, on the part of Randall, Carlisle and Morrison, to defeat and break down the administration, has been discovered. It is a very incredible story. It is more probable that a conspiracy has been formed to break down one or all of these men.

THE commission to which was referred the Arthur-Desha trouble in the twelfth judicial district, decided that W. E. Arthur was the regular nominee for Circuit Judge. The commission was composed of very able men, but it did not require any vast amount of ability to arrive at the proper conclusion in that contest.

DURING the first half of the present year 1,7[illegible] miles of new railroad track have been laid in the United States, and it is estimated that [illegible] of the year [illegible] will reach [illegible] [illegible] Kansas [illegible] with [illegible].

AS Walnut [illegible] [illegible] Mrs. Martin [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible].

SINCE the advent of the [illegible] Buckner [illegible] [illegible] his time [illegible] to the study of the complications of the [illegible] battle and a correct and neat adjustment of the clean triangular lines. The General now has something else to nurse besides his gubernatorial boom, and which is of a very recent birth.

THE Democrats of the Eleventh district, in session at Somerset, unanimously resolve as follows: "We believe each State should have the right to regulate and control its educational system free from Federal interference," and Judge W. M. Beckner, of Winchester, unanimously resolves that the convention does not know what it is talking about.

THE Short-horn breed of cattle are coming in contact with quite a formidable rival in the Herefords, which have been very successful in the show rings in the West. The owners of the Herefords will invade the territory of the Short-horns this fall, and compete with them for Kentucky premiums, and unless the famous herds of Bluegrassdom are in the best of shape they may expect to be outshown by the new comers.

WE desire to call the attention of our readers to the announcement of Esquire F. M. Howlett, of the Hamilton district, as a candidate for County Commissioner. He is one of the few who can not do a dishonest or a dishonorable act, and has deservedly acquired the appellation of "Old Honesty" among the people with whom he has been associated all his life. If he is elected the people will have secured a watch dog for the treasury, and one that can be relied on to be heard from every time any thing appears the least crooked. He is one of the best men in the county for the place.

JUDGE COLE delivered a ringing charge to the Rowan county grand jury the other day, picturing in vivid colors the future of Rowan unless a halt is at once called and the law enforced. If the business requires it he is going to hold court at Morehead all summer, and if the grand jury heed his charge and the petit juries have the courage to do their duty, not a few hangings will be the result, while the penitentiary will receive a liberal reinforcement. A half dozen or so legal hangings in Rowan county is a procedure much needed there, and a healthy state of morals won't reach that section until these necktie matinees are liberally patronized.

JUDGE F. A. BOYD, late of Campbell county, but later of Boone, and now of Campbell county again, is a candidate for County Judge, and the State Journal published in Newport booms the Judge as follows: "Self praise is half scandal, but when a citizen comes before the public and asks to be elected to a high and responsible position, he should have at least a few friends who would work and act for him. This is not the case with Judge F. A. Boyd. He alone has to sound his own praise and he alone of all others is the only honest man (by his own say so) to be found for the office of County Judge. His idle prattle about being elected comes from a diseased brain and when the votes are counted he will probably have three votes—the Court-house Commissioners."

IT is but a short time till those who desire to send their children to a school other than the public school, will commence determining what schools they will patronize. In this connection we would like to call attention to the Morgan Academy, which will be under the control of Professors Whitehead and Mack, who desire to build up a good school at this place. Before deciding to send your children out of the county nothing will be lost by conferring with these gentlemen and ascertaining whether or not it will be to your advantage to patronize and assist in building up a good school at home. This county is in a condition demanding a school on the order of that for which the Morgan Academy was built. The people of the present are as earnest advocates of education as they were at the time a good school was kept up here. What has been done can certainly be done again.

An Act to Prohibit the Sale, Barter, Loan, Giving and Traffic in Spirituous Vinous and Malt Liquors in Boone County

SEC. 1. That it shall be unlawful for any person [illegible] [illegible] presented by him.

SEC. 2. That it shall be unlawful for the County Judge of Boone county, or the trustees or council of any town in said county, or other tribunal or authority in said county to grant or issue any license to any person or persons, or corporation to sell any spirituous vinous or malt liquors, or any mixture thereof in said county, or in any town or towns in said county or elsewhere therein, and any such license shall be void.

SEC. 3. The foregoing section I shall not prohibit any regular practicing physician from prescribing or supplying any patient under his treatment with any such liquors as far as he may, in good faith deem the same necessary as a medicine for the proper medical treatment of such patient. Neither shall it prohibit a regular druggist from filling, in good faith, any prescription for such liquors, made out and signed by a regular practicing physician, stating that it is for medical use, and the quantity, and for whom. No prescription shall authorize but one sale, and every prescription shall be filed and preserved by the druggist. Neither shall said section apply to any distiller who sells only in quantities of not less than 36 gallons at any one time to said county.

SEC. 4. Before the foregoing provisions of this Act shall be enforced in the said county, an election shall be held therein to take the sense of the legal voters of said county on the question whether spirituous, vinous or malt liquors shall be sold therein? Said election shall be held on the first Monday in August, 1886, and the officers holding the election at that time for county offices shall take the vote on said question. The County Clerk of the said county shall furnish poll books for each voting precinct in said county, with two columns, one to be headed "For the sale of spirituous, vinous and malt liquors," and the other, "Against the sale of spirituous, vinous or malt liquors." In these columns the vote shall be entered as polled. Those voting against the sale of spirituous, vinous or malt liquors shall be construed as voting in favor of this Act. The officers conducting the election shall certify the result and cause and cause the poll-books to be returned the county court clerk's office within three (3) days after the election, and the same officers whose duty it is to compare the vote and polls for candidates voted for at said election shall, on the same day, compare the polls and vote on this question. And if it shall appear that a majority of the votes cast on this question are against the sale of spirituous, vinous or malt liquors, they shall make a certificate of the fact, showing the vote given; and they, or a majority of them, shall sign the same and deliver it to the clerk of the county court forthwith, and the same shall be preserved by him as part of the records of his office, and shall be spread with its endorsement at large upon the order book of the county and this act shall be in force fully in said county in all its provisions from the delivery of the said certificate to the said clerk, who shall endorse thereon the date and time of its delivery to him.

SEC. 5. That if this Act fails to be put in force in said county, then those districts and parts of said county wherein the sale of liquor is not allowed under previous laws or the Act known as the "Local Option Act," shall not be effected by this Act; but the previous laws and acts prohibiting the sale therein shall remain in force as if this Act had not been passed.

SEC. 6. That any licensed granted in said county, authorizing the sale of spirituous, vinous or malt liquors, after the approval of this Act by the Governor, shall become null and void at the time the provisions of this Act prohibiting the sale of spirituous, vinous and malt liquors go into effect in said county.

SEC. 7. This act shall be in force and after its passage.

Crops are needing rain. An [illegible] farmer remarked to us that if it didn't rain within ten days the corn in the bottoms would be cut short at least one half.—Crittenden Press.

The wheat crop is yielding remarkably well this year, but the price is distressingly low for the producer. In fact, the farmer can't afford to raise wheat for less than a dollar per bushel.—Owen News.

Sam Lewis, of Glasgow, has a dog that can beat any ordinary man worming tobacco, catching and eating the little worms, while he throws the large ones away after the manner a terrier does a rat.

Col. Adam Renaker estimated his this year's wheat crop at 800 bushels and when threshed out proved to be an agreeable surprise to the Colonel, for instead of 800 it turned out to be 1,500 bushels.—Cynthiana Democrat.

Wm. Lindsay requests us to say that Judge Montfort being willing, the first order made at the November term of the Owen Circuit Court will be appointing him Master Commissioner of the court, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding.—Owen News.

An Oldham county pedagogue attempted to sacrifice the virtue of 3 of his little girl pupils, for which the enraged citizens gave him 100 lashes on the bare back with a wagon whip and fired him out of the county, telling him that if he returned he would be hung.

Flemingsburg Times-Democrat: "A pear tree in John McGrath's yard was completely withered by lightning as to its leaves and fruit; while the trunk showed no signs of an electrical discharge. It was green and growing the day before, but seemed to have all the sap evaporated."

Willie Drane and John Thomas had two fields of wheat, one of which produced 50 bushels to the and one 40 bushels. S. H. Calloway has a field of about 10 acres that he says made about 40 bushels to the acre. The wheat generally in this part of the county ranged from 15 to 40 bushels to the acre. There never was known such an extraordinary yield.—Eminence Constitutionalist.

A couple of prominent gentlemen went "a fishing" the other day in Howard's Creek, and when they arrived at the piscatorial base of operation they discovered that all their minnows were dead. They were in a quandary; no plebian in sight to employ to drag the creek and both non-swimmers and having no fondness for cold water, it was distressing. As a last resort, the eldest barrister disrobed to a nude state and went grappling for minnows with a silk handkerchief, when lo! and behold, looking toward the high bank, he discovered a bevy of feminine beauty taking telescopic views of him. He dropped his miniature seine and struck for the shore, but made a misstep and plunged into the soft mud up to his shoulders. The aspect was grand and the curtain went down.—Lexington Press.

One of the greatest curiosities seen in Lexington for a long while was that which excited a large crowd of witnesses at the K. C. depot yesterday afternoon. The curious freak of nature was a little white child about three years old, whose body contained a head of enormous size, both in length and circumference. The head around the forehead measured fully twenty-six inches, and was twenty-four inches long. Taken altogether it was as large as three ordinary heads of children of the same age. From inquiry of its father as to the supposed cause of the wonderful freak, he gave no other reason than its father and mother were cousins. The child was not an idiot, as is generally the case with such freaks, but remarkably intelligent, and talked freely. The father, Mr. D. T. Graw, and family were moving from Grant county to Clark.—Lexington Transcript.

THE COMBINATION FENCE.

A fence that is wanted, and in time will be used by every one that wants a fence, either around the House, Garden or Farm, as it is cheap, durable and serviceable, to keep in check horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, chickens, etc., and restrain wolves, dogs, and rabbits, etc.

Having all the advantages of a picket fence in restraining animals from jumping, and not so liable to decay, and at much less cost, and no barbs to injure valuable stock, thus placing it far in advance of any other fence now in use, hence it must be the fence of the future; all who have it want more.

It is portable and can be removed from field to field by drawing staples from posts, taking out the splice lath and rebundling it. We offer this fence for sale in bundles of five and six rod at Burlington.

H. P. Stephens.

To interrupt the monotony of ones slumbers at night, there is nothing we can call to mind that equals three or four horses—each carrying a screechy old yoke—ambling about on the pavement beneath the window of your bed-chamber. The clank of their metal bound hoofs and the wheezy notes of their yokes, with an occasional snort, are productive of a harmony of sounds which are ravishingly delightful at the dead hour of night. Everybody should turn horses out on the streets at night that all may enjoy the delightful serenades they are capable of giving.

About two o'clock one night last week some one attempted to break into the residence of Miss Jessie Glen, who resides alone near the Methodist church across the street nearly opposite H. P. Stephens'. The front door was tried first, and hearing the noise Miss Jessie got up and asked who was there, but no answer came and the burglar left. She retired and in a few minutes the person returned and made another attempt, when Miss Jessie ran up stairs, and throwing open a window gave the alarm to which some of her neighbors responded but the thief had fled.

Sunday afternoon as Edwin Beemon and his wife were crossing the bridge on the Petersburg pike near the residence of Mr. A. O. Hall, the horse ridden by Mr. Beemon broke through the bridge, throwing him and falling against the horse ridden by his wife, came near knocking it off of the bridge. The horse finally extricated its hind legs and escaped with no serious injury, while Mr. Beemon was considerably jarred up. This bridge has been a dangerous old structure for a long time, and somebody is or should be responsible for such accidents. It is a small bridge and it would cost but little to put in a safe condition, and the parties under whose supervision the bridge comes had better be looking after it.

Monday was the fifth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Stephens, which event was celebrated by a reception of many of their friends from both far and near. The marriage ceremony was performed by Revs. J. W. Howe and G. W. Dunlap, after which a supper was served. The guests spent a very pleasant evening, the younger portion remaining until a late hour, when they reluctantly departed for their homes, leaving many good wishes for the affable host and hostess. The presents were numerous, many of them very handsome and useful, the entire range being from the "sublime to the comical." Crowded columns preclude a more extended notice. The following is the list of presents:

Lawn Set, 5 pictures, 3 paper racks, 2 towel racks, 3 brackets japan, 2 french plate mirrors, 4 japanese banners, and 1 splasher, 12 hand painted napkin pins 1 whisk broom and holder, 2 scrubbing brushes, 2 cake spoons, hand painted, 1 salad fork and spoon, rolling pin, ink stand, decorative match safe and cigar holder, salt holder, sugar barrel top, knife and fork box, decorated butter paddle, wine set, pair decorated wooden shoes, 6 chairs, camp rocker, cherry and leather, 2 tables, cherry and ebony, painted bowl, broom, minature high chair, mikado basket, 2 buckets, patent churn, tub and wash board, 3 bowls, 2 potato mashers, paddle, horse brush, peck measure, lemon squeezer, glove stretcher, 2 blacking brushes, waiter of flowers, decorated linen receiver.

Mr and Mrs. H. P. Stephens desire through the Recorder, the same medium of their general invitation, to express general and hearty thanks to their many friends, not less for their presence than their presents. They may rest assured that life's desert will be relieved with many an oasis by memories awakened by such varied and useful souvenirs. They desire especially to thank Messrs. Mack and Piper and Misses Gardner and Kirtley, and Mrs. Dunlap and Mrs. F. Riddell, and all others, who so courteously and well anticipated the want of every guest. May health and happiness attend all our friends as generously as they wished for these blessings to us.

Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Stephens

After [illegible] the track [illegible] is a very bad condition, the Florence [illegible] gives the following account of the races won by Grafton.

[illegible] Grafton [illegible] Endymion [illegible] Grafton [illegible] Pilot Boy [illegible] Freddie J [illegible] Kitty Silver [illegible] He won the heat handily. Time, 2:31.

Second heat. Grafton was now selling [illegible] and the field [illegible]. Grafton had his [illegible] when they got the word, and made a break before the turn was reached. Pilot Boy led at the quarter, Grafton second, Freddie J third. The three had quite a race to the half, where Grafton went again, and Freddie took the pole, with the Boy second. Grafton made another play for the lead, but broke near the three-quarters where Freddie was still leading, with the Boy a good second. Going around the upper turn, and just before they squared away for home, Freddie's driver began to lift his charge. He used the whip in the stretch, but the Boy beat him by a head just at the wire, Grafton third. Time, 2:27¼.

Third heat. Pilot Boy had won the confidence of the buyers and had the call at $50 to $24 for the field. They got away well. Grafton and Endymion made their usual breaks before the stretch was reached. Pilot led at the quarter by two lengths, with Freddie J second. It was the same at the half. Pilot Boy and Freddie were even at the three-quarter, with Grafton coming fast. He made a break on the upper turn, but caught well, and after an exciting finish won the heat by half a length, Pilot Boy second. Time, 2:26¼.

HAD A CLOSE CALL.

Fourth heat—Grafton was once more favorite, selling for $25 and the field $12. Just after they got the word Grafton went to a break, and began to sway and surge over the track. Tom Dickerson, his driver, tried hard to straighten him out, but he was headstrong, and pulled in so close to the fence that the sulky wheel struck it. As the frail thing rebounded, the wheel flew high in the air and Dickerson fell to the ground. One of his legs became entangled between the spokes, and a shudder ran through the stands as Grafton plunged away at a thundering gait. Dickerson was dragged several yards when he finally freed himself. Grafton ran across the track and the sulky struck the opposite fence with a crash, and the horse, now thoroughly wild, started through the rest of the rest of the field. There was a scattering, and Crawford had to lose his position with Endymion, and ran him over to the fence to avoid being run over. Grafton went once and a half around the track, and when opposite the entrance to the track from the stable, made a desperate leap over the drawbar. The sulky caught on the fence, and Grafton fell heavily. In the meantime the other starters kept going and Pilot Boy won the heat by several lengths, having led throughout the mile, with Kitty Silver second. Time, 2:29¼.

Fifth heat—After Grafton had been unharnessed, and helped to his feet, he was found to be badly skinned up and bruised some, as well as blowed out considerably. The judges allowed him to start again, as the accident was unavoidable, and Dickerson, though quite lame, decided to drive him. In the betting he was still the favorite. The heat developed the fact that the runaway had helped to steady him considerably. They were sent away the second time down to the wire. Pilot Boy broke and fell back at the turn. Grafton also made a few jumps, but caught well, Endymion did likewise Kitty Silver lead to the quarter. Then she flew up and Grafton assumed first place. He was two lengths in advance of the party at the half, five lengths at the three-quarters, and won the heat just as he pleased by three or four lengths, Endymion second. Grafton won first money, Pilot Boy second, Kitty Silver third and Freddie J fourth, Crawford claimed fourth money with Endymion. He finished fourth in the third heat, but after a great deal of argument, and some confusion on the part of the judges, Kitty Silver was given fourth place, and Endymion set back to fifth for running. This slight change knocked him out. The time of the heat was 2:29¾.

Local Option. Business Views

The question to be decided at the poll at the August election is: Shall licensed saloons be authorized in Boone county? Simply this and nothing more. Not as some have said, Shall drug stores monopolize the traffic. The vote in August, whether one way or the other, does not alter in the least the law governing drug stores, or if it does, it is by further limiting the right of drug stores to sell. But it is claimed that the drug stores, and physicians, of the county will violate the law and sell to all that want whisky. This is pretty hard on the druggists and the doctors. For my part I do not believe they are such a bad set of fellows as the saloonists and their advocates charge. One thing is sure the license law is violated oftener than any other law ever enacted. I can answer for our druggist and doctor, the charge is simply unwarranted and ridiculous, I do not suppose that druggists in Boone county are less honorable than elsewhere. Danville, Ky., with licensed saloons arrested 140 men drunk and disorderly in one year, the last year of license. With drug stores and no saloons, only one arrest in the year. The police court in Elizabethtown, Ky., was in session more days in one week with saloons than in a year without.

But a comparison of counties will make this plain. Bullit county has had local option 13 years. Meade is near the same size; less than 600 acres difference in land and not 100 voters. Meade is but a few miles from Bullit. Meade county with 17 licensed liquor dealers in '85 was a pauper county $1,230. Bullit county with no license was a revenue county $3,150, But it may be claimed that the school fund drawn by Meade more than by Bullit made the difference. Not so.

When we go to the school fund the figures are reversed. Bullit county paid in a school fund of $4,362 32, and drew out for schools $4,786. As to schools Bullit is a pauper $425 81. Meade paid into the school fund $6,137 41 and drew out for schools $5,818 56. Meade is a revenue county $762 31.

If Meade is a revenue county for schools why not for other purposes? Look at these figures: Bullit paid witnesses in criminal cases $17; Meade $109. Bullit paid jailer $152, Meade $613. Bullit paid juries $667, Meade $1,047. Guarding and conveying criminals cost Bullit $21,50, Meade $80 45. The full result is: Meade draws from the State Treasury, revenue proper $1,230, Bullit pays in $3,150. Total difference $1,-180 between Meade county with 17 barrooms and Bullit with none.

Now look at Owen county with license in 1878, a pauper $5,460; with local option 1885, a revenue county $7,-462; difference in Owen between license and local option $12,922. As to school Owen was revenue nearly $1,000, but a pauper as to ordinary expenditures.

See Hardin county with 40 bar-rooms in '77, a pauper $9,256. Local option in '85, was revenue $2,154, difference $11,-410. Hardin was revenue as to schools $550, pauper as to ordinary expenses, $9,255.

I close with one question, where do nearly all the criminal cases of Boone county come from?

J. H. Fullilove.

Bellevue, July 20, '86.

The Other Side.

To the Editors of the Recorder:

Allow me to say a few words to my brother farmers and laborers. There is much said about how we shall vote in regard to local option, so called; but in the end it is prohibition.

Now, suppose we help to bring it on ourselves, what will the result be? Why corn was used in Kentucky this year to make 44,000,000 gallons whisky. Suppose this amount of corn had been thrown on the market or fed to stock. It would have had a bad result. If prohibition is carried throughtout the country, we will have to burn our corn, as some of the talkers say.

The local optionists say it only includes Boone county. But how is it they had a tyrannical law passed to suit themselves which excluded one part of the voters from receiving any advantage in case of success. By this means they will not vote. Here they will be mistaken. They will not vote for a law that says I cant loan my neighbor a pint of whisky. Now, let all of us go to the polls and vote against prohibitionism.

Forty years ago we had an "ism" that asked to come to a certain line, and when it got there it chose to step over, and that will be the way with the prohibitionists; give them Boone county and they will want Kentucky.

Now, all farmers and laboring men should not vote for a law that will cut short the demand for their products, or throw laboring men out of work.

There is no profession but what has something to do with the manufacture of whisky, from the stave cutter, the teamster and deckhands and hundreds of others too numerous to mention.

We do not believe in drunkenness, but a man must work for his own interest. If it is to a man's interest to get drunk let him get drunk; if not, let him keep sober—that is his business.

If a man eats too much watermelon and dies with cholera, must we stop raising watermelons? I say no; give me more watermelon.

With these few remarks I will close, hoping the citizens of Boone county will vote against this first step to prohibition.

A Farmer.

Miss Spears, of Lexington, is visiting Miss Pearl Gaines.

Cassius Cropper and family are visiting friends and relatives here.

Threshing is the order of the day. John Stephens has the largest crop in these parts.

Miss Emma Brady is in this neighborhood, seeking stolen property. No trace of it has yet been found.

Misses Cleveland, Vickers and Nelson, three charming young ladies of the Blue Grass region, spent last week with Miss Mary Cropper. They were the recipients of special attention, being entertained at a party almost every night.

Alonzo Vaughn since his return from Western Indiana, is a very hard working youth. He rises promptly at half past 2 and deals out butter and eggs until 9 o'clock. His trip served him well, filling him with inspiration and giving him energy anew.

'Tis said to be fashionable to revert to ancient customs and manners. Our city always keeps up with the times. Her latest attempt is the use of the common two horse jolt wagon instead of the buggy. Let "Pa" and "Ma" take seats in the front of the wagon, the children arrange themselves on the floor. Then let "Pa" drive by the village store, while one child begs Ma for a new pair of shoes, another asks Pa to get her some tulu, one or two are singing and the rest are fighting, and you will have a spectacle as autique as fashion can dictate.

Miss Pauline Kirtley has just closed quite an interesting class in the art of painting. The class was composed of young ladies, among whom was Miss Bettie Gaines, who is now well skilled in the art; also Miss Laura Gaines who is now ready to receive orders. After the closing exercises, the class headed by its teacher, made a raid on the village store. Being all arrayed in their commencement costumes and of course looking so lovely, they completely overcame our clerk who "set 'em up" like a good little boy. After indulging in candy, tulu and the like, they decided, that it would not do to leave town without calling on our druggist, whom they found in a good humor. He invited them in and treated—we can not say to what, as your correspondent was not permitted to join the party. But you may "bet your bottom dollar" it was a merry crowd when it left town.

A Sunday-school and temperance picnic will be held all day Thursday, next, the 29th, at Rucker's Grove, just opposite James Riley's residence, on the Hebron and Covington pike. There will be swings and croquet for the children; hammocks for the young folk; a basket dinner for everybody and a temperance talk for all. There will be a refreshment stand under the control of James L. Riley and the ladies of the school, at which can be had creams and lemonade, the proceeds of which are for church purposes. All Sunday-schools are invited to attend in a body and as individuals to participate in the enjoyments and exercises of the day. Come, and welcome everybody to that which shall be pleasurable, and let us demonstrate "How pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."

Bullittsville S. S.

A few weeks since Gaines Rice was at home on a visit, and one night some one entered his bed room and took his pocket book out of his pants but dropped it on the floor where it was found next morning near the door. That night his sister, Miss Fannie, heard a noise in the room, and went in, thinking he might be sick, but, upon finding him sound asleep, concluded she was mistaken as to the location of the noise. Having returned to her apartment, she heard his door close, and shortly after the yard gate was shut when some one walked on the pavement. Then she thought her father was up, stirring around, and dismissed the matter from her mind. Next morning the finding of the pocket book, brought up the subject, when it was ascertained that neither Mr. Rice nor his son had been up during the night. It was at once evident that some body had entered the house during the night, and that the intruder was in Gaines' bed room when his sister was in the room to see if he was indisposed. Nothing was taken.

Mr. Cud Williams and one of his gentlemen friends, who were the guests of H. P. Stephens and wife for several days, left yesterday.

ROMANCE OF A LETTER.

How It Followed a Gloomy Lover Over the World.

I.

The evening train from New York to Newark was flashing across the meadows, when a young man, who had been sitting with hat drawn over his brows, apparently thinking deeply, started up, hastily thrust his hand into his inner coat pocket, and, with an exclamation, drew out a dainty letter, addressed in feminine hand.

"Just as I expected!" he grumbled. "Of course, I forgot it! Why didn't I think of it before we left Newark! I might have mailed it there. Now, there's nothing to do but to tell Clara that I forgot it. And, of course, it is important, or she would never have hurried it off with that blot on the corner."

"Waverly!" called out the brakeman.

The young man arose, and, with the letter in hand, left the car. At this moment a carriage, containing a lady and gentleman, drove up to the station.

"There's Willis," exclaimed the young man. "He must be going to the city; I'll get him to mail it. Hello, Willis! Going into town?"

"Ah! Bennet, how are you? Yes, my wife thinks she must hear Salvini to-night. Any thing I can do for you?"

"Why, yes; if it would not trouble you. This letter was handed me this morning, and, as usual, I forgot to mail it. It is quite important, and if you'd just drop it in a box for me, I'd be greatly obliged."

"Certainly. No trouble at all."

Mr. Willis took the letter, put it in his inner breast coat pocket, and hurried away to his train, which had just arrived. Charlie Bennett passed down the board walk to his home, feeling that the possible result of his forgetfulness would never occur. A week later a small company was assembled in Mr. Willis' parlor. A young married lady who had that day found in her husband's pocket a letter that she had given him several days before to mail, made the statement that she believed that every man in the room had in his pockets missives that he had been intrusted with and had wholly forgotten. Mr. Willis denied the charge, and offered to prove that, as far as he was concerned, at least, it was an unjust accusation. One by one he emptied his pockets of letters, which were all addressed to himself except the last, a delicate letter, with a tiny blot on one corner. This bore the address of "Henry Milford, No. 123 West —— street, New York."

A look of astonishment crept over his face, followed by one of dismay, as he recalled the day that Charlie Bennett had intrusted him with an important letter to mail. This must be the one, though he had not noticed the address. Followed by peals of laughter, he hastened from the room with an indefinite desire to do something, he scarcely knew what, to rectify his error. What should he do? Should he harness up at this late hour and drive two miles to Newark, just to mail this letter, or should he walk over to the station on the chance of finding some one going to town? Just at this moment he saw, in the moonlight, a man hurrying along the walk toward the station, and recognizing a neighbor, he said:

"Oh! Mr. Grey, is that you? Are you going to town?"

"Yes, I am going to Boston, and I am in a hurry to catch the night train. Any thing I can do for you?"

"Why, yes; if you will just mail a letter for me, I will be obliged. You can drop it in a box as you go along. It will not delay you."

"Oh, it will be no trouble at all."

So, once more the letter was placed in a breast pocket and started for New York. It was destined, however, to take a much longer journey. Mr. Grey found himself pressed for time, and, in his haste, entirely forgot the letter. Returning home one morning, ten days later, he caught sight of Mr. Willis, taking the train for New York. The sight of him recalled the forgotten letter. Stepping to the office window, he addressed the agent, who stood inside:

"I say, Smith, I want you to do me a favor. Will you give this letter to some one who is going on the next train? It is a very important letter, and must be mailed at once."

"I'll attend to it. Harris always goes in on the next train. He'll take it."

"Tell him not to forget it."

"Oh, he won't forget. He's always doing errands for somebody."

Much relieved, Mr. Gray continued homeward, and Mr. Smith put the letter up over his desk, where he would be sure to see it when Mr. Harris came. But, for some reason, Harris did not come. Smith, catching sight of the letter the next morning, concluded that, as he was going to town in the afternoon, he would not intrust it to any one else, for fear it might be forgotten, as Grey had said it was important. The letter was therefore consigned to Mr. Smith's pocket just before he went to dinner.

As he arose from the table his wife remarked:

"You are not going to town with that coat on! Leave it here, and I will sew on those buttons while you are gone."

Obedient to the wishes of his wife, Smith put on his Sunday coat, forgetting to transfer his papers from the old one. While Mrs. Smith was working upon it, the papers fell to the floor. She picked them up and carefully laid them in a drawer, where they remained until Smith asked for them, several days later. Looking them over, he discovered the letter to Henry Milford.

"Now, that is too bad! I must give this to the first person that goes to town to-day."

It chanced that the first person that appeared was Charlie Bennett. To him Smith went with the letter.

"Bennett, I wish you'd mail this for me. It's been in my pocket a week now."

Bennett took the letter, and, glancing carelessly at it, recognized it as the very letter given him by Clara three weeks before.

"Where did you get this?" he asked, rather abruptly.

"Grey gave it to me to mail a week ago. I meant to give it to Harris, but didn't see him. Then I thought I'd mail it myself, and forgot it. Do you know any thing about it? I hope there's no harm done."

"Oh, I guess it's all right. I only asked because I know the man to whom it is addressed. I'll see that it is mailed."

"It's a shame!" said Bennett to himself, "that I did not mail this when it was first given to me. This is why Clara has been looking so down-hearted for the last three weeks. Poor girl! Well, it will soon be all right now."

The attempt to mail the letter was this time successful, but it was not so soon "all right" as the brother had prophesied.

The day before Clara Bennett had given her letter to her brother, she had received one signed, "faithfully yours, Henry Milford," and which, after an avowal of love, had closed with these words: "If you receive this with favor, give me permission to come to you; but if in your heart there is no response to my words, silence is the only answer I desire."

Clara's answer was brief. It consisted of but one word: "Come."

Henry Milford waited very patiently for a week, after sending his important letter. But as day after day passed, and no answer came, he considered his suit as lost, and, in despair, concluded to accept an invitation from an uncle to visit him on his ranch, in California. Robert Allison, an intimate friend, and a young lawyer, had tried in vain to dissuade him from this step; for he knew no reason why Henry should become moody and despondent all at once, and throw up his hopes of business success and promotion, and start off to California. But his arguments were unavailing. Henry would go.

"Where shall I forward your letters?" asked Allison, as they shook hands at the station.

"There'll be none to forward," was the ungracious reply.

"But I shall want to write to you myself. Where shall I address you?"

"I'll write you after I get settled," was the surly answer.

Henry turned abruptly away and stepped into the car. A second later, he turned back, and grasping his friend's hand, said, in a husky voice:

"Good-bye, old fellow, and forgive my rudeness. I hardly know what I am saying, but I won't forget that you have been a true friend to me in these dark days."

"Good-bye," responded Allison, trying to speak in a cheery tone. "You are a little bilious now, but the free life of a rancher, in 'the glorious climate of Californy,' will bring you out all right. I shall expect glowing letters from you soon."

"I wonder what ails the fellow?" he soliloquized, as he went home.

As he entered his boarding-house, the servant girl met him in a flurry.

"Oh, Mr. Allison," she exclaimed, "here's a letter for Mr. Milford. Can't you get to him before he goes away?"

"He's already gone, Jennie, but I'll send it to him."

Weeks passed, and Henry Milford seemed in no hurry to fulfill his promise of writing. When the letter did come, it was a breezy one, telling of their happy, unconventional life, but contained no word about himself. It closed with these significant words:

"You need mention me to none of my friends. I have done with civilization."

You may be sure that Allison lost no time in replying. The envelope in which he inclosed both his reply and the dainty letter of the unknown, bore across one end the words: "If not called for in ten days, return to Robert Allison, attorney-at-law, — Park Row, New York."

II.

A bright, beautiful May day was drawing to a close, as a traveling carriage drew up before the hospitable door of John Milford, stock farmer, California. The occupants were a portly middle-aged Englishman, wrapped in various "top coats" and shawls, and a young man, who seemed to be in great pain, and was evidently unable to alight.

"'Ello, 'ere, cahn't you lend us a 'and?" shouted the portly individual to the herdsman, who stood near, looking curiously at the stranger. "'Ere's a young man that 'as broke 'is leg. Cahn't you give 'im a lift?"

John Milford himself heard the summons, and, appearing, bade "the boys" bring the stranger in. The elder gentleman, who gave his name as "Holliver 'Awthorne, of Hivy Lodge, 'Ertfordshire, Hengland," made all due explanations.

"You see 'e would go leaping over the beck, and fell in. 'E couldn't get up; so Tummas, 'ere, and I, we 'elped 'im into the phaeton. Then we came 'ere, for we couldn't go on wi' the poor man groanin', and we not knowin' but 'e'd broke both 'is legs, you know. 'E'll 'ave a doctor."

"Doctors are not so easy to get in these diggin's," said a bystander, "but here's old Peter; he's a nateral bone setter. He'll fix 'im up all right."

Old Peter, rough as he looked, proved both skillful and gentle. He said that the injury was a severe sprain, not serious, but it might prove tedious, and require absolute rest for weeks. Mr. Hawthorne did not hear this statement with equanimity.

"Now, I cahn't stand that, you know. We've only time to reach San Francisco before the steamer sails. I say, why don't you give 'im some brahndy or gin? Talk about there's no doctors, and you can't get a decent drink of alo. No, Meacham, if you're not able to go day after to-morrow, I'll 'ave to go without you. That's all there is about that."

"But, Mr. Hawthorne," expostulated the young man, "you can't go alone."

"I!" exclaimed the irate old man. "You think you're the only chap that can endure living with a crusty old curmudgeon that's traveling for 'is 'elth. But 'ere's what'll alleviate the anguish of livin' with me, sir." And he slapped his pocketbook resoundingly.

In this dilemma, old Peter came to the front.

"There's the old man's nevy," said he to young Meacham. "He hain't been here long, but mebbe he'd go with the old feller. He might find him sort o' amusin'. He'd be as good as a circus to me."

Henry Milford would not have been recognized by his New York friends. He was sunburnt and rough-looking. He wore a slouch hat and his trousers were tucked into his boots. But there was that in his bearing that told Meacham that he was not as rude as his exterior.

The young fellow broached the subject of Henry's taking his place. "Mr. Hawthorne's not disagreeable to live with; he pays well. He blusters sometimes, but he soon blows himself out. Come, say you will take my place."

The proposition was unexpected, but its very novelty had a charm for Henry; and, after some discussion of the matter with his uncle, he offered himself to Mr. Hawthorne, and was accepted as his traveling companion. Several days after their departure, a letter reached the Milford ranch, addressed to Henry. His uncle turned it over with a perplexed face.

"I'm sure I don't know what to do with it," he said. "I'll ask Meacham."

The young man knew the route that Mr. Hawthorne had proposed to take.

"He intended sailing at once for Yokohama. I believe I'd forward the letter there. Just write on it: 'Care of the English or the American consul.'"

Poor Clara's much-traveled letter reached Yokohama in due season and was sent to the English consul.

After remaining some days in his hands uncalled for, it was passed on to the American consul, where it remained a month, and was then returned to Allison, at New York. Great was his surprise to receive his letter again, bearing the post-mark "Yokohama." He could also see that it had been to California. There was nothing to do now but wait until Henry himself reported.

Several weeks later a letter came to Allison, post-marked "Vienna, Austria." As it seemed to be the continuation of a former story, Allison concluded that the previous letters must have miscarried. It closed with these words:

> Mr. Hawthorne didn't like Japan, so we did not stop on those flowery shores. Our stay here promises to be prolonged, so write me, care United States consul. When I shall return to my native land is a problem I do not try to solve. So long as I and my agreeable employer are so "'appy as we are at present," as he would say, we shall probably remain in partnership. He has a formidable tour marked out. St. Petersburg, Copenhagen, Rome, Moscow, Paris, the Alhambra and the Holy Land, in about this order, I believe. So, you see, we have years of travel before us. Will write you when leisure and inclination coincide.

Allison answered this letter at once, and, without opening the former one, which he had laid away on his desk, inclosed it and its inclosure in a larger envelope, that also bore his name on the end.

III.

Time passed—three months, six months, a year, and no word came from the wanderer. It never occurred to Allison that his letter had not been received. But such was the fact. After his usual erratic manner, Hawthorne suddenly determined to leave Vienna for St. Petersburg. While journeying through the Suez canal, they had made the acquaintance of an English spinster, a Miss Winthrop, accompanied by a very pretty American girl, as traveling companion. Milford felt a languid interest in the girl, but he had a suspicion that his employer was more than interested in Miss Winthrop. These ladies suddenly appearing in Vienna, the acquaintance was renewed, and Milford was not at all surprised when Mr. Hawthorne announced that he did not, in the least, care to go to Russia, but believed that it would be for his health to seek a more genial clime. This opinion seemed to be the result of learning that the ladies were going to Rome for the Easter festivities.

"We might go to Rome for Heaster, too," said Mr. Hawthorne. "It would be a deal more Christian-like than spending that 'oly time among those beastly Russians."

Milford did not like to seem to be following the ladies, but the more he opposed the Italian trip the more determined Mr. Hawthorne became.

"Like as not I'll never 'ave a chance to see a Hitalian Heaster again, and I'm going. You can do as you please."

Of course, the young man pleased to accompany his employer. The days in Rome passed very pleasantly in sightseeing. The two gentlemen acted as escorts to the ladies. Mr. Hawthorne and Miss Grey would wander away by themselves, returning to the hotel hours after Milford and Miss Winthrop, with some strange story of getting lost, to which the elder lady would listen with an incredulous smile, while Milford was forced to admit that the smitten Englishman was superior to the national prejudice against Americans.

One day Henry took a little jaunt with several Americans, leaving Mr. Hawthorne as sole escort for the ladies. It was quite late when he returned to the hotel, at the door of which he met an acquaintance, who greeted him with:

"Hello, Milford, you didn't go with your party! Miss Grey looked charming! Expect to go to Florence myself next week. How soon do you go?"

With a careless remark, Milford passed on to his room, to find it true that Hawthorne and the ladies had gone to Florence, leaving word for him to follow. The hasty note left for his instruction contained this closing sentence: "Went to the United States Consul. Saw a letter for you and ordered it forwarded."

After greeting his friends the next morning in Florence, Milford said he would run out to the consul's and get his letter.

"You won't find it," said the old gentleman. "I ordered it sent on to Switzerland."

Milford sat down, disappointed.

"Why didn't you bring it with you?" asked Miss Grey.

"Never thought of it, I assure you. It would 'ave been the easiest thing in the world, now wouldn't it? But it never entered my 'ed. Thought we had to order letters forwarded. Believe I'd forwarded my own, if there'd been any there."

"To what place in Switzerland did you order it?" asked Milford.

"I think it was Zurich, and we'll hurry forward and overtake it."

But Milford would not consent to shorten the stay in Florence on account of a mythical letter, and manifested no more anxiety in regard to it. But Mr. Hawthorne had a secret anxiety concerning that very letter. He was not so sure that he had ordered it to Zurich, and the more he thought about it the less certain he became. These fears proved well grounded. The letter was not at Zurich, and the consul was sure it had never been there. Mr. Hawthorne grieved so over its loss that Milford could bear him no ill will.

"Father," said the son of the consul at Carlsruhe one day, "this letter has been here so long that I don't believe it will be called for. Would it not be well to return it to the writer? It is addressed to Henry Milford, and is to be returned to Robert Allison, New York."

"Papa," exclaimed the youngest daughter of the consul, "that must be the Mr. Milford we met in Zurich. You know he told us of a letter that had gone astray somewhere."

"Yes, I remember it. They were going from Zurich to Paris. We'll send it there."

But Hawthorne did not go to Paris. He had a long walk with Miss Grey one afternoon and decided to go at once to "'Ertfordshire, Hengland," and prepare "Hivy Lodge" for a new mistress, a charming American girl, who would brighten up its many ancient halls, and add a new beauty to its many attractions. And Milford must go, too, and remain until Mr. Hawthorne had been legally transferred to the care of Mrs. Hawthorne. So, one day, at Miss Winthrop's quiet home in Camberwell, the transfer took place, and the bride and groom departed, with smiles and tears, for their home at Ivy Lodge. Then Milford felt himself honorably released from his duties as traveling companion. Three days after he sailed for America.

IV.

One morning in September, Robert Allison found, among his letters, one addressed in his own hand to Henry Milford, and returned to him as the writer thereof. It bore marks of travel, and frayed edges and innumerable postmarks, legible and illegible. While still examining it and endeavoring to decipher the many legends it bore, a hearty voice broke in upon his occupation:

"Well, old fellow, how are you after so long a time?"

"Ha! Milford!" exclaimed Allison, "where under the sun have you come from, and how is it that this letter has come back to me?"

Bewildered, Milford gazed at the letter, and then, catching sight of his name, he seized it, and, in his turn, began to scan its exterior.

"Can this be the letter that I have been playing tag with? When did you write it? Did you send it to Vienna?"

As he spoke, he tore open the end, and out fell the letter that had been to Yokohama and back.

"What is this?" he exclaimed.

And, not waiting for a reply, he hastily tore that open also, and Clara's long-delayed missive lay in his hand.

"Where did you get this?" he asked, turning almost fiercely upon his friend.

"It came for you the day you left for California. As soon as you sent your address, I forwarded it to you. It came back to me from Yokohama. That is all I know about it."

With trembling fingers and blazing eyes, Milford opened the letter. Only one word met his gaze, the one word "Come," signed "Clara." For a moment his head swam and blackness came before his eyes. Then, recovering himself, he said:

"Pardon me, Rob. I have had a severe blow. I am stunned. Let me go away. I will see you again as soon as I feel better."

The letter had reached its destination, after more than two years of travel by land and sea, in the old world and the new. Is it necessary to follow it farther?

At a quiet wedding party a few months later the bridegroom said to his best man: "You cheated me out of two years of happiness, Charlie."

"But I gave you a year of foreign travel at the expense of some one else. You ought to thank, instead of blaming me."

Milford glanced at Clara as he answered:

"I thank the postal system that made your carelessness insufficient to wreck my lifelong happiness."—Cosmopolitan.

FEMININE FANCIES.

Spicy Gossip About Trifles Comme il Faut.

Epicures of Baltimore eat salad of rice and hominy with cold game.

Try restoring the color of faded plush goods by brushing with chloroform.

Ladies continue to wear little fancy rings, set for the most part with small but very bright gems.

Gold thread for embroidering comes both coarse and fine. The Japanese gold thread is least liable to tarnish.

The fancy now is for wedding breakfasts, just as they do in England, with toasts to the bride and groom, responses and all the rest.

There is a tendency to cluster rings again, a favorite being a large colored stone in the center with small diamonds set around it, or vice versa.

Take a cow's horn or any horn, have it tipped and rimmed with brass, hang it on the wall with a ribbon and it makes a unique vase to hold a single choice flower.

A pretty new brooch, representing a cluster of hazel-nut leaves and fruit, consists of gold leaves and cups frosted over with small diamonds, while the nuts are formed by a brown enamel.

A bracelet pleasing to very young ladies consists of a single gold band on which is hung a round or square charm of rock crystal. Sometimes these open in half like a locket, and show a four-leaved clover between the two layers of crystal.

There appears a decided and growing tendency again to decorated watch-cases for ladies. Not only are cases seen with the raised wire-work decoration, but there are cases beautifully enameled, and cases in the center of which appear a group of gems.

Oatmeal water is admirable for improving the skin. Pour boiling water over a few spoonfuls of it and let it stand a few hours. On retiring wash the face and neck freely in the starchy water and dry without wiping. It is more conveniently used for a full bath when inclosed in a bag.

The "Hangman's Rope" pattern introduced last season in Paris, and patronized to some extent because of a curious superstition that the hangman's rope in gold is a lucky thing to have about, is seen here formed into bangles and bracelets, and also twisted into brooches. A bracelet seen simulated a rope, one end of which was untwisted showing the strands. Rings are also formed of this gold rope.

A favorite present from the groom to the bride is a jeweled brooch or lace pin, and, when money is no object, a pair of earrings or bracelet, or both, are added. At a recent wedding in this city the bride wore diamonds, a gift of the groom, valued at ten thousand dollars. A necklace and pendant is another favorite present. Sometimes a watch becomes the gift, and occasionally a ring. Whatever the form of the gift, if gems are in it, these are supposed to represent the ladies' preference, whether it be rubies, sapphires, diamonds or pearls.—N. Y. World.

QUEER FISH.

Finny Idiots Who Grow in Size But Never Attain Real Maturity.

Most of our English flat fish lie consistently on one side, and that the left; they keep their right eye always uppermost. But the turbot and the brill reverse this arrangement, having the left side on top and colored, while the right side is below and white. Two other fish, known as the fluke and the megrim, but not received in polite society, follow the example of their fashionable friends in this respect. But in no case are these habits perfectly ingrained: now and then one meets with a left-sided sole, or a right-sided turbot, which looks as though a great deal were left to the mere taste and fancy of the individual flat fish. Some have taken to lying most frequently on one side and some on the other; but it is interesting to note that when a normally right-sided individual has happened to lie with his left side uppermost that side becomes colored and distorted, exactly the same as in his more correct brethren. This shows how purely acquired the whole habit must be. It points back clearly to the days when flat fish were still merely a sort of cod, and suggests that their transformation into the unsymmetrical condition is merely a matter of deliberate choice on their own part. Indeed, there seems good reason to believe that many young flat fish never undergo this change at all, but swimming about freely in the open sea assume that peculiarly elongated and strange form known as leptocephalic. I don't mean to say that all leptocephali are originally the offspring of flat fishes, but some probably are; and so a word or two about these monstrous oceanic idiots and imbeciles may not be here out of place. Lolling about lazily in the open ocean a number of small, long, ribbon-like fish are frequently found, quite transparent and glassy in appearance, with no head at all to speak of, but furnished with a pair of big eyes close beside the tiny snout. They are languid, boneless, worm-like creatures, very gelatinous in substance, and looking much like pellucid eels without the skin on. For a long time these leptocephali (as they are called) were supposed to be a peculiar class of fishes, but they are now known to be the young fry of various shore-hunting kinds, which have drifted out into the open ocean, and had their development permanently arrested for want of the natural environment. They are, in fact, the fish idiots, and though they grow in size they never attain real maturity.—Cornhill Magazine.

THE VETO POWER.

Republican Congressmen Have Forced the Chief Executive to a Free Use of a Constitutional Weapon of Defense—Bayne's Abuse—Mr. Cleveland's Capacity to Treat Details.

The President's vetoes of pension bills have been constant, and in almost every case his statement of reasons has been conclusive. In some instances there may be good reasons for reconsideration. But the action of the President shows a devotion to duty and a resolution not to suffer injustice to be done to the people by careless appropriations of public money, which will receive the most general and hearty approval. Here are some illustrations of the vetoed bills:

> "Simmons W. Harden got a bill passed granting him a pension for enlargement of the heart, which he asserts was the result of falling out of a wagon fourteen years before the disease developed. The bill granting a pension to Abigail Smith was vetoed because it gave her a less amount than she was already receiving. Another instance of careless legislation is shown in the veto of a bill for the relief of Andrew J. Hill, when the papers show that the claimant's name is Alfred. James Butler's bill was vetoed because he was never in the army; he enlisted on August [illegible], got leave to go home to bid his friends good by, fell into a cellar and broke his leg en route, and was discharged September [illegible]. Harriet Welsh's bill was vetoed because she admitted she married the man for whose service she claims a pension when she had another husband living undivorced. John W. Ham was drafted into the army; he was enrolled, and the next day started for home; he fell off his horse, broke his ankle, and was not placed on the rolls of his regiment. James P. Chandler applied for a pension at the Pension Office because he was run over by a wagon in 1865. This was denied him. Then he entered another application on account of bronchitis. This was also denied. Then he made a third for rheumatism, and that was denied also. Finally he went to Congress, and got a bill passed on all three of his claims."

There are many others quite as extraordinary. To prevent such waste of the public money is a simple duty of the President, and the attacks which have been made upon him for discharging his duty are exceedingly discreditable to those who make them. The attacks proceed upon the general assumption that any man who was a soldier is entitled to have his claim for relief honored in full in the precise form in which he makes it, and without regard to the facts. Of course nothing could be more absurd.

Many of the bills are laws of Congress overriding the decision of the Pension Bureau. The President acts, therefore, as a judge of appeal, and decides upon the facts in evidence, recapitulating them in his message. The assertion that the constitution does not contemplate this kind of detailed revision of the acts of Congress by the Executive is idle and wholly unfounded. To the extent of the veto the President is made a most important part of the legislative power, and he acts under the precise obligation that binds any member of Congress. His duty requires him to consider details quite as much as the duty of the Representative requires him to do the same thing, and when it is obvious that details have been neglected by Congress, it is the especial duty of the Executive to correct the result of the neglect. Mr. Bayne, of Pennsylvania, in his extraordinary vituperation of the President as "this man" who was almost transcending his authority, and "no better than any other American citizen, and not the equal of any man who periled his life and went out to save the Union," wholly forgot that he was speaking of an officer of the Government who acted under obligations quite as important and binding as those of Mr. Bayne himself, and that even if the President had been a shirk and a coward—which he was not—that fact is not a reason that Mr. Bayne and his associates should be allowed to take money improperly from the public treasury. The reasons of the President's vetoes are submitted to the country, and the country will judge whether they are well founded. No honorable soldier will think him unfriendly to soldiers because he refuses to countenance dishonest claims even when preferred in the name of a soldier; and every good citizen, conscious that the President is an honest man, and that the country is not ungenerous to the soldiers, will support him in his defense of the just rights of all the people.

There is a general feeling that the veto power should be used sparingly. But it would be better to say that Congress ought not to furnish frequent occasions for its exercise. The number of President Cleveland's vetoes is great, but they all affect what is substantially the same act of legislation, an act of infinite details, namely, the granting of pensions. The veto power is one of the most important and valuable checks of our Government. It belongs to the system which wisely separates the republic from the simple democracy, or the constant, immediate rule of the majority. It is a power provided by the majority for its own restraint, and nothing proves more completely the wisdom of our popular government than the fact of the adoption by the majority of provisions which prevent hasty action. The President does not intend to slight his duty, and he has announced that he will consider all bills carefully before signing them. He gives fair notice that he will not be hurried, and Congress has learned that his words plainly express his purposes. His duty is largely a duty of detail. His ability is shown by his disposition and capacity to treat details. It is a quality of great administrative ability. It is sometimes contemned as the sign of a routine officer. But it is the quality which distinguished Gladstone as a financial Minister, and it was a striking trait in Napoleon. The two chief executive functions in our Government are the appointment of agents through whom to execute the laws, and the approval of laws to execute. They are both matters of detail, and to object to careful Executive attention to them is to object to the Executive office. The exercise of the veto power by President Cleveland has been neither reckless nor unjust. It has been due to a sincere desire to secure wise legislation, and it has been careful, intelligent and patriotic. The more it is considered by the country, the more warmly it will be commended.—Harper's Weekly.

Straining at Gnats.

Republican criticism of the Democratic Administration is essentially mean and contemptible. The organs of the opposition have been driven to small business. So successfully have the heads of the Executive Department met the responsibilities of office and so faithfully have they acquitted themselves, as a rule, that those who, out of their desire to restore the Republican ascendency, must needs find some fault in the present order of things, are forced to make mountains of scandal out of the most inconsequential mole-hills of error. These censors convict themselves of envy, malice, prejudice and venality. Having gone gunning for big game and finding none, they, in excess of their disappointment, expend their powder recklessly and viciously upon the landscape at large, or seek to knock over that which was despised in the ardor and high expectation of the start. The small fault of a small clerk gives occasion for columns of editorial mock-indignation, and individual exhibition of common human weakness on the part of the humblest employe of a great department raises an awful din among the conspiring magpies.—Indiana State Sentinel.

A GREAT CONTRAST.

The United States Senate as the Old Man of the Sea in Dragging Down Good Legislation.

The record of the Forty-ninth Congress is particularly interesting in showing very important points of difference between the Democratic House and the Republican Senate. Whatever may have been the sins of omission on the part of the former, and the neglect to carry out certain measures of reform in fulfillment of platform pledges and in accordance with the earnest desires of the people, the House evinced a spirit of economy, and lent in many notable instances its hearty co-operation with the reform work of the Administration. It responded heartily to the appeal of Secretary Lamar and Land Commissioner Sparks for legislation to correct the widespread abuses and swindling connected with the public lands. It displayed commendable zeal in furthering Secretary Whitney's plans for the construction of a navy worthy of the Nation, and spoiled many a seductive job brought before it, backed by a powerful and unscrupulous lobby.

On the other hand, the Republican Senate exhibited a wanton disregard for the interests of the public and endeavored to thwart the economical and conservative policy of the lower House. The Republican Senators made a stout fight for the steamship subsidy lobby, and nothing short of the unbending, determined opposition of the Democratic House defeated this shameless waste of the people's money. The Senate neutralized the efforts of the House to reform the land laws and save what remains of the public domain from the harpies who are after it. The Anderson bill, requiring the immediate adjustment of railroad land grants was so altered by the Senate that it became to all practical purposes null and void.

The repeal of the Pre-emption, Timber Culture and Desert Land laws was also so manipulated by the Republican Senate that the situation now is worse than before and more favorable to the land grabbers. Secretary Lamar called the attention of the country to the importance of repealing those laws. In regard to the Desert Land laws the Secretary said: "Good government seeks to secure to the citizen the undisturbed enjoyment of his natural rights. Among these is the enjoyment of his lawful acquisitions. Land, lawfully acquired, is among the most important of his possessions. Its security depends upon the certainty of its title, litigation and contention depreciate its value, disturb the peace, waste the means and mar the prosperity of a community or nation. Laws exist on the statute books which violate these principles and are objectionable. The Desert Land acts are subject to this criticism. Fraudulent titles to good lands, have been the result of these acts. I would, therefore, suggest their repeal."

The Democratic House acted in accordance with this suggestion, but the Republican Senate blocked the desired reform. Shameless extravagance, amounting to open robbery, has been shown by the Senate in the pension bills, in the vast increase to the River and Harbor bill and in other unnecessary additions to other appropriation measures. Not only is the Republican Senate eager and willing to squander the people's money, but it resents, with indecent spleen, any interference on the part of the President to protect the treasury. Mr. Charles Northoff, an experienced and observant Washington correspondent, who can not be accused of partiality towards the Democratic party, thus alludes to the conduct of the Democrats and Republicans in both Houses:

> The cry of the Republicans in the canvass of 1884 was that if the Democrats were allowed to come in they would do too much—they would carry the country to the dogs. The complaint now is that they have not done enough. They have certainly omitted to do some things which needed doing, and which, no doubt, they would have done had they controlled both Houses. But the skillful and unscrupulous obstruction of important measures by the Republicans in the Senate shows that, no matter how active, determined and united the Democrats might have been in the House, their measures would have been defeated in the Senate. They have certainly not been a harmonious party in the House, but if they had been that would not have helped them, as many instances prove. What is to the credit of the Democrats is that they have done no harm and have allowed the Republicans to do no harm, and they have shown in the Administration and in Congress the disposition to deal honestly with the people's affairs.—Albany Argus.

DEMOCRATIC ITEMS.

—The administration of the Government has been in Democratic hands, and the result is a general economical improvement which Republicans themselves are forced to recognize.—St. Louis Republican.

—Matthews was rejected on the theory that no negro has the right to be a Democrat. The colored friends who went to Washington in his behalf were informed that Republican Senators do not recognize Democratic negroes, do not concede their freedom of political opinion, and do not propose to reward what they consider apostasy by sanctioning their promotion under a Democratic Government.—N. Y. Star.

—The step taken by Secretary Lamar to prevent officers and employes of the Interior Department from using public money for private business is a proper one. Hereafter each and every disbursing officer in the Interior Department will have to make a weekly cash report which will be sent to the treasury. This will obviate discrepancies such as have arisen for years and have been injurious to the Government.—Buffalo Times.

—President Cleveland vetoed another pension bill the other day, that of a man named Ross, who had been dead since February last. In life Mr. Ross had struggled hard to get his claim for a pension allowed by a Republican commissioner, but failed. The only cause assigned for the veto of the bill was the death of the man the bill aimed to help. Perhaps the reason was insufficient from a Republican standpoint.—Des Moines Leader.

—The Republican notion of colored citizenship is blind and unreasoning allegiance to the Republican party. White men alone have the right to exercise the privilege of an American citizen in voting as they please. Should the negro dare to disobey his Republican masters he is considered as ineligible to any office, and when, as in the case of Mr. Matthews, the question of confirming his appointment comes before a Republican body, it is decided at once, without any disguise, on the beautiful principle of the right of Republicans over the political opinions of the colored race.—Albany Argus.

—According to the Novosti a man has just died in the St. Petersburg poor-house at the age of one hundred and twenty-two; he had been an inmate since 1818. He retained his senses to the last. Indeed, it was only about four years ago that he seemed to fail at all, having till then enjoyed excellent health. There is still living in the poor-house a soldier's wife, who is shown by documentary evidence to be fully one hundred years of age.

ANIMALS AND MUSIC.

The Only Art Which Animals, Fools and Idiots Are Able to Appreciate.

A saying among the Arabs asserts that the song of the shepherd fattens the sheep more than the richest pasture. The milkmaids of the Highlands of Scotland sing to their sulky cows to restore them to good humor. The Frenchman encourages his oxen to exert themselves by singing pleasant songs. A camel-driver often stimulates his fatigued beast to step out with renewed vigor by playing on an instrument. Seals have been known to follow a boat in which some one was playing, and hunters often take advantage of the animals' musical taste.

Darwin, generalizing from these and similar facts, says that "the perception, if not the enjoyment, of musical cadences and rhythm is probably common to all animals."

It does seem that music is the only art which animals, fools and idiots are able to appreciate, and the explanation is, probably, that music rests on a physical basis common to all living creatures.

Some animals show a liking for certain musical sounds, and a dislike to others. A lamb is mentioned by Rev. J. G. Wood which delighted in lively tunes, but abhorred slow compositions. It would show its pleasure when a polka was played, but the moment it heard "God Save the Queen," it would set up a continuous baa-baa, and silence the musicians by provoking laughter.

A Scotch lady could always put her pet rabbit into such a rage by playing the harmonium, that it would fly at the instrument and scratch its legs. If, however, she went to the piano, and played on that, the rabbit would give vent to his delight by running round and round the music-stool.

Some dogs howl all the time a hand-organ is played, and many men would, if they were as free to express themselves as a dog is. A dog is mentioned who had such an antipathy to violin music that he would yell dismally the moment a hand was laid on the bow.

Mr. Darwin tells in his "Descent of Man" of a bull-finch which had been taught to pipe a German waltz. When the bird was introduced into a room where other birds were kept, and he began to pipe, all the linnets and canaries ranged themselves on the nearest side of their cages, and listened with the greatest interest to the performer.—Youth's Companion.

—Little four-year-old was in a state of nervous excitement during a violent thunder-storm a few days ago. Running to her mother she laid her head in her lap and sobbed. "Oh, mamma, I'se so 'fraid of thunder." Seeking to quiet her, her mother responded: "You should not be afraid, my child. Thunder is God's voice." This soothed the child, and she went about her play. In a few moments another thunderbolt was heard. She dropped her playthings, and in an awe-struck voice inquired, "Mamma, what did God say then? Somefin' awful?"—Hartford Post.

Is it Really Consumption?

Many a case supposed to be radical lung disease is really one of liver complaint and indigestion, but, unless that diseased liver can be restored to healthy action, it will so clog the lungs with corrupting matter as to bring on their speedy decay, and then indeed we have consumption, which is scrofula of the lungs, in its worst form. Nothing can be more happily calculated to nip this danger in the bud than is Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." By druggists.

Smith's Tonic Syrup
FEVER and AGUE
Or CHILLS and FEVER,
AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.
The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of KENT'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient. USE no other pill.

GREAT STORM.

It Swoops Down Upon Columbus, Ohio.

Rolling Mill and Many Other Buildings Wrecked—Workmen Dangerously Hurt.

COLUMBUS, O., July 31.—A regular tornado struck this city this afternoon. Buildings were unroofed, trees uprooted, chimneys blown over, windows knocked out, streets flooded, sewers washed in, and sad havoc generally was played. The most serious damage occurred at the Columbus Rolling Mill, in the northwest part of the city. This building, a frame structure 300 feet long by 110 feet wide, covered with a slate roof, lies an indescribable mass of ruins. There were only thirty-five men employed about the mill. The wind was sweeping over the open ground from the northwest with tremendous fury, bending trees and filling the atmosphere with debris of all kinds. There was a great, roaring sound, and the next minute the great ventilator on top of the roof was lifted up and dropped down, falling through the roof. A moment later the roof itself was up in the air as if by magic. The employes, when they heard the cracking of the roof-timbers, made a wild rush to get out of the building, and most of them succeeded, although when they got out they scarcely knew where to go, the air was so full of flying pieces of slate and other debris. Edward Blackly had a miraculous escape. He was in the center of the building, and, being unable to get out, took refuge under a large beam. The roof came down with a crash, but, strange to say, Blackly escaped uninjured, the beam protecting him from the falling timbers. Seven or eight workmen were severely, and two or three dangerously wounded. The immense brick structure used as a union depot was also greatly damaged. Almost the entire roof was carried away, and, remarkable as it may appear, with the hundreds of people in the depot at the time, but one is known to have sustained serious injuries.

THE LINE DRAWN.

New Hampshire's Supreme Court Opposed to Salvation Army Street Parade.

CONCORD, N. H., July 30.—The Supreme Court to-day rendered a decision denying the right of the Salvation Army to beat a drum in the streets of any city, town or village of the State. The statute forbids drum beating except under the command of a military officer. The defendants claimed that they were acting in obedience to the dictates of their consciences and as an act of religious worship. The court held that this was no defense, and that no act of religious worship can be allowed to disturb the public peace or violate reasonable police regulations.

It Was Good Dynamite, Sure Enough.

CHICAGO, July 30.—A dynamite exploding excursion party was organized to go out on the lake this morning, to test some Anarchist bombs found in different parts of the city. A stream of water six feet in diameter shot 100 feet into the air when they were set off. For twenty feet around the surface of the lake was convulsed, notwithstanding the fact that the dynamite had been lowered some twenty-eight feet in the water. Hundreds of fish were thrown into the air with the stream, and the surface was covered with dead ones.

PLAYING WAR.

A [illegible] Sham Battle at Lafayette, Ind.

LAFAYETTE, IND., Aug. 1.—Yesterday was the "sham battle," and the crowd in attendance was estimated at forty thousand. The evolutions and movements in the sham battle were splendidly executed, and the glory and horror of war were portrayed more vividly than ever before, save upon the field of actual conflict. Regiments, in lieu of companies, were opposed to each other, and the spectators got as excited as the actual participants. When the twelve pieces of artillery and the gatling guns opened fire, half the [illegible] [illegible]. Old veterans [illegible] and tears coursed down their cheeks as they remembered how they had [illegible] encounters of real fighting at Chickamauga, Gettysburg and Shiloh. Civilians [illegible] of the regular army, as it was the most realistic exposition of the noise and blaze of battle he ever saw. The glittering arms, dancing plumes, awful din and roar and [illegible] cry, with an everlasting crack of gun, made the welkin ring. The boys did [illegible], and no wonder. No accident happened, and the whole affair went off successfully in a magnificent style. Thirty of the militia were overcome by the heat during the engagement, and one died to-day.

HEROIC DEATH.

A Young Woman Saves Three Persons From Drowning, and Going Back After the Fourth is Seized and Dragged Under.

ST. PAUL, MINN., Aug. 1.—A Butte, Montana, special, gives the particulars of the drowning of Miss Jane McArthur, formerly of that city, in a heroic effort to save the lives of others. For a year past she has been conducting a cattle ranch on the Upper Sun river. With her old mother she was encamped on the bank of the river when Judge Armstrong, with his wife, daughter of fifteen years, son of twelve years, and a spinster sister, attempted to ford the river with a four-horse team. The horses became unruly, ran into deep water and spilled the family into the rapid current. None of them could swim. Miss McArthur seeing the accident, plunged in and saved the son, daughter and mother. Going back for the sister she was seized in a death grip by the drowning woman and both were lost.

Irish Riots.

BELFAST, Aug. 1.—A riot occurred last night between Orangemen and Catholics. A band of music marched through the streets at about seven o'clock on its way to meet several hundred children belonging to Protestant Sunday-schools, who were returning from an excursion. The band was followed by a large crowd which greeted an assemblage of Catholics, who were waiting on Carrick hill to see the procession, with a series of groans mingled with taunts and jeers. The Catholics replied to this obnoxious salutation with a shower of stones, and the mob accompanying the band retaliated in return. The police were soon upon the ground and endeavored to disperse the crowd, but the number of Orangemen rapidly increased and forced the Catholics from the hill. They then turned their attention to a big tavern, kept by a Catholic named McKenna, which they completely gutted, leaving not a pane of glass unbroken nor an article of furniture intact. The police made frequent charges upon the rioters, but were in every case repulsed by showers of stones, and many of them were severely hurt. Leaving McKenna's Hotel a wreck, the rioters attacked a number of houses believed to be inhabited by Catholics, battering down doors, smashing windows and tearing up fences and shrubbery. The police again charged the crowd, but the mob tore up the pavement and hurled volley after volley of stones thus obtained at the officers, driving them from the scene. The police rallied, and were ordered to fire into the mob, which they did with guns loaded with buckshot. The rioters then fell back sullenly, disclosing the fact that many of them had been hit and some seriously wounded. The police fought with terrific bravery and at fearful odds, scarcely one engaged in the fight escaping injury. Many of them were badly cut with knives and pieces of glass in the hands of the rioters, and some of them were almost entirely stripped of their clothing.

Fatal Prize Fight.

LONDON, Aug. 1.—A prize fight took place at Rhondda, Wales, on Saturday, between two well known bruisers named Evans and James. Thirty-two rounds were fought, during which both combatants were frightfully pounded. James was declared the winner, and Evans was carried from the ring unconscious, with blood flowing from a hundred cuts, and his face battered out of all semblance of a human visage. He was placed in a carriage and driven to his home, but died from his injuries before reaching there.

Cowhided at the Church Door.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Aug. 1.—Dr. Dinke Walter, a prominent German druggist, was assaulted and vigorously cowhided by William Reger as the former was entering the German Lutheran Church this morning. The affair created great excitement in the church, the women and children fleeing in all directions. The trouble grew out of alleged slander of Reger by the druggist. Both men are prominent German citizens.

Against the Jesuits.

Killed by a Horse.

HAUBSTADT, IND., Aug. 1.—Anton Geiser, a merchant here, while riding along near the railroad station, was thrown from his horse and three ribs broken. He managed to regain his saddle and rode a short distance when the animal stumbled, and throwing Geiser, fell on him, crushing the breath from his body and fatally injuring him.

Corn in Illinois, Missouri and Kansas.

CHICAGO, Aug. 1.—Fully one-third the counties of Illinois, Missouri and Kansas report that corn, while showing the effects of the drouth, has not been seriously injured, and will make a fine yield if rain should come in time.

WONDERFUL.

A Michigan Man Brought Back to Life

By the Rubbing Process After Decomposition Had Set In.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH., Aug. 2.—Asa Campbell is one of the best known citizens of Charlevoix town and county. For years he was engaged in active business here, and acquired a competency. About twelve months since Mr. Campbell was stricken with paralysis, and has suffered excruciatingly most of the time. Two weeks ago his malady developed more alarming symptoms, and his family was in constant attendance upon him. Friday he died. There is no question as to this—he died, and his physician, one of the most regular of regular practitioners, admitted the fact. Mrs. Campbell, as a dernier resort, sent out for Mrs. Sweetland, a metaphysical "curer," temporarily located in this city, and that lady promptly responded to the call. However, when she reached the house decomposition had already set in, possibly growing out of the nature and complexity of the disease from which Mr. Campbell had suffered, and the stench emitted from the body was fearful. Mrs. Sweetland, who is an intelligent, sad-eyed lady, ordered disinfectants to be liberally applied about the rooms, and she placed herself beside the corpse. For twenty minutes she gently rubbed the body, muttering prayers or incantations meanwhile, and then the dead man's eyes opened. He tried to speak, but was unable. The rubbing process was continued twenty minutes longer, at the end of which time the corpse sat upright, and in three hours he was chatting with his family. Mr. Campbell is now enjoying greater freedom from pain than at any time since his first illness, and his physician, who admitted that he was dead, expresses himself as non-plused. Mr. Campbell is unable to express his feelings while in a state of death. He says he left the earth, but it is impossible to say or describe the place to which he journeyed.

MAN'S ENDURANCE.

The Frightful Ordeal Through Which a Wounded Man Passed.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—A knife-thrust under the eye that James Doyle received in a fracas at an early hour on Tuesday morning was, in the opinion of the doctors of the Governor Hospital, one of the most desperate that ever came to their notice. The knife entered at the inner angle of the orbit and penetrated the lachrymal bone, passing downward, backward, and slightly inward, in all three-and-a-quarter inches. The house surgeon says that the blade must have entered as far as the messial line, and, gliding along the vomer bone, struck the body of the sphenoid bone, which is very hard and turned the tip of the blade. Before Doyle was brought to the hospital one of his friends attempted to extract the knife, and in doing so broke it off at the rivet. To remove the blade was very difficult. Dr. Brendon procured a common file and made a small groove on both sides of the blade, and, with an instrument known as a "lion" forceps, began to pull. The doctor is a muscular young man, weighing nearly two hundred pounds, and he had to use his full strength, with both hands on the forceps, to remove the knife-blade, while the night orderly firmly held the patient's head between his hands with a vise-like grip. Doyle never winced during the terrible ordeal, but bore his sufferings with admirable bravery. The knife-blade was turned over to the police.

TEXAS MOVING.

The Men Who Gave Rassuras to His Death Promptly Arrested.

EAGLE PASS, TEX., Aug. 2.—By special order of Governor Ireland to County Attorney Kelso, complaint was received against County Judge Hoffstetter, Sheriff Oglesby, Deputy Sheriff B. Diaz and Franco Mondragon for being concerned in the illegal capture and delivery of Francisco Rassures to the police of Piedras Negras. The first three-mentioned individuals were arrested and placed under a bond of $1,000 each to appear before Justice Dunn. A meeting held at the court-house this afternoon passed resolutions strongly indorsing the action of Governor Ireland in the premises, and thanking him in the name of Maverick County, for coming so promptly to the relief of its people.

Is It Cholera?

CHIPPEWA FALLS, WIS., Aug. 2.—Two persons have died in this city within twenty-four hours from what appears to be well-defined cholera—A. M. Van Hauter and Mr. Van Dry. The former was taken ill yesterday forenoon and died at 7 o'clock in the evening. The latter was sick about the same length of time. Considerable excitement prevails, and the matter is being looked after very closely by leading citizens. It is thought to have been induced by the absence of any sewerage system in this city, and the continued dry, hot weather. For nearly three months there has been no rain to speak of.

Yellow Fever Vessel at Ship Island.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 2.—Information was received to-day that the Norwegian bark Agnes Campbell, which arrived at Ship Island Quarantine Station Thursday night, from Aspinwall, lost on the passage and since her arrival at the station, six men out of a crew of twelve of yellow fever. Two of the crew died on the evening of her arrival, and were buried on Ship Island. One other has been taken sick since the vessel arrived, and there are now four cases on board, leaving only the captain and two men on duty. The infected vessel is undergoing strict quarantine.

Cheap Ocean Travel.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—The Red Star Line has caused a sensation among the ocean steamship people by carrying steerage passengers from Antwerp here for $15, and from here back for $21. The agents of the principal other lines running to the continent held a long meeting this afternoon and formed an indefinite sort of a combination against the Red Star. This will result in a reduction of rates to figures below the Red Star rate, although formal announcement of such a lowering has not yet been made.

Typhoid Fever Epidemic.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 2.—Typhoid fever is raging at West Elizabeth, near this city. Over two hundred cases are reported.

—Forty years ago Josiah McCoy left his home in Portsmouth, Va., and his parents never heard of him again. Twenty-five years later his brother Frank settled in Savannah. The other day the brothers, who are now sixty and seventy years old, met for the first time in forty years. The runaway Josiah has become a flourishing orange-grower in Florida.—Washington Post.

—Sixteen years ago Asbury Park, on the New Jersey coast, was not in existence; to-day it is one of the largest summer resorts in this country, besides being the permanent home of a large number of people. It has seven churches, a fine public library, two public halls and has an assessed valuation of $2,000,000.—N. Y. Herald.

—A tall, handsome Marseillais applied for an appointment as bass singer at the opera. "How far down does your voice reach?" "Three notes deeper than the thunder."—La Caricature.

—The temperatures of Norfolk, Charleston, Savannah, Mobile, New Orleans and Galveston bear a striking similarity this summer.

A TERRIBLE OUTRAGE.

An American Citizen Kidnaped and Shot by a Mexican Rival in Love.

GALVESTON, TEX., July 30.—Francis Rasures, the naturalized American citizen who was arrested and surrendered night before last without a hearing by County Judge Hoffstetter, upon demand of Chief of Police Mondragon, of Piedras Negras, Mex., that he was a horse thief, was taken from the Mexican prison eight hours after his incarceration, carried two miles below Piedras Negras, with his hands tied behind him, and brutally shot and buried at the command of Mondragon. The secret underlying this infamous outrage is that Rasures had won the affections of a woman of whom Chief Mondragon was enamored. Mondragon swearing vengeance, detailed two of his trusty lieutenants one night to murder his rival. Rasures badly disabled his assailants and escaped to Eagle Pass. Mondragon, however, determined his removal, trumped up a charge of horsetheft against him and had him extradited and shot. The night that Rasures was delivered to the Mexican authorities Mondragon left for Saltillo, not, however, before having delivered orders to his lieutenants to execute Rasures. The victim in a pathetic letter appealed to United States Consul Lynn to save him, saying he was an American citizen, guiltless of any transgression against any law, and that Mondragon had had him arrested to gratify his vengeance. This letter was delivered to Consul Lynn ten hours after its author had been basely shot. Consul Lynn has telegraphed the facts of the case to Secretary Bayard.

YUM, YUM!

Bohemian Epicures Feast on Roast Dog Till They Get Sick.

PITTSBURGH, July 29.—A Bohemian living in the suburbs butchered a fat dog yesterday and served it up at a feast, to which several of his countrymen and countrywomen were invited. They all ate heartily of the flesh, considering it a luxury. Nearly all who partook of the meat were taken sick, their symptoms resembling those caused by poison. The doctors think some of them will die. The affair has caused a sensation among other Bohemians, who have dogs in process of fattening for the table.

Wholesale Jail Delivery.

PITTSBURGH, PA., July 29.—There was a wholesale jail delivery at Wheeling yesterday. While the officials were eating dinner twelve of the prisoners, including a number held on serious charges, scaled the walls and escaped. The fugitives boarded a Baltimore & Ohio freight train for this city, and when they arrived here this morning they were met by a posse of police, and ten of the twelve recaptured without trouble.

The Deadly Rattler.

OAKLAND, ILL., July 29.—While gathering berries with several other ladies near this city yesterday, Mrs. J. Hausen was bitten by a rattlesnake. Her screams called the attention of her companions, who went to her assistance. She was placed in a wagon and started for her home, but before she arrived she died. Her left limb, which was bitten, swelled to enormous proportions before death ensued.

A Queer Case.

NEW YORK, July 29.—A Newark justice has issued a warrant for the arrest of Frank Gleeson, a seventeen-year-old son of highly respectable Brooklyn parents, on a charge based upon a remarkable story told by his mother, to the effect that he has left his home and is detained away by Mrs. Husk, a forty-year-old woman, at New York, who has been possessed of a strong infatuation for him for several years.

Texas Wants Gore.

AUSTIN, TEX., July 29.—Applications to raise volunteers are pouring in on the Adjutant-General, who also has information that the Mexicans are re-inforcing the El Paso Del Norte garrisons.

FORT WORTH, July 29.—Texans are itching for war. Local military companies in every city are drilling. The howl is for war.

Turkey Again Arming.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 29.—Turkey is making large additions to her armament. Herr Krupp has received a large order from the Government, and a Turkish officer has gone to his works, at Essen, to oversee the manufacture of the guns. It is proposed to purchase 400,000 American rifles.

The Devil Assuredly Did So.

BROWNSVILLE, TEX., July 29.—Emanuel Chorazo, aged sixteen, cut off his stepmother's head with an axe this morning while she was dying. He says she refused to let him go to the circus yesterday, and the devil told him to cut her head off. He is in jail.

St. Louis Street-Railways.

ST. LOUIS, July 29.—A movement is on foot to unite all the street railroads of the city under one management. There is a proposition to entirely abandon horse-power for cables, and reduce the fare from five to three cents.

Knoch Tragedy Unraveling.

DETROIT, July 29.—Frank Bergh has been arrested in Cleveland for connection with the Knoch tragedy of last December, in which the family of four persons were murdered and afterwards burned.

A Confederate Pensioner Restored.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—The President has signed a bill restoring a Confederate soldier to the pension rolls at $17 a month. The bill was passed through both houses of Congress.

Grain and Fruit Damaged.

SHARON, PA., July 29.—A terrible destructive storm raged here to-day. Damage to grain, orchards and buildings by the hail was very great.

Jew and Gentile---Cupid is Blind.

CHICAGO, July 29.—A Jacksonville (Ill.) special says: Nellie Goodwin, the sixteen-year-old daughter of the Rev. W. R. Goodwin, pastor of the Centenary Methodist Episcopal Church, eloped last night with Meier Weil, son of a prominent Jewish clothier of this place, and were married. They have fled to parts unknown.

Heavy Broom-corn Crop.

Postal Telegraph.

NEW YORK, July 29.—The Postal Telegraph has been completely re-organized by foreclosure and sale. Old mortgage bonds and stocks are wiped out and a new $5,000,000 company formed. No obligations exist. Mackay is the principal owner, and its lines will be extended to the Pacific Coast.

Believed to be the Missing Conant.

NEW YORK, July 29.—The body of a man was found in the water at Coney Island beach this morning. It answers the description of S. S. Conant, editor of Harper's Weekly, who disappeared a year ago. The underclothing on the body was marked "S. S. C." Conant was last seen alive at Coney Island.

XLIXTH CONGRESS.

First Session.

WASHINGTON, July 28.—SENATE.—The House surplus resolution was reported back with amendments. Seven vetoed pension bills were reported back. Mr. Blair gave notice he would call them up on Thursday for action.

HOUSE.—The sundry civil bill was reported and referred to the committee of the whole. The conferees [illegible] committee on the river and harbor bill reported a continued disagreement and the House instructed the committee to insist upon the striking out of the Hennepin Canal, Portage Lake and Lake Superior Ship Canal, Sturgeon Bay and Lake Michigan Ship Canal, the Mississippi River Commission and the [illegible] Flats improvement items. The Northern Pacific forfeiture bill was taken up and the House substitute, forfeiting all lands west of Bismarck, agreed to—yeas 154, nays 63. The Senate bill as amended was then passed—yeas 180, nays 45. The Inter-State commerce bill was called up and a motion to agree to the Senate bill rejected. Pending final action, the House adjourned.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—SENATE.—The river and harbor bill was reported from conference. A continued disagreement with the House was ordered and the bill returned to conference. A bill was reported to refer the McGarrahan claim to the Court of Claims. It was placed on the calendar. The fortifications bill was then taken up, debated and passed. The surplus resolution was taken up, and pending its consideration the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE.—Conferees on the Northern Pacific forfeiture bill were appointed. The legislative appropriation bill was agreed to in committee of the whole, the House receding from its objection to the Senators' clerks. The sundry civil bill, with Senate amendments was then considered and returned to conference. The report on the legislative bill was adopted in the House, and at 5 p. m. the House adjourned.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—SENATE.—The proclamation of the Governor of Utah, relative to the violation of the marriage laws in that Territory, was presented and referred. A resolution to authorize the continuance of the Pension Office investigation during the recess was placed on the calendar. A number of House bills were reported from committee. The Morrison surplus resolution as amended, was then considered. Messrs. Allison, McPherson and Sherman favored the amended resolution, and Plumb, Vest, Beck, Teller and Jones opposed it.

HOUSE.—A bill was passed for the erection of a public building at Jefferson, Tex. The general deficiency bill, with Senate amendments, was considered in committee of the whole. A conference was ordered, and Messrs. Burns, LeFevre and McComas were appointed conferees. Vetoed pension bills were called up, but their consideration was opposed by Mr. Reagan, who wanted the Inter-State commerce bill brought up, and finally it was agreed that the pension cases on the calendar be considered and voted upon, and then the Inter-State commerce bill should be taken up. The House refused—105 to 86—to pass a vetoed pension bill for the relief of Andrew J. Wilson, and at 5:15 p. m. took a recess until 8 p. m. for private bills.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—A secret session was held after the reading of the journal, and the nomination of Solicitor General Jenks confirmed. The Senate amendments to the House bill providing for the appointment and compensation of a District Judge for Alabama were reconsidered, and amendment fixing District Judges' salaries at $5,000 a year was stricken out. Another amendment, prohibiting the appointment of relatives by Judges, was also stricken out on the point of order that the amendments were general, while the bill itself was local. A resolution to appoint a committee of the Senate and House to report a plan for celebrating at the capital the four hundredth anniversary, in 1892, of the discovery of America went over until to-morrow. A resolution calling on the Commissioner of Agriculture for a report at the next session on the wheat statistics of the world was adopted. The Morrison surplus resolution was taken up and considered. A number of amendments were proposed and rejected. Mr. Sewell offered as an amendment the bill for the receipt of trade dollars at their face value, and this was adopted. Attempts were made to lay the resolution on the table and then strike out the enacting clause, but both failed. The resolution and amendments were finally passed by a vote of 42 to 20. The naval increase bill was called up, amended, passed and conference ordered. The Senate, at 6 p. m., adjourned.

HOUSE.—Bills were passed for the construction of public buildings at Santa Fe, N. M., and Springfield, Mass. Vetoed pension bills were taken up. The House refused to pass the bill granting a pension of fifty dollars to the widow of General Hunter over the President's veto by a vote of yeas, 111; nays, 108. Also the bill to pension Mrs. Anderson—yeas, 119; nays, 95—not the necessary two-thirds in either case. The other vetoed bills on the calendar were postponed until December next. The Reagan Inter-State commerce bill was taken up. It was passed—yeas, 180; nays, 41. The river and harbor bill was reported from conference, and the House at 5 p. m. took a recess until 8 p. m., the evening session being for the consideration of pension bills.

WASHINGTON, July 31.—SENATE.—The Committee on Finance was authorized, during the recess, to continue the investigation of undervaluations in the customs service. The House bill to extend the free delivery system was reported back and placed on the calendar. A resolution was offered instructing the President to ascertain, by correspondence with foreign nations, their intentions with regard to silver. The Indian tradership investigation was authorized to continue during the recess. The New Orleans, Baton Rouge and Vicksburg land forfeiture bill was reported back. Messrs. Allison, Aldrich and Beck were appointed conferees on the surplus resolution. The House bill to regulate the packing and selling of cut tobacco was considered and finally recommitted to the Committee on Finances for further consideration. At 2:40 p. m. the Senate went into executive session, and at 6:30 p. m. adjourned.

HOUSE.—The President's veto of the public building bill for Springfield, Mo., was read and referred. The river and harbor conference report of an agreement recognizing the Hennepin canal, New York harbor, Potomac flats, and other Senate amendments were rejected by the House—yeas, 102; nays, 135—and a further conference was ordered. A joint resolution extending the appropriations until August 10, was reported from the Committee on Appropriations by Mr. Randall, but its consideration was objected to and it was referred to the committee of the whole. Blanchard and Henderson at their own request were excused from further service on the river and harbor conference committee, and Messrs. Glover and Markham appointed in their places. The House, on motion of Morrison, non-concurred in the Senate amendments to the surplus resolution, and a conference was ordered. Messrs. Morrison, Breckinridge and Hiscock were appointed conferees. The Fortification Appropriation bill was reported back, with the recommendation that all the Senate amendments be non-concurred in. Mr. Butterworth moved the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment establishing a plant at the Frankfort Arsenal, Philadelphia. Pending action, the House, at 5 p. m., adjourned.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—SENATE.—The sundry civil bill was sent back to conference. Senator Blair tried to get a vote on some of the vetoed pension bills, but failed. Mr. Evarts explained his resolution for an international conference on the silver question. The bill to tax fractional parts of a gallon of whisky and to permit the withdrawal of spirits for fortifying wines was passed. The conference on the general deficiency bill report was agreed to. At 2:20 p. m. the Senate went into executive session, and at 6:35 adjourned until 10 to-morrow.

HOUSE.—The bill to increase the naval establishment was agreed to with the Senate amendments. A resolution was passed extending appropriations to August 5. The conference report on the sundry civil bill was received, and points of difference insisted upon. The Senate bill increasing the pension of soldiers who lost an arm or leg in the service was passed—167 to 51. At 5 p. m. the House adjourned.

—The "mint house" in Boston existed thirty-four years, or thereabouts. All the coins issued from it bore the dates 1652 or 1662, the same dies being probably used through all the time of coining there. Some coins had been made for Virginia as early as 1644. Copper coins bearing the figure of an elephant were struck in England for the Carolinas and New England in 1694. Coins were also struck for Maryland, bearing the effigy of Lord Baltimore.—Boston Globe.

—A new building material, for which remarkable fire-resisting qualities are claimed, as well as superior hardness and adhesiveness and applicability at all temperatures, is called "asbestine." It is proposed to make it a substitute for plaster as at present mixed, because it requires no hair, and it is represented not to crack under the influence of fire, as ordinary plaster does, and will therefore prove a check to the spread of flames.

—In the visitors' book at a Swiss hotel we find the following entry under the heading profession: "Young lady in search of a husband." How intensely practical.—[illegible]

THE COMMONWEALTH.

Louisville Leaf Tobacco Market.

Burley tobaccos have had a large healthy movement, with prices ruling somewhat higher in common and low medium grades of leaf and in lugs and trash. Other grades are quotably unchanged, but firm, with the solitary exception of light rolling kinds. There have been complaints of drouth from several sections and apprehensions are apparently justified, but probably no important definite damages have been sustained. The growth, especially on rolling or hilly lands, has been checked, and there is some talk of buttoning. The crop is in a clean, and, with these exceptions, healthy condition. We reduce dark and heavy stripe 25c from common lugs to common leaf, and advance Burley 25c from trash up to medium leaf, inclusive. We quote 1885 tobacco as follows for full weight packages:

MAYOR PEARCE, of Maysville, is becoming a terror to evil doers. Sixteen negroes were tried before him the other day for riotous conduct and fined $50 apiece and costs, amounting to over $800. The crowd banded together, armed themselves with pistols and guns and started out to do up some white boys, against whom some of their number had a grudge. Some desperate criminals were in the gang, and the white boys did well to keep out of their way. Two of the gang, George Wilson and Henry Green, are wanted in Cincinnati for crimes recently committed there, and will be turned over to the police of that place as soon as they work out their fines. They are a tough lot.

A COLORED barber of Henderson, named Lloyd McFarland met with a very strange accident a few days ago, which resulted in his death a few days later. McFarland, who had but one leg, was standing on the river bank in the upper portion of the city, conversing with a friend and bracing himself with his cane. The cane in some way slipped into a hole, and McFarland fell backward, the cane entering his body and rupturing his lower bowels. He was conveyed to a neighboring house and a physician was summoned, who said a surgical operation must be performed or he could not recover. He refused to submit to an operation, and suffered terribly from the time of the accident to his death.

THE monument erected to the memory of James Francis Leonard, the first practical sound-reader in telegraphy in the world, was dedicated at Frankfort, recently. A large number of distinguished people were present.

POMP ARNETT, colored, was shot and killed by his brother, Rice Arnett, at Zion. The quarrel which precipitated the murder, arose from Pomp's alleged intimacy with Rice's wife. Pomp was drunk when the killing occurred. The murderer is in jail.

AT an early hour the other morning two fishermen, who were rowing in a skiff under the Sand Island bridge, Louisville, heard a shriek from above, and looking up saw the body of a man whirling rapidly through the air. In a twinkling the man had gone head first into the river, and the fishermen waited for him to come to the surface, which he did in five seconds, spluttering and floundering like a porpoise. He was quickly gathered into the boat and taken ashore, where he was found to be quite drunk. His name, it seems, is George Hart, and his home is Salem, Ind. He arrived in Louisville the day before, and fell among the Philistines. They filled him gloriously full of liquor, and he started aimlessly over the bridge in a very hilarious condition. He had not gone very far before his hat blew off in the river. In his drunken idiocy he thought it would be a funny thing to jump in, after it, and he jumped—a distance of about ninety feet—and was not injured. He would have certainly been drowned, however, but for the timely arrival of the two fishermen. The fall into the water would have killed him any way but for his drunkenness.

GEO. W. CLAYTON, who tried to jump an outgoing train on the Kentucky Central, at Covington, the other day, and had his feet mashed by the wheels, has since died. He had suffered amputation of his feet, and death resulted from this and the previous nervous shock.

THE other night Levi Chambers an Internal Revenue Store-keeper, who is a victim of somnambulism, got out of his bed at his hotel, in Louisville, dressed himself and walked out on a little veranda. The veranda gave way and he was precipitated to the sidewalk below, a distance of forty feet. His right leg was broken above the hip and his face badly cut and crushed. Chambers is an elderly man and has suffered a great deal from rheumatism. His injuries will probably prove fatal.

THE other night the depot at English, Carroll County, a station on the Louisville and Cincinnati Short Line, was burned. Origin of the fire unknown. T. M. Jones ran a general country store in the depot, and lost every thing. The post-office was kept in the building, and it was burned.

THE city of Frankfort will be one hundred years old next October, and her citizens propose to celebrate the event on Wednesday, the 6th of October, 1886, with such unique and imposing ceremonies as become the capital city of a great State. In addition to a dozen or more centennial orations and poems by the most distinguished orators and poets of the age, in which such men as Colonel John Mason Brown, Colonel W. C. P. Breckinridge, Judge John M. Harlan, Governor T. T. Crittenden, United States Senators J. C. S. Blackburn and G. G. Vest, and James B. Beck, Governor R. M. Bishop, of Ohio, and Mayor H. T. Stanton and Dr. Robert Morris will likely participate, and the usual amount of centennial odes and songs by the lovely women of Frankfort and Central Kentucky, there will be other features of this centennial as unique as they are attractive.

A LOUISVILLE dispatch states that a young man named Henry Bailey was shot and killed by unknown parties in Harlan County, while he was washing his face. His brother was shot and killed in the same way about two weeks before. The reason for the extermination of persons in that part of the country who wash their faces is not given.

THE jury in the case of Hornbuckle, on trial at Russelville for the murder of George Finch, was out for six hours, and failing to agree, was discharged. The jury stood four for acquittal and eight for imprisonment for a term of years.

LOUIS BANKS and Geo. Bates, colored, broke jail at Versailles, a few days ago, and made their escape.

CRAIG TOLIVER and Cook Humphreys, whose names have been closely identified with reports of the disorders in Rowan County for several years past, were each arrested a few days ago by order of Judge Cole. When searched, neither man was found to be armed. They were put under bonds of $500 to keep the peace and then discharged.

THE post-office at Apple Tree, Breathitt County, has been abolished.

MRS. CINDERELLA PARSONS, aged nineteen, committed suicide at Dublin, by taking morphine. A family quarrel caused it.

THE RIGHT OF VETO.

A Constitutional Weapon Used to Check Careless Legislation—President Cleveland's Wise Use of It.

When the first constitution of Ohio was formed no veto was given to the Governor, and this is about the only State where he does not sign bills passed by the Legislature. In 1802 the Jefferson party had a majority in the convention to form our organic law, and, being jealous of executive encroachment, they denied him all participation in the business of legislation, and, after an experiment of fifty years, the framers of our present constitution retained the old provision. No serious consequences have resulted, and the people are satisfied. The qualified veto given to the President in the Federal constitution has, as a rule, been wisely and judiciously exercised. It enables the Executive to interpose to prevent violations of the organic law, check hasty and ill-advised legislation and protect his prerogative from legislative encroachment. After returning a bill with his objections, a majority of two-thirds in each branch of Congress can make it a law without his consent. His power is not absolute, but qualified, and hence not dangerous.

President Jackson, and subsequently President Tyler, vetoed acts of Congress to establish a national bank. They were violently and vehemently denounced at the time, but their interposition of executive authority has been accepted and approved by the people. They were content to wait for the sober second thought of the intelligent patriotic masses to approve their action. President Hayes vetoed the bill remonetizing silver, and it was very promptly passed over his veto.

In the last day of his official life he vetoed the act providing for the refunding the national debt at a lower rate of interest. The next Congress reenacted the law, and it was approved by the President.

The greater virtue in the veto power is that it gives the President authority to check hasty and ill-advised legislation, and our present Executive has popularized this constitutional provision as it never has been before. He has been styled the veto President. His brief messages returning pension and appropriation bills to Congress without his approval met with the warmest commendation of the people. Presidents heretofore have usually approved such acts of Congress as a matter of course. President Cleveland signs nothing without an examination. If a bill does not challenge his approval, he refuses his signature and briefly and clearly gives his reasons. He is aware of the fact that on "private bill day" in Congress only those attend who have cases to be considered, and that "you vote for mine and I will vote for yours" is sufficient to secure the passage of both without regard to merit. While he wishes every person who is entitled to a pension to have it, he is determined to prevent dishonest raids upon the treasury.

The objections to making appropriations for constructing post-offices where convenient and suitable accommodations can be had at an expense less than the cost of taking care of a Government building after it is erected will be warmly indorsed by the people. Tax-payers feel that they have a President who will do his duty without fear or favor.

Many justify these appropriations in order to empty the treasury of its large surplus. The Democratic doctrine is that there should be no surplus in the treasury, that taxes should be reduced so that only enough money be taken from the pockets of the people for an economical administration of the Government. If public buildings are constructed in all places like Zanesville and Dayton the money required to keep them in order will make high tax levies necessary in all future time.

President Cleveland is a Democrat, and repudiates the Republican doctrine that high taxes make the people prosperous, and the larger the appropriations the better for the country. He is daily growing in favor with the people. He will make the veto power very popular if he continues his good work.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Cleared by a Republican.

The following is a report made by Senator Hoar to the Committee on Privileges and Elections upon the material submitted by the Ohio Legislature in the Payne case, which material Mr. Hoar as a committeeman examined and analyzed:

"I have examined the evidence forwarded by the House of Representatives of Ohio. The investigation was under a resolution directing an inquiry as to the charges that four members of the present Legislature, being also members of the last, were guilty of being induced by corrupt means to vote for Mr. Payne. These charges were not sustained and the committee so report. But the inquiry took a wider range. There was evidence tending to show that Mr. Payne's name was not publicly suggested as a candidate for Senator until after the State election; that it was not very prominently suggested until shortly before his election in January; that many persons who had been supposed to favor Pendleton voted for Payne; that there was a widespread belief that corrupt means were used to procure the result; that one member was offered a large sum of money for his vote; that there were hearsay statements charging corruption as to several others; that two members of the Legislature received large sums of money about the time of the election, of which being called as witnesses they gave no satisfactory account; that the principal managers of Mr. Payne's canvass, Paige, McLean, Huntington and Oliver H. Payne, did not testify before the committee. But there is no evidence tending to show the bribery of any member unless as above stated; there is no evidence to connect Mr. Payne, the sitting member, with these transactions, and none tending to show that the result was changed or affected by such means."—Chicago Inter-Ocean (Rep.).

Rule in the Household.

It is to be expected that parents will do their duty to their children, and so very few commands to parents are found until Paul bids them not to provoke their children to wrath. But it is not so much to be expected that children will naturally be obedient to their parents. So the duty of obedience of children is put even into the Decalogue—"Honor thy father and thy mother"—and the New Testament repeats it, and declares that its promise of long life makes it the first commandment with promise. We don't remember any command in the Bible for parents to obey their children; and yet, if the public impression does not err, there are a great many cases nowadays in which the order is reversed, and it is the child that orders the parents about, and rules the household. If children do not obey it is the parents' fault. They should have begun before the child could talk, and taught it that its whims are not to be respected, that its crying will not force submission, but that it is the subordinate and must do as it is told. The parent who abdicates his authority insures a miserable household, and ruins his child.—N. Y. Independent.

THE AUTOGRAPH RAGE.

How the President Bends Philosophically to the Unceasing Demand in This Line.

The small boy with the autograph album is a prominent and busy figure about the capitol now. The rage for autographs, it seems, will never cease. Great people from the President down through the various grades of public life are constantly pestered for their autographs. Every day the visitor to the White House may see a pile of letters upon the desk of one of the private secretaries with the abbreviation "auto" written upon each envelope. It means that they contain requests for autographs. The number of these letters received at the White House in a year may be counted by thousands. Those that come now, contain not only a request for the President's autograph, but some of them ask for that of his bride. These latter requests are seldom complied with, for while the President has thought it proper to yield to the demand for accurate portraits of Mrs. Cleveland, and has consented to their sale under certain restrictions, it has not been thought advisable to encourage the public in a miscellaneous demand for autographs. The President continues, however, to give a few minutes occasionally to gratifying the requests of the many applicants for this class of favors. The President is a good deal of a philosopher, and after entering the White House decided that he could do more to grant personal pleasure to a large number of people in a brief space of time by receiving those who called to pay their respects, and writing his autograph for those desiring them, than in any other manner; and while he does not particularly enjoy this sort of thing he submits gracefully. So the hand-shaker and autograph fiends are generally successful in their raids upon the President. Not that anybody can march up to him at any time and successfully demand his autograph, but that the reasonable requests received by mail are generally responded to. Usually these letters are laid away until a pretty good lot of them accumulates, and until the President has time to attend to them. Charley Lefler, the President's usher, is the autograph hunter's friend. The letters are turned over to him, and when he can catch the President with a moment of time to spare he lays a bundle of cards before him, and he writes "Grover Cleveland, Grover Cleveland" until his arm gets tired or his other and more important duties take his attention. Then Charley takes the precious autographs and distributes them by mail to the applicants. Often there are personal applications by the owners of autograph albums, and they are generally directed to leave them with Charley, who presents them at the same time he does the cards for the President's sign manual.—Cincinnati Times.

DEMOCRATIC DROPS.

——The more the private pension bills are examined, the worse they look.—Providence Journal (Rep.).

——The Blaine organs are still trying to stick knives into General Logan. Such are the sweet phases of Republican harmony.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

——Extravagance Blair's attempt to act as the whole Senate Committee on Pensions is one more illustration of his unrivaled genius for self-asinification.—Buffalo Times.

——Messrs. Edmunds, Logan, Sherman and Evarts constitute a very dismal group of Presidential aspirants. They are like a man who, with his nose flattened against the window-pane, peers wistfully out and sees nothing but fog.—Brooklyn Eagle.

——The failure of General Logan to stem the tide which turned sometime ago in favor of General Fitz John Porter marks another stage in the downward course of the "bloody shirt." In another campaign it will be valueless as a political factor.—New Haven Register.

——The President has given evidence that he is not practiced in double-dealing or deceit, and that he means what he says. If he shall succeed in effecting an actual and final divorce between the offices and machine politics, he will be entitled to the appellation of a real reformer.—Chicago Journal (Rep.).

——Senator Dawes, of Massachusetts, is the par excellence champion of the red man. But when the President by a veto undertakes to preserve the red man's land from being gobbled by a railroad corporation, Dawes' Senatorial worship of corporations and his partisan dislike of the President are too much for him and he sacrifices his Indian proteges without a scruple.—Detroit Free Press.

——It is quite plain that Woodpulp Miller, the so-called Senator from New York, will have very hard work in securing pledges from candidates for the assembly the coming fall. The New York Tribune is opposed to his re-election and says: "He is the champion of a great swindle in the Senate, which is not for the benefit of New York or any interest of New York." But no man who is entitled to an opinion is disappointed with the figure Miller has cut in national politics. The poor fellow might have done well in the Assembly, but when he went to the United States Senate he was over his head.

The Probable Ohio Programme.

It must have been a weak array of facts indeed that would not demand of three such stalwart partisans as Senators Teller, Evarts and Logan an investigation in the interest of Ohio Republicans and general party capital. But the proofs submitted for their consideration were too flimsy, and, despite the appeal of Senator Sherman, the special pleading of Congressmen Little and Butterworth, and the wild tomtoms of the one hundred Republican editors of Ohio, these three Senators had to join four Democrats in dismissing the charges of Editor Donavin from the consideration of the Senate.

It is now in order for M. Halstead to make the evening sky lurid with the hot breath of his fiery indignation. From the Western Reserve to the slums of Hamilton County the one hundred Republican editors of Ohio should make the State resound with denunciations of Teller, Evarts and Logan—false Senators and recreant Republicans. There will be a "hubbub wild" in Buckeyedom for nine days; M. Halstead will run up the flag of secession and loosen his moorings to the Union; Senator Sherman will fume and Ben Butterworth will bellow, and then—Ohio will take every thing that comes in her way.—Chicago News.

There comes from Frankfort a rumor that Hon. John D. White, a calm and peaceful citizen of Jefferson county, will be the Republican candidate for Congress in the Eleventh district. Before his reformation, Mr. White was known to fame as "The Howling Raccoon from the Mountains," or "The Wild Man from Away Back," but he has lived a life of such sylvan peace and beauty since his retirement from politics that we decline to give any credit to the rumor that he desires to once more feed upon Congressional husks. Maj. Botts will not have the pleasure of meeting Mr. White we feel assured.—C.-J.

The Commonwealth can see nothing worthy of praise in the record made by the present Congress, and what it says in [illegible] has a very peculiar sound [illegible] Democratic journal. [illegible]

Washington dispatches are made to say that Speaker Carlisle and leading Democrats are in good spirits over the present session's work. What has the Democratic House done for the party or the country? [illegible] appropriations and its [illegible] [illegible] adopted any substantial measure of relation [illegible] great public interest. On the contrary, it is understood that the Democratic leaders of the House have been scheming to frustrate the policy of the Administration apparently for no other reason than to make the renomination of Mr. Cleveland impossible.

The Courier-Journal's Washington correspondent views the record of the present Congress from a very different standpoint than that of the Commonwealth. He says:

"When a review is made of the work of the present session it will be discovered that with the exception of the defeat of the Morrison Tariff Bill, the record made by the Democratic party is a very creditable one. The Speaker, Col. Morrison, and other gentlemen prominent in the leadership of the House are in good spirits over the condition of things. The appropriations have been less than they were at last session, and a great deal less than in the Forty-seventh Congress when the Republicans had control. No jobs have been allowed to get through the House, as far as is known, and none will be during the remaining hours of the session. The situation is now such that there will not be the usual six suspension days, if any, previous to adjournment, and a good many bills that otherwise stand a show to be considered will be cut off. There is a good deal of satisfaction in certain quarters over the virtual defeat of the River and Harbor Bill, as there are several jobs in it as amended by the Senate. Another subject of congratulation to the leaders is the passage of the Northern Pacific Land grant Forfeiture Bill, by which many millions of acres of land are restored to the public domain. There are other good features of the Democratic record which the lull following the rush and hurly-burly of the closing hours of the session will afford an opportunity to review in detail."

There is a very great difference of opinion existing between the above two quoted paragraphs, and the last comes from a source probably the least biased by prejudice.

A Mysterious Shower of Rocks

The inhabitants of Mundy's Landing, on the Kentucky river in, Woodford county, are considerably worked up over the charge of showers of stones descending in their midst. Several persons have been severely hurt and roofs of houses made to rattle like musketry. The scene and location of these mysterious visitations are at and near the home of Mrs. Lucretia Mundy, widow of Lowry Mundy, who died from the effects of poison administered, as charged, by his wife and Dr. Davis, the latter now serving a life sentence in the penitentiary for being guilty of the poisoning, and Mrs. Mundy now under indictment as accessory to the murder.

The first notice taken of the falling stones was on Monday last, when parties picking blackberries in a patch some distance from the Mundy mansion were surprised at the dropping of small stones in their midst, and continuing to descend at intervals. Their surprise changed to alarm, and with buckets and berries they beat a hasty retreat from the patch. The next day, Mrs. Davis, when about 100 yards from the house, was struck severely on the arm by a stone from some unknown direction. Miss Annie Mundy was also hurt, and very severely, by a descending stone upon her head. Miss Eva Munday the next day was hit and slightly hurt. A negro man (Henry) was struck and knocked over a cliff, which came very near ending his career. Saturday and Sunday several negroes were struck, one or two of them being severely injured. The people of the neighborhood, of course, are stirred up. Some think it the work of some malicious individual, or individuals, who are creating the sensation. Others think it of the supernatural order. But whether from natural or unnatural causes, all are of the opinion that it is a very strange affair.

A great many people have been in town to-day from the section mentioned. Your correspondent has taken pains to talk with several intelligent, cool and unsensational gentlemen, who say that they don't understand the matters, and think that these occurrences are very mysterious. Several houses besides the Davis-Mundy mansion have been struck, and the stones descend perpendicularly, and not horizontally as if thrown by the hand of an individual.—Ex.

Gold in Kentucky.

A Special to the Louisville Post, from Greenwood, Ky., [illegible] July 28th, says: For the past three months there has been a party at work opening and exploring what they claimed was gold, silver, lead [illegible]

Outsiders have given but little attention to them, thinking there was no silver or valuables [illegible] Pulaski county or the Cumberland mountains. Mr. J. O. Bowman, an old and good citizen of the county, who is the leader in the work, was here yesterday, and your correspondent had a short talk with him. He says he has had the opening of these mines in view for nearly 30 years, but not having the money that was necessary he could not get the assistance he needed until a few months ago. He is now working on the land owned by Andy Hansinbothum, located about fourteen miles from this place in the Cumberland mountains. He had a lot of the ore assayed at Washington several weeks ago which was reported to him as being worth $10 per ton. Since that time he has been able to purchase more tools, and has been pushing the work, and says the ore improves in quality each ton.

On Friday night last Mrs. O. J. Thurmond, of Junction City, was awakened by some noise, and without disturbing her husband she arose to see what produced it. Lighting the lamp she discovered a negro man crouched under the bed where Mr. Thurmond was sleeping. Without letting the negro know that she had seen him, she coolly went to the bureau drawer, where a Smith & Wesson pistol is kept, and procuring it, she deliberately leveled it at the negro's head, but unfortunately it failed to fire, or there would have been one negro less. All this was but the work of a moment, and she hated to awake her husband before she secured her game, but when the treacherous revolver failed to perform its mission, she screamed for Mr. Thurmond, when the negro jumped out of the window and made his escape. Mr. T. by chance that night had left $100 in his pocket close to where the negro was concealed, and it is thought the colored gentleman knew it was there and was trying to appropriate it to himself. The negro kept something over his face all the time, and Mrs. Thurmond failed to identify him.—Stanford Journal.

State Politics.

The election of Speaker Carlisle to succeed Senator Beck in the United States Senate is being discussed among the politicians of Louisville.

The Democratic Committee of the Eighth Congressional District has decided to hold a convention at Danville, August 5th, to nominate a candidate for Congress. Hon. J. B. McCreary will probably have no opposition.

There are now only three districts in the county in which whisky is sold, and vox populi served notice Monday that they must suspend the traffic within their limits.

The programme for the Frankfort, Ky., centennial celebration, which is to take place October 6th next, boiled down is as follows: "Frankfort's centenial will be celebrated October 6, on which occasion Col. John Mason Brown will deliver the principal address and Maj. Henry T. Stanton will read an original poem. Ex-Gov. T. T. Crittenden and United States Senator Geo. G. Vest, of Missouri, and Justice John M. Harlan, of the Supreme Court, all natives and former residents of Frankfort, will deliver addresses, and Hon. B. J. Peters, of Mt. Sterling, ex-Chief Justice of the Court of Appeals, will give a recollection of the bench and bar." The remainder of the day will be consumed in consuming the native fluid of the State.

VALUABLES IN TRUST.

The Precautions Taken by Safe Deposit Companies to Preserve Property Entrusted to Their Care.

With the approach of summer begins the accumulation in the vaults of the safe deposit companies of great piles of family silver-plate, jewelry and valuable property and papers which the householder about to depart on his vacation fears to leave at home, trusting to the vigilance of the police.

"We have now in our vaults," said Safe-Superintendent Clark, of the Fidelity Insurance, Trust and Safe Deposit Company, last week, "some four thousand packages, the value of which I could not begin to calculate, for I don't know what they are really worth. People who leave their property in our charge rarely assess them at their full value, so thoroughly do they feel convinced of their absolute safety. Lately we have added a new precaution in the shape of a shock for the possible sneak-thief."

"Do you have visits from sneak-thieves?"

"We have had some. For instance, you are coming to visit your property. As you enter the gate to the vaults you pass the gatekeeper, who recognizes you by the password. With you enters a well-dressed man who has just accosted you with some simple remark about the weather, to which you have replied in the same simple manner, and the gatekeeper, thinking he is a friend of yours, allows him to go by with you. [illegible] you are [illegible] any [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] a [illegible] all to the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] to [illegible] pack it [illegible] and ask him if it is his. He [illegible] that it is, thanks you, walks off as if on other business and might escape from the building before you could give an alarm. But the gate is closed and can only be opened on the outside [illegible] of the password. This gate is also one of our [illegible] [illegible]."

"Make [illegible]"

"[illegible] An [illegible] could [illegible] the [illegible] that [illegible] that when that door is closed I can direct a current of electricity through its steel bars sufficient to kill a man instantly. By the time it was broken down our safe doors would be closed and bolted and then we wouldn't care for any mob. What do people deposit with us? Oh, well, it would be difficult to say. We don't ask what are the contents of their trunks. We do not take furniture. I wish we did. I would like to make arrangements so that when a family are going abroad or out of town they should give us notice and we would undertake the packing and the removing to our vaults or warerooms of the complete home contents. Then when the family are coming back, they should let us know and we would replace everything as we found it. Of course it would be a great undertaking, but it is only a small increase of duty and responsibility after all. Perhaps it may be interesting to you to know that the findings on the desks, tables and floors during nineteen years amounted to nearly $3,000,914, all through the carelessness of safe renters. With the exception of an inconsiderable amount of bonds, coupons and money, as well as a diamond necklace and a few watches, the whole of this large amount has been restored to its rightful owners."

"We receive for safe keeping," said the Secretary of the Guarantee Company, "valuables of all descriptions, such as coupons, registered and other bonds, deeds, mortgages, coin, plate, bullion, jewelry, clothing and other personal effects, assuming all liabilities. And I can assure you that our deposits are of the most varied description. We have a most perfect system of identification by which it is almost impossible for any but the right owner to obtain possession of the property intrusted to our charge. We have first of all a guarantee delivered to the owner and a password known only to the owner or such person or persons as he may choose to tell it to. Then we have as complete a description as possible of the owner and we require him to sign his name.

"Here is an example in point. A short while ago a lady came here and asked for certain property. She produced the guarantee and gave the password. I thought I recognized the face, but still I did not feel altogether satisfied in my mind about it. I got our description book, and then put this singular question to her:

"'You are not so old now as you were when you deposited this property; can you explain this?'

"'Oh, yes,' she replied; 'it was my mother; but she is sick in bed, so she gave me the pass-word and asked me to do her business for her.'

"Of course that accounted for the strong likeness which had struck me at first. However, I had to tell her that unless she produced an order, correctly and fully filled out by her mother, I could not give her admission to the vault."

In both of these companies' buildings watchmen patrol night and day, fully armed, and the faithful performance of the duties is insured by detectors and electric time-clocks. In a thousand and one unlooked-for and unexpected places alarms, police calls and apparatus for severely punishing those imprudent enough to lay their hands where they should not be, are hidden. Fire is combatted on the principle that prevention is better than cure by a method of heating by steam generated by boilers under the street and isolated from the main buildings.—Philadelphia Times.

THE COMBINATION FENCE.

A fence that is wanted, and in time will be used by every one that wants a fence, either around the House, Garden or Farm, as it is cheap, durable and servicable, to keep in check horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, chickens, etc., and restrain wolves, dogs, and rabbits, etc.

Having all the advantages of a picket fence in restraining animals from jumping, and not so liable to decay, and at much less cost, and no barbs to injure valuable stock, thus placing it far in advance of any other fence now in use, hence it must be the fence of the future; all who have it want more.

It is portable and can be removed from field to field by drawing staples from posts, taking out the splice lath and rebundling it. We offer this fence for sale in bundles of five and six rod at Burlington.

The colored people had a picnic in Walton's woods last Saturday. The unsettled condition of the weather in the forenoon prevented a general outpouring of the multitude.

The Bellevue base ball club beat the Aurora club last Saturday in a hard fought game in a score of 6 to 5, and on Monday they defeated a Burlington nine in a score of 12 to 10.

The Recorder is under many obligations to Mr. John P. Ryle, of Rabbit Hash, for a fine river perch, presented one day last week. John has had pretty good luck fishing with a trot line.

Three or four smaller boys proprietored a peanut, ice cream and lemonade stand in the Court-house yard last Monday, from which they administered to the wants of those who hungered and thirsted.

From the best information we can obtain, the tobacco crop throughout the county is very indifferent, and those who planted the weed are greatly discouraged. A good prospect is an exception in Boone.

The watermelon season is now dawning and the probabilities are that the gentlemen of the medical profession will see their business revive. They have been enjoying quite a rest from their labors for a time.

The Bullittsville Sunday-school picnic was largely attended last Thursday, and every body present spent a very pleasant day. Revs. Fullilove, the two Howes and H. P. Stephens were the orators of the day.

Dr. [illegible] and Miss Lena [illegible], married Monday, at the bride's home [illegible], [illegible] county. The doctor and his bride will take a tour through the East visiting all the principal cities. They [illegible] to-day where they will [illegible] their friends at the [illegible] House.

One night last week Mrs. [illegible] heard some one trying to open the window [illegible] when she woke [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] would wait and see if a second attempt would be made and it was but a short time until he heard a very suspicious noise on the back porch, but when he reached there he could see no one. He discharged his pistol several times, and was disturbed no more.

Coming home from the city Tuesday of last week and when they reached the big stone culvert on the pike coming up the hill from Constance, Mr. Allen Souther and [illegible] [illegible] stopped their horse to let it rest, when a loose horse came running down the road, frightening it and causing it to back the wagon off the pike and down the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] feet. The horse fell over backward in the [illegible], getting up pulled itself calmly out of the harness. The wagon cover was badly mashed up, but fortunately Mr. Souther and his son got out of the wagon before it was wrecked.

On the 28th ult., coroner Murat and a jury held an inquest on the body of Fred Auk, who was drowned in the Riverat Parlor Grove on the 28th of July. The jury returned the following verdict:

"We, the jury, find that the dead body before us is that of Fred Auke, of Cincinnati, Hamilton county, Ohio, who came to his death by drowning on the evening of July 25, 1886, the drowning being accidental."

Samuel Sederburg, who saw Auke in the river says he could have been saved had he not been making such dangerous demonstration with a pistol, which he still had in his hand when the body was found.

When we say that Hon. N. S. Walton lost his horse by playing croquet in Burlington the other day, we would not have you believe for an instant that his prowess as a player prompted him to wager the animal on the result of the game. Nay. He only took his horse to a blacksmith shop, which the excitement consequent upon a close game caused him to forget, and when he and his companion, Legrand Gaines returned to the buggy which was some distance from the shop and croquet grounds, they were astonished to find the buggy but no horse. They were seen in solemn consultation for some time, when Legrand was heard to say: "Nathan, you took the horse out and to the shop!" Nathan responded: "Why that's a fact, Legrand." They very unconcernedly went to the shop and got the horse, and left town, not forgeting to pay for the shoeing, thinking no one was aware of the dilemma they had been in.

The election Monday passed off very quietly, there being a pretty good vote cast. The vote not being counted until to-morrow we are unable to give any official figures. Enough is known to know that Cropper, Hinds and Howlett are elected Commissioner, a good team.

In this district Ott Gaines and W. J. Cowen were elected Justices of the Peace.

At Bellevue M. B. Green and Joshua Rice were elected Justices. Mr. Green has been elected Justice of the Peace in his district for a time to which the mind of man runneth not to the contrary.

Only one district in the county voted against local option, to wit, Bellevue by a majority of 23 votes. The majorities are as follows:

Against Whisky—
Verona	82
Walton	63
Burlington	46
Florence	50
Taylorport	9
Petersburg	12
Union	35
Rabbit Hash	58
Beaver	73
Hamilton	12
Total	423
For Whisky—
Bellevue	23
Majority	400

The following is taken from last Saturday's Commercial Gazette. The Hensleys mentioned there in live down on Woolper, and Mrs. Laura Riddell, in Burlington, wife of Cyrus Riddell:

"Judge Force rendered an interesting decision which distributes about $50,000 among the heirs of Abigail Lewis. The title of the case was Frances Tolin, vs. Seth C. Foster, executor. The action was brought for a construction of an item in the will of Abigail Lewis, who died in 1884, and for an order as to the disposition of the residue of her estate. The will was drawn by the testatrix herself. The item in question was as follows:

"If, after these bequests are paid, with all other expenses, there should be anything left, it shall be applied to the support of aged men and women without regard to nationality, creed or color."

Judge Force held that this item is too vague to permit of distribution of funds under it, and he, therefore, declared it void. No institution or charitable organization claimed under it, and it was not thought that the testatrix referred to any Cincinnati institution, for she was well informed as to all of them, and to some she left bequests. The probability rather is that she contemplated providing for a new institution, upon a broad and catholic basis, but she expressed her desire in so general a way as to make it impossible to carry it out. The residue of her estate now goes to her heirs in the following proportions.

Frances Tolin one-twelfth, Hespey A. Gibbs one-twelfth, Joseph C. Hensley one-twelfth, Clifton L. Hensley one-twelfth, Samuel Hensley one-twelfth, Laura Riddell one-sixth, Catherine F. Zinns one-sixth, Robert V. Foster one-sixth.

The case was argued fully for the heirs by Chas. H. Stephens, and briefly by T. D. Lincoln. Wm. Strunk made the argument for the executor and handed up a brief."

ROWING AT OXFORD.

The Training Required to Meet Its Ancient Rival, Cambridge.

Great interest is generally shown throughout the country in the month of March in the preparations that are made at our two chief English universities for the annual boatrace, but few of those that read the newspaper accounts of the daily practice of the crews know how much energy and time have been devoted by their individual members to acquiring the skill which will qualify them for a seat in the "varsity eight." Hence we propose here to give a short account of rowing at Oxford, and the different college races that a man has almost invariably taken part in before he is even tried for "the 'varsity."

The academical year commences with the October term, and it is in that term that the majority of the freshmen come into residence; accordingly, this is the time chosen by the captains of the various college boat-clubs for testing the rowing capabilities of the freshmen of their college, and "coaching" all those who wish to go in for boating. Every afternoon during the greater part of this term, the captain and other members of the college eight may be seen standing upon the stern of "tub-pair" or four, instructing and exhorting their crews, as they paddle swiftly down to Iffley lock, or toil up again against the swollen stream. Towards the end of the term, the men who have been coached in this way are formed into regular crews; and after one or two weeks' practice together, these crews row against each other in "tub-fours" for the Silver Challenge Oars, or some prize given by the college boat-club. Passing over to the next, that is the Lent term, we come to the first eight-oared college races, which at Oxford are better known as the Torpids. In these races, the colleges compete against one another for the honor of first place or "head of the river." No man who has rowed in his college "eight" in the previous year is eligible to row in his Torpid: the majority of the crew consist of men who have received coaching in the October term, and have taken part in the four-oared races described above.

The first week or two of this term is occupied by the captain in selecting and arranging his crew; when that is made up, regular practice is the order of the day, for the most part on the stretch of water between Oxford and Iffley, but occasionally varried by a "long course" to Abingdon, a distance of seven miles. Coaching is done by members of the "eight," who run with the boat along the towpath, shouting at the top of their voices to the different members of the crew, and sometimes, when the floods are out and the towpath is covered, splashing through water nearly up to their knees. Practice of this kind is continued daily, no matter what the weather is, until the races take place, which is usually about the middle of the term. Each college is represented by one boat, and in some cases by two boats, so that there are generally from twenty to twenty five boats entered, and these are divided into two divisions. The races occupy six days, each division rowing once each day, the second division always commencing. The boats are placed one behind the other in the order in which they left off the year before, with a clear space of about two boat-lengths between each. The object aimed at by each boat is to overtake the boat in front and bump it. If successful in doing this, these two boats at once draw out of the way, and leave room for those following to pass; and on the next day they change places. The head boat of the second division is called the "Sandwich" boat, and rows again the same afternoon at the bottom of the first division, in this way forming a link by which a boat may pass from one division to the other.

Having paddled down to their respective positions, the boats are turned and preparations are made for the race. A line attached to the bank is held by the cockswain, and this, with the assistance of a waterman with a long pole, helps to keep the boat in position and prevents it drifting out of its place. Meanwhile the first signal-gun has been fired, and the crews are divesting themselves of jackets and mufflers. Soon the second gun is heard, and there is now one minute before the signal to start is given. What an anxious minute that is, so much depends upon getting off well, especially with a crew in which many of the men are rowing in one of these bumping races for the first time. A bad start causes flurry and unsteadiness in the boat, and then there is sometimes a risk of being bumped before the men settle down together to a long and even stroke. Bang! The starting gun has fired, and off go the dozen or more boats in a long line: the towpath is crowded with men running with their respective college crews, shouting, blowing horns and making use of every conceivable instrument of noise to urge on and encourage their representatives. By the time the barges, which are crowded with spectators, are reached, great gaps will have appeared in the line, as most of the bumps take place below; though here, too, some times, a most exciting race is witnessed, when some boat, almost overlapped by its rival, is seen struggling to reach the winning post without being bumped. Nor is this bumping so easy as it might at first seem; but a good deal of skill is required on the part of the cockswain to effect it. In the first place, there is always the danger of making the shot too soon, in which case the boat, missing the stern of the one in front, shoots half-way across the river, and thereby loses a great deal of ground. Again, when one boat is overlapping another, the cockswain of the first, by pulling his rudder towards the bow of his rival, can cause such a wave of water to wash against the latter as to ward off for a time the actual bump; then, by a judicious spurt on the part of his "stroke," when the rudder is again straightened, he may be enabled to draw away and steer his boat in safety past the winning-post.

These races conclude the rowing for this term, though sometimes the last few days are spent in coaching the best men from the Torpid on "sliding seats," by way of preparation for the next term's practice for the "eight."

We now come to the summer or May term, the pleasantest term of all as far as boating is concerned. The most important races during this term are those in which the college eights compete. They are carried out in exactly the same manner as the Torpids described above, the only difference being in the kind of boat used. The Torpids row in what are called clinker-built or gig-boats, whose keels have a small [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] which [illegible] [illegible]. The "eights" are rowed in smooth, keelless boats, the bottom somewhat resembling that of a small canoe, and fitted with sliding seats, by which the stroke can be lengthened and more use made of the legs. The extremities of the boat are covered with canvas, to prevent the water washing in over the side. The crew of a college eight is composed of the best men the college can muster, all of course being members of the club.

The races, as we mentioned before, are arranged in the same way as those in which the Torpids compete, though perhaps more interest is shown in the eights; and as they come off at a pleasanter time of the year, and are undoubtedly one of the sights of the university, the spectators include many more strangers. The 'varsity "sculls" and the 'varsity "pairs," the former open to any member, and the latter to any two members of the 'varsity boat club, conclude the rowing at Oxford for this term, though it should here be mentioned that two or three of the boats that have shown themselves above the average in the eight-oared races, often keep in practice for Henley regatta, which takes place soon after the close of this term.

We have now given a brief description of a year's college rowing at Oxford, that is, rowing in which a college competes with members of its own or other colleges. Starting again with the October term, we propose saying something about rowing for the 'varsity, the chief event in which is the annual race with Cambridge. There is, however, one college race not yet mentioned, which takes place in the October term, namely, the 'varsity "Fours," open to all the colleges. For this event there are not generally more than from six to eight boats entered, as considerably more skill and watermanship are required than for the college eight. The boats used, though of much the same construction as the latter, are of course smaller, and therefore more difficult to sit; moreover, they do not carry a cockswain, the steering being done by one of the crew with his feet, by means of wires connecting the rudder with a lever attached to his stretcher, so that, by moving this lever with his foot to one side or the other, a corresponding motion is given to the rudder. This race takes place in the first half of the term, and immediately afterwards the work of selecting a crew for the inter-university boat-race is commenced.

By the middle of the term the crew is generally settled upon, and on Ash Wednesday they go into strict training. The old theories of training on raw meat, etc., have quite died out; a plentiful supply of plain, well-cooked food is allowed, but only a very moderate amount of liquor, and smoking must be entirely knocked off. For breakfast and dinner the crew meet together in each other's rooms, each man entertaining the rest for one day in turn while they are still at Oxford. Lunch is only a light meal. The rowing is almost entirely done during the afternoon. Ten days or a fortnight before the time fixed for the race, the crew go up to Putney to complete their practice on the tidal water and the course over which the race is to be rowed. Their doings here and the race itself need no description in this paper. Their daily practice on the London water, the time they occupy in rowing over the course, even their very movements are watched and recorded by the daily press. Suffice it to say that this notoriety is not at all desired by the members of the crews, and that, owing to the inconvenience and obstruction it sometimes causes to their practice, the proposal to hold the race on other and quieter waters has been more than once discussed.—Chambers' Journal.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country; but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and spasms are most frequently the result of these hidden sappers and miners. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing wholesome diet, tossing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

VERMIFUGE

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy, therefore parents—especially mothers who are most constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge.

Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in one sense, and to examine every bottle he buys of it. The simple name of FAHNESTOCK is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

New Franklin, Howard Co., Mo.
Messrs. Schwartz & Haslett, Pittsburg, Pa.,
Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your Vermifuge can not safely be dispensed with in any family. Yours, &c.,
J. W. HUBBARD, M. D.

Cambridge, Md.
Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed.

CLAY'S EXECUTOR.

His Affectionate Tribute to the Famous Orator.

Mr. Harrison has not been without distinguished honors in his lifetime. He was appointed, without solicitation, Secretary of Legation to Spain, when the unfortunate William Barry was sent as Minister to that country. Mr. Harrison declined the place, and Mr. Barry died at Liverpool as soon as he had crossed the Atlantic. He was also nominated by the President to the United States Judgeship of the Territory of Arkansas. For prudential reasons this was declined, but the President refused to withdraw the nomination. Congress adjourned before the matter was acted upon. But perhaps the highest distinction is that he was the organizer of the present common-school system of Lexington, and over which he was superintendent for many years. At a recent school celebration hundreds of the pupils of these schools flocked to the residence of the "grand old man" to do him honor, and, be it said, no honor could have been shown him in which he could have taken an equal pride.

Mr. Harrison's memory of past events is very distinct, and upon nothing in the past does he take so much delight in dwelling as upon Henry Clay and his associations with him. Clay was a Whig and Harrison a Democrat, but, nevertheless, Clay was his idol. For his character he had the profoundest admiration. "Many times he would come into our office," said Mr. Harrison, "when he was at home from Washington, and talk of the great events which were transpiring and in which he had taken such an eventful part. But he never spoke with vanity. His allusions to himself were modest. His conversation was simple in every respect, but there was always something in his manner difficult to describe which impressed his hearers with the loftiness of his character. I used to feel when he came into the room, no matter how trivial were his remarks, that I was in the presence of a being greatly gifted. The feeling his presence affected me with was his possession of power. I said one day to my partner, Mr. Hunt: 'I don't know how it is with you, Mr. Hunt, but Mr. Clay never comes in here that I am not at once affected by his presence, even before he has spoken a word.' Mr. Hunt acknowledged that he had experienced a similar feeling, and Mr. Hunt was himself a person of great character and of the highest type of manhood.

"As a man of business," continued Mr. Harrison, "Mr. Clay was scrupulously exact. He sometimes would say: 'Harrison, I have no money with me, and I want to borrow a dime. I will return it to you in the morning when I come in from Ashland.' The next morning he never failed to walk in with a silver ten-cent piece between his fingers to liquidate the debt. 'I am quite sure,' I often said to him, 'Mr. Clay, that you borrowed that from Mrs. Clay just before you left home, and that you have carried it between your thumb and forefinger all the way to this office for fear of forgetting it.' Sometimes," continued Mr. Harrison, "he would send me from Washington a power of attorney to indorse his name upon notes drawn by his son James. Well, I had nothing to do with the amounts. I simply obeyed instructions, without keeping a memorandum of the amounts or number of the notes. On Mr. Clay's return home he would at once begin looking into his business affairs. Calling his son, he would inquire how many notes Harrison had indorsed for him, and their amounts. James being unable to tell, having taken no account of them, his father would exclaim: 'I am amazed at you, James. Suppose I should suddenly die without having made provision for the payment of these debts. Go at once, my son, obtain a correct memorandum of these notes, and bring it to me immediately, that I may make provision for the payment.'

"The most singular way, however," said Mr. Harrison, "in which Mr. Clay exhibited this business precision was in his methodical preparation and arrangement of his affairs before fighting a duel. Invariably he spent some time in the inspection of his accounts, and drawing up a complete memorandum thereof deposited it in care of Mrs. Clay, to be brought to light in case he should be killed. This was curiously instanced after his fight with Humphrey Marshall. Both gentlemen were members of the Kentucky Legislature. Clay was an advocate of the American system, advocating the wearing of homespun and other American fabrics in preference to goods of foreign importation. Marshall was a Federalist and suspected Mr. Clay of demagoguery. He made some remarks about Clay which caused the latter to issue a challenge. In the duel Clay was shot in the leg, and was confined to his bed for some time. While in this condition a builder who had recently finished a house for Mr. Clay called to obtain a settlement. Mr. Clay requested Mrs. Clay to bring forth the memorandum he had left with her. It was found to contain an exact statement of the account between Clay and the builder, and upon that the settlement was made."

Clay's emotional nature was a theme upon which Mr. Harrison loved to dwell, and in the recital of instances illustrative of this his own emotions sometimes got the best of him. "Clay's power as a speaker," said Mr. Harrison, "was in his effect upon the emotional nature of his audience. I well remember one very remarkable instance of the exercise of his power. It was upon the trial of Charles Wickliffe, son of Robert Wickliffe, the father-in-law of General William Preston, for killing the editor of a Democratic newspaper named Benning. The latter had published an anonymous attack upon his father, and when Charles went to ascertain the name of the author the editor declined to give it until the writer's permission was obtained. Hot words were exchanged between the men, when Benning suddenly rose from his seat and went toward a lobby between the front and back rooms of the office. Wickliffe, who had been in the office before in search of Benning and had gone through this lobby into the back room, knew that an army musket stood there against the wall. At the moment Benning started back Wickliffe thought he was going for the musket, in which case his life would be in immediate danger. He forestalled this by drawing his pistol and firing, killing Benning instantly. The trial lasted several days. Mr. Clay was the last speaker for the defense. As the evening was then far advanced when he was called upon to [illegible] the court, he suggested that it would be better that the court and jury be allowed to rest and that the court adjourn till next morning. The suggestion was accepted, and court adjourned accordingly. Judge A. K. Woolley, a relative of Wickliffe's, went to Mr. Clay and invited him to spend the night at his house, where he could have a quiet room to consider his argument, go to bed when he pleased, and be up bright and fresh in the morning. Clay accepted the offer. He retired to his room about ten o'clock. Judge Woolley occupied a room opposite Clay's in a long corridor. He retired late, and noticed that Clay's light was burning, and that the great advocate was pacing the floor, muttering to himself. Some hours later Judge Woolley again went to Clay's door. Clay was still pacing the floor, and speaking. He was going over his argument to the jury. The next day the court room was crowded with the foremost people of the city to hear the concluding arguments in the now celebrated case. Before Mr. Clay arose a stillness had come upon the house and all eyes were turned upon him. His face began to take on an expression of powerful emotion, and his eyes moist and [illegible]. Slowly he arose from his chair, his legs trembling and his knees knocking each other. As he straightened himself to his full height tears were trickling down his cheeks, and already the strength of his own feelings had affected those of his audience, and especially of the jury. Before having spoken a word he had won attention and sympathy. It was on the Fourth of July, and a celebration was being had at a wooded spot out on the Richmond pike. I well remember the closing words of Mr. Clay's speech. Said he: 'This is the day upon which every American celebrates the birth of his country's liberty. We hear the notes of preparation for that patriotic event, the mention of which thrills every American heart. Turn him loose, and let him share with us the joy of this glorious anniversary.'" As Mr. Harrison finished, his own eyes filled with tears, and his lips trembled as he spoke the concluding words. Charles Wickliffe was acquitted.

The position of Mr. Clay upon the question of negro slavery had been misunderstood, in the opinion of Mr. Harrison. He was instinctively opposed to slavery, but was opposed to a sudden freeing of the slaves. His idea was to establish colonies in Africa or one in the West of America, to which slaves, emancipated by a gradual system, could be sent and protected until they were able to stand alone. The following extract from Mr. Clay's will illustrates this and is certainly the most authentic expression of his opinion upon this question:

"My will is, and I accordingly direct, that the issue of all my female slaves which may be born after the 1st day of January, 1850, shall be free at the respective ages, of the males at twenty-eight and of the females at twenty-five, and that the three years next preceding their arrival at the age of freedom they shall be entitled to their hire or wages for those years or the fair value of their services to defray the expenses of transporting them to one of the African colonies and of furnishing them with an outfit on their arrival there; and I further direct that they be taught to read and write and cipher, and that they be sent to Africa. I further will and direct that the issue of any of the females who are so to be entitled to their freedom at the age of twenty-five shall be deemed free from their birth, and that they be bound out as apprentices to learn farming or some useful trade, upon the condition also of being taught to read, to write, and to cipher. And I direct, also, that, the age of twenty-one having been attained, they shall be sent to one of the African colonies, to raise the necessary funds for which purpose, if they shall not have previously earned them, they must be hired out a sufficient length of time.

"I request and enjoin my executors and descendants to pay particular attention to the execution of this provision of my will. And if they sell any of the females who, or whose issue, are to be free, I especially desire them to guard carefully the rights of such issue by all suitable stipulations and sanctions in the contract of sale. But I hope that it may not be necessary to sell any such persons who are to be entitled to their freedom, but that they may be retained in the possession of some of my descendants."—*Cor. BEAUTIFUL SEVILLE.

An Ancient Spanish City Full of Attractions for Historians.

Travelers only pass a day or two at Cordova to see its monuments and recall the memories of Roman, Arab and Goth; of Boabdil, who passed part of his captivity here; of Ferdinand and Isabella, and of Columbus, who came here to lay his plans before the King and Queen during the campaign of Granada. They pass on instead to Seville, which has memories of like antique interest, and of every Spanish monarch, including the present Isabella; has many monuments, and a climate regarded as one of the most perfect in the world. And while Cordoba has but forty-two thousand inhabitants dwelling over the ashes of its past millions, Seville has three times that number, and is therefore able to add all the modern conveniences to its facts of history and its fascinations of romance. Good hotels are only to be found in the largest cities in Spain. Seville has one or two of the best. Its drives are pleasant. The country about it is lovely. From the Giralda, the tall Arab tower which the cathedral has preserved for its bells, can be seen the Guadalquiver, filled with shipping, the broad plain, the evergreen foothills and the snowy mountains. Its streets are broad, and its public places are set exclusively with orange trees, whose fruit, though it is not in his abundance exceedingly tempting to the native, has a singular attraction to the stranger as he passes under the low-hanging branches. Queen Isabella has a palace here, to which she likes to come now and then. If Alfonso had spent more of his time here his life might have been prolonged. Byron wrote his "Childe Harold" of the delirious climate and bright-eyed senoritas of Seville, whom he described as at once the most charming and the wickedest in the world. The old Moorish palace called the Alcazar is of magnificent proportions, and would be considered wonderful, were not the Alhambra, which it endeavors to imitate, still in existence. It has been successively occupied by all the Spanish monarchs since Charles V., and its gardens, which are of great extent still, have their summer-houses, alleys, shaded nooks and even their trees haunted by great memories.—Albert Sutliffe, in San Francisco Chronicle.

FIXING THE GUILT.

Progress of the Trial of the Anarchists at Chicago.

Evidence Adduced Showing Them Guilty of Conspiracy to Murder, Burn and Pillage—What the State Has Proven.

[illegible]

CHICAGO, July 27.—In the Anarchists' trial yesterday Detective Johnson was subjected to a rigid cross-examination by counsel for defense, but his evidence given on Saturday remained unshaken. Joseph Gruenhut, city inspector of factories and tenements, was the next witness. His testimony was mainly corroborative of that given by the reporter Wilkinson on Thursday last. Gruenhut was present at ten interviews between Wilkinson and Spies, in which the latter gave an account of the preparations made by the armed section and their movements with [illegible] on various occasions, also of the plans adopted for street warfare. He also proved that Spies wrote the "Revenge" circular and corrected the proof. His evidence also tended to show that the mass-meeting in the Haymarket was planned by the Anarchists ostensibly as an eight-hour meeting, but really as an "indignation" or riot meeting to denounce the police.

Counsel for the prosecution then read various incendiary articles from the Alarm, Parsons' paper, all of them bearing on the use of dynamite as the means for the coming revolt of the masses. The articles were objected to by the defense on the ground that they were signed communications for which the editors were not responsible, but the court held that the question of whether they were printed or copied as matters of news or indorsed as editorial opinion was for the jury to decide.

CHICAGO, July 28.—In the Anarchists' trial yesterday a number of reporters and detectives testified further regarding the incendiary utterances of Spies, Parsons and Fielden at the Haymarket meeting. One witness swore that he saw several revolvers waved in the air during the cheering which followed certain remarks of the speakers. Percy English, a reporter, took notes of the speeches in shorthand. These he read on the witness stand and they fully corroborated former testimony on this point.

On cross-examination English stated that he had heard Parsons, Spies and Fielden speak frequently. He thought their speeches on the night in question rather more mild than usual. They did not say that night that they were going to use force then. Parsons said they were not ready, and Spies said the meeting was not called to incite a riot. Heard Captain Ward's words calling on the crowd to disperse, but did not hear Fielden say "There come the bloodhounds," or "We are peaceable."

The stories told by Detectives McKeogh, Haas and Mr. Hammerseau proved beyond much chance of contradiction that the bomb-throwing and shooting by the Anarchists commenced simultaneously, and both occurred before the police had fired a shot.

H. M. Thompson, an employe of Marshall Field & Co., was called to the stand and said he was handed a "Revenge" circular on the night of May 4, and went up to the Haymarket meeting. He asked a Mr. Brazelton to point out the speakers. Just then Schwab came along and was pointed out. A little later Spies got on the wagon and called for Parsons. Witness continued:

"Then he got down, and pretty soon I saw Spies and Schwab enter the alley near Crane Bros.' place. I was standing close by them and I heard the words 'pistol' and 'police.' I heard either the word 'pistol' or 'police' twice. Then I heard Spies say: 'Do you think one is enough? Hadn't we better get some more?' I passed along by, and later I heard Schwab say: 'Now, when they come we will go for them, and Spies said 'I don't think they will dare bother us.' Then a third man joined Spies and Parsons, and the three seemed to crowd up together. I saw Spies pass something to the third man, and he put it in his right-hand pocket. Then they separated and went into the crowd."

"Did you see that third man after that?"

"Yes, I saw him on the wagon."

"Look at that picture and say if it looks like the third man." [Handing witness a photograph of Schnaubelt.]

"Yes. I should say that is a picture of the third man I saw with Schwab and Spies, and on the wagon. His whiskers were longer then, I think, though."

The testimony of this witness created quite a sensation in court, and the defendants in particular were intensely interested. They craned their necks forward to catch every word. Counsel for the defendants consulted for several minutes before beginning the cross-examination. Finally Mr. Foster took hold of the witness and tried by a long and rapid fire of questions to shake his testimony. Witness said he could not understand German. The conversation he heard was in English. He did not hear them say anything about Schwab going to Deering to make a speech; didn't hear Spies ask if one speaker at that meeting would be enough. The question by Spies: "Will one be enough," in the conversation overheard by witness, might, he supposed, have been with reference to the meeting at Deering. He would swear positively that he saw Spies and Schwab talking together that night. Spies used both of the words "pistol" and "police." Mr. Foster questioned the witness closely about where Spies and Schwab went, and learned that they went together on Randolph street as far as Halsted and then came back. Witness said he followed them closely up there and back, a distance of about five blocks. He passed them at Union street on the way back and heard Schwab say: "Now when they come we will give it to them." He could not say to whom Schwab had reference. Spies answered him saying: "I do not think they will bother us." When he got back to the corner of Randolph and Desplaines he saw the two still talking together, and that was the last he saw of Schwab, but saw Spies get on the wagon. This was about twenty minutes past eight o'clock. When they got back to the streets just mentioned they met the third man, Schnaubelt, who came from the east, as if from around the corner to the alley. Witness was on the sidewalk facing Spies, and about ten feet distant from him when they stopped and entered into conversation. Mr. Foster, in an excited tone, asked witness why, if Spies was facing him he did not see him. Witness calmly replied that he might have seen him. At that time witness did not hear a word from any of them. He saw Spies hand Schnaubelt something but could not tell what it was. He next saw Schnaubelt on the wagon, and he stood there about an hour. Witness was not present when the bomb exploded.

CHICAGO, July 29.—In the Anarchist trial yesterday Harry Gilmer swore that he entered Crane's alley while Fielden was speaking at the Haymarket meeting; that there was a little knot of persons in the alley; that a man came from the wagon to the alley just immediately after a cry of "Here come the police;" that this man lit a match and touched it to a fuse held by another man; and that this latter man flung the burning fuse and its attachment out into the street. The man who lit the match he identified as Spies; the man who held and threw the bomb he identified by a photograph as Schnaubelt. Fischer he identified as one of the little knot of persons in the alley; and he believed Schwab was the man at the end of the wagon whom Spies had spoken to before coming into the alley. The cross-examination failed to shake the witness in any point, but tended rather to make him more emphatic in his statements. The evidence in one respect is strongly corroborative of Witness Thompson's story. It goes to prove that Schnaubelt had the bomb in his possession.

The evidence of the afternoon, though of a most important character, seemed mild coming after Gilmer's testimony. A common smelting furnace of cheap construction which Lieutenant Quinn found in Engel's basement was brought into court. It consisted of a zinc or galvanized iron cylinder about three feet high by nine inches in diameter, resting on four iron legs. On each side near the bottom were inserted thick rectangular iron pipes, intended for the introduction of an air blast, and at right angles with these was a small spout through which the molten metal would run off. Engel told Quinn that he understood the machine was for making bombs, and that a man whose name he didn't know, but whom he had heard make a speech on bomb-making, had left it there four or five months previously. Captain Bonfield explained the working of the furnace, and said that so far as he could see it had never been used. A tinner named Mahlendorf testified that he made the machine for Engel about a year ago.

Then came Officers Schuttler and Lowenstein, who testified to Lingg's arrest and to the stuff captured at the house where he lodged. A bucketful of bombs, a cigar-box filled with cartridges, a lot of metal, solder, bolts and nuts, shells and carpenters' tools, and a cold chisel, metal drill and small iron pot were brought into court, all of which had been found in Lingg's bed-room, besides another extra big revolver and a Winchester rifle. His trunk was also brought in. After the police brought the trunk from Lingg's lodgings to the East Chicago avenue station they found it had a false bottom, and the space between the false and real bottom was found to be filled with dynamite. The belt-nuts found in his room are exactly similar to the one that [illegible] at the Haymarket explosion.

CHICAGO, July 30.—States Attorney Grinnell said yesterday morning that he thought he would complete his testimony this evening. The defense will use about ten days, but the State has considerable evidence in rebuttal. The defense will attempt to impeach the truthfulness of H. M. Thompson and Harry Gilmer.

Harry Gilmer, the witness who testified on Thursday that he saw Spies light the fuse and Schnaubelt throw the bomb, comes of a good family. His father was Hon. Thomas W. Gilmer, formerly Governor of Virginia and member of Congress, and afterward Secretary of the Navy, when he was killed together with Mr. Upshur, Secretary of State, David Gardiner and several others, by the bursting of [illegible] on board the frigate Princeton during a pleasure excursion on the Potomac, February 28, 1844.

In the trial yesterday Dr. J. B. Murphy gave a graphic and harrowing account of the effects of the bomb and the sufferings of the wounded and dying. He had attended nearly thirty of the victims of the explosion, some of them at the Desplaines street station and others at the hospital. Describing in detail the wounds of the chief sufferers, he told a ghastly story of mangled bones and ragged, quivering flesh, the shattered bodies of those who caught the full force of the exploding shell. Some pieces of shell that left but a small surface wound had torn great jagged tunnels through lungs, liver or intestines, while others that had torn off inches of surface flesh had left the internal organs untouched. The technical description of the sufferings of Jacob Hansen, Timothy Flavin, Lawrence Murphy, Nicholas Shannon, Thomas Redden and Bernard Murphy were extremely painful to many of the listeners, and moved some of them to tears.

A quantity of clothing of the murdered and wounded policemen was exhibited, bearing blood stains and bullet holes and rents torn by pieces of shell. They were identified as the garments worn by the unfortunate policemen who fell at their posts of duty at the Haymarket. Captain Black opposed this exhibit, but the State's Attorney said that he ought to be satisfied if they did not bring in men on stretchers, dead and dying, to show the deadly work of the prisoners.

Police Captain Schaack described an interview with Lingg the day the latter was arrested. Lingg freely confessed he had made dynamite bombs and intended to use them against the police. He had bought the dynamite in a store on Lake street, had learned how to use it from Herr Most's book, and had experimented successfully with some bombs of his own make. Captain Schaack then described his experiments with some of Lingg's dynamite, and exhibited as evidence of its power the broken metal and plank already referred to. The bombs, cartridges, fuse, etc., were also put in evidence.

CHICAGO, July 31.—At 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon the State's-Attorney informed the judge and jury in the Anarchists' trial that he had tendered all his evidence against the accused, with the exception of some formal matter, which he proposes to put in this morning. An adjournment was then taken until to-day. The strength of the case against the accused can now be fairly estimated.

States Attorney Grinnell claims that the State has proven: (1) That there were in Chicago an organization of Anarchists whose purpose was the destruction of life and property and the subversion of social order. (2) That this organization existed in Chicago for over two years and that the eight prisoners were active members of it. (3) That the accused prepared for the social revolution by the manufacture of dynamite bombs, by drilling, arming and organizing. (4) That it was determined to inaugurate the revolution on or about the 1st of May, 1886, taking advantage of the labor troubles likely to occur at that time for the purpose. (5) That the night preceding the Haymarket explosion the insurrection was finally determined on, the signal agreed to, the weapons distributed, and the plan of operations for the slaughter of the police and the sacking of the city arranged. (6) That in pursuance of these plans the bomb was fired which killed and wounded so many of the policemen, and that the Anarchist conspirators on trial had guilty knowledge of the intention to throw it, assisted in its manufacture and caused it to be exploded.

In the proceedings yesterday morning Mr. Ingham read from Herr Most's book a description of an infernal machine to burn down buildings. This apparatus is described as of wonderful efficiency and dirt-cheap. It is read to secure the admission as evidence of the tin cans spoken of by Detective Jansen, who saw them exhibited at 54 West Lake street. The court is not sure the contents in both cases are the same and Officer Coughlin of the Chicago avenue station is put on the stand to prove the character of the compound. He experimented with one can by means of a fulminating cap. He tried to explode the can but failed then he attached a fuse and an explosion followed. A quantity of burning liquid, much resembling vitriol, was distributed in all directions, a stream was thrown five or six feet high and for a space of ten feet in all directions the grass was set on fire, and it burned for fully five minutes.

Charles B. Prouty, formerly manager of a gun-store, testified that Engel and his wife came to his store last fall and wanted to purchase two hundred revolvers of a certain pattern for use by some society. Witness could not get them, and the would-be purchasers said they would go some place else.

Prof. Haines, a practical chemist, who is at present professor of chemistry at Rush Medical College, testified to a chemical analysis of the pieces of bomb extracted from the bodies of the wounded and dead officers, and to a similar analysis of pieces of the bombs and other implements found in Lingg's room. He proved that the fractional percentages of lead, tin, iron, antimony and zinc—the constituent parts of the Haymarket bomb—were the same as those of the bombs confessedly made by Lingg. Prof. Delafontaine, another expert chemist, corroborated Prof. Haines.

Mr. Grinnell then stated that he had now tendered all his evidence except some more articles from the Arbeiter-Zeitung, which the translators were at work on, and some formal evidence as to the place of Degan's death. As the defense did not care to open until the State had quite finished an adjournment was taken until this forenoon.

SWEDISH DETECTIVES.

Two Representatives of the Scandinavian Government Do a Good Bit of Work in America.

CHICAGO, July 31.—In the spring of 1885 the Swedish Government made discoveries of corruption and fraud in its revenue service by comparison to which America's own Babcock ring exposure some dozen years ago was as a trifle. It was found that during the three years prior the Crown had been robbed of nearly 8,000,000 kroners, a sum approaching $2,000,000. These frauds had all been perpetrated in the extreme southern portion of the Scandinavian peninsular, where the great distilleries were centered. A complete expose was made through Lieutenant J. Eklund, chief of the National secret service. The highest officials of the treasury and scores of the revenue agents were implicated. Many of the arrested officials suicided in their cells, while others of their number and many distillers, who proposed to contest the prosecution, heavily bribed their employes and shipped them to America. At the first trial the Crown met a check through the inability to procure convicting evidence. Witnesses could not be found, and in the spring of this year the National authorities were forced to the conclusion that those parties sent to America must be secured. July 11 J. Ekland, Police Commissioner of Sweden, and J. G. H. Tengblae, one of the most competent operatives under the Crown, arrived in Chicago and succeeded in ferreting out fifteen or twenty fugitive witnesses, whom they have taken back to testify. All of those taken from America are given guarantee of immunity from prosecution, and are promised the extra expenses of travel back and forth with 1,000 kroners reward each.

A Mail Pouch Stolen.

ST. LOUIS, July 31.—The postal-car which left New York for this city June 28 had among its mail a pouch containing about $20,000 in money and drafts, bonds, checks and other valuable papers and property valued at $80,000. At Pittsburgh the mail passed into the hands of Chief Clerk Ferald, who signed the receipt for the various pouches without inspecting them, the time being too short to do so. On arriving at Indianapolis Mr. Ferald found that the pouch mentioned above was missing. He immediately reported the robbery, and detectives have been working on the case ever since, to no avail, however.

KANSAS CITY, MO., July 31.—The examination of the Missouri Pacific train-wreckers at Wyandotte was concluded yesterday, and all were bound over to the District court, now in session.

NATURE'S ECONOMY.

Wonderfully Displayed in the Construction of the Human Frame.

We may see glimpses of the great system of general regulation which guards nature from overdrawing her accounts in connection with the arrangement of living things. Not only in beings of high degree, but in animals of low estate, do we meet with illustrations of the economy of power and the saving of needless expenditures of force and energy which dame nature practises. The study of human anatomy, which, of course, is one in many points with the comparative science as applied to lower life, reveals not a few instructive examples of this saving tendency in life's ways. The human head, for example, is nicely balanced on the spine. Compared with heads of lower type, this equipoise forms a prominent feature of man's estate. The head mass of dog, horse or elephant requires to be tied on, as it were, to the spine. Ligaments and muscular arrangements of complex nature perform their part in securing that the front extremity of these forms should be safely adjusted. But in man there is an absence of effort apparent in Nature's ways of securing the desired end. The erect posture, too, is adjusted and arranged for on principles of neat economy. The type of body is the same as in lower life. Humanity appears before us as a modification, an evolution, but in no sense a new creation. Man rises from his "forelegs"—arms being identical, be it remarked, with the anterior pair of limbs in lower life—and speedily there ensues an adaptation of means to ends, and all in the direction of the economical conversion of the lower to the higher type of being. The head becomes balanced and not secured, as we have seen, and thus a saving of muscular power is entailed. Adjustments of bones and joints take place, and the muscles of one aspect—say the front—of the body, counterbalance the action of those of the other aspect, the back; and between the two diverging tendencies the erect position is maintained practically without effort. So also in the petty details of the work nature has not been unmindful of her "saving clause." We see this latter fact illustrated in the disposition of the arrangements of foot and heel. One may legitimately announce that man owes much to his head; but the truth is, he owes a great deal of his mental comfort and physical economy to his heels. The heel bone has become especially prominent in man when compared with lower forms of quadruped life. It projects far behind the mass of foot and leg, and thus forms a stable fulcrum of support whereon the body may rest. Here again, economy of ways and means illustrated.—Longman's Magazine.

WATERING PLANTS.

How and When Pot Plants Should Be Given Water.

Some people attempt to keep pot-plants without giving them any water at all; the result is familiar to every one. Usually, however, the earth in the pot or box is kept soaked and very much in the condition of an ordinary swamp. It is even said that malaria has resulted from living in rooms containing house plants, owing to the damp soil. We have ourselves seen dead overgreens pulled out of boxes full of mud. A gardener's journal gives utterance to the following timely remark: Watering plants is one of the most important things in the culture of house plants, and very special care should be devoted to it. Plants ought not to be wet until they need it. It will be evident that they require wetting, if on taking the earth from the pot it crumbles to pieces like dust; a sure sign is to knock on the side of the pot, near the middle, with the finger knuckle. If it gives forth a hollow ring, the plant needs water; if there is a dull sound, there is still moisture enough to sustain the plant. Plants must not be wet more than once or twice a day; on dry, clear days they require more water than on damp, cloudy days. On the other hand, the earth must not be allowed to dry out entirely, for that is also very injurious. In wetting them the water must be poured on in such a way that it will run out again through the hole in the bottom of the pot. If the earth gets too dry, it is best to place the pot in water so that the water will saturate the the dirt very gradually. They may be watered at any hour of the day, except when the sun is shining on the pot or has just left it; for the earth gets hot when the sun shines on it, and then if cold water is poured on it, it will cool off too rapidly. The best time for watering flowers in summer is the evening, and in winter noon is best. Well water should never be used, but always use either rain water or brook water.—Boston Transcript.

MOURNING IN COREA.

A Native Gentleman Explains Why He Has Remained a Bachelor.

In walking through the streets of Seoul one often meets with figures clothed from head to foot in a grayish-yellow sackcloth, with bright yellow hats, or rather broad-brimmed straw baskets on their heads, men, moreover, who further disguise their identity by holding a strip of sackcloth stretched on pieces of stick in front of their faces. These are mourners. In the year 1882 a Japanese traveler who landed on the northeast coast found the officials and all the inhabitants in this lugubrious masquerade. They were in mourning for the Queen, who was supposed to have been murdered, but who, after the people had worn sackcloth half a year for her sake, emerged safe and sound from the hiding-place where she had taken refuge from the pursuit of her wicked father-in-law, Tai-on Kun. For a Queen it is customary to mourn twelve months, for parents and near kinsfolk three years. What a deep influence this prescriptive usage has upon the life of the people is illustrated by the following story of an aged bachelor who was asked why he had never taken a wife. "My parents, as well as myself," he said, "were desirous that I should marry, and a suitable young lady being found, our betrothal took place. Then my future father-in-law died, and we had, of course, to wait three years. I had hardly put off my mourning when I had to bewail the loss of my own poor father; necessarily here was another term of three years' waiting. When these were up the mother of my future wife took sick and expired, and thus we were obliged to delay our marriage another three years. Lastly, I had the misfortune to lose my own dear mother, which naturally caused a further adjournment. So that, as four times three makes twelve, that number of years had passed over our heads and made us both the older. At this time my betrothed fell ill, and as she was at death's door I went to pay her a last visit. My future brother-in-law met me at the door and said: 'Although you are not formally married, yet perhaps I may for this once look upon you as man and wife; come in and see her.' I had hardly entered and been face to face with my poor wife than she breathed her last. When I saw this all thoughts of marriage fled from me, and I have remained a bachelor ever since."—*Cor. PRESERVING BOUQUETS.

How Flowers Can Be Kept Fresh for a Long Time.

The following is a description of the process by which a bouquet of flowers can be preserved fresh for a long time: A vessel of water is required; the vessel should be large enough to allow the submersion in it of a plate or dish holding the bouquet to be preserved, and a bell glass to cover the bouquet. The dish or plate should contain no moss or other material; the water should be limpid and quite pure. Place the plate at the bottom of the water, and on the plate, submerging it, place the bouquet, which is maintained in an upright position by a weighted base previously attached to it. This being done, the bouquet is covered with a bell glass, the rim of which ought to fit exactly to the flat part of the plate; the bell glass should be entirely filled with water, and without the least air bubble. Then, all raised together, plate, bouquet and bell glass filled with water, and placed on a table, carefully wiping the exterior, but leaving on the plate, around the base of the bell glass, a little provision of water which prevents the entrance of air. The flowers in this condition will be preserved in all their freshness for several weeks, and their beauty is increased by a great number of bubbles of gas produced by the respiration of the leaves, and which attach themselves to the petals, appearing like pearls. The edge of the plate and the water that it contains should be concealed by a light bed of moss in which are set some other flowers. In the evening, by artificial light, a bouquet, thus arranged produces a charming effect.—Vick's Magazine.

American Naval Engineers.

Men who remember forty years back can recall the time when in both the British and American navies the engineer was considered as but little above a common sailor, a sort of blacksmith afloat to be kept in coventry by the officers. But that state of affairs vanished with the progress of steam and the realization on the part of the government and the service that there was as great a demand for skill, pluck and trained intelligence in the engine-room as on the quarter deck. Americans woke up to this truth before it dawned on the English mind, and to-day there is no class in the service more intelligent, more deserving or more respected than the engineers, who are as thorough gentlemen and as agreeable men of the world as the most learned and traveled admirals.—Boston Transcript.

—"Talk is cheap!" said old Uncle Darius, sneeringly, to impecunious nephew, who was telling what great things he was going to do. "Not always, uncle," responded the nephew. "I'd like to know when it ain't cheap," snarled the old man. "When you employ a lawyer to talk for you, or do your own talking through a telephone," triumphantly said the nephew.—N. Y. Ledger.

—An Armenian version of the hymn, "I am a wandering sheep," was translated into English as to its title by a native for a traveler who heard some children singing it at Constantinople, thus: "I was a misled mutton."

—An old farmer at the optician's was in a curious difficulty in choosing spectacles. "I am far-sighted in one eye and short-sighted in the other," he explained. "Do you think you can fit me out? This short-sighted eye has done all my hard work for years, and I want to ease it a spell. When I read I use that eye, but it can't see anything in dropping corn. Then I have to use my far-sighted eye, and after planting for a time it gets so tired I have to close my eyes occasionally to rest them. But the most uncomfortable part of the whole trouble is seeing things half way between. If I hold a book half way, the short-sighted eye can't see, and it ain't far enough for the far-sighted eye. I'm afraid you'll have an awful trouble in adjusting those glasses."—Chicago News.

SAMUEL J. TILDEN,

The Sage of Greystone, Departs This Life.

Death Comes Suddenly to the Aged Leader—The Country Loses One of Her Foremost Statesmen.

YONKERS, N. Y., Aug. 4.—Samuel J. Tilden died at Greystone this morning a few minutes before 9 o'clock. He had been enjoying his usually good health up to last Saturday evening. While sitting on the stoop of his residence after sundown on that evening he was taken with a slight chill, which settled on his stomach and bowels, producing inflammation, from which he suffered all night. On Sunday he was slightly better, and was able to ride out. On Sunday evening he felt much worse, and continued to grow weaker, but until last night there were no fears of the consequences. This morning it became apparent that the end was near. Dr. Charles F. Simmonds and Miss Gould, a relative of Mr. Tilden, were at the bedside a few minutes before Tilden died. He tried to speak, but only moved his lips, failing to make any sound. He passed away quietly and peacefully. His death occurred in the south chamber of the mansion, overlooking the Hudson.

The last hours of the deceased statesman were peaceful and painless. For several months past Mr. Tilden had enjoyed unusual health for him. He had gained in flesh thirty-five pounds in six months. He used his yacht Viking frequently, and took long carriage rides daily. His face was familiar to the people of Yonkers, and he frequently drove through the streets of the city. The last time he went out was on Sunday, when he was driven out by his faithful coachman, Denis O'Hara, attended by his valet, Louis Johansen, both of whom have been in his service for years. Saturday he was taken with a slight chill while sitting on a porch overlooking the Hudson river, and was removed to his room where he was attended by his friend and physician, Dr. Chas. F. Simmonds, of New York, who is stopping on the neighboring estate of Black Browne. The cold settled in Mr. Tilden's bowels and stomach, causing vomiting and purging. With medical aid he felt much better on Sunday, and went out in his carriage. Monday and yesterday he also felt much better. Last night Mr. Tilden was taken again with the same symptoms while in the parlor, and was supported to his room by his valet and private secretary, George E. Smith. On reaching his room the ex-Governor experienced considerable trouble in breathing. This alarmed his friends, and Dr. Simmonds was called. The patient was suffering from nausea and diarrhea, and was in great distress. The difficulty ceased after a while, and he was placed in bed. Later he was assisted to an easy chair. Dr. Simmonds remained with him all night. Early this morning Mr. Tilden began to grow worse, and was again placed in bed. The generation of gases in his stomach and bowels distended them and caused a failure in the action of the heart. A second attack of the difficulty in breathing occurred, and Dr. Swift, of Yonkers, was called in consultation at 7 a. m. He arrived at Greystone at 8 o'clock, but Mr. Tilden was then beyond the reach of all medical skill. The two physicians consulted together, but nothing could be done. No words were uttered by Mr. Tilden after Dr. Swift's arrival. He remained conscious to the last. The labored breathing grew fainter and more feeble, and at 8:45 a. m. the face of the dying man began to change. The ashen pallor of death slowly crept over his countenance. His eyes slowly closed and his muscles relaxed, and at 8:50 a. m. he breathed his last.

At the time of his death the only persons in the room were Drs. Simmonds and Swift, Miss Anna Gould, a relative, the amanuensis of the dead statesman, and the faithful valet, Louis Johansen. The room in which Mr. Tilden died is on the second floor on the south side of the residence, over the parlor. In the room is a bay window, which overlooks the river on the southwest.

The members of the family who are out of town were at once notified by telegraph of the sad event. Mrs. Pelton, a sister of the deceased, is at Narragansett Pier. The widows of his brothers, Henry and Moses, are at the Tilden homestead at New Lebanon, N. Y., with Colonel Samuel J. Tilden, jr. Miss Susie Tilden, a niece, is also at New Lebanon. Miss Ruby Tilden, her sister, is visiting friends in the upper part of the State. Andrew H. Green, ex-Comptroller of New York City, a protege of Mr. Tilden, and who was educated in his office, was also notified by telegraph. The absent members of the family are expected to arrive to-night.

As soon as the news of ex-Governor Tilden's death reached Mayor J. Hartley Bell, of Yonkers, the flags on the city buildings were placed at half-mast. The feeling of regret is universal. Many of the inhabitants were acquainted with Mr. Tilden, and all speak well of him.

The funeral arrangements were placed in the hands of undertaker Franklin A. Rigby, of Yonkers. Private Secretary Smith said this afternoon: "The death of the Governor was a great shock to us all. He had been quite well for several months. This morning he did not seem to know that he was dying, and made no allusion to it. He retained consciousness until the last. He died through exhaustion. Governor Tilden never had, as has been frequently stated, any attack of paralysis. He had a fall some years ago, and this, together with rheumatism, crippled his right arm. However, he used it in writing and in signing checks. He had passed most of the time at Greystone for some years. He had not been in New York since March. The house in Gramercy Park has been in the care of a man and two female servants. He was a man of very active mind, and it has been difficult to get him to take that rest and quiet that he needed at his age. He has had a throat trouble for years, which caused an impediment in his speech. It was difficult to understand him on that account. It troubled him more particularly on lying down. In spite of it all he went out daily driving, and used his steam yacht Viking frequently in trips to Sandy Hook and other points. He passed much of his time in reading, and had probably one of the finest book collections in this country. His reading was of a general character and embraced matters pertaining to other countries. His last cruise in his yacht was last Wednesday, when he went down the Bay."

Ex-Comptroller Andrew H. Green arrived at Greystone at 7 o'clock to-night. He told a reporter that the funeral arrangements would not be made until Mrs. Pelton, the sister of Mr. Tilden, and her granddaughter, Mrs. Hazard, arrived from Narragansett Pier. They are expected to-morrow. He said that nothing could be said at present about the will or the disposition of the estate. Three of Mr. Tilden's nieces arrived to-night from New Lebanon in company with Colonel Samuel J. Tilden, jr., Mrs. Swan and the Misses Susie and Ruby Tilden. It is expected that the funeral will be held at Greystone, and that the interment will be at New Lebanon in the Presbyterian Cemetery. The arrangements have not, however, been decided upon. The remains have not been placed on ice yet, but are awaiting the arrival of Mrs. Pelton.

The common council of the city of Yonkers met to-night and passed resolutions of regret and sympathy for the family of the dead statesman. Ex-Governor Cornell called at Greystone to-day.

As soon as the death of Mr. Tilden became known to the country at large, telegrams began to come in from his leading political and personal friends.

Mr. Tilden rarely put his hand to paper; the last time was to write the telegram of condolence to the father of Hubert O. Thompson. The last letter which he signed was written to Secretary Daniel Manning, who was the last guest whom he had entertained at his house. Mr. Manning was there for a week, and left about eleven days ago. For some months past Mr. Tilden has busied himself with the composition of a family record of the Tilden family. He traced the line back to John Teldon, who lived in the Vale of Telden, County of Kent, England, in 1463. Some of the family still reside there. Mr. Tilden completed this work last week, and on Monday of this week he dictated the preface—his last dictation. In it he says the record was compiled from information picked up here and there, jotted down and tossed into a drawer. These he had placed together by the aid of memory and from what help he could get from others. He wrote, he says, because he thought it might be of use to the younger members of the family as it showed them that they sprung from an honest, sturdy race, of whom they could be proud. It will thus be seen that Mr. Tilden's mental vigor was unimpaired by his long illness. His appetite was good, and he ate as much as most men. He dined regularly with the family, and only differed from them in that he ate at more frequent intervals. He was perfectly able to masticate his food. He rarely ate vegetables, but was fond of fruit.

Samuel Jones Tilden was born on February 9, 1814, in New Lebanon, Columbia County, and was therefore 72 years old. He leaves one sister, the mother of the late Colonel Pelton, and several nephews, children of his brothers, Moses and Henry Tilden. He graduated at Yale College, and having studied law in the University of New York, was admitted to the bar of the metropolis. He achieved a reputation for great legal skill, particularly in railroad litigation. Having interested himself in local and State politics, he was made chairman of the Democratic State Committee of New York, a position he held for thirteen years. In 1846, and again in 1872, he was a member of the State Assembly, and in 1874 was elected Governor of the State by the Democratic party. In June, 1876, he was nominated by the Democratic National Convention at St. Louis as candidate of the party for the Presidency. At the election in November, Mr. Tilden received a majority of the popular vote, but the vote in the States of Louisiana, South Carolina, Oregon and Florida being disputed, great popular excitement ensued, and the two political parties were forced to agree upon a compromise. A commission was appointed of five Senators, five Judges of the Supreme Court of the United States and five Representatives. This commission divided on party lines, and voted eight Republican to seven Democratic; and by their decision the disputed votes were given to Rutherford B. Hayes, the opposing candidate, who was declared elected President by a majority of one electoral vote. In 1880 Mr. Tilden was again in question for the Democratic nomination for President, but declined in a letter read before the Democratic National Convention at Cincinnati. Since that period he had lived in retirement.

A CHINESE HOUSE.

The Patriarchal Encampment of the Entire Family or Clan.

In her new book on China, Miss Gordon-Cumming gives this description of a Chinese house of the better class: It covers so much ground, and there are so many open halls, consisting chiefly of pillars and ornamental roofs, scattered promiscuously about, among paved court-yards, decorated with flowers in pots, and then there are walls pierced by oddly-shaped portals, formed like octagons, or circles, or even teapots, and all placed at irregular intervals, never opposite one another; and then shady morsels of garden, with all manner of surprises in the way of little ponds, and angular bridges and quaint trees. Then somehow, quite unexpectedly, you find yourself in brightly ornamental suites of small rooms, which seem to have been originally one great room, subdivided by partitions of the most elaborate wood carving, and furnished with beautiful polished blackwood and hangings of rich materials.

Such houses are, in fact, the patriarchal encampment of a whole clan, to which all the sons and brothers of the house bring their wives, and there take up their quarters, living together apparently in very remarkable peace.

We were received by our host and half a dozen gentlemen of the family, and for some time we sat in a fine open reception hall, drinking pale straw-colored tea in its simple form, and playing with a nice little son, the hope of the house. Presently our host (who is very friendly to foreigners, and, from intercourse with them, is less punctilious than most Chinamen on the matter of being seen speaking to his women folk) led us aside and presented us to his most kindly and courteous old mother, who conducted us to her apartments, her son accompanying us. He then introduced us to his little bride, aged thirteen. His matrimonial ventures have so far been unlucky, two previous wives having died very early. This one seems a nice, bright little lady. She was very highly rouged, as was also her sister-in-law. Another sister, being indisposed, was not rouged, nor was the mother, and therefore pleasanter to our eyes; but the Canton ladies love to lay on the color thick. There is no deception about it! It is good, honest red, laid thick upon the cheek, and carried right round the eyebrows. The latter are shaved to refine their form. They can not understand why English ladies should refrain from such embellishment. Only when in mourning do they refrain from its use, and one notable exception is that of a bride, who, on her wedding day, may wear no rouge, so that when her red silk veil is removed and the fringe of pearls raised, her husband, looking on her face for the first time, may know for certain what share of beauty unadorned has fallen to his lot.

But of all eccentricities of personal decoration the oddest, I think, is that of gilding the hair, which, I am told, young Canton girls do on every full-dress occasion. Certainly I do remember a time when some English ladies powdered their hair with gold dust; but then they owned golden locks to start with, whereas these are all black and glossy as the raven's wing.—Chicago Times.

THE ORANGEMEN.

History and Strength of the Order in the North of Ireland and Elsewhere.

The society of the Orangemen was founded in 1795. The first lodge was formed in Armagh, and the name was taken in honor of King William III., Prince of Orange. The object of the society was avowedly to uphold Protestant institutions and interests and thus to counteract the Roman Catholic secret association known as "the defenders." The two opposed societies were soon involved in fierce hostility, as nearly all of the peasants belonged to one or the other, and wherever they met in any numbers fighting and riots were sure to occur. The order waned somewhat in the early days of the century, but in 1827, when the Duke of Cumberland became Grand Master, it revived. In 1828 and 1829 a number of fights occurred which were suppressed by the militia with difficulty. In 1835 the British parliament ordered an investigation of the association. It was found that thirty-four regiments of the army had Orange lodges; that there were 145,000 Orangemen in England and 125,000 in Ireland. As the order was declared subversive of the peace of communities, Orange clubs in both England and Ireland were broken up in conformity with a resolution of the House of Commons. Orangeism was revived, however, in 1845, and still exists largely in the British islands, though its processions there are forbidden by law. It was introduced into British America in 1829, and as its meetings are not illegal there its political influence is very great and its membership enormous. A number of lodges also exist in the United States.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

—A curious mixture of races was recently observed in a Buffalo street-car. A Chinaman with a laundry package, a darky with a whitewash-brush, an Indian with a basket of sassafras, an Italian with a bag of peanuts, an Irishman, a Dutchman and a genuine American dude made up quite a "congress of nations," as the circus bills say.—Buffalo Express.

XLIXTH CONGRESS.

First Session.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—SENATE.—The general deficiency bill was reported from conference and agreed to. A resolution to extend the appropriations was objected to and went over. A reported resolution to adjourn August 4 went over on objection of Mr. Hoar, who wanted his bill for "National inspection" considered first. A vetoed pension bill was taken up and considered. The debate was interrupted in order that the amendments to the fortification bill could be insisted upon and a conference committee appointed. The river and harbor conference report was then submitted, interrupting the pension debate again. Mr. Edmunds called for the reading of the bill. It appropriates $11,473,900, or about $570,000 less than when it passed the House. The conference report was agreed to without a division. A vote was taken on the vetoed pension bill of Mary J. Nottage, and it failed to get the necessary two-thirds—yeas 26, nays 19. The Romeiser pension bill was then taken up, and on the statement of Senator Wilson, of Maryland, that it had been vetoed under a misapprehension, was passed over the veto unanimously. At 5 o'clock the Senate took a recess until 8 p. m., the night session being for the consideration of the sundry civil bill.

HOUSE.—The President's message announcing his approval of the oleomargarine bill was read, also his message transmitting the papers in the Cutting case. The conference report on the river and harbor bill was presented, and after it had been read filibustering was resorted to to prevent a vote. The report was finally adopted—yeas 121, nays 98. The report on the General Deficiency Appropriation bill was read and agreed to. The conference report on the surplus resolution was submitted, to be printed in the Record, Mr. Morrison giving notice he would call it up hereafter. The Sundry Civil bill was then reported and adopted—yeas, 128; nays, 26. At 5 p. m. the House adjourned.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—SENATE.—The Grant relics, presented in a collection to the United States by W. H. Vanderbilt, were accepted by joint resolution. An attempt to take up bills on the calendar was opposed by Mr. Edmunds on account of the lateness of the season and the amount of work the President had before him. The backbone land grant was made the special order for the second Monday in December. A bill was passed extending the system for immediate delivery to all articles bearing an immediate delivery stamp. The bill to restrict the ownership of real estate in the Territories to American citizens was passed and sent to conference. An attempt to get a vote on a vetoed pension bill failed, the measure being postponed until the first Wednesday in December. Another was taken up, but the vote—yeas 19, nays 15—discovered no quorum present. The Morrison surplus resolution support was taken up, and after discussion, agreed to without a division. The Senate at 6 p. m. adjourned until 11 a. m. to-morrow.

HOUSE.—A resolution was adopted expressing the sorrow of the House at the death of Samuel J. Tilden. A resolution from the Judiciary Committee to investigate the Union Pacific Railroad management was objected to by O'Neill, of Pennsylvania. The Senate amendments to the fortifications bill was disagreed to and conferees appointed. The Morrison surplus resolution report was called up and discussed. It was adopted—yeas 120, nays 63. The Cutting resolutions were reported from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and discussed until 5 p. m., when the House adjourned.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Both Houses of Congress adjourned sine die this afternoon. The session covered 241 days. The total number of measures that passed both houses was 1,101, being 241 Senate bills and 860 bills which originated in the House. Of this total 806 became laws with the President's approval, 181 became laws by limitation, the President failing either to approve or disapprove them within ten days after their presentation to him; 113 were vetoed and one failed by reason of adjournment without action by the President. Mr. Morrison (Ill.) offered a resolution in the House, before adjournment, granting the committee appointed to investigate the labor troubles in the West permission to sit during the recess, with all the powers granted to it in the original resolution providing for its appointment. Adopted. The Senate bill accepting the Grant relics was passed; also the Senate bills appropriation of $50,000 for completion of the public buildings at Ft. Scott, Ark., and $150,000 for the erection of a public building at Los Angeles, Cal.

THE AERIAL PROBLEM.

New Principles Applied—Electricity as a Factor in Solving the Difficulties.

BERLIN, Aug. 3.—The success of the aeronaut L'Hoste and his companion in making in a balloon the journey across the channel from Cherbourg to London has caused no little excitement. It is the first successful attempt to reach a point determined on beforehand. Germany and Russia have both for some time been pushing forward experiments in flying machines for use in war or otherwise. They ignore the idea of the inflated gas bag, which is enormous in size, difficult to fill in war, and floats at the mercy of every current of air, a huge mark for the first gunner who can hit and bring it to the ground. Baumgarten, in Germany, and Baranovski, in Russia, have adopted the principle of the inclined plane pressed against the air, and thus capable of making some attempt, at least, to regulate its own course. In the kite the force that presses the inclined plane is the hand of the boy acting through the string. In the sail of the boat the resistance of the water to sidelong motion keeps the sail pressed again the wind. In the flying machines of Baumgarten and Baranovski the pressure is given by an engine carried by the machine and acting by means of fans. The difficulty was the weight of the engine and fuel, but with the developments of practical knowledge of electricity accumulators have been built which supply the maximum of weights. If the attempt should prove successful, the problem of flying in still air would be solved. But whether man shall ever be able to ride the storm is another matter.

WISCONSIN MOONSHINERS.

A Large Number of Illicit Stills Operated by So-Called Farmers.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 5.—The United States revenue officers are about to make a raid on a large number of illicit whisky stills reported to exist in the woods of Manitowoc County. The mountaineers are said to have flourished there for years, having been enabled to avoid suspicion by representing themselves as farmers. They have raised their own grain for whisky distilling purposes, and have smuggled the product to various parts of the State, where they have readily disposed of it to saloon-keepers. One of the principal secret distilleries is owned by an old woman, and she is said to have made a fortune out of it.

A Remarkable Accident.

WILKESBARRE, PA., Aug. 5.—A remarkable thing happened at the Wyoming race track to-day. The driver of Ike Shultz was making the three-quarter mile turn in the 2:30 race, when one of the traces and the belly-band broke. All the harness fell off the horse and he became greatly agitated. The driver maintained his seat by holding on to the reins, the latter taking the place of the traces. The spectators were horror-struck at the sight, and when the horse and driver passed under the wire the utmost quiet reigned. The horse was finally brought to a stand-still at the quarter-mile pole.

Red River Raging.

GAINESVILLE, Tex., Aug. 5.—The Red river has risen twenty feet since yesterday afternoon. The rise swept away and destroyed all the work that had been done on the Santa Fe railway bridge. An immense trestle work that had been built across the river for use until the bridge should be completed, was carried away. One of the boats, containing an engine, was lost, and a pile driver and engine were carried down the stream and sunk. It will be several weeks before work on the bridge can be resumed. The river is higher than ever known before.

The Dead Statesman.

YONKERS, N. Y., Aug. 5.—Mrs. Pelton visited Greystone to-day and gazed long on the face of her dead brother, Mr. Tilden. Under the manipulations of the undertaker Mr. Tilden was made to look better in death than he has looked for years. The following will probably serve as pall-bearers at the funeral: Hon. Abram S. Hewitt, Secretary Manning, ex-Mayor Cooper, Hon. Samuel J. Randall, Governor Hill, ex-Senator Thurman, Secretary Lamar and Chas. A. Dana.

Ticket Office Robbed.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., Aug. 5.—The Ohio and Mississippi ticket office in this city, was entered by burglars, and the agent's desk robbed of $150 in greenbacks and $5,000 in mortgages. The mortgages were the property of the agent, H. H. Beecher.

Becoming Alarming.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 5.—Twenty-five new cases of typhoid fever and three deaths were reported on the South Side to-day. There are over two hundred cases in all, many of them serious.

The Fortifications Bill.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—The fortifications appropriation bill, after passing both Houses of Congress, failed in conference. The Senate conferees were willing to reduce the total appropriation made by the bill to five million dollars, but this proposition was not acceptable to the House conferees, and consequently there will be no fund available for the preservation and repair of fortifications during the recess.

Extensive Cigar-Makers' Strike.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—Nine thousand hands are involved in the New York cigar-makers' strike.

PIONEER CITY, MO., Aug. 5.—Last night Wm. Rex was shot dead by a Mr. Linsey in a quarrel over Rex being asked to pay 80 cents.

AT GREYSTONE.

The Body of Samuel J. Tilden Prepared for Burial.

The Preparations for the Sage's Funeral About Completed.

YONKERS, N. Y., Aug. 6.—The morning opened rainy and all is quiet at Greystone. The preparations for Mr. Tilden's funeral to-morrow are about completed. The undertaker has had the white drapery removed from the catafalque, which is to be removed to the drawing room and draped in black. Men are at work draping the parlors and drawing room with black cashmere. The embalming of the body was quite successful. Mr. Tilden's face looks natural and peaceful and looks upon the bier in the stillness of death as if he were in a refreshing slumber. The business men of Yonkers have concluded to close their stores to-morrow from 10 to 12 o'clock, which will be the time occupied by the funeral services and the solemn procession in going from Greystone to the Hudson river depot. The common council of Yonkers have adopted resolutions of condolence and deprecate the loss of such a worthy and upright citizen. It is proposed that the mayor and common council attend the funeral in a body.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—The President will leave Washington this evening for New York to attend the funeral of Mr. Tilden to-morrow. Acting Secretary Fairchild and a number of other officials will attend the funeral.

Barbed Wire's Rival.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 6.—Charles Rogers, a Pittsburgh mechanic, has just patented a device which it is said will revolutionize the barbed wire fence business. The invention is for barbing metallic strips about three-quarters of an inch wide. The machine barbs a cut ranging from one-quarter to one-sixteenth of an inch in thickness. A machine capable of producing sixty miles of this barbed metallic strip per day can be built for $300. Machines for the same purpose now in use, which are practically owned by a monopoly, cost $25,000 apiece, and are only capable of producing thirty miles of the wire per diem. A company has been formed with a capital of $300,000 to erect a plant in this city which will be begun in a few days. A firm in Kansas City offers to take the entire output for a year.

A Kansas Tornado.

TOPEKA, KAN., Aug. 6.—A telegram was received here last evening stating that a cyclone had struck the town of Hartland and demolished twenty houses and done great damage to growing crops. Sixteen cars were blown from the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe tracks and telegraph wires were prostrated for two miles west of the town. The extent of the damage has not yet been learned, but the dispatch stated that no one, so far as known, had been seriously injured. The storm reached other towns in the vicinity of Hartland, but the wires being down, its effects can not be learned.

Two Mexicans Hanged by Soldiers.

BROWNSVILLE, TEX., Aug. 6.—At dawn yesterday a strong escort of Mexican cavalry stopped at Matamoras and took Juan Saldova, the leader of several revolutionary bandits recently captured, and Trinidad Ortez, a wild youth of good family, who is implicated in the killing of a young rancher named Garcia, for his pistols and horse, from the barracks of the Fourth Infantry out into the country and hanged them. Saldova was formerly a horse-thief, and Ortez, who had been a rural guard and a policeman, had a bad record.

Montana Cloud-Burst.

FORT KEOGH, M. T., August 6.—Word has been received from Simmons' sheep corral, on the American fork of the Mussel Shoal, that a cloud-burst occurred there Monday evening, which destroyed eight hundred sheep. The cloud exploded at the head of Dry Run Creek, and came pouring down in a solid wall twenty-two feet high, carrying off nearly the entire herd and almost drowning a herder. The carcasses of the animals are strewn along the river for a distance of sixteen miles below the scene of disaster.

Six Young Men Drowned in the Lake.

SARNIA, ONT., Aug. 6.—The pleasure yacht Cruiser was caught in the storm of Sunday night and wrecked on Lake Huron. She had a crew of six young men, all of whom were drowned. The yacht had come ashore at Port Franco with the bodies of Hope McKenzie, Fleming McKenzie and T. A. Tefer lashed to it. The bodies of W. J. Sinclair, Wm. Vidal and Walter C. Morrison have not yet been recovered. All the young men belong to the first families of Sarnia and vicinity, and held prominent business positions.

Central America to Join Mexico.

ST. LOUIS, MO., Aug. 6.—The Commercio Del Valle, published in this city, prints a letter in its last issue from its correspondent in the City of Mexico to the effect that the Presidents and ex-Presidents of the Central American Republics of Salvador, Nicaragua, Honduras, Costa Rica and Guatemala are now in that city arranging a plan for a union of those States into one confederation, with the ultimate view of annexation with the Mexican Republic.

The Texas Way.

MATTOON, ILL., Aug. 6.—Scott Dowling and D. A. Robinson, a Texas gambler, got into a fight. Robinson struck Dowling, when the latter responded by firing his revolver at the belligerent Texan. The ball entered Robinson's abdomen, and his recovery is doubtful.

$60,000 for the Parnellites.

DETROIT, MICH., Aug. 6.—Rev. Dr. O'Reilly this morning cabled to the treasurer of the Irish Parliamentary fund in London $60,000 to sustain the Parnellites in their struggles for the redress of Irish grievances.

Love and Jealousy.

WALLACETOWN, PA., Aug. 6.—James McClain shot and killed Ella Davis to-day, and then shot himself. Jealousy.

THROUGH THE WHIRLPOOL.

Two Men Float Through in a Cask Before no Less Than Fifteen Thousand People.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 8.—The turbulent waters of the Niagara whirlpool rapids were again navigated in a cask to-day, the perilous feat being successfully accomplished by Wm. Potts and Geo. Hazlett, two coopers, who were employed in the same shop with Graham who made the initial trip about three weeks ago. The barrel boat was ten feet long, conical in form and built of the best barrel staves. It was supplied with a keel, rudder screw, wheel and a turret with glass covered peep holes. About 300 pounds of sand ballast kept it right side up most of the time. The two men lay back to back while passing through the most turbulent waters, clinging to handles made fast to the sides of the cask. Each man likewise kept on his own side of the cask by means of a canvas sling made fast to staples. The start was made from the Maid of the Mist landing on the Canada side. A row boat towed the cask to a point just above the Cantilever bridge, where it was turned adrift in the middle of the stream. The novel craft was submerged about half the time while passing through the rapids, but while circumscribing the outer circle of the whirlpool its occupants thrust their heads through the opening and Potts calmly smoked a cigar. A successful landing was made at Queenston, on the Canada side, five miles further down the river. The entire voyage occupied fifty-five minutes. The feat was witnessed by not less than 15,000 spectators.

MUTUAL MISTAKES.

In the Darkness Father and Son Fill Each Other With Buckshot.

ANTSVILLE, MO., Aug. 8.—W. A. Brockman and his son Richard engaged in a hunt last night for thieves which resulted disastrously to both. The father, after his family had retired, loaded his shotgun and concealed himself in the bushes near his beehives to guard them from the ravages of thieves, by whom he had recently been robbed. After he had been on duty for a while his son concluded that he would guard the hives, not knowing that his father was engaged in the occupation. He loaded his gun and walked to the door, where he stood and listened, and, hearing some one moving around in the bushes, fired and shot his father in the breast. The latter, thinking he had been shot by a thief, returned the fire, filling his son's face with buckshot. Both are seriously wounded.

Burial of Samuel J. Tilden.

YONKERS, N. Y., Aug. 8.—Samuel J. Tilden was buried yesterday afternoon at Lebanon, N. Y., the home of his youth. The services were short and simple. The casket was made in Oneida, and consists of two parts. The interior is of copper with glass doors its entire length. The interior is decorated with white tufted satin; the outer part is of red Spanish cedar, and is plainly ornamented with oxidized silver. The plate bears simply the name of Samuel J. Tilden. The pall-bearers were: Samuel J. Randall, John Bigelow, Daniel Manning, Smith M. Weed, Chas. A. Dana, Dr. George L. Miller, Wm. Allen Butler, Daniel Magone, J. B. Trevor, Dr. Charles E. Simmons and Aaron J. Vanderpoel. President Cleveland and Cabinet attended the services at Greystone.

The Cholera Severe in Japan.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 8.—Cholera is now raging in Yokohama and Tokio, Japan. In the former place it is worse than ever before. During five days (July 15 to 20) the cases have averaged over 100 daily; deaths fifty. There is every reason to fear that it will spread further, as the atmospheric conditions are at the present time favorable to the propagation of epidemics. The weather is the hottest experienced since 1871. Up to date only two foreigners have been attacked, both of whom died. The better classes of foreigners and natives are comparatively free from the disease.

Mexicans in Texas.

RIO GRANDE CITY, TEX., Aug. 8.—A heavy force of Mexican Revolutionists crossed the river into Texas on Thursday night. A troop of the Eighth United States Cavalry was ordered yesterday from Ringgold Barracks to pursue and disarm them. Four hundred Mexican troops arrived in Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, Friday night, and planted cannons so as to command Fort McIntosh, on the American side of the Rio Grande.

After Natural Gas.

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 8.—The Standard Oil Company has leased about fifty square miles of territory in Erie and adjoining counties in Pennsylvania, and will put down about fifty gas wells with the intention of piping the gas to this city. Two wells which are being put down in the Lebanon Valley yielded oil in paying quantities.

Chicago Socialists' Picnic.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—The Chicago Socialists picnicked to-day at Sheffield, Ind. Five thousand people were present. Dr. Schmidt addressed the crowd, exhorting them to stand by the doctrine of Socialism and to transmit it to their children. Twenty-three passenger coaches conveyed them to the grounds. The affair was got up to aid the defendants in the Anarchists' trial.

Advertising Agents Attached.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 8.—Allison & Smith, through Kramer & Kramer, their attorneys, yesterday sued Edwin Alden & Bro., the advertising agents, for $3,481 on an account. The firm's notes have passed unpaid the past few days, it is said.

Remarkable Pugnacity.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Two drunken New Yorkers fought on a pier and in their struggles fell into East river. They continued fighting in the water. Both were rescued—one in a dying condition. The other was arrested for causing his antagonist's death.

Tramps Burned to Death.

RED WING, MINN., Aug. 8.—Sheldon & Co.'s elevator, at Egglestou, burned last night. The burning debris fell upon the railway track, and the U. P. freight train was thrown from the track after the engine had passed, and seventeen cars, loaded with merchandise, were burned. Of nine tramps in a box car, four were burned to death, three seriously injured and two escaped.

Postmasters Reappointed.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The President has reappointed J. C. Riley postmaster at Cincinnati, and W. H. Gillispie, postmaster at Dayton, O.

Postoffice Robbers Captured.

NEW YORK, August 8.—Four men broke into the Astoria postoffice last night and began forcing open the safe. They were surprised by a number of officers who had obtained warning of the intended robbery. A lively interchange of shots between the burglars and the officers followed. One of the burglars was wounded, and he and one of his comrades were captured and locked up. The other two escaped. None of the officers were hurt.

Part of Our Navy Going to China.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—The United States steamer Essex will store her magazine at Ellis Island with powder to-morrow and then proceed to join the China Squadron.

DETROIT, MICH., Aug. 8.—William Horrigan, arrested for the murder of the Kuoch family at Woodmere, Mich., has been released, and the mystery is as great as ever.

Forest Fires Raging.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 8.—Forest fires are raging in Marathon and Clark Counties, Wisconsin. Spencer, a town of one thousand people, was burned out. Loss, $200,000.

Miners Killed by Falling Rock.

PLYMOUTH, PA., Aug. 8.—Josiah Richards, aged forty-one years, and Griffith R. Thomas, aged seventy-one years, miners, were killed by a fall of rock and coal in the Boston mine yesterday.

WAR IS CERTAIN.

[illegible] What the People of El Paso Believe.

Prisoner Cutting Makes an Appeal to the Governor of Texas.

EL PASO, TEX., Aug. 9.—Editor Cutting received information yesterday that he would be taken to Chihuahua on the south bound Mexican Central train. He feared that he would be massacred on some pretext if they took him away from the border and his friends have busied themselves in his behalf. The following telegram was sent by the prisoner to the Governor of Texas:

"Hon. John Ireland, Governor of Texas.

"As a citizen of Texas, I ask of you the protection that my friends assure me you can and will extend to me.

"A. K. CUTTING."

A body of well armed and determined men has been organized on this side and are ready for duty at a moment's notice should anything requiring their services occur. The men are under the command of cool minded officers and will not precipitate an outbreak. The Mexicans continue to fear that a force will cross the river and have an additional force on duty. The soldiers in the barracks were paraded through the streets during the evening, when a great many Americans, as is the custom, had crossed the river. It is very evident that the officials and people of Chihuahua believe the Government of the United States will back down. They think our State Department will be satisfied by Minister Mariscal's efforts, and will submit to the punishment of Mr. Cutting. The conviction and sentence of Cutting in the face of a peremptory demand of the American Government for his instant release, has produced a profound sensation here, and has occasioned exciting comment and much uneasiness in El Paso. The feeling is prevalent that our Government has taken a position that it can not back down from and that war is certain.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 9.—Secretary Bayard, speaking to a special correspondent last night of the Cutting case, said he saw no reason why a satisfactory adjustment of the difficulty should not be reached. He has been assured that such was the desire of the Mexican Government. Mr. Bayard himself feels strongly in the matter, and said with much impressiveness that he considered the principle involved in the Cutting affair to be one of the gravest importance, and one as to which the whole country, without reference to party, should be a unit. The personal merits or demerits of Cutting himself has nothing to do with the matter. It made no difference whether he was an angel of darkness or an angel of light, but it did make the greatest possible difference to the American people whether the contention raised by the State Department in his case should be maintained or not.

Extensive Forest Fires.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 9.—For an almost uninterrupted distance of nearly one hundred miles north of Stevens' Point, along the line of the Wisconsin Central, forest fires are raging and hundreds of men are fighting the flames, seeking to save the towns and villages hemmed in by them. The complete destruction of the town of Spencer is fully confirmed, and the loss is now placed at $300,000. Several hundred people are destitute and homeless. At Colby, a few miles distant, fire is raging on two sides. It required the desperate efforts of the entire population to save the village.

Newspaper Advertising Agency Assigns.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 9.—Edwin Alden, proprietor of the Newspaper Advertising Agency, assigned this morning to Attorney A. M. Warner, for the benefit of his creditors. The liabilities are estimated at $150,000; assets at from $50,000 to $80,000. The cause of this assignment is the attachment by Smith & Allison, of printing material used in the Alden bindery, and the refusal of the Fourth National Bank to longer carry the firm's paper. This refusal was on Saturday. Considerable money has been lost recently and helped to hasten the assignment.

Mr. Tilden's Will.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—The will of Samuel J. Tilden was read at Greystone this afternoon in the presence of all the relatives except those in the West. The document is a long one, containing about 10,000 words, and would occupy about five columns in nonpareil type of any one of the great dailies. Mr. Tilden left an estate valued at $5,000,000. One-third is left to relatives, the rest to establish libraries and other institutions for public benefit.

Geronimo at It Again.

TOMBSTONE, ARIZ., Aug. 9.—Details of a raid by Geronimo's band, near Ures, have been received. A wagon train was attacked and four Mexican teamsters killed. The Indians then raided near Mineas Pietras, and killed two wood-choppers and disappeared in the direction of Caueja, stealing horses and committing other depredations. The country is aroused, and ranches for miles around are being abandoned.

English War Vessels Coming.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—The British corvettes Pleides and Tourmaline, have been ordered to join the North American fleet, owing to the continuance of the Canadian fisheries dispute. The nature of their instructions is not known, but it is surmised that they are sent by the request of the Commander of the North American squadron, who desires their presence merely as a matter of precaution.

Fred Douglass' Successor.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Mr. Matthews, the colored Democrat, whose nomination to succeed Fred Douglass as Recorder of Deeds for this district was rejected by the Senate, to-day was reappointed to that office by the President.

Cholera Increasing.

—Flax has been sown in eight counties of Nebraska by way of experiment, to see if it will not be more profitable than wheat.

THE COMMONWEALTH.

Louisville Leaf Tobacco Market.

The market has been somewhat more favorable to sellers, and prices have ruled more generally full. The proportion of dark and heavy styles on offer has increased. The market for Burley tobacco has varied but slightly in tone or prices though the action has been more favorable to sellers. Dark and heavy styles have been pulling up from a partial relapse, and we note gains in prices from trash up to good leaf. Lugs and common medium leaf probably have the principal advantage from the gain. We quote 1885 tobaccos as follows for full-weight packages:

THE Illinois Live-stock Commission has adopted a resolution recommending Governor Oglesby to remove the present quarantine restrictions from the counties of Pendleton and Harrison, Ky., evidence having been received that pleuro-pneumonia had been fully eradicated in those localities.

WESLEY BELL, colored, while going to his work the other morning at Louisville, was run over by an engine and killed. The locomotive ground him into a frightful mass.

JOHNNY KOCHENROTH, five-year-old son of ex-policeman Kochenroth, Louisville, was frightfully mangled by a ferocious bull-dog a few days ago. The child's hat blew off and fell near the dog, which was gnawing a bone. Johnny started to recover his hat, when the dog seized him by the thigh and literally chewed him up. The boy's cries attracted help, and when he was rescued the dog's jaws dropped blood. Officer Romser and several citizens gave chase after the dog and killed him. The child was quickly put under surgical treatment, and proved to be horribly mangled. He may not recover. The dog showed no signs of rabies.

CORONER DEGRUYTER held an inquest on the body of a young Pole named Joseph Jadovski, aged about twenty-three years, whom he found lying dead in a rude shanty about a mile back of Covington. Sadovski and a fellow-laborer named Thomas Bieyer had been employed by Frank Funcke, a Cincinnati contractor, in digging sand from a bank near the shanty, and while at work the bank crumbled upon them. Blayer was fortunately in such a position that he was enabled to escape the crushing mass of earth, but his companion was buried under it, and when dug out shortly after he was dead from suffocation.

THE bricklayers of Maysville struck on the 7th. All Union men were ordered to stop work pending the settlement of the difficulties.

A WATERSPOUT at what is known as "Brushy Flats," McLean County, a few days ago, did considerable damage. The surrounding country was overflowed, fences and bridges swept away, and the corn and tobacco crop of the entire vicinity was totally destroyed. The rush of water from the smaller branches was so strong that large numbers of saw-logs were swept away from Van Over's mill to the narrows bridge. While the waters were at the greatest height James Cecil, who was assisting David Kelley in his effort to save a raft of saw-logs, stepped on a log, which, being insecure, turned, throwing him into the water. The swift current carried him under the raft, and he was drowned. His body was recovered.

THE State Board of Equalization has adjourned after effecting an equalization of the assessment of the 119 counties of the State. It fixed the value of the State at $311,000,000. The assessors had returned it at $195,000,000. According to the revised valuation land in Fayette, Bourbon and Woodford counties is the best in the State, being valued at $62.50 an acre. Jefferson County comes next at $60, then Kenton at $50, and Campbell at $45. You can buy yourself poor in Perry County, where land is only worth $1.50 an acre. In Rowan County land is worth $2.50 an acre, the board having increased the assessors' return 37 per cent. In Bath County the valuation is fixed at $25 an acre, an increase of 70 per cent. over the figures at which it was returned.

AT the home of his mother near Carlisle, Solomon Royce and Nancy Tanner, a colored woman, quarreled about some birds, when Royce hit her with a club in the presence of her husband, Henry Tanner, who made at Royce with an open knife, but was suddenly stopped by Charles Royce, a brother, who shot Tanner in the left side and breast, killing him instantly. Royce is a man of some means, and well connected, has a wife and six children. Royce has been placed in jail under heavy guard for fear of a mob by negroes, who are much enraged.

Samuel J. Tilton, Ex-President of the U. S., Died at his home in New York on the 4th inst. He was one of the greatest American statesmen.—Spencer Courier.

Samuel J. Tilden will haunt you, Mr. Courier.

◆◆◆

The several Congressional conventions which have been held by the Democrats, recently, have had no difficulty in endorsing Cleveland's administration. Resolutions of that character go through like they are greased.

◆◆◆

The revenue law of Kentucky imposes a license tax on dealers who sell pistols or bowie knives, of fifty dollars per annum, to be paid the county clerk as other license, but the act does not take effect until the first of next month.

◆◆◆

The death of Samuel J. Tilden removes another great man, honored by all who knew him. His counsel as a political leader carried more weight and was given more consideration than that of any other Democratic leader of his day. His opinions on the political measures of the period were eagerly sought by his party up to the day of his death.

◆◆◆

The River and Harbor bill was signed by the President, not because it was what he desired it to be; but because the virtues of the bill far outweighed its defects. Had the bill been vetoed, it would have been disastrous to many improvements which the Government has commenced under former appropriations. The President had to take the bitter to get the sweet.
